Big Four Deadlocked On Germany

GENEVA (AP) — The top men of the Big Four powers came to a deadlock Wednesday on how to reunite Germany and to bring security to Europe.

They tossed the whole tangled problem to their foreign ministers, who will see what they can salvage out of the dispute.

The deadlock on these two problems — perhaps the toughest the summit conference will tackle — was expected even before the conference began.

But James C. Hagerty, White House press spokesman, recognized the bad effect such a deadlock could have on public opinion, and tried to offset it. He said the action in turning over the problem to the foreign ministers should be looked upon as the first job assigned them by the conference.

Definite Deadlock

The deadlock is definite. The Russians want to set up a system of cooperative security in Europe and only then reunite and perhaps arm Germany. The Western Powers want to end the division of Germany right now. They see a divided Germany as a major cause of tension in Europe.

The Russians backed up their own point of view Wednesday by laying before the conference a new security pact based on the outline Premier Nikolai Bulganin gave Monday. He called for a freezing of present forces, an agreement to settle East-West disputes without force, then the creation of a security organization which would lead to the transfer of all American and other foreign troops from Europe.

Old Buddies Talk

This struggle must have taken some focus over a lunch table where President Eisenhower and Soviet Marshal Georgi Zhukov finally got together for a serious talk. What they said may remain locked up in the archives for some time. But President Eisenhower announced weeks ago that he was exchanging letters with Zhukov, a wartime battle partner, out of which he hoped good would come.

This meeting had many possibilities. The two are fairly good friends, although divided by national differences. They were able to talk freely, one soldier to another, because they had only interpreters with them.

Subject Unknown

Reporters could get no official briefing on what the two men talked about, but it was thought that President Eisenhower followed up what he started Tuesday. That was to appeal to Zhukov on a personal basis to look upon the North Atlantic Treaty Organization as designed to preserve peace, especially a peace that would include Germany.

There was much speculation as to what might come of this meeting. Certain members of some Western delegations shivered in their diplomatic boots, remembering that much harm had come to the West from the friendly exchanges between President Roosevelt and Marshal Stalin at Yalta.

There was one vital difference. Stalin grabbed for sharp deals and had the power to speak for Russia. Zhukov can not. While he is defense minister, he is not a member of the Presidium, which governs Russia.

Link Discussions

A morning session of the foreign ministers decided to link discussion of reunion of Germany with the vast problem of providing security for European countries. Even that device, when used Wednesday afternoon by the top men, brought them no closer together.

President Eisenhower told the conference it was clear that the exchange of ideas had gone about as far as it could. British Prime Minister Anthony Eden then came forward with a proposal that the difficult problems be turned over to the foreign ministers. They may report back before the present conference finishes at the end of this week. Or they may choose to continue discussions later in the year at a meeting of foreign ministers growing out of the present conference.

Disarmament Next

Today Eisenhower and his three colleagues likely will take up discussion of disarmament, the third item on the program set up by common accord.

Eisenhower's stand that German unification should come first, drew support from both Premier Faure and Prime Minister Eden.

Russians in Cedar Rapids

Negro Presents Gift Of Marbles To Reds

By STU HOPKINS

A gift of a box of marbles was presented to the chief of the Soviet farm delegation in Cedar Rapids Wednesday by a Negro who wanted to "ease the impressions the Russians might have gotten from the incident at Washington Tuesday."

Clarence V. Scott, 52, manager of a Cedar Rapids floor finishing firm, presented the gift to Vladimir Matskevich, Russian Minister of Agriculture, as the Russian group of 10 finished a tour of the Wilson and Company meat packing plant.

Iowans Flock To Get Peek At Russians

By TOM WHITNEY

REINBECK (AP) — Public curiosity about the Soviet farm delegation held at a high level here Wednesday as the group continued its tour of Iowa farms.

This is the fifth day the Russians have been in the United States and the third they have been journeying about Iowa. Their schedule is intensive, their energy unflagging. Their good humor is infectious.

Iowans are universally interested in getting a peek at them. "I just want to see what a Russian looks like!" remarked a middle-aged Waterloo woman, who was peering to see the Soviet group dismount from their air-conditioned bus.

Tough Schedule

Wednesday First Deputy Minister of Agriculture Vladimir V. Matskevich and his eleven delegation members had a tough schedule.

1. Starting at 8 a.m., they visited the Wilson & Co. meat packing plant in Cedar Rapids. They were impressed with the modern plant's efficiency.

2. They traveled from Cedar Rapids to Waterloo by bus, stopping enroute to talk to Logan Urice of Vinton, who had posted on his barn words in Russian meaning "Hello comrade."

3. They had luncheon at the Waterloo Chamber of Commerce, where John Strohm, American coordinator of the group's trip, introduced each member of the delegation in a folksy fashion.

4. Delegation leader Matskevich, as usual, stole the show with a short, amusing, and affectionate message.

5. They visited the office of Paul Barger, Extension Director for Black Hawk County.

Visit Hearst Farm

6. Near Waterloo, they visited the farm of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hearst. Hearst himself is now in the Soviet Union as a member of the U.S. farm delegation.

7. They visited in Reinbeck the farm of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Stover Jr. The Stovers own their own 160 acre farm. They have 30 head of Holstein dairy cattle.

The Russians were scheduled to arrive in Ames Wednesday evening.

The "impressions" Scott referred to were those made on the Russians at the George Hora farm in Washington county when a young Negro appeared carrying a placard which read:

"Prejudice"
"Iowans are prejudice, narrow and hypocritical to Negro workers."
The Negro identified himself as Vernon Wilkerson, 26, a student at Iowa Wesleyan College in Mt. Pleasant. Wilkerson explained he had come to the farm because he knew he could attract attention to his cause.

Scott, who said the marbles were part of 6,500 which he has been collecting since he was a child, explained through an interpreter that he wanted the Russians to know that Negroes in Iowa did not feel they were victims of "prejudice, narrowness, and hypocrisy."

Not Scheduled

The presentation was not part of the scheduled events for the day. Scott came to the Wilson plant about 9:30 and waited for the Russian delegation to exit from the meat cutting building.

Then he went up to Matskevich and through the State Department interpreter accompanying the Soviet group, told the Russian that he wanted him to have the marbles as an expression of "brotherhood."

Scott told Matskevich that he did not want the Russians to think that Tuesday's incident was representative of Negro feelings in Iowa.

He also asked if Matskevich would send him a marble from Russia. He said that although he had marbles in his collection from many countries, he had none from Russia.

Toured Plant

The Russians spent the morning touring the Wilson plant, learning methods from purchase of the animals to the final slaughtering and cutting and packing.

Another incident which might have given the Soviet contingent bad "impressions" of Iowans occurred after they left Cedar Rapids.

Their bus had stopped at the Guy Stover farm near Reinbeck when Stan Baker, of nearby Hudson, who said he is director of the "Iowa State Anti-Communist League," appeared with a hand lettered placard which read "There is no freedom in Russia."

He was finally persuaded to leave, and the Russians, inside one of the Stover barns, did not see the incident.

Committee Debate Causes Fist Fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — A fist fight broke out Wednesday between two Congressmen — one white and one Negro — during a House committee debate on whether an anti-segregation amendment should be tacked on to a school aid bill.

The reported combatants were Representatives Adam Clayton Powell, pastor of New York City's largest Negro church, and Cleveland M. Bailey, a fifth-term Congressman from Clarksburg, W. Va. Both are Democrats.

Members of the House Education and Labor Committee said the fists flew during a closed meeting in which Powell lost a move to exclude areas practicing segregation from federal school construction assistance.

Bailey was said to have accused Powell of trying to wreck the school bill by insisting on an anti-segregation feature. As the two quarreled the heat mounted and the charge "lie" was hurled.

Then Bailey, 69, was reported to have jumped up and swung on the 46-year-old Powell. Informants said Bailey, who gave away 40-50 pounds to the taller New Yorker, landed one or more blows, some chairs were bumped over and Powell was knocked partly off balance before other committee members could haul them apart.

Bailey later said the incident "never happened." And Powell commented to newsmen: "Cleveland Bailey and I smoke cigars together and are old friends."

However, word of the fist-cuffs was corroborated by several committee sources. Powell's amendment was beaten 17-10.

House OK's $1 Minimum Hourly Wage

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House ignored President Eisenhower's wishes Wednesday and agreed with the Senate to boost the national minimum wage from 75 cents to $1 an hour.

Eisenhower had steadfastly held to his recommendation that the wage floor for workers in interstate commerce be raised only to 90 cents.

Overriding Republican protests, the House decided on $1 by a 362-54 margin.

Final Verdict

The vote represented Congress' final verdict except for a difference over timing of the increase. The House set the effective date at next March 1. Previously the Senate had fixed it at Jan. 1. That conflict will have to be settled in conference.

The White House has not indicated how Eisenhower would treat a raise beyond the 90 cents he had proposed. The final House vote Wednesday would be more than enough to override a veto, for which a two-thirds majority is necessary.

Amendments Defeated

But on an earlier test the count was only 173-168 to beat down an amendment by Rep. Samuel McConnell, Jr. (R-Pa.) to give business time for adjustment by holding the increase to 90 cents for 1956 and then hiking it to $1 in 1957.

Senate approval of the $1 figure came last month on a voice vote, with no record of the numbers.

Rep. Roy Wier (D-Minn.) tried to get the House to go to $1.10 an hour, but his amendment was submerged, 198-93.

On the final rollcall, 192 Democrats and 170 Republicans voted for the bill. Against it were 29 Democrats and 25 Republicans.

South Affected Most

Figures projected from a Labor Department survey indicate a $1 minimum would mean raises totaling 560 million dollars for 2,100,000 workers. The effect would be greatest in the South.

The bills passed by both House and Senate omit any change in the classes of workers covered by the wage-hour law. Because of its controversial nature, this aspect was passed over for future consideration.

Some 24 million men and women working for companies doing interstate business are now covered.

A federal minimum wage was first adopted in 1938. The rate was then 25 cents an hour. It reached the present level of 75 cents in 1948.

Stevens Gets Medal, Takes Last Salute

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army said farewell to Secretary Robert T. Stevens Wednesday with a parade, and then prepared to welcome Wilber M. Brucker as its new civilian chief.

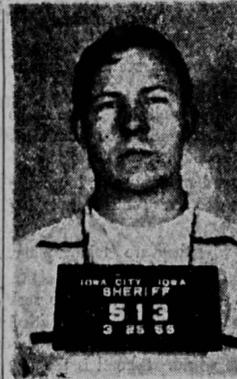

Stevens took his final salute from the Army he has served for 24 years at a late afternoon parade and review at Ft. Myer, Va. Troops of the 3rd Regiment rendered the final honors and a squadron of Army helicopters flew over in tight formation.

Before the ceremony he received a Medal of Freedom from Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson, who said Stevens "contributed immeasurably in the settlement of hostilities in Korea."

His successor, Brucker, is a former Republican governor of Michigan who is now Defense Department general counsel. He will be sworn in as secretary today.

Air Force Parachutist Loses Wallet in Jump

BENTON HARBOR, Mich. (AP) — It cost an Air Force parachutist $15 to make a demonstration jump. Airman 1/c Phillip Beilfus, stationed at Selfridge Air Force Base, said his wallet containing $15 popped from his pocket as he hit the water in a jump at nearby Silver Beach.

Wayne Lumpa
Escapes From Jail

Wayne Lumpa Eludes Police In Cornfield

Wayne F. Lumpa, 18, of Iowa City, Wednesday escaped from Johnson County Jail and led law officials on a futile chase through fields of seven-foot high corn southeast of the city.

He was still at large late Wednesday night after city, county and state officials called off the search.

Lumpa escaped from jail at about 2:30 p.m. when he tricked Mrs. Lucille Axmear, jail cook, into letting him out of his cell, then slugged her.

Seven Years

Lumpa had been re-sentenced to seven years in the state reformatory Wednesday morning in Johnson County District Court for violating parole after being given a suspended sentence on a false check charge.

He had been given a suspended sentence and bench parole on the charge April 15 by Judge Harold D. Evans. One of his parole conditions was that he work at the Oakdale sanatorium.

Lumpa later left the job and headed east, Johnson County Sheriff Pat Murphy reported. He was caught in Oxford, Ohio, after he applied for a bakery job and gave the name of a former Iowa City employer as a reference. His former employer notified Johnson County officials, who had him returned to Iowa City.

Judge James P. Gaffney, who revoked Lumpa's parole Wednesday, told him:

'Merciful Judgement'

"This court has had many experiences in juvenile court with you and through these proceedings you were meted out very merciful judgement. Every reason appears why the suspended sentence should be revoked."

That was at about 9:30 a.m. Wednesday. Five hours later he made his break.

Murphy gave this account of Lumpa's escape:

Wanted a Shower

Lumpa yelled to Mrs. Axmear from his cell that he was sick from the heat and that a shower might help him feel better. When she opened the cell door, he stunned her with a blow and pushed her into the cell. He then ripped a telephone off the kitchen wall and ran out the main entrance of the jail. In his haste, he forgot to close the cell door.

Mrs. Axmear phoned Iowa City police, who notified local radio stations. Within 20 minutes tips concerning Lumpa were coming in.

Headed for Corn

Lumpa apparently headed south from the county jail for the shelter of the corn fields south of the city.

The first tip reported him crossing Lower Muscatine Road about one-half mile south of Iowa City and heading into a corn field near the Rock Island railroad tracks.

Law officers rushed to the scene, but failed to find a trace of Lumpa.

False Alarm

The second tip said a man fitting Lumpa's description was heading north on Second Avenue in the eastern part of the city. The man was not Lumpa.

He last was seen in a cornfield just south of Highway 6 and one-half mile east of Iowa City. This was about 1,000 yards from the place where he was first sighted.

Lumpa is about 5 feet, 5 inches tall and weighs about 175 pounds. He has blue eyes, blond hair and a fair complexion. He reportedly had been wearing a blue and gray knit shirt and blue levis when he escaped.

Knows the Land

"People around here better keep their cars locked up," one highway patrolman said Wednesday night. "He'll probably try to get a car before morning."

Murphy described Lumpa as being familiar with the rural land around Iowa City.

"He could run these back county roads for days," Deputy Sheriff Don Wilson said. "He knows this area like the back of his hand."

Russian Talk By Salisbury Tonight at 8

An eyewitness account of the industrial area which the Communists are building in Central Asia will be given by New York Times Moscow correspondent Harrison Salisbury at the Iowa Memorial Union at 8 p.m. today.

Timely Topic

At a time when Iowa attention is focused on the visit by a Russian farm delegation and on Communist participation in the Big Four meeting at Geneva, Salisbury will give a report on the industry and people of Russia to his SUI audience. His topic is "Inside Soviet Central Asia."

Salisbury, who recently returned from Russia after a five-year stint, has been covering the visit of the Russian farm experts in Iowa.

Extensive Russian Trips

Former United Press editor in Washington, D.C., and later UP's London manager and director of European coverage, Salisbury in 1944 spent eight months in Russia, traveling some 25,000 miles. He made a 6,000-mile trip through the Urals, Siberia and Central Asia, visiting Russian steel, armaments and aircraft factories.

In 1953 he revisited the area as the Times correspondent, and went even further into Central Asia, an area which even in the days of the Czars was sealed from foreigners.

U.S. Deficit Is $4 Billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government ran almost $4.2 billion into the red in the year ended June 30. This was a deficit more than a billion dollars greater than in the year before but $300 million smaller than expected.

The Treasury and the Budget Bureau reported that "greater prosperity" reflected in rising income tax payments, sent federal revenues about $1.3 billion higher than President Eisenhower's January forecast.

This heightened hopes for a sharp reduction—or even possibly the elimination—of the estimated $2.4 billion deficit for fiscal 1956, which began 20 days ago. Not only has consumer income continued to climb but taxable corporation profits are nearing record levels.

However, mounting farm surpluses may be the fiscal villain in the year ahead, as they were in the past year. Crop price supports, Wednesday's statement revealed, exceeded by more than a billion dollars the estimate which Eisenhower sent to Congress six months ago.

Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey and Budget Director Rowland R. Hughes gave this income-and-outgo picture of fiscal 1955:

Expenditures, $64,494,075,559.
Receipts, $60,302,503,608.
Deficit, $4,191,571,951.

Arms and the Men at Geneva—

Among major challenges being tackled at the Geneva meeting none has a more obvious worldwide appeal than "disarmament." The word is a misnomer, of course. Arms control, arms limitation, arms reduction are all more realistic terms for the goals that can be seen or even imagined for this generation.

And Geneva has a goal considerably this side of even the nearest of these. This is to create an atmosphere in which discussion of controls can be fruitfully resumed. Perhaps it is more accurate to say that Geneva has an even more limited purpose. This is to register the recognition of world leaders that the atmosphere has changed sufficiently to warrant a new try at keeping the nuclear age safe for humanity.

Never before in history would success at arms control mean so much to so many as now.

Never before have entire populations been menaced by a single weapon as they are by the H-bomb.

Never before has the cost of armaments borne so heavily on so many people in so many countries.

Never before has so clear an opportunity existed to do so much good with the money that might be diverted from arms under reasonably safe international controls.

That is the gigantic background of danger and promise before which the Geneva discussions on arms control are taking place.

There are two basic reasons why they are taking place. One is general, the other specific.

Foremost — and indispensable — is new readiness to seek agreement, or at least a relaxation of disagreement, on political matters such as Germany and mutual security guarantees between the Soviet and the Western world. Second is the fact that the two worlds have already started moving toward common ground on questions of arms control itself.

Until May of this year the Soviet position was that nuclear arms must be immediately and totally prohibited. This ran up against the fact that for the West nuclear superiority was vital to security. Moscow had the armies, but the West had the bomb. On that balance peace poised precariously.

But from a Western point of view there was another snag in the Soviet stand. Moscow would not agree to unlimited international inspection of armaments production. This apparent cause of deadlock has been eroded, not by reason foremost but by developments in the atomic field. These convinced many experts that nuclear production methods were fast outstripping any proposals for control through inspection.

Today Western experts are as a result studying limited control plans themselves. Among these is one which the Russians favor. This is international supervision at airfields to prevent if possible a "sneak" atomic attack being launched against any nation. Meanwhile Moscow has come part way to the Western position on banning nuclear weapons — which is that their prohibition must be undertaken as part of an over-all cut in armaments and that conventional weapons should be reduced first.

While this is being done the Soviets say the use of nuclear weapons should be subject to the United Nations Security Council. But here a Soviet veto could prevent "legal" use of atomic weapons even to repel aggression.

This could prove a hard nut to crack even after a Geneva success. But it seems that a combination of recent proposals from both East and West might offer a way out of the present impasse on arms control. These include: airfield supervision; some form of international inspection; and the new French proposal for "budgetary" checks on arms building.

This is the situation as the men of Geneva find it. It is their task to improve on it if they can.

Interpreting the News—

Success at Geneva Rests on Understanding of Viewpoints

By J. M. ROBERTS
Associated Press News Analyst

There is a growing and numbing feeling that the Geneva conference has accomplished about all that it is going to, aside from setting up machinery for long and probably inconclusive conferences at lower levels.

There will be a lot of talk at the end about how the conference has permitted the four powers to get a better understanding of each other's viewpoints. But that very understanding is disheartening.

The Russians have practically refused to talk about reunification of Germany, and neither side showed the slightest intention of compromising on collective security.

Dismissal

There never was any idea that these issues would be solved by the chiefs of state. But their dismissal from the agenda in such cavalier fashion, after the most urgent appeals from President Eisenhower, shoves them into a limbo from which the foreign ministers can hardly be expected to resurrect them.

Nikolai Bulganin
Accepts Some Proposals

The American delegation's impression that the Russians still want the conference to be a success depends on what the Russians will consider success.

Some observers are beginning to express the view that the Russians are getting what they really want, which is stalemate for the time being.

Insoluble Question
With the German question and collective security proving insoluble, there is no reason to feel that any progress can be made on disarmament. Bulganin said Russia had accepted some of the Western proposals, but did not add that this acceptance was hedged with unchanging and unacceptable Russian demands, such as America's abandonment of her foreign bases.

The one point still on the agenda where some progress might be possible is that concerning improvement of contact between East and West. In one largely superficial way the conference itself is a part of that idea, and the expected lower-level conferences will pick it up.

Better Trade Relations
More substantially, however, it could involve trade relations.

There has grown up a large school of thought that if the West is ever to see the basic changes in Russia which will make true peace possible, it will have to begin with establishment of better trade relations.

If Russia can be shown which side her bread is buttered on, then there will be some chance of bringing to the fore any Russians who would like to put their country's interests ahead of the ideology which is now her chief export.

Iowa's Internships Called Factor in Future Politics

WASHINGTON (AP) — Every one seems to be visiting these days.

The Russian farmers are looking over our farms, our farmers are inspecting theirs, and Iowa students keep popping up here for a look at the political crops in the nation's capital.

The Iowa experiment, if it continues and spreads, conceivably could be a factor in future politics.

For the idea has been to give "political internships" to 2 college boys and girls who are active in politics, to bring them here in pairs for a week's stay, and to try and pep up their interest so they will keep right on politicking when they get out of school.

An Iowa Experiment
The plan was thought up by Rep. Fred Schwengel (R) of Davenport, Iowa and it differs from other plans in this:

It's strictly political. The Republican and Democratic parties help pick the students and help foot the bills.

A reporter who dropped by Schwengel's office Wednesday to inspect the two fledgling politicians found Lowell Doud of Douds, Iowa, and Franklin Hartman of Burlington, Iowa, both highly in favor of the internship idea.

"Most college students," Hartman said gloomily, "are tremendously indifferent politically."

Descendants of Congressmen
Doud has an impeccable Republican background. His grandfather, Eliab Doud, who founded the town of Douds, was a Whig, the forerunner of Republicanism. Various descendants, including Lowell's father, served in the state Legislature.

Hartman has an impeccable Democratic background. His relatives got to the state Legislature, too. "Grand uncles," he said, "before my time."

Doud thinks most visitors miss the point in Washington. "They look at the physical things here, the buildings, the monuments. They don't see how their government operates. They don't see a committee in session."

"It's difficult," Hartman said, "to convince people that politics has an intimate relation to their own personal lives."

Although they both have watched the Iowa Legislature, they were a little surprised at how disorderly Congress sometimes seems to be.

Find Congress Confusing
"So few members present at any time," Hartman said, "so much confusion, and yet, when it's over, so much done."

Of the two, Hartman seems to have plunged deeper into the political waters.

During the last presidential campaign, at the age of 19, he was a precinct worker.

"I was a volunteer for Stevenson," Hartman said, "and I was on a radio panel in which we discussed the candidates and the issues."

Doud smiled, a little smugly, during this recital.

"Eisenhower carried Iowa," he said. On this partisan note, the meeting broke up, and the interns hurried away for more political inspiration.

Prof. Ebel Is Named Acting Head of Education Research

Director Robert L. Ebel of the State University of Iowa Examinations Service has been named acting director of the Bureau of Educational Research, President Virgil M. Hancher announced Wednesday.

Hancher also announced the appointment of Desmond L. Cook as associate director of the Examinations Service. Cook has served as assistant director of the Service since early 1954.

Directing the test development and distribution activities of the Bureau of Educational Research, Ebel will continue the work of Prof. Harry A. Greene, on a year's leave of absence from SUI.

Typical of the work of the bureau is its recent development and publication of the "New Iowa Spelling Scale," which involved a study of 230,000 children in 645 school systems and determined their variations in spelling a scientifically selected list of words of everyday use.

A native of Waterloo, Ebel has been a member of the State University of Iowa faculty since 1944. He earned his B.A. degree at Iowa State Teachers College, Cedar Falls, and his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees at SUI.

Before joining the SUI staff Ebel taught at Webster City, Cedar Rapids and at the Edison Institute in Dearborn, Mich. In 1948 he served as a consultant in educational testing for the Office of Military Government for Germany.

Dr. Cook holds a B.A. degree from Ohio University and earned his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from SUI. He was awarded the Ph.D. degree in the spring Commencement exercises in June.

As associate director of the SUI Examinations Service, he will assist University staff members in developing new tests, help conduct research projects, be responsible for the scoring and analysis of SUI classroom tests and for the administration of entrance testing programs.

Mrs. Mesta Trapped in Saigon Riot

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — A rioting mob burst out of a peaceful anti-Communist student demonstration Wednesday and sacked two Saigon hotels housing foreigners.

Mrs. Perle Mesta, former U.S. minister to Luxembourg who was ending a two-day visit to Saigon, was trapped in her suite but convinced a group of rioters she should not be molested. She was rescued after nearly two hours by U.S. Embassy aides.

Twenty-eight Americans, including officers of the military aid mission to Indochina lost all their possessions.

Angier Biddle Duke, former U.S. ambassador to El Salvador, visiting Viet Nam as head of a private relief organization, returned to find his room torn apart, with his passport and private papers missing.

Two hundred hotel guests were left without shelter. Many had only the clothes they wore.

Many were injured, but official reports said no one was killed.

The riot began as a demonstration against the Indian-Polish-Canadian Indochina Armistice Commission. Ringleaders shouted it is favoring the Communist Vietminh regime in North Viet Nam. The commission has headquarters in one of the hotels, the Majestic. Its members live at the other, the Gallieni, a mile away.

Spokesmen of Premier Ngo Dinh Diem's government charged that the rioting actually was inspired by Communist agents armed with pistols and grenades. They said the Reds filtered in among the 30,000 students.

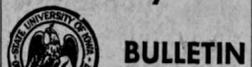

About 1,000 marched on the Majestic, the city's leading hotel. Joined by more demonstrators, they pushed past guards and police at the main entrance and began wrecking the lobby of the five-story, government-owned building. Then they raced through upper floors, systematically smashing furniture and strewn belongings of guests in corridors.

Mrs. Mesta was in her second-floor suite with two secretaries when rioters tried to push in.

Mrs. Mesta locked the door. The rioters attacked it with axes. She threw open the door and shouted: "No! We are your friends. We are Americans!"

A student who understood English organized a cordon and beat back the other demonstrators. An hour and a half later, U.S. Embassy representatives made their way in and escorted the Mesta party to cars.

Old Capitol Remembers

✓ One Year Ago Today

Premier Chou En-lai of Communist China called for a pan-Asian security bloc "to safeguard the collective peace of Asia."
Communist and Western negotiators agreed on cease-fire orders to stop the Indochina War. The conflict had lasted nearly eight years.

✓ Five Years Ago Today

President Truman conferred with top home-front mobilization chiefs while congress geared for quick action on a vast $10 billion rearmament program.

Iowa City's first polio patient of the summer was admitted to University Hospitals, officials report.

✓ Ten Years Ago Today

While a security blackout still barred details of the American and British fleets' air-surface blows at Tokyo Bay, Navy and Army headquarters reported other widespread aerial thrusts at the feebly defended Japanese empire.

Chinese troops captured Yiyang, key waterway-control stronghold just south of Tung Ting Lake in China's great "rice bowl," the Chinese high command announced as Premier T. V. Soong predicted victory this year or early in 1946.

✓ Twenty Years Ago Today

A new Nazi "purge" of "reactionary" opposition — thus far bloodless — swept through the Reich with increasing impetus, its chief victims or threatened victims were Jews, clergymen and war veterans.

L. S. Hill, Iowa Works Progress administrator, tossed the job of setting up the huge Work Relief Program into the lap of George Keller, University of Iowa professor.

SUI Student's 'Harvest the Storm'

Final Play of Season To Begin August 2

"Harvest the Storm," a play written by Sam Smiley, a State University of Iowa graduate student, will be the fifth and final presentation of the University Theatre this summer.

It will be presented August 2-4 by the Department of Speech and Dramatic Art.

"Harvest the Storm" takes place in a settlement on the Indiana frontier in 1813. It is a drama which has been written straight-forwardly and reveals the conditions of the time in which it is set.

Matt Boyer, a strong-willed trader and Indian scout is the central character. He intends to develop the new territory, but finds that there are many difficulties to overcome in doing so.

Smiley wrote the play as part of the requirement for his M.F.A. degree in the Department of Speech and Dramatic Art. He is from Columbus, Ind., and received his B.F.A. from Illinois Wesleyan University.

The play is directed by Henderson Forsythe, a visiting instructor from Erie, Pa. Other members of the production staff are: Robert Proper, settings; Prof. Walter Dewey, lights; and Helen Baird, costumes.

Clinton Street Face-Lifting

THE DUST HAS BEEN FLYING on Clinton Street between Church and Jefferson this week as Hargrave Construction workers air cleaned the bricks to be resurfaced with asphalt. Here Lyle Case, a winter session student at SUI, cleans between the bricks in front of Currier Hall with a 100 pound pressure air hose. The streets also get both a machine and hand sweeping before the air treatment which insures a clean surface for the oiling and asphalt laying. The job is part of a 56 block resurfacing project.

Sheppard To Begin Life Imprisonment

CLEVELAND (AP) — Pale and chubby from lack of exercise, Dr. Samuel H. Sheppard was led in handcuffs Wednesday from the county jail in which he spent almost a year.

Shackled to a holdup man, the 31-year-old osteopath marched through a crowd of newsmen and spectators and climbed aboard an automobile that sped him to Columbus to begin a life sentence at the Ohio Penitentiary.

He becomes eligible for parole 10 years from Wednesday.

Wearing a blue worsted suit and blue knit necktie, his 6-foot frame gave the same somber appearance it did during the 10-week trial that ended last Dec. 21, when a jury found him guilty of battering to death his four-months-pregnant wife, Marilyn, 31.

Tuesday a court of appeals rejected his plea for a new trial on grounds of alleged newly discovered evidence that a sex-crazed prowler committed the murder July 4 of last year.

CIO Accused of Aiding Democratic Candidates

DETROIT (AP) — The government accused the CIO United Auto Workers Union Wednesday of spending $5,985 illicitly on television shows in behalf of Democratic candidates for Congress last year.

A 23-man federal grand jury acting after an investigation of Republican charges, indicted the union on four counts for allegedly using union members' dues money to pay for the TV shows.

The indictment was brought under the Federal Corrupt Practices Act. The act prohibits use of union general funds dues to finance campaigns for federal office.

The indictment named no union officials, nor did it say what candidates might have been aided by the TV shows.

One of the election victors in Michigan last fall was labor-backed Sen. Patrick V. McNamara, Democrat and an active AFL member. McNamara defeated Republican Sen. Homer Ferguson.

A court battle over the act's constitutionality impeded as a result of the indictment. Freedom of speech and of the press presumably would be issues.

The union immediately denied wrongdoing. It accused Republicans of an attempt to "use the courts in frantic efforts to save face," and said it welcomed "this opportunity to test the validity and scope" of the law.

William Olney, chief of the Justice Department's Criminal Division who helped prepare the government's case, said the facts were "so clear" that the government "had no alternative other than to prosecute."

He said there was "nothing underhanded by the union. The facts seem to be clearly admitted."

The union, asserting the act violates freedom of speech and press guarantees of the First Amendment, said it would carry a fight to the U.S. Supreme Court if convicted here.

Penalty for conviction is a $5,000 fine on any of the counts.

The grand jury charged the union spent $5,985 in illegal payment for a series of political programs on the union's "Meet the UAW-CIO" weekly television shows on WJBK-TV, a Detroit station.

Senators Approve Judge Nominees

WASHINGTON (AP) — North Dakota's Republican Sens. William Langer and Milton Young endorsed Wednesday President Eisenhower's nomination of George Register of Bismarck and Ronald Davies of Grand Forks to be State federal district court judges.

Register and Davies were present at a brief hearing before a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee but neither was called to testify. No opposition to the nominations was expressed.

North Dakota has been without a federal judge for about a year.

Tired, Dirty Youth Found In Cornfield

REINBECK (AP) — A tired, dirty, frightened 14-year-old farm boy, Terry Blohm, was found in a cornfield about 1/2 mile from his farm home near here late Wednesday afternoon after having been lost for 28 1/2 hours.

An intensive search which began at dark Tuesday and was continued by 300 to 400 persons, a helicopter and two planes Wednesday, ended at 4:20 p.m. when a group of men saw the boy wearily plodding in the cornfield.

They called and he came running to them.

Terry said he had become lost in the corn which topped six feet while cutting across a field Tuesday noon.

The boy said he would become dizzy, sit down to rest for a while and then walk some more. He related he spent the night in a building, but doesn't know where the building was located.

Terry hadn't eaten since he left home on his "day off" from farm work on the parental Harry Blohm farm.

He had taken along his rifle, causing concern that he might have met with a gun accident.

The boy was fed, cleaned up and put to bed. "For some reason or other, Terry didn't think about firing his rifle to attract attention," Mrs. Willer, sister of Mrs. Blohm, said.

Lone Tree Couple Sues Trimmer for $15,000

John and Ada Krall, Lone Tree, Wednesday filed a $15,000 damage suit against Roy Strong, Lone Tree, in Johnson County District Court.

The suit asks treble damages for $5,000 depreciation allegedly caused by a lot owned by the Kralls when Strong reportedly trimmed trees on it without their permission.

Firm Gives $15,040 To SUI Researcher

Prof. Charles J. Imig, of the State University of Iowa Department of Physiology, is one of 19 medical school teachers and researchers who will share $279,808 in grants from the Lederle Laboratories Division, American Cyanamid Company, this year.

Imig will receive $15,040 over a period of two years from the Lederle Faculty Awards Committee to support his teaching and research activities.

A native of Waterloo, Imig received his Ph.D. in physiology at SUI in 1951.

The awards, believed to be the first of their kind in this field, are intended to augment salaries or to help schools fill or expand teaching and research jobs.

Gleason Named To Farm Group

H. Glen Gleason is the new member of the Johnson County Committee for the Farmers' Home Administration. His appointment became effective July 1, 1955, according to the agency's county supervisor.

Gleason, who succeeds Walter E. Marner, is a farmer as are the other two members of the committee, John M. Wolz and Arthur R. Bowers, both of Iowa City.

The committee determines the eligibility of applicants to the agency and helps the county supervisor adapt the agency's services and loan policies to local conditions.

Each member is named for a three year term, and one appointment expires each year. A committee member cannot be re-appointed.

Glottfelty To Leave For Durham Post

Dr. James R. Glottfelty, 1934 graduate of the State University of Iowa medical school, is being transferred to Durham, N. C., to manage the 500-bed general medical and surgical hospital opened there by the veterans Administration in April 1953.

Since joining the VA in 1937, Dr. Glottfelty has served as staff physician at St. Cloud, Minn.; Lyons, N. J.; Los Angeles, Calif.; and Sheridan, Wyo. He has been a diplomat of the American Board of Psychiatry and Neurology since 1947. During World War II he served in the U.S. Army Medical Corps assigned to the VA.

Sox Survive Yankee Rally, 8-6; Trail By Only 2 Games

Held Hitless After Third

CHICAGO (AP) — Dick Donovan notched his eighth straight victory, although chased by a five-run New York seventh, as the White Sox wrapped up two early four-run innings to defeat the Yankees, 8-6, and trim their first-place margin to two games Wednesday night.

The Sox were held hitless after the third.

A throng of 36,869 saw fast-balling Bob Turley fail as a Yankee starter. He faced only five batters in the first inning and was charged with his eighth setback against 11 victories.

Donovan needed able help from rubber-armed Sandy Consuegra, who finally throttled the Yankee threat.

Billy Pierce had to rescue Consuegra in a one-run Yankee ninth.

Pierce replaced Consuegra after Bob Cerv's lead off double in the New York ninth and a single by Gil McDougald put Yankees on third and first. Chico Carrasquel's boot of pinch-hitter Hank Bauer's double play roller sent across Cerv with the sixth Yankee run.

Nats Defeat Indians, 6-4

CLEVELAND (AP) — Eddie Yost's two-run homer plus a four-run, third-inning rally Wednesday night gave the Washington Nationals a 6-4 victory over Cleveland.

It was Washington's fifth victory in a row and second in the three-game series which ends today.

Both starting pitchers were chased. Cleveland's Early Wynn went out of the game after 2 1/2 innings in which he gave up six runs and seven hits. Washington's Chuck Stobbs left in the fourth after he had given up four hits and three runs.

Reliever Pedro Ramos got credit for the victory.

Red Sox Win on 1 Hitter by Susce

KANSAS CITY (AP) — George Susce gave up only a leadoff single to Vic Power Wednesday night as the Boston Red Sox shut out the sinking Kansas City Athletics, 6-0.

Susce, son of George Susce, bullpen coach of the Athletics, struck out five and walked three as he won his fifth victory against three defeats.

Art Andrews Defeated in Junior Net Meet

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Art Andrews of Iowa City was ousted from play Wednesday in the singles competition of the Western Junior and Boys Tennis championships.

Norman Perry of Los Angeles, seeded No. 9 in the juniors, defeated Andrews 6-4, 6-2, after Andrews had won the first set, 6-4. Andrews was seeded No. 2 in the tournament.

Olympic Hopeful

JORGE SOTO, SUI graduate student from Puerto Rico, hoists a bar bell over his head in a workout in the Iowa field house. Soto is keeping in shape for a try at the 1956 Olympic meet. Soto won the Iowa AAU heavyweight meet in May.

Grad Math Student Has 'Weighty' Problems

By GEORGE WINE

An Iowa graduate student from Puerto Rico has been combining mathematics and muscle for the past several years.

He is Jorge Soto, a weight lifter, who will receive his M.S. in math this August.

Jorge was not always a weight lifter. Nor did he always have a Herculean physique. While serving with the United States Army for seven years, they have two children, Maritza, 3½, and Jorge Jr., 2.

Jorge is working out in the field house three days a week this summer in preparation for the 1956 Olympics.

"Pretty Skinny"
"I was pretty skinny and frail and wanted to develop my physique," he said. Jorge said he weighed around 130 pounds when he first started lifting weights and that he gradually started gaining weight. His formula paid dividends and he now tips the scales at 230 pounds.

Soto said working with weights has not altered his height. He was 5 feet 11 inches when he started and is still the same height.

Jorge could fill a scrapbook with his weight-lifting exploits. He has been Puerto Rico's national champion for the past seven years.

Placed Tenth
In the 1952 Olympics he placed tenth. In the Central American games in 1950 and 1954 he took second place honors, losing to the first place winner by five pounds each year. At Davenport May 28, Jorge won the Iowa AAU championship.

He competed in the middle-heavyweight class in the Olympics and in the heavyweight class in the other contests.

Soto's best Olympic lifts are: press, 270 pounds; snatch, 250 pounds, and clean and jerk, 330 pounds.

"Mr. Puerto Rico"
Jorge himself admits he was chosen "Mr. Puerto Rico" in 1950.

Newcombe Wins 16th As Brooks, Cubs Split

BROOKLYN (AP) — The Chicago Cubs rallied for three seventh-inning runs Wednesday night to beat Brooklyn 5-3 and snap a nine-game losing slump in the second game of a two-night doubleheader, after Don Newcombe nailed his 16th victory with a two-hitter and five Dodger home runs as the National League leaders romped 10-1 in the opener.

The split left the Dodgers 13½ games ahead of runnerup Milwaukee, which lost at Pittsburgh.

Duke Snider, who said he felt weak as he returned from a virus bout, and Don Zimmer each belted a pair of homers in the opener. Gil Hodges got the other.

The homers pushed Snider's major league leading total to 33. He was hitless in the second game before leaving after five innings.

Chicago handed Clem Labine his third defeat against nine triumphs in the nightcap, pushing across the first two runs of the big seventh on a walk, Harry Chitt's single and Frankie Baumholtz's pinch hit that rolled for a triple when left fielder Junior Gilliam missed a shoestring catch attempt.
