

Russians Impressed As Farm Tour Begins

Reds Explore Small Scale Iowa Farms

SLATER, Iowa (AP) — Twelve important Russians sat quietly Monday in the living room here of Richard and Verda Alleman, an attractive young Iowa farm couple, and listened attentively to their answers to questions on how they run their farm.

The visiting Soviet farm experts had inspected the Alleman farm from corn fields to chicken coops. They were interested in everything. They obviously were impressed by what they saw.

"How many people do you have to work on the farm?" asked one of the Russians.

Explain Operation
The Allemans explained they worked the farm themselves — with occasional assistance from Richard's father and brother on an exchange basis whereby Richard also helps them once in a while.

It wasn't clear whether the Russians believed this fully or not. Mrs. Alleman made clear to the Russians that she did not work in the fields, that her responsibility was the house and the chickens.

"What's your workday schedule from beginning to end?" asked Aleksandr Tulupnikov, an official of the Soviet Ministry of Agriculture whose wild-flying curly hair and photogenic personality are becoming one of the leading features of this journey.

Day Starts at Six
Alleman in answer explained he gets up at 6, does the chores and has breakfast, starts work in the fields at 7:30, works there with one hour out for lunch till 8 p.m., then does the chores, has supper and is free by 7 p.m. In the evenings, he said, he watches television, reads, or does 4-H Club work.

The Alleman farm was the first the Russians visited. Before they return to the Soviet Union they will see dozens more, not only in Iowa, but also in South Dakota, Nebraska, Minnesota and California.

The Americans asked Soviet State Farm Director Petr Babmindra about the farm he runs.

115,000 Acres
He explained that it has about 115,000 acres and 900 workers. He has 100 combines to bring in his harvest.

Babmindra's farm is bigger than any other in the Soviet Union.

Family Plans Picnic Lunch For Russians

The 12-man Russian farm delegation will visit the George Hora farm in Washington County today.

The Soviet farmers are scheduled to arrive at the Hora farm around noon. They will be served a picnic lunch of fried chicken and afterwards will tour the 160-acre corn-hog farm.

The farm is located about six miles northeast of Washington, on the Riverside-Washington road. The Russians will leave Des Moines this morning on a chartered bus and their first scheduled stop is the Hora farm.

They will observe farms between Des Moines and Washington from the bus and will have the opportunity to stop the bus anywhere along the route for closer observation.

Eisenhower, Zhukov Meet At Big Four

GENEVA (AP) — President Eisenhower and Georgi K. Zhukov, wartime conquerors of the Nazis, had a brief reunion at the Big Four conference Monday and later dined together.

The President entertained the entire Russian delegation Monday night at a stag dinner in his Lake Geneva villa. Khrushchev and Premier Bulganin rode up first. In a second car came Zhukov—resplendent in a blue dress uniform — with V. M. Molotov and Andrei Gromyko of the Soviet Foreign Ministry.

They dined at a large mahogany table, with Eisenhower at one end and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles at the other.

After the meal the group adjourned to the library looking out on Lake Geneva. There President Eisenhower presumably had a chance to trade reminiscences with Zhukov, who is now Soviet defense minister.

When they met at the Palace of Nations Monday morning Khrushchev came up and with a wide motion of his arms took over the conversation.

Khrushchev grabbed Eisenhower by the right hand and said:

"Mr. President, I want to let you in on a Zhukov family secret.

"Zhukov's daughter is getting married in Russia this week and I suppose he should have stayed for the ceremony, but he didn't."

Ambassador Bohlen, who was doing the interpreting, said Eisenhower smiled and started to say something, but Khrushchev was in the full flight of oratory.

"Yes," said Khrushchev, beaming all the time, "he didn't stay for the wedding because he wanted to come to Geneva and see you."

At this he gave Eisenhower's hand a pump. James Hagerly, White House secretary, said the President and Zhukov had "a very enthusiastic meeting."

City Departments Ask 22% Budget Increase

Budget requests for 1956 which would mean a 30 per cent rise in city taxes if approved, were presented for city government departments to the City Council, Monday night.

City Manager Peter F. Roan, who presented the requests for the department heads, said the tax rise would be necessary if the requests were to be met.

The requests for 1956 call for approximately $1,062,000. This would be an increase of about 22 per cent over the 1955 budget of $874,000.

Ask for Cuts
After reviewing the proposed budget, the council unanimously adopted a resolution directing Roan to cut the requests to as near the 1955 figures as possible.

The resolution, introduced by Councilman Ansel Chapman, directed the city manager to "eliminate every unnecessary item so that we may present to the people of Iowa City a budget that will allow us to keep as near to the present tax rate as possible."

Roan will now consider the requests, then present the budget with his revisions to the council at a public hearing in August. The council must approve it at this public hearing before taxes can be collected.

Thirteen of the sixteen city departments asked for increases.

Only the library, sewer rental and city assessor departments asked for figures below the 1955 budget.

The biggest increases were asked by the fire and street departments. They are: street, $83,596 to $165,080; fire, $96,309 to $137,311.

One-Side Parking
In other action, the council voted to adopt one-side parking on five Iowa City streets.

Roan said that a post-card poll of residents of the streets had showed a 3 to 1 approval of one-side parking. He said that the one-way parking would go into effect within 7 to 10 days.

Parking will be allowed only on the north side of Jefferson Street from Madison Avenue to Evans Street, from 7 to 8:45 a.m. It will be allowed only on the south side from 4 to 6 p.m.

Jefferson Street goes past several State University of Iowa buildings. Among them are East Hall, Music Building, Zoology Building, Law Building, Old Dental Building, Macbride Hall, University Hall, Geology Building and Women's Gymnasium.

Streets on which one-side parking will be in effect at all times are east side Dodge Street, north city limits to Kirkwood Avenue; south side Bowery Street, Gilbert Avenue to Woolf Avenue and east side Summit Street, College Street to Sheridan Street.

Engineering Hill
The council also voted to add Engineering Hill, the portion of Washington Street from Madison Street to Clinton Street to an asphalt resurfacing project.

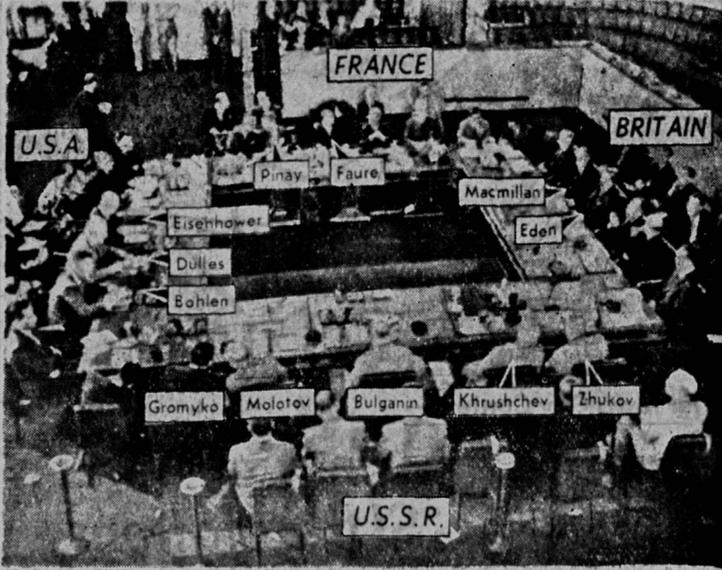

Portions of other streets in the projects are: Kirkwood Avenue, Bowery Street and Gilbert Street.

The city council will hold a public hearing on the project and let bids on it Aug. 8.

Contracts
William Horrabin, Iowa City contractor, received $139,122 worth of contracts in the second phase of the city's street improvement program.

Horrabin's contracts are for paving on parts of four city streets, $30,975; improvements on Newton Road, Madison Street and Iowa Avenue, $83,019, and widening of Burlington Street, $25,128.

The Hargrave Construction Company of Cedar Rapids submitted the lone bid of $30,008 on the resurfacing of parts of Burlington, Dodge and Dubuque Streets.

Toll Group Tackles Financing Problem

DES MOINES (AP) — Iowa's new Toll Road Authority held its organization meeting Monday and immediately got down to the brass tacks of financing.

The authority is authorized to proceed with an east-west toll road across Iowa if and when Illinois sells bonds for a turnpike to the Iowa border.

Ed Frick, former Davenport mayor, was named chairman of the five-member authority and instructed to establish close liaison with the Illinois Toll Road Commission.

The Iowa group also decided to urge Iowa's congressmen to try to get reinserted into the federal road bill a provision by which the state would get extra U.S. funds to match expenditures on a turnpike. The proposed Iowa toll road would cost an estimated 180 million dollars.

The Iowa authority also agreed that before any Iowa revenue bonds for a toll road are sold it will be necessary to have a test suit to confirm legality of the new state toll road law.

On Aug. 2 the authority will hold a hearing for representatives of security groups which want to be fiscal agent for the Iowa toll road.

Senate Approves Free Salk Vaccine Measure

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate passed and sent to the House Monday a bill authorizing free polio vaccine for children and expectant mothers in states and communities requesting it.

Hill and Sen. H. Alexander Smith (R-N.J.) contended the responsibility for using Salk vaccine rests primarily with parents, their doctors and local health authorities. And so, they said, the initiative in asking for free vaccine should come from them by way of state health officials.

The Eisenhower administration originally proposed making free vaccine available only to needy children and asked $28 million for the purpose. The bill passed Monday eliminates any "means" requirement, that is, a showing of financial need. It also leaves open the amount of money to be appropriated.

Last Tuesday the House Commerce Committee approved a similar bill.

Fantasy To Open Tonight

High school and university talents will be combined in the presentation of "The Yellow Jacket," a Chinese fantasy, at 8 p.m. today through Thursday in University Theatre.

State University of Iowa students will play the leading male roles.

All the feminine roles will be performed by high school girls from the 24th Summer Workshop in Speech and Dramatic Art.

"Yellow Jacket" shows the life of an Oriental prince, from the time of his birth until he surmounts obstacles to find a meaning to his life, including love.

John Stirk, G. Iowa City, will play the prince, while the feminine lead of Plum Blossom will be played on alternate nights by Jean Seaberg, Marshalltown, and Lela Mae Meves, Williams.

Bernard Hesse, A2, Fort Madison, plays the property man, with three high school girls as his "invisible" assistants.

The fantasy will be presented in the Chinese manner, with many colorful symbols representing various experiences, dangers and rewards of a young man's life.

As in Chinese drama, the property men, though supposedly invisible, will be seen on stage, exchanging scenery in front of the audience.

The play is directed by Dorothy Colonus, a visiting instructor from Alton, Ill.

Tickets are on sale in room 8A, Schaeffer Hall, from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and from 1 to 4:30 p.m. They also may be purchased at the theatre box office.

The Tradition of Hospitality—

Usually when people come to visit the "typical" Iowa farm, there is a friendly welcome, some easy conversation and often a meal—but there isn't much of interest except perhaps to a few close neighbors and friends.

This usual procedure isn't operating in Iowa these days. Twelve men are touring Iowa farms. They are dropping in for a visit. They are receiving the usual hospitality, participating in friendly conversation and eating family meals. And the whole world is interested.

The 12 men are members of the Russian farm delegation visiting Iowa farms. Their visits and their comments are exciting interest not only in the community but in both the free and iron-curtain world.

The Russian delegation is in Iowa on a peaceful mission, one that could almost be classed as humanitarian. Their objective is to study Iowa's agricultural practices in the hopes that some of our ideas can be adapted to their own system. This may mean more food for the peoples of their nation and of the world.

Probably no peaceful delegation of modern day has elicited so much world interest. The majority of the newsmen and photographers who are reporting the Russian movements to the world are quite naturally representing American publications.

But included in the press group are correspondents for Tass, the Russian news agency; Pravda, leading Russian newspaper; a Japanese news agency, and many other foreign services.

Other nations have been following the visit through reports of the Associated Press and other news services.

We cannot predict what the eventual results of these "visits" on lessening world tension will be. We can only hope that they will be of some value.

Certainly if one of the causes of world tension is a misunderstanding and distrust between the peoples of the United States and Russia, this visit should be an opening wedge in a drive to promote better understanding.

Perhaps the Russians will view Iowans as representatives of the people of the United States. They are seeing them as they really live and are gaining some knowledge of our people.

Conversely, a better understanding of the Russian people must result after Iowans have had the chance to meet and talk with them in the midst of Iowa's corn fields.

Certainly the Russian delegation must be impressed with the hospitality offered them by Iowans. Perhaps the rest of the world will be too.

Perhaps it will be the opening for more friendly "visits" by "family members" of world neighbors. These in turn may lead to greater understanding and lessened tensions.

We hope that the traditions of friendly hospitality will produce for the world the same neighborly attitudes that have become traditional in Iowa farm life.

Motions Ask New Fagin Estate Trial

Three motions disputing a jury verdict awarding $16,000 to claimants against the estate of Sam Fagin, Rock Island, Ill., were filed in Johnson County District Court Monday.

A June verdict gave $11,000 to Mrs. Aileen Pilger, $4,000 to Ralph Pilger and $1,000 to their son, Ralph, of Moline, Ill., all injured in an auto crash east of Iowa City January 15, 1954. Fagin and a passenger died in the crash.

Better Iowa City Contest—

Accurate Information Would Better City - SUI Relations

(Editor's Note: This letter is the second prize winner in the University division of the Better Iowa City contest. The other winning letters will be printed in subsequent issues of The Daily Iowan.)

To the Iowa City Chamber of Commerce:

Like any city in the world Iowa City has many irritating problems. Unfortunately, due to differences of opinion and inherent difficulties in the problems, most of them cannot be resolved to the satisfaction of everyone. However, I do feel that one problem should be faced and worked on in this community. The problem is simply ignorance. It is the ignorance of the student concerning the role and function of the citizens of this community. It is the ignorance of the citizen concerning the role of the student in this city. Indeed, each is ignorant of what he himself has contributed and could contribute to the welfare of our community. If the tension created by this situation could be alleviated, then it would follow that, not only would one major problem be solved but we would find ourselves with a spirit of cooperation and responsible citizenship that would aid in facing and resolving together the other problems of our community.

The solution lies in finding a good means of supplying and distributing accurate information.

I propose a single publication to contain the following four parts:

1. It would describe exactly what resources of the University are available to the citizens of Iowa City. It would describe in some detail the medical, cultural, and practical services rendered, who and how to obtain them, and the rates charged.
2. More important, this publication should have a section defining and evaluating the role of the student in this community. It would describe the needs of a student, how much and where he spends his money, what the student should expect of the community in which he lives, and generally the conditions under which he lives. This would require statistical research, but the University could do this and would have no fear of such information.
3. This section would contain information about the services rendered by the city. It would describe in detail the fire department, the police force, the city administration, parks, garbage disposal, and many other resources utilized only partially by the students.
4. This is the most important section. It would describe the role of the farmer, how the citizens earn their living, what percentage of people are in each profession, what kind of schools the city has, how many and what kind of doctors there are, and in detail this publication would relate the most pressing problems of the city.

This could be financed by merchants who would purchase space to advertise along certain editorial lines. Each merchant would list the products he offers, and in a few words describe what services he feels he is rendering to the community. Only a person who has searched long and fruitfully for a particular product in this community can appreciate the possibilities of the advertising section.

Distribution would best be done during student registration in the local schools and at the University. Each could well devote part of its orientation program to this publication. Certainly the city should take part in the University registration; this is an important event to the city.

Last, I would say that this would be a most valuable publication to citizenship in our community. Seemingly, Americans have become very conscientious about tacitly suppressing information. The cliché is that "a little ignorance is a good thing" but this is wrong! The one most important problem facing this community is to raise an informed member whether he be student or townsman. Iowa City should act.

State's 1st Eye Bank To Begin Here Soon

With the support of more than 10,000 members of Iowa's Lions clubs, the state's first Eye Bank will be established at the State University of Iowa Medical Center in the near future.

The Eye Bank program is supported by some 250 Lions clubs throughout Iowa.

Under the direction of Dr. Alton E. Braley, professor and head of ophthalmology at SUI, the bank is expected within the next six weeks to begin service to victims of corneal eye diseases who can be helped by transplantation of a cornea from the eye of a recently deceased person to their own defective eyes.

Though designed specifically as a clearing house for much-needed corneas removed from the eyes of persons who will their eyes for medical use after their deaths, the project is also expected to have far-reaching effects on medical research, according to Theodore Hunter, chairman of the Eye Bank program for the Iowa City Lions Club.

Disease Produces Blindness

The cornea of the eye is the transparent, tissue-like part of the coat of the eyeball which covers the iris and pupil and admits light. Diseases of the cornea can result in partial or even total blindness.

Announcement that final details of the program were being arranged followed closely the passing of a bill by the Iowa State Legislature which made possible the willing of parts of the body for medical use. The bill went into effect July 1.

While the bill was still in the process of becoming a law, Iowa's Lions clubs worked swiftly last winter to pave the way for the establishment of an Eye Bank. The idea was initiated by the Iowa City club and adopted as a part of the state Sight Conservation Program of the Lions.

Statewide Establishment

Opening of the Eye Bank awaits appointment of a secretary to carry out the all-important office details of the program, according to Hunter. The Lions have already raised the needed $6,000 for establishment of the Bank throughout a statewide financial campaign, he added.

The money is to be used for establishment of the Bank's office, for the purchase of refrigeration kits for shipment of the eye parts, and for sterile kits with which physicians will remove the eyes, according to Hunter. As the program opens, kits will be placed in from 15 to 18 cities throughout the state.

Here's how the program will work: Donor or pledge cards will be printed and sent to persons seeking them. As they are returned by persons wishing to will their eyes, the office stenographer in Iowa City will record them and at the same time she will send names of the donors to morticians throughout the state.

Doctors Remove Eyes

Thus, when a donor dies, the mortician who has charge of the body will check the names of the deceased with his donor list. If the person is designated as a donor, the mortician will call in a local doctor qualified to remove the eyes.

Within 24 hours the vital cornea will be on its way to Iowa City, for transplants must be made soon after the death of the donor.

Meanwhile, the office worker in the Eye Bank will have been notified of the donor's death and will make arrangements for a person who is seeking a corneal transplant to proceed immediately to Iowa City.

"It will take the cooperation of doctors, morticians, and communications and transportation officials to make this a smooth-running program," Hunter says, "and we know we can count on the help and support of these people in this common effort of mercy."

Trustees Coordinate

The entire program of aid to the blind by the Iowa Lions is coordinated by trustees of the Iowa Lions Sight Conservation Foundation, headed by Stephen A. Brooks of Ames. Other trustees are Frank Shimanek, Monticello; C. Freaman Reid, Dubuque; Evan E. Rowe, Okaloosa; Clark R. Caldwell, Iowa City; William G. Young, Bedford; John H. Watts, Grand Junction; Mark E. McHenry, Ft. Dodge; the Rev. Robert J. Watson, Humboldt; R. J. Fritsch, Garner; G. F. Chiquet, Iowa Falls; Stephen Robinson, Des Moines, and A. H. White, Ames.

Hunter pointed out that Iowa is one of only five states which will have similar Eye Bank programs, the others being Ohio, New York, Louisiana and California. In the past, corneas to be used in operations in Iowa were sought from these other centers, often resulting in long delays.

Eye Ailments

"The cornea, an important part of the 'lenses' of the eye which is sometimes called the eye's front window, can become infected or diseased in several ways, resulting in partial or complete blindness," explains Braley. In corneal transplants, the diseased part of the cornea is removed and is replaced by the normal cornea taken from the eye of a cornea donor, he says.

"We cannot guarantee that all corneal transplants will be successful," the eye surgeon emphasizes, "but rarely does an operation fail to help the patient's vision in some way. And with the Eye Bank in operation it will be possible to perform 'repeat' operations—if the first operation is unsuccessful, another can be attempted, and still another if it is necessary."

Expand Research Program

In addition to making it possible to help many more persons afflicted with corneal diseases, the Eye Bank will enable Braley's staff to expand further the eye research program under way at the University Medical Center. The availability of whole eyes will make it possible to study diseases of other parts of the eye, he explained.

"We still have no valid explanation, for example, of why older people develop cataracts on their eyes," he said. "We have never had the material with which to explore the disease adequately."

The Eye Bank will have yet another effect, Braley said, that of making possible the training of more doctors of ophthalmology and of adding to the training of those already entered in the field.

"The importance of this medical advancement in Iowa cannot be overestimated," the eye surgeon declared, lauding the men who have made the Eye Bank possible.

New Home Study Bulletin Released

The new State University of Iowa Home Study Bulletin will offer 164 different courses to non-resident students in 1955-56. The Bulletin, which was released recently by the SUI Extension Division Bureau of Correspondence Study, indicates 65 SUI faculty member from 22 different departments offering services through the Home Study Program.

New courses have been prepared in principles of accounting, educational guidance work for school people, child study, and parent education work.

During the month of June, 569 enrollments were processed for 1955-56. More than 5,000 students took part in Home Study Work during the past academic year.

About 2,000 of the students enrolled last year in correspondence study were college people from SUI or other schools who were filling in their training programs while absent from campus. The balance of the enrollees came from all walks of life and from all age levels, intent upon increasing their understanding in various areas or developing training programs to assist them in their vocations.

Library privileges are extended to home study people, as is true for those in residence. The student pays for transportation on such books he requests.

SUI To Produce First of 5 Educational TV Programs

The State University of Iowa will this week take part in producing first program of a five-program educational TV series for grade school children.

The series, "Iowa TV School-time," will be presented later over WOI-TV in Ames. It is intended to challenge boys and girls of grade school level with experiences that teachers often have neither the time nor the facilities to provide.

"Adventures in Art," one of the programs, will be produced by SUI Television Center in cooperation with the Department of Public Instruction. The other four will be produced by Iowa State Teachers College at Cedar Falls and Iowa State College at Ames.

Current events, Iowa history, natural science, elementary science, and art are the subjects which will be explored through TV cameras.

SUI's program consists of 15 separate lessons and is adapted to be helpful to pupils in understanding art. It will be suited for students in the second, third, and fourth grades.

Each program in the series will provide projects in two and three dimensional activities for children of different grade levels. Demonstrations requiring the participation of both students and teachers will be emphasized.

Each art lesson will consist of a discussion of possible subject matter, materials and tools; a technical demonstration; motivating questions by the teacher and a final evaluation of the product.

Programs are designed to stimulate creativity in children and to aid the teacher in helping to understand the child's emotional, social, and intellectual needs.

The series "Adventures in Art" will be demonstrated and narrated by Prof. Frank Wachowiak, head of the University High School art department.

Three of the 15 half hour programs will be kinescoped in the SUI Television Center. They will be directed by Sam Becker, instructor in television teaching. The remainder will originate in the WOI-TV studios.

These programs will be narrated in the studio by Prof. Wachowiak. The production of the first kinescope film is planned this week, according to John Ross Winnie, professor in charge of production in the SUI Television Center.

Iowa State College will produce two of the five series, "Our World Today" and "See and Do Time." The first program is designed to acquaint the pupils with current happenings in the world. "See and Do Time" is especially adapted for kindergarten and the first grades of elementary schools.

"Landmarks in Iowa History" is intended to acquaint students with the history of the State of Iowa. It will be produced by the Iowa State Teachers College. The second production from ISTC, "Let's Explore Science," will examine some of the problems and applications of science that arise in everyday life.

Oriole Victory Stops 7-Game Win Streak

CHICAGO (AP) — Jim Wilson shut out the Chicago White Sox with two hits Monday to pitch the Baltimore Orioles to a 3 to 0 victory.

The loss snapped the Sox' seven-game winning streak and dropped them two games behind the league-leading New York Yankees, who were idle Monday.

Gus Triandos' homer following a single by Cal Abrams in the first inning provided the Orioles' margin of victory.

An error by Bob Kennedy and Hal Smith's double netted the Orioles a run off relief pitcher Morrie Martin in the eighth inning.

Righthander Mike Fornieles was charged with the loss, his third against six wins, after yielding five of the Orioles seven hits in five innings.

The shutout was Wilson's third of the year. His record is now 7-9.

Minnie Mino, who doubled with two out in the first inning, and Sherm Lollar, who was safe on an error in the fifth and advanced on a passed ball, were the only two Sox runners to reach second base.

Baltimore . . . 290 000 010—3 11
Chicago . . . 000 000 000—0 2 1
Wilson and Triandos, Smith (6); Fornieles, Martin (6), Howell (8) and Lollar. L—Fornieles.
Home run: Baltimore—Triandos.

Error Costs Braves, 6-5

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Bruton dropped a long fly ball hit by Willie Mays and two New York Giants scored to give the defending world champions a 6-5 victory over the Milwaukee Braves Monday night.

Bruton's miscue came in the seventh inning with the Braves leading by 5-4 as the result of a four-run outburst in the fifth inning. With two out and two men on base, Mays cracked a long drive to right-center.

Home runs: New York—Thompson, Dark.

Nats' 6-3 Victory Sweeps A's Series

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Washington defeated the Kansas City Athletics 6-3 Monday, giving the Senators a sweep of the three-game series. Roy Sievers hit two home runs and a double and Eddie Yost had a homer for Washington.

Yost's homer, a two-run blast in the second inning, followed Sievers' double.

Washington . . . 021 100 020—6 6 1
Kansas City . . . 110 000 001—3 10 1
Abernathy, Pascual (7) and Courtney; Boyer, Sletter (4) and Astroth. W—Boyer. Home runs: Washington—Yost, Sievers (2).

Andrews Wins First Round of Western Meet

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Art Andrews, Iowa City, advanced in the first round of the annual Western junior boys tennis championships Monday.

He stopped Tom Brunkow, Champaign, 6-0, 6-0. It was one of several matches played before rain interrupted the meet.

Mike Green, Fresno, Calif., seeded No. 1 in the junior division, showed up late and officials were about to start without him. His entry shoved Andrews in the No. 2 spot.

2 Students Lead in Western Golf Tourney

ROCKFORD, Ill. (AP) — Two college students, Rex Baxter, Amarillo, Tex., and Bob Brue, Milwaukee, shot three-under-par 68's Monday to share opening round honors in qualifying trials of the Western Amateur Golf Tournament.

Baxter, 19, a junior at the University of Houston and runner-up in the Trans-Mississippi tourney the last two years, fired a pair of steady 34's over the rolling Rockford Country Club layout.

Brue, 20-year-old sophomore at the University of Miami (Fla.), made his debut in the Western Amateur a big splash as he matched par 35 on the front side and knocked three strokes off it for a 33 coming back.

The 145-pound youngster was fresh from winning his only tournament after playing golf six years and learning it through the try Club in Milwaukee.

Phils Down Cubs Twice

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The homer-happy Philadelphia Phillies whipped the Chicago Cubs, 2-1, Monday night as Roy Smalley parked one in the upper left field stands after Marv Blaylock singled in the fifth.

Before the scheduled game, the Phils came from behind to take a suspended Sunday nightcap game from the Cubs 8-6 with Glen Gorbous' three-run pinch homer in the sixth inning doing much of the damage.

"Wonderful! Does deep and tender credit to the human race."
...Time

The story is beautiful and touching. It shows us Marty, played magnificently by Ernest Borgnine, as a thirtyish butcher in New York's teeming Bronx. He's unloved, unhandsome and lonely. His quest for romance and marriage ends in a philosophical soliloquy, "Let's face it, Marty, you're a dog!"

In one of the most tender "meeting" scenes ever to come out of Hollywood or elsewhere, Marty finds a girl. She's as plain and lonely as he is, another "dog." How near real tragedy of the heart they come! Each recoils from the realization that they have at last found a mate - only because they fail to realize it. This is real, honest, tender love without story-book trappings, waiting to put a lump in your throat.

Acquisitions, Cataloging, and Research—

More to Library Than Meets the Eye

By RICHARD YOUNG
The State University of Iowa Library may bear little resemblance to an iceberg, but they have one thing in common—there is more to each than meets the eye.

Checking books in and out is an important part of the library's activity, but only a part.

Underlying this process are the less obvious acquisition, cataloging and research duties which make up the bulk of the staff's work.

Library's Scope
A look at one phase of the total operation reveals something of the scope of the modern library.

"Any printed word has potential research value," said acquisition head Carl Jackson. It is his job to procure as many of these words as possible, within financial limits.

Jackson, an ex-paratrooper who saw action at Normandy and in the Battle of the Bulge, is hardly the bookish type.

He is quick to point out that the SUI library is "big business," deserving treatment as such. His division contains ample evidence that these are not idle words.

Modern Methods
On the wall behind Jackson's desk is a chart pinpointing every movement of the acquisition process. Bookkeeping and accounting procedures are used which have not yet been adopted by many commercial concerns. Office equipment is of the latest design.

Yet, in spite of the streamlined functioning of the acquisition department, it depends to a large extent on the generosity of Iowans. This is due both to limited book funds and to the fact that many desired items are not available on the commercial market.

A large number of the 750,000 books and papers on file have come as gifts from Iowans.

Non-Book Donations
The library encourages non-book donations. Non-book material falls into three categories:

1. Runs of magazines and journals of any type except popular, wide-circulation magazines.
2. Diaries, letters, and manuscript records of a personal nature.
3. Business records.

At present the library is cooperating with the SUI History Department on a study of business growth in Iowa. The project is intended to give a complete historical picture of business and economic trends in the state.

Special emphasis will be placed on labor union history, a field heretofore neglected.

Have Research Value
The W. J. Young Co. records are an example of the research value of non-book donations. The records filled a one ton truck and two station wagons when delivered from Clinton. They show all transactions of the pioneer lumber company from 1855 to 1897, and are expected to shed considerable light on business conditions of that time.

Another collection of value is that of the Wallace family. It is chiefly concerned with the correspondence, speeches and scientific data of Henry Wallace, former vice-president and secretary of agriculture.

CARL JACKSON, head of the acquisition department at the State University of Iowa Library, looks over a rare 1838 map of Iowa. The SUI library obtained the map from the estate of the Hancock family of Waukon.

Big Four—

ment with that since the lifting of the said barriers would meet both the national interests of the Soviet and American peoples and the interests of universal peace.

Wide Range
As was expected, the Russian Premier came out with a wider range of problems to discuss than were raised by the Western members.

The Westerners steered clear of talk about the Far East. Bulganin hauled it boldly in, saying: "The settlement of the situation in Asia and the Far East, including the Taiwan (Formosa) area on the basis of recognition of the undisputed right of China to this island would be of signal importance for the amelioration of the international situation as a whole."

German Question
The three Western leaders based their proposals for security pacts on settlement of the German question. Solution of this question, they agreed, must come first. Russia disagreed. Bulganin said disarmament and security agreements should come first.

He proposed a two-stage security agreement that would lead to withdrawal of all American forces from Europe, destruction of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, and limitation of the German army to a package size job of about 200,000 soldiers.

Bulganin also suggested that Russia and the United States cut their armed forces down to 1 1/2 million men each, with Communist China allowed a like number. Britain and France would each be permitted to have 650,000 men under arms, with other nations limited to between 150,000 to 200,000. This is the same proposal Russia previously made to the UN Disarmament subcommittee meeting in London.

As a beginning, he asked that the troops which formerly occupied Austria—British, French, American and Russian—be demobilized when they are withdrawn under the Austrian state treaty.

The West made it absolutely plain before the conference that it would not agree to dissolve its close treaty links.

The Soviet view, as set forth Monday, would inevitably mean a long delay in joining together severed Germany since it calls for the prior creation of a Soviet-inspired system of collective security for Europe.

It also claimed that West Germany's integration into Western Union and NATO was the chief barrier to reunifying the country.

Bulganin flatly refused to discuss the questions of the Soviet satellite states or of international communism as Eisenhower asked Monday morning.

French Premier Edgar Faure proposed unification of Germany and joint security accords with Russia.

Russians—

than the Allemans. They have a rather typical Iowa family farm of 180 acres. Seventy-five are under corn and 40 under oats. They feed heifers for market, raise hogs and chickens.

Alexandr Yezhevsky, Soviet farm machinery executive, asked Alleman: "How much money do you put in your pocket each year?" He patted his pocket to demonstrate he meant what was left after expenses.

Tells Profits
Alleman explained he netted last year around $5,000.

The Soviet delegation leader V. V. Matskevich is demonstrating marked abilities as a politician. He patted the Alleman's dog and held one of the Alleman's babies.

He's friendly and an efficient person and is making a good impression on the Iowans who meet him.

The Russians are here in Iowa, of course, at least in part for what might be called propaganda purposes—to push the idea of peaceful coexistence with the Soviet Union and manifest the friendly face of the Khrushchev new look.

But they ask intelligent questions and show a real interest in American farming. They seem eager to learn.

Americans Given Cordial Welcome

MOSCOW (AP)—The American farm delegation got its first look at Soviet agriculture Monday and came back to town impressed—especially with the friendliness and hospitality of the people.

The 12 Americans visited a model collective farm and a state farm, both in the Moscow region. Monday night they took off on a 30-day tour of the Ukraine, central Asia and the virgin lands of Siberia.

They were startled by the amount of work on farms done by Russian women and an expenditure of labor which would shock farmers at home. They were a little dismayed by the efficient farm nursery for children of working women because "it lacked the family life feeling we are accustomed to."

Charles J. Hearst of Cedar Falls, Iowa, and John M. Steddon of Granger, Iowa, remarked that the collective farmers claimed to be making plenty of money but wondered how much these Russians could buy with their rubles.

Lone Tree Hearing Set For Tonight

A request for an injunction to stop a hearing on the latest petition to form an enlarged Lone Tree community school district was denied in Johnson County District Court Monday by Judge James P. Gaffney.

Gaffney temporarily blocked a possible fourth school boundary election for the area, however.

The petition was submitted to the court last week by three Fremont Township residents.

The hearing is scheduled for 8 p.m. tonight at the Lone Tree school before the county Board of Education.

Gaffney urged, in allowing tonight's hearing, that the County Board of Education adjourn the meeting and call it at a later date.

Gaffney's ruling ordered that a fourth election on forming a new district be postponed until two suits involving the school district are brought to trial September 20 in Johnson County District Court.

'Play Impulse' Is Subject of Ciardi's Talk

Archibald MacLeish's belief that "a poem should not mean but be" was strongly defended in John Ciardi's lecture on "The Play Impulse in Poetry" Monday night.

This lecture was delivered in the Pentacrest Room of the new addition to the Iowa Memorial Union before a small but attentive audience.

The explanation and defense of the play impulse in poetry was the concern of the lecturer. By "play impulse" Ciardi means the dynamic balance within the poem, resulting from the interplay of the parts. The message of statement which the poem expresses is relatively unimportant in itself, because the words are meaningless as compared to the emotional effect produced by the way in which they are used.

The discipline imposed by following a strict form and expressing ideas within this form, usually produces better poetry than the presentation of a message without good poetic pattern, the lecturer said.

Ciardi suggested, however, that the best poetry combines form and content alike.

"The explicit statements made in the poem are less important than the ideas and feelings implied by the structure of the poem," he said.

Ciardi supported his idea of the importance of play impulse in poetry with quotations from various poets including himself.

The random and informal presentation of this lecture was concluded by readings from his latest collection of verse "As If" which will be published this fall.

John Ciardi is the author of several volumes of verse and the editor of the book "Mid-Century American Poets."

He also has recently completed a six-year project translating Dante's "Inferno" into verse for the Mentor Book Series.

Hearing on Will Set for Monday

A hearing on the will of Louis D. Jackson, 61, Iowa City, has been set for 9 a.m. Monday in Johnson County District Court.

Judge James P. Gaffney set the hearing after Jackson's will was filed for probate Monday, Jackson died July 10.

He had been the center of legal actions concerning his custody and possible shares in his $500,000 estate. Principals in the actions were Robert Jackson, an older brother and Muscatine attorney, and Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Sample, 649 S. Governor St.

Listed as beneficiaries under the brief will are Bess Donnell, Webster Grove, Mo., an aunt, and the Samples.

WCTU Cables Geneva, Urges 'Dry' Conference
EVANSTON, Ill. (AP)—The Women's Christian Temperance Union Monday cabled President Eisenhower in Geneva "prayerfully urging" that there be no drinking at the Big Four conference.

The cablegram was prompted by recent reports that the Russians have sent a shipment of vodka to Geneva.

SUI Conference To Convene at Carroll

The seventh annual State University of Iowa Newspaper Mechanical Conference will be held at Carroll Friday. The one-day session will be sponsored by the School of Journalism and the Extension Division.

In addition to general discussion periods and a visit to the Carroll Times-Herald plant to see a typesetter in operation, the conference will include six discussions on newspaper production operations and problems.

C. Wiley Beveridge, editor of the Wright County Monitor in Clarion, will open the conference with an analysis of shell casting.
