Police Hunt Body Of Kansas City Woman

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The mysterious disappearance of the pretty, young wife of a wealthy automobile dealer, followed within 14 hours by discovery of her bloodsmeared automobile and clthing, Friday set police hunting for her body.

Maj. Eugene Pond, chief of dectectives, said 34-year-old Mrs. Wilma Allen, mother of two small boys, apparently had been kidnaped, forced to drive in an isolated spot and slain in a brutal attack.

The attractive brunette was last seen at noon Thursday, leaving a beauty shop where she had gone in preparation for dining out with her husband, William R. Allen Jr., operator of one of Kansas City's larger Chevrolet agencies.

Allen became alarmed at 7 p.m., sent several of his salesmen cruising the city for an unsuccessful hunt for his wife and then called police at 10 p.m.

Convertible Found

Mrs. Allen's 1955 blue and white convertible, locked and undamaged was found by a patrolman in a parking area near the Union Station, off one of the city's busiest thoroughfares at 2:10 a.m.

The rear seat of the car, partially pulled out, and the floor were drenched with blood. Stuffed into the car's trunk compartment, and also blood-smeared, were the blouse, skirt, shoes and underclothing Mrs. Allen had been wearing when last seen. Missing were her stockings, a scarf and purse.

Police said Mrs. Allen apparently had only $25 with her when she left the beauty parlor and they discounted robbery as a motive in her disappearance.

Pond assigned 20 homicide detectives to the case. The highway patrols and sheriffs' officers in both Missouri and Kansas were called in. Radio appeals were broadcast to residents of outlying areas to search their premises for any clues.

Planned To Dine Out

Allen said he and his wife had planned to dine out and had employed a baby sitter for their sons, Billy, 11, and Bobby, 8. He said he had expected her to call him after she left the beauty parlor but did not become alarmed until later in the afternoon.

J. Davis Connell, owner of the beauty shop, said she appeared in "a very good mood" during her visit to the shop. Mrs. Rita Lamkin, the manicurist, said she got the impression from chatting with Mrs. Allen that the young woman planned to drive out to her summer home on nearby Lake Lotawana.

Police were unable to locate imediately anyone who saw Mrs. Allen drive away after she walked out of the shop.

The Allens were married in Burlington, Iowa, in February 1943. At that time Mrs. Allen was living with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence W. Moody. Moody is editor and publisher of the Burlington-Hawk-Eye Gazette.

THESE PHOTOS of Mrs. Wilma Frances Allen, believed to have been kidnaped and slain Friday at Kansas City, and her husband, William Allen Jr., were made at the time of their marriage in Burlington (Ia.) in 1943 while Allen was in the service. Allen now operates an automobile agency in Kansas City.

Bulganin Reopens Door for Ike's Plan

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Nikolai Bulganin made a surprise second appearance Friday before the Supreme Soviet Parliament to assure the Russian people and the world Moscow still is considering President Eisenhower's proposal for mutual aerial inspection of military establishments.

Bulganin said he was misunderstood Thursday when his remarks were taken as a rejection of the American proposal.

Naturally, Bulganin said, the Soviet Union prefers its own disarmament proposals, but it would not refuse to consider other sincere plans, and still is studying the President's.

"Everything will turn out well," the white-bearded Premier said, and the deputies cheered. Thursday the deputies burst into laughter when Bulganin said there was plenty of room in both countries to hide things from planes.

Talk Unscheduled

This unscheduled second appearance came after President Eisenhower told his news conference in Washington Thursday he did not feel the Soviet Union had finally slammed the door to agreement on disarmament.

The President said the United States would consider Soviet proposals sympathetically in a search for a formula fair to both. The Eisenhower proposal at the Geneva summit conference called for an exchange of military blueprints of both countries as a step toward the mutual trust needed to pave the way for disarmament.

The Russians made no public reply to this proposal until Thursday. Bulganin told his Parliament that though he paid tribute to the implied desire to contribute to the solution of the complicated disarmament problem, there could be no considerable effect from it, since both countries had areas vast enough to hide anything.

Russia More Realistic

The Soviet proposals advanced May 10 on the disarmament question, Bulganin said, were more realistic. Moscow's proposals called for withdrawal of foreign forces from Germany, prohibition of nuclear weapons and a system of controls against violations at key ports and transport centers.

Bulganin's speech wound up a two-day session of the Supreme Soviet called to hear a report on the Geneva conference.

The deputies, all outstanding figures in their home communities, now will spread the new official government line on world affairs, which sounded a good deal different from the line promulgated in February at the last session.

At that time the foreign policy speech of Foreign Minister Molotov had impressed many Western observers as truculent.

11 Airmen Reach Tokyo

TOKYO (AP) — Eleven U.S. airmen arrived here Friday night on their way home after 32 months of imprisonment in Red China. One bore the leaked-out secret that his wife married another man because she thought he was dead.

Airman 2/C. Daniel C. Schmidt, 22, of Redding, Calif., chanced to hear on a broadcast in the Philippines what the Air Force was reluctant to tell him, because of possible shock coming after his ordeal.

He appeared relaxed and smiled with the other 10 cameramen at Tachikawa Air Base after they arrived from Manila.

Schmidt hopes to talk by telephone today to his wife, Una, in California. She was reported to be weighing the idea of leaving both him and her second husband, Alford Fine, a logging tractor driver, so that both of them might court her to a decision. She is the mother of Schmidt's 2½-year-old son, Daniel, whom the airman has never seen.

After the airport reception, the 11 were taken to the base hospital for complete physical checkups.

Official word here on their stay in Tokyo was that it would be "for several days."

In Washington, Air Force headquarters said the 11 would leave Japan Wednesday, Japan time, and arrive about 30 hours later at Travis Air Force Base north of San Francisco. The Air Force said families of the fliers would be reunited with them at Travis.

Senior Dinner Monday Night

President Virgil M. Hancher will be the featured speaker Monday night at the Summer Senior dinner, 6:15 p.m., in the main lounge of the Iowa Memorial Union.

Candidates for degrees from the Colleges of Liberal Arts, Commerce, Engineering, Law, Medicine, Dentistry and Pharmacy will be honored at the dinner, which is sponsored by the division of alumni records.

Loren Hickerson, director of alumni records and secretary of the State University of Iowa Alumni Association, will speak to the seniors on service programs conducted by his office for Iowa graduates.

Candidates for degrees can pick up their complimentary tickets Monday at Alumni House.

Two Budget Hearings Set This Week

Iowa City residents next week will have a chance to say something about the way their tax money is being spent.

The city council and school board will hold public hearings on their million-dollar budgets for 1956 Monday and Tuesday, respectively.

The city council does not expect to receive protests on a budget that City Manager Peter F. Roan says may cut tax rates.

The board of education is not looking for many more complaints on a budget that may mean a $10 tax rise on each $1,000 of assessed valuation.

Expects No Protests

"We have had no protests in 30 years," school superintendent Buford Garner said Friday. "I do not anticipate any this year."

The education budget proposed July 13 will total $1,251,442, an increase of $212,442 over the 1955 figure.

The amount to be raised by taxation will go up $302,380.

Residents of the Iowa City Independent School District paid $33.04 on each $1,000 of assessed property in 1955. This year they may pay as high as $44.

A $200 raise granted every teacher in the Iowa City school system accounted for $128,353 of the tax increase.

Up $90,000 a Year

School taxes have gone up about $90,000 a year over the past three years, but Iowa City residents have raised no protests at the public hearings.

"We have encouraged attendance at budget hearings," said Garner, "But people don't seem to take an interest along that line."

The city budget will represent the first year in which tax rates have not been increased since the city manager government took over in 1951.

Roan presented a budget July 18 that raised total taxes $23,432. This slight raise, he said, would be paid for by new homes appearing on the city tax rolls for the first time.

The present tax rate of $25.11 per $1,000 of assessed valuation will remain the same or be slightly lowered, Roan said.

Salary Increase

The $1,049,335 budget provides for a five per cent increase in the salaries of city employees, a $20,000 fire truck and a new playground for the growing southeastern section of the city.

The council Monday may also discuss a project that will cost Iowa City residents for many years.

A report by the mayor's special municipal building site committee recommending the Musser Parking Lot or the Community Center block as the site for a proposed new city hall will be read to the council.

The building, whose cost has been estimated at more than $600,000, would replace the 74-year-old building that housed the city hall, and community center. It was destroyed Jan. 28 by fire.

Hurricane Off Bahamas

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP)— Hurricane Connie posed a threat Friday night to a long arc of islands from the Leewards to the Bahamas. She was boiling in from the Atlantic in the region's most serious storm of the year.

The Weather Bureau said if she holds her present course west and west-northwestward, the hurricane's center will pass near Puerto Rico's north coast tonight. Winds up to 125 miles an hour were reported swirling as far as 65 miles from the center. Forward movement was 17 miles an hour.

The Weather Bureau at 4 p.m. issued a hurricane warning for the U.S.-owned Virgin Islands, east of this island commonwealth.

A bulletin said the center should pass near the Virgin Islands this afternoon. Storm warnings were issued also for Puerto Rico.

Robertson Installed As Deputy Secretary

WASHINGTON (AP)— Reuben B. Robertson Jr., Hamilton, Ohio, manufacturer, was sworn in Friday as deputy secretary of defense.

Robertson, who has six children, was jestingly described to President Eisenhower during the ceremony as a man with "no conflict of interest except his family."

"And that is accepted in all circles," added Secretary of Defense Wilson, who applied the description.

Heart Attack Kills Carmen Miranda

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP)— Carmen Miranda, 41, peppery singer, dancer and actress famous for her fruit salad headgear, died Friday at her home.

The Brazilian personality, born in Portugal in 1914, suffered a heart attack after finishing a television film with Jimmy Durante Thursday night.

Dr. W. L. Marxer said that Miss Miranda had had a slight attack of bronchitis recently after her return from Cuba and several night club engagements.

Her husband, film producer David Sebastian, said that she apparently was feeling well after a late supper following her TV performance. She collapsed as she was going to bed, he said.

Miss Miranda, a star during the early 1940s, had made only infrequent apperances on the screen in recent years.

Lost Gold

Look in the Graveyards, Spinster Says

EL CENTRO, Calif. (AP)—A 76-year-old Mexican spinster has told authorities where she says $1½ million in gold coin was buried by the late rebel leader Pancho Villa in Texas graveyards.

R. P. Ostrander, Imperial County Veterans Service officer, said Dolores Vasquez of nearby Brawley claimed to have been a full colonel in Villa's army and his most trusted aide.

He said the woman, ill in the county hospital, gave the information in an expressed desire that the gold should go to disabled U.S. war veterans.

Ostrander was called to the bedside, and he notified Dist. Atty. Arthur Lockie's office. Lockie said her deposition was taken in shorthand by a court reporter with the assistance of an interpreter and may be turned over to the federal government.

Ostrander said Miss Vasquez described graveyard locations in apparent detail, even telling the names engraved on headstones under which she said the outlaw buried gold.

In the hospital Friday Miss Vasquez showed a reporter what she said were bullet wounds on her chest inflicted when a firing squad gunned her down and left her for dead.

She also showed a number of identification cards bearing her name and photograph and identifying her as a colonel in the rebel army. Asked why she hadn't dug up the gold for herself, she replied through an interpreter:

"People would wonder why I had gold coins. Besides, I would not dare so long as any of Villa's men were still alive. I would rather be living and poor than rich and dead."

Suzan Ball Loses Fight With Cancer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Motion picture actress Suzan Ball died Friday in a private residence to which she had been taken recently from the City of Hope Hospital.

More than 18 months ago she underwent an operation for removal of her right leg because of cancer. Since then she married and appeared in a movie and on television. It was hoped the surgery had cured her.

However, the ailment recurred and last July 5 she was admitted to the City of Hope Medical Center. Her condition at that time was described as serious.

Throughout her final illness the brunette remained cheerful and hoped that she might be cured. Her young husband and friends withheld from her the seriousness of the ailment.

The illness stemmed from a fall on a dance floor more than two years ago. She had just been signed to a movie contract. The leg didn't heal and doctors later decided a dormant condition had been aggravated.

Navy Denies Honor Man's Commission

KINGS POINT, N. Y. (AP) — A 21-year-old midshipman was graduated Friday with second highest honors in his class at the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy. He was denied a naval reserve commission because his widowed mother was once a Communist.

"I wish they'd punish me instead of him," the mother said.

Cadet Eugene Landy, a handsome athlete and would-be lawyer, stood with the rest of his class in dress white uniform as the ensign's oath was administered. But his hand was not raised.

He has a six-months period during which he may re-apply for the commission. He said he would do so.

Landy's own loyalty was not questioned. The Navy said he was "extremely close to his mother and she has been a Communist."

The mother, Mrs. Deborah Landy, 54, of Bradley Beach, N.J., said her son talked her into quitting the party about 1947 after she had been a member for 10 years. She added:

"He sort of gave me an ultimatum that I quit or he would leave home. He reformed me and yet he is suffering for it. I'd rather go to jail than have him suffer."

Landy expressed fear his career in admiralty law might be endangered. Without the commission that merchant marine graduates normally receive, he will be liable for the draft. He intends to enter Yale University on a scholarship this fall to study law.

For 1st Agricultural Medicine Institute

A grant of $109,000 for support of the nation's first Institute of Agricultural Medicine has been awarded to the State University of Iowa by the W. K. Kellogg Foundation of Battle Creek, Mich.

The Institute will be established Sept. 1.

University President Virgil M. Hancher said Friday that the Iowa State Board of Regents has approved acceptance of the award, $37,000 of which has been made available for the Institute's use during the year beginning Sept. 1.

During 1956, the Foundation will provide $44,000, followed by the remaining $28,000 in 1957.

State Funds Anticipated

Matching funds from the state's appropriations for support of the University are anticipated for the last year of the grant, with the basic support of the Institute expected to come from such appropriations thereafter.

President Hancher was notified of the grant by Dr. Emory Morris, Foundation president and general director, and Dr. M. R. Kinde, director of the Foundation's division of medicine and public health.

Proposed publicly last April by Dr. Norman B. Nelson, dean of the University's College of Medicine, the Institute will be set up to conduct medical and social research on the diseases to which farm people are especially susceptible, and to develop new preventive measures to safeguard the farmer's health.

Under Dr. Top

The new unit will be established under the jurisdiction of Dr. Franklin H. Top, professor and head of the Department of Hygiene and Preventive Medicine at SUI, with the Institute functioning as a division of that department.

In studies of specific diseases or conditons, the Institute will collaborate with and draw upon the resources of the Division of Veterinary Medicine at Iowa State College, the various departments in SUI's College of Medicine and the State Hygienic Laboratories at SUI.

Dr. Top says 88 known diseases are transmitted from animal to man, and that more than half of these have been found in Iowa. In addition to such diseases and the problems which they pose, the Institute will bring curative or preventive studies to bear upon:

Following Studies:

Skin diseases due to contact with chemicals and plants; impurities in water, milk, milk products and other foods; the effects of chemical fertilizers and insect sprays on the agricultural worker and the consumer; possible effects upon the health of consumers caused by the wide-scale use of certain drugs in animals to accelerate growth for food purposes; mental depression among rural workers, and farm accidents.

Dr. Top says the Institute's research findings and the recommendations of its staff regarding prevention of disease and injury will be made available to physicians throughout the state for application in their treatment and counseling of rural patients. The Institute also will work toward the development of new methods of health education for rural populations so that information growing out of the research may reach the farm worker in understandable terms.

Divisions of industrial hygiene already have been established in some of the nation's colleges in an attempt to improve the health of industrial workers. SUI's Institute of Agricultural Medicine will have the same goal for farmers, Dr. Top says.

First Task

One of the Institute's first tasks will be that of determining "the number, extent and importance of health problems confronting the farmer."

All known sources of information must be tapped, Dr. Top explains, and a close working relationship must be developed with farm organizations, health departments, physicians and hospitals.

After the rural health picture has been drawn, the Institute will assess each problem on the basis of adequacy or inadequacy of present methods of prevention or treatment, and the necessity of conducting or encouraging research on the problem.

The Institute's basic staff will include an epidemiologist, a statistician, a social anthropologist and a veterinarian.

Heat Wave May Reduce Corn Crop

Iowa's 12-day heat wave, coupled with lack of rain, may result in a 15 to 20 per cent reduction in the Johnson County corn yield, County Extension Director H. J. Montgomery said Friday.

Before the heat and drought took their toll, Iowa corn was racing ahead of previous year's records, with 90 per cent in the silking stage by August 1.

Predictions of bumper crops have come from the Iowa Weekly Weather and Crop Bulletin and farm experts across the state.

Montgomery said that Johnson County, however, would not have bumper yields.

Rain Should Help

The ½ to 2 inch rain Thursday night and Friday should save some of the burned stalks and help fill ears, he said.

He explained that fields with light sandy soil have suffered most. In some areas where corn is grown on timber land and heavy soil, he said, damage has been very light.

"But from here on in," Montgomery said, "the Johnson County corn yield is going to be very heavily dependent on the rain. Every little bit of moisture will help."

Soy beans and pasturage, especially blue grass, are also badly in need of soaking rains, the extension director said.

Grasshoppers Invade

"Clover and alfalfa suffered more from invasions of grasshoppers than from the heat," Montgomery said. "Some seedings were almost completely destroyed."

In spite of the unfavorable weather, though, hay and oats have been heavy, Montgomery added.

The heat also has taken its toll of stock in the county.

Jack Gilpin, manager of the Farmer's Rendering Co., reported last week that about 500 head of hogs a day were dying in the Iowa City area. He said stock fatalities were the worst he has seen in 16 years.

Dry pasturage and dry farm ponds have contributed to the death toll, Montgomery said.

Rain Brings Slight Relief

Showers Friday gave Iowa City brief relief from the worst heat wave since 1936.

It will be hot again by Sunday, however, the Des Moines Weather Bureau said Friday night.

The weather bureau forecast possible showers for Iowa City today and tonight.

Sunday, the forecast said, should bring a return of hot and humid weather, with temperatures reaching again into the high 90's.

No long heat wave like the one just past should occur again, the forecast said.

The 1936 heat wave included 15 straight days of 100-degree temperatures. The readings reached 100 on only five days during the recent hot, dry period.

The temperatures eased down in a large section of the Midwest today, but boiled up again in New England. Boston had a 100-degree reading. New York City residents sweltered in a 99-degree high.

The Midwest meanwhile enjoyed readings in the 70 and 80's as the cool Canadian air swept across on a 400-mile front stretching from upper Michigan to southern Illinois.

Was Bulganin Misquoted?—

There seems to be a curious likeness between the press policies of Premier Nikolai A. Bulganin and those of some of our political figures.

Thursday the press reported that Bulganin in effect rejected the Eisenhower plan for mutual arms inspection between the United States and Russia. It was reported he said the plan would be ineffective "because our two countries comprise vast areas on which, if it were desired, one could hide anything he wanted to." The 1,500 members of the Supreme Soviet burst into laughter at this.

Friday Bulganin refuted this report. He claimed that he had been "misquoted." Actually, he said, Russia will continue to study the proposals and attempt to reach a compromise between them and the Soviet government's own disarmament proposals.

This incident seems not unlike the reaction of some U.S. politicians who find some of their statements backfiring unfavorably in the press. The natural response is to yell "misquote!"

This prompt response indicates the Russians have become conscious of world opinions. Under the old "pre-peace talk" line, Russian officials exhibited little interest in what the press was saying.

The Eisenhower proposal on exchange of military information between the two countries handed the Russians a difficult public relations problem. The proposal made a deep impression on the world. It indicated the United States was willing to go to a length never before proposed by a major power to obtain and maintain a world of peace.

Even if the Russians genuinely want world peace as their present policy proclaims, it is very doubtful they ever considered taking a step which approached the Eisenhower proposals.

Because of the wide interest, Bulganin and his party cohorts could not ignore the proposal. And because of the immediate world interest it aroused, it made their proposal — which sounded suspiciously like a reworded version of their previous disarmament proposals — seem like a very poor substitute.

Perhaps the Thursday version of Bulganin's speech was a deliberate trial balloon. Like Charles Wilson's "bird dogs," its world reaction was far from favorable. If this was a test, the Russians found quickly that this was not the answer the world awaited.

Now we find that the Soviet Government is keeping the proposal under consideration. They just haven't reached a decision yet.

Perhaps the most pressing question in Moscow today is "Where do we go from here?" The answer to this question should indicate the validity of the Russian "desire for lessening world tensions."

Meanwhile the free world awaits the decision.

"Blessed hot today, isn't it Father?"

Daykin Speaks to Masons on Council-Manager System

The method of selecting council candidates and the prevailing attitude that a councilman has little to do are the two main weaknesses of the council-manager form of government, Councilman Walter L. Daykin said Friday.

Daykin, whose four year term will expire December 31, spoke at the luncheon meeting of the Masons at the Masonic Temple.

"I hope that we get back to the primary election system for selecting councilmen," he said, "so that all of the citizens can have a voice in the selection of the council."

"A city council needs persons who know the job, and the voters need to know the characteristics of the persons taking the job."

"At present the selection committee of the Council-Manager Association is doing everything possible to eliminate this trouble."

Councilmen Make Policies

Concerning the misconception of a councilman's duties, Daykin said that the councilmen "have to arrange the policies and it takes a lot of work."

The city manager, he pointed out, only administers the policy of the council, and does not establish the policy.

Daykin praised Peter F. Roan, city manager, for his fine work.

"No one has the interest of the people and city at heart more than Pete Roan," he said. "He knows what is going on, what the city needs, and what the future holds. He has done his job efficiently and looks to the future."

Another fallacy of the council-manager system is that it might lead to a dictatorship by placing too much power in one man's hands, Daykin said.

Evaluates System

In his evaluation of the council-manager system, Daykin said that "any system is no better than the people who administer."

"The council-manager system has the city at heart and introduces intelligent business practices into municipal activities," he added. "If you can apply good business to city management, the management becomes more efficient."

"The system also provides a skilled or trained person as manager who can give all of his time to the work.

"The council," he added, "has to be intelligent as well.

"The standard of efficiency of any government is production, and efficiency is measured by what is known about the future."

Not Candidate

When asked whether he would ever be a candidate again for the city council, Daykin said, "I have too much work to do. I can't neglect my work at the university."

Daykin, who is a professor of labor at the State University of Iowa College of Commerce, announced July 26 that he would not seek a second council term.

He was elected in 1951 to the first council under the city manager form of government.

Library Fund Will Honor Dr. Leighton

Establishment of a library fund in memory of Dr. I. W. Leighton, State University of Iowa professor-emeritus who died Thursday morning, was announced Friday.

The fund will be used to purchase anatomical books in medicine and dentistry. Dr. Leighton taught medical and dental students at SUI for 23 years prior to his retirement from full-time duties in 1953.

The books will be placed in the Anatomy Department's seminar library and will be available to the teaching staffs of both the College of Medicine and the College of Dentistry.

Contributions should be made payable to the I. W. Leighton Memorial Fund and addressed to: the Department of Anatomy, College of Medicine, State University of Iowa.

Morgenthau Theories Are Panel Topic

Problems facing the state department of a democracy will be the subject of a discussion, "The People, Politics and the Cold War," to be broadcast over the State University of Iowa radio station WSUI at 12:45 p.m. Monday.

Participants will be three members of the Ford Foundation-sponsored Seminar in the Improvement of Teaching of International Relations, which will end Wednesday after eight weeks of study at SUI.

Members of the panel will be Henry Bush, Hunter College of the City of New York; Wallace Graves, Depauw University, and Urban Whitaker, San Francisco State College. James Murray of the SUI Political Science Department will be moderator.

The discussion will be based partly on questions raised by Hans Morgenthau, University of Chicago specialist in international law and politics, who appeared at the seminar last month.

Morgenthau questioned whether the state department of a democracy can tell the people everything and still have a clear-cut foreign policy.

He said that both the Eisenhower and Truman administrations allowed themselves to be "intimidated by a small vociferous minority" into making public declarations which differed from their responsible diplomatic conduct according to traditional and recent "national interests."

Ayers Is Faced With Second Count

Clifford Ayers, 109½ E. Burlington St., Friday morning asked for a preliminary hearing in Iowa City Police Court on a drunken driving charge.

At the same session Ayers was sentenced to seven days in Johnson County jail in lieu of a $27.50 fine on a charge of operating a motor vehicle without a valid operator's license.

Judge Roger H. Ivie set a special hearing on the drunken driving count for 5 p.m. Wednesday.

Ayers was arrested Wednesday on south Clinton St. by Iowa City police and charged on the two counts.

He is being held in Johnson County jail on the driver's license sentence and in lieu of $1,000 bond on the drunken driving charge.

Driveway Right Argued; Schlesselmans File Suit

Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Schlesselman Friday filed suit in Johnson County District Court against Mr. and Mrs. Frank Coufal in a dispute over the use of a driveway between their adjoining residences.

Schlesselman asks that the driveway be made part of his property and that Coufal be ordered to pay the costs of improvements to the drive, amounting to about $150.

Letters to the Editor—

Review or Report? Reader Says Compromise Necessary

(Readers are invited to express opinions in letters to the Editor. All letters must include handwritten signatures and addresses — typewritten signatures are not acceptable. Letters become the property of The Daily Iowan. The Daily Iowan reserves the right to shorten, select representative letters when many on the same subject are received, or withhold letters. Contributors are limited to not more than two letters in any 30-day period. Opinions expressed do not necessarily represent those of The Daily Iowan.)

TO THE EDITOR:

During the past few days, the question of "review or report?" has dominated the Letters to the Editor section of The Daily Iowan. My feeling is that a compromise must be effected in the "review" or "report" controversy by editorial policy and/or by students writing future articles on University Theater productions.

Whatever the immediate results of the controversy, I cannot help but think that the series of charges and counter-charges has been stimulating and worthwhile.

However, when I read the "most respectfully and audaciously submitted" (and printed) letter of Mr. Thimmesch in the Aug. 4 issue, it seemed to me that The Iowan's usual standards had been appreciably lowered. It is my opinion that the editor showed little or no taste and/or discretion in allowing a letter such as Mr. T.'s to be included in what is normally an interesting column.

For the most part, The Daily Iowan has satisfactorily fulfilled the obligations of a campus newspaper. But if sheer and unadulterated tripe — my opinion of Mr. Thimmesch's letter — is printed with any degree of regularity, the purposes of the Letters to the Editor column will most assuredly be thwarted.

I found Mr. Thimmesch's closing remarks neither humorous nor worthy of a college student (with either average or above-average intelligence). It is obvious from reading his letter that he, too, can benefit from his own criticisms. The purpose of a column such as this is usually directed to constructive criticism or crusading, not to casual dissemination of facetious comments or inane witticisms. In the case of Mr. T.'s remarks, it simply appears that another "pot is calling a kettle(s) black!"

Regardless of Mr. Thimmesch's ability, or lack of ability, to construct an appropriate letter of the sort which he might have had in mind, entire responsibility obviously does not rest on his shoulders. An editor, according to Webster, is "one who directs the policies and contributions of a newspaper . . ." Has the editor of The Iowan been shirking his responsibilities or does he believe that this particular letter of Mr. T. was worthy of the space it filled?

We are all aware that freedom of the press is an invaluable privilege, available to only too few men in the world. This freedom, unless judiciously practiced, can deteriorate into licentiousness. It is my sincere hope that future letters to the editor will indicate at least a degree of scholarship or carefully developed thought, of which we, as students, are expected to be capable.

5 Churches To Cooperate In Services

Five Iowa City churches will cooperate in combined Sunday morning services for five consecutive Sundays begining Aug. 7. The services will be held at 9:30 a.m. in the First Congregational Church.

Cooperating churches are the Methodist, First Baptist, First Congregational, First Presbyterian and the First Christian.

Each church will be responsible for a Sunday's service. The sponsoring church will provide the preacher, special music, ushers, bulletins and nursery attendants.

The First Christian Church will sponsor the service to be held this Sunday. The Rev. Albert C. Hofrichter Jr. will speak to the combined congregations on "Eyes That See." Mrs. Joseph Shoemaker will be soloist, presenting "The Good Shepherds" by Beardsley Van de Water.

Welfare Society To Hold Workshop

Centering its program around problems of unmarried parenthood, the Lutheran Welfare Society of Iowa will hold its Welfare Workshop Sept. 28 at the Faith Church in Calamus.

The theme of the workshop was chosen in light of the national and state-wide interest in the recent Senate Judiciary Sub-Committee Investigations led by Sen. Estes Kefauver (D-Tenn.), and Sen. William Langer, (R-N.D.), on "quickie" baby adoptions.

The Rev. O. W. Sougstad, host pastor, is in charge of local arrangements. Mrs. Winifred Allvenn, Branch Director is in charge of promotion and program planning for the workshop.

Helen F. Farley, Iowa City Area Field Secretary for the society has been calling in the area in preparation for the workshop.

NEWMAN CLUB PICNIC

Atomic Power Still World Problem—

Hiroshima Bombed 10 Years Ago Today

Nearly 180 years ago a shot fired at Cambridge, Mass., was heard around the world. It began the American Revolution. Echoes of the shot touched off other revolts against established regimes, and was not forgotten for 100 years.

Ten years ago today, a light flashed that was seen around the world. It began the atomic warfare age.

The outcome of this flash is still a mystery to scientists, politicians and the people of the world.

Routine Day

The day was August 6, 1945, a warm, clear, still morning in Japan. The people of the country were beginning routine tasks.

The Japanese people had been engaged in war with the United States for nearly four years, since a Sunday morning in 1941, when fighter and bomber planes attacked Pearl Harbor.

World Surprised

The tables were turned August 6, but the surprise the Japanese received was more than a surprise for them.

It was a surprise that changed the future and the fate of all of God's creatures.

High above the Japan mainland, a United States bomber flew toward Hiroshima. It carried a single bomb. It was a bomb that could destroy a city in a matter of seconds.

The destruction was not any ordinary kind. The bomb dropped was the first nuclear weapon used in warfare.

It began the atomic war and atomic peace.

Under the mushroom cloud that rose above the Japanese city were twisted buildings, charred bodies and only the hint of a building that had been vaporized by the intense heat.

200,000 Killed

Directly or indirectly the bomb killed 200,000 people. Many who survived for a short time were burned with radioactive particles. Others were burned from a temperature which at one moment exceeded 1,800,000 degrees Fahrenheit.

The first words the pilot of the plane said after the explosion were:

"God, what have we done?"

A second atomic bomb was dropped on Nagasaki August 9. Russia entered the war August 10. By August 14 Japan surrendered.

More Powerful Bombs

Since the war's end, nations have been experimenting with more powerful bombs, atomic powered warships, and peaceful uses of atomic energy. The atomic bomb of ten years ago is obsolete, and considered only a starting point for future exploitations of atomic energy.

Recently the Japanese people have been subjected to radio active fall outs from experimental atomic blasts. They have revolted against it with cries of "No more atomic bombs, remember Hiroshima."

What has all this meant to the Japanese people?

In the ten years that have elapsed, they have rebuilt cities, have modernized buildings, but have left grim reminders as memorials to those who died in the blast. Teaching patterns of the country have centered around a de-emphasis of the last war. Thoughts have turned toward a world peace.

War memorials in Nagasaki include a bronze statue of a school boy and two doves with the inscription "The 9th of August is Doomsday."

In Hiroshima stands the building which was directly under the blast, a lasting symbol of destruction, preserved so that visitors and countrymen alike may view the remains of a once useful building.

In the United States, atomic experts are working to perfect peaceful uses of atomic power. Some of the uses have been related to more abundant food, better health, and finer products.

With the use of radio isotopes, scientists can learn the inner workings of nature in all growing matter. Scientists have found cures for a fungus which attacks mid-western wheat fields, and are now experimenting with photosynthesis, the process in which sunlight turns carbon-dioxide and water into carbohydrates.

May Manufacture Food

Studying photosynthesis is significant because man can learn the process of growing from nature. With the help of radio isotopes, man may be able to increase the food supply.

Already there are better fertilizers, effective pest controls, and a promise of foods manufactured in factories independent of the land.

The most talked about use of atomic isotopes is in the detection and cure of fatal diseases, one of them cancer.

Radioactive tracers injected into the body can be followed with a Geiger counter to locate trouble spots in human organisms.

An Atomic Energy Commission official has called the potential use of the atom in industry a "Sears-Roebuck catalogue of alchemy."

Isotopes In Industry

In industry, isotope devices no larger than small radios check liquids flowing in pipes, measure the thickness of paper and steel and detect forging flaws.

What does this all mean?

Basically the atomic age means better living with the aid of the atom or larger and more destructive wars with atomic energy housed in a bomb.

2-Car Crash Kills Youth

ALLISON (AP)—Arend Reiman, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nena Reiman, was dead on arrival at a Waverly hospital Friday following a two-car crash on Highway 14 three miles south of here.

The driver of the other car, Bernard Ebbing, 34, Waterloo, was not seriously hurt. The accident occurred only a quarter of a mile from the Reiman farm home. The boy's parents said they heard the crash.

The death of Reiman brings up the total of Iowa motor vehicle fatalities to 350 for 1955. Total motor vehicles deaths in 1954 up to Aug. 5 were 335.

SUI Study Contrasts Art Education Theories

The conviction that "everybody has artistic ability" is the main difference between the art education theory of 1955 and that of 1925.

Theodore A. Perry, State University of Iowa graduate student, describes this difference between the two generations in a thesis for his master of arts degree, to be conferred at SUI summer Commencement exercises Wednesday.

"Instead of taking it for granted that creative ability is the property of a talented few," Perry points out, "art educators now think of art as the province of all human beings.

Self-Expression Ignored

He says that back in the 1920's art education was dominated more by competitive urges and nationalistic pride. So that American arts and crafts should become outstanding in the world, the inidividual often became a means to an end, with self-expression generally ignored in the striving for technical excellence.

"Since not all pupils produced work which met these expectations of achievement, the so-called 'talented' pupil tended to be singled out for special attention and encouragement," he adds.

Creative Abilities Latent

But today art educators have discovered that creative ability may be hidden beneath the surface in almost everyone, even in mental defectives with "intelligence quotients" ranging from 54 to 79. Because of such discoveries, Perry finds art educators today "more dedicated than ever before to encouraging originality and self-expression in every child."

The DAILY IOWAN

'Paper Puncher'

PAPER BOY, Dave Harris, and Kimo, his easy ridin' mount, deliver Daily Iowans to the area around City High School every Tuesday through Saturday.

Delivers Daily Iowans by Pony Express

By DICK YOUNG

Twelve-year-old Dave Harris delivers The Daily Iowan on horseback, and if he had his way he'd probably spend the rest of the day there.

His mother, Mrs. Preston H. Harris, 218 N. Lucas St., says that Dave has been interested in horses "since he started talking."

Dave has been riding for four years. At the age of ten he bought a horse with money earned working on a farm. Unfortunately, he couldn't afford the cost of keeping the horse in town and had to sell it.

He used the proceeds to buy an English bike which he usually uses to deliver papers. His route, which runs out around the high school, takes 20 minutes by bike or 40 minutes on horseback.

Kimo, the seven-year-old horse that Dave rides on his paper route, doesn't belong to him. The use of the horse is traded for his feeding and handling.

Dave gets up at six a.m., delivers his papers and "does chores" before breakfast. The "chores" consist of caring for the horse, a dog, and four rabbits.

The blue-eyed, wiry sixth grader likes animals of all kinds, but horses are his first love.

He rides every day but Sunday with friends who keep their horses at the same place. They often make a day of it, taking along a lunch—"a can of beans and a can opener."

Dave is looking forward to a family trip to Colorado this summer. He wants to see a rodeo and pick up some riding gear from the West.

His mother heartily approves his interest in horses. She thinks that it is one of the most wholesome recreations available for young people.

"Yeah, that's us," Dave agreed. "Clean minds and dirty bodies."

Listen to Children, Johnson Tells Parents Conference

BY ROBERT KERNS

"Being a good listener to your child is of vital importance," Prof. Wendell Johnson told participants of the Parents' Conference Friday.

Johnson, professor of the State University of Iowa Speech Pathology and Audiology Department, spoke at a general meeting of the conference held in the House Chamber of Old Capital.

"Parents of speech handicapped children are found by research to be overly conscientious. They worry too much about their youngsters and "the child absorbs this feeling and reflects it in his personality," said Johnson.

The main thing a parent can do, Johnson said, is to try to make himself into the kind of a person a child would like to talk to. The child will come away feeling better, he said.

"Listening is very important," said Johnson. "Be a good listener with your child. Talk just enough to keep him talking at his best. If a child talks to you freely, you shouldn't comment on his oral mistakes."

"You should try to listen with your child's needs in mind instead of your own."

If you are going to make speaking meaningful for a child, Johnson said, one must realize the human growth factors.

"Children are older than we take them to be," said Johnson. "Some parents talk to their 12 year olds as though they were 10. A child should be talked to at his age level."

"Parents are not being kind to a child by releasing them from their duties," Johnson said. "They want to work and show achievement.

"After they work, then they want to play," he said.

Johnson said that parents must develop a feeling for slight improvements in their children. A speech clinic, he said, cannot cause "magical" changes. Improvement is developed slowly with much patience, he emphasized.

"This improvement might be started by the clinic, but the parents must carry it through," continued Johnson.

Johnson said that one of the most fundamental types of improvement to observe is how the child talks. By being a good listener to the child, you get him to talk more, he said.

"The attitude the child has and the attitude the parents reflect to others about their child's speech difficulties are other important factors to consider," Johnson said.

Sox Lose, Keep .002 Lead In 3-Way Race

Error in 11th Gives Orioles 2-1 Victory

BALTIMORE (AP) — Reliefer Millard Howell fumbled a slow roller with the bases loaded in the 11th inning to permit a run to score and Baltimore to defeat league-leading Chicago, 2-1, in a pitcher's duel Friday night.

The loss enabled New York and Cleveland to virtually tie the White Sox for first place. Chicago remained in front by two percentage points.

Chicago's Harry Byrd and Baltimore's Jim Wilson had locked in a sterling pitching duel for 10⅓ innings.

In the bottom of the 11th, leadoff batter Gus Triandos doubled and Hal Brown was sent in to run for him. Dave Pope was intentionally walked. Howell then replaced Byrd and both runners advanced on Hal Smith's grounder. Freddie Marsh also drew an intentional pass, loading the bases.

Willie Miranda topped a low roller to the mound and Howell fumbled the ball for an error, permitting Brown to score from third with the winning run.

The Sox scored their lone run in the first inning on a walk to Minnie Minoso, Nellie Fox's single and George Kell's force of Fox which scored Minoso.

Cleveland's defeat, coupled with the Chicago White Sox's 2-1 setback by Baltimore and New York's 3-0 triumph over Detroit left Chicago only two percentage points ahead of Cleveland and the Yankees.

Athletics Top Red Sox, 5-2

BOSTON (AP) — Gus Zernial battered the Red Sox with his 22nd and 23rd home runs and a double Friday night in Kansas City's 5-2 victory over pennant-contending Boston.

Tom Gorman walked into a bases-loaded, none-out situation in the eighth inning to save Vic Raschi's fourth victory against three defeats.

Zernial's performance included three runs batted in and three runs scored.

Raschi was taken out after Ted Williams singled, Jackie Jensen was hit by a pitched ball and Norm Zauchin singled to fill the bases. Gorman got Sammy White to hit into a run-producing force play, then struck out Grady Hatton and got Jim Piersall on another forceout.

Benefiting from an earlier miscue, too, the Phillies scored another tally in the contest in which Del Ennis rapped his 23rd homer and Bobby Morgan his ninth for the victors, who outhit St. Louis, 11 to 8.

Cubs Top Dodgers In Homer Battle

DON HOAK, Dodger third baseman, slides head first into second base after a long hit ball to centerfield. Cubs' shortstop, Ernie Banks, takes the throw from centerfielder Eddie Miksis, but not in time.

CHICAGO (AP) —The Chicago Cubs Friday set back the league-leading Brooklyn Dodgers, 10-8, with both teams blasting a total of 29 hits, including seven home runs.

Duke Snider of the Dodgers got two home runs to lead the major league home run race with 38. Ernie Banks, Cub shortstop who was tied with Snider before the game at 36 circuit blows each, got one.

Eddie Miksis, Dee Fondy of the Cubs, and the Dodgers' Pee Wee Reese and Gil Hodges also homered.

Warren Hacker started for the Cubs but was relieved by Hal Jeffcoat, who got credit for the victory. Roger Craig was the loser.

The decisive run off Craig came in the sixth. It was unearned, as Harry Chiti drew life on a fumble by Hoak. He was sacrificed and scored on a single by Gene Baker. The Cubs picked up an insurance run off Russ Meyer in the eighth.

Fleck Fails To Qualify At O'Shanter

CHICAGO (AP) — Peter Thomson, 25, British Open champion from Melbourne, Australia, took seven strokes off Tam O'Shanter's par for a 65 and a halfway lead of two strokes in the $25,000 All-American golf tourney Friday.

Jack Fleck, U.S. Open Champion from Davenport shot a second-round par 72, but was 2 strokes over the 147 qualifying limit. Others who failed to qualify included Chandler Harper, Pete Cooper and Johnny Palmer.

The field was whacked to 80 players for the final two rounds today and Sunday.

Thomson's great round left him eight under par with a 136 for 36 holes.

Thomson, who opened with a 71 Thursday, fashioned a sizzling 31-34 round against Tam's 36-36-72 as he just missed the $10,000 reward for breaking the course record of 63, held by Lloyd Mangrum.

Two strokes behind at the 36-hole mark in the quest for the $3,520 first prize were 1955 National PGA champion Doug Ford and Al Mengert, runnerup in the 1952 National Amateur, each with 138. Ford and Mengert each banged his second straight 69.

A four-way tie developed for fourth at 139, three strokes off the pace, among Mike Fetchick, Lake Mahopac, N. Y., who fired a 34-34-68; Gardner Dickson Jr., Panama City Beach, Fla., with 33-36-69; Wally Urich, Rochester, Minn., 37-34-71, and Fred Hawkins, St. Andrews, Ill., 33-36-69.

The chase for the $1,000 top prize in the concurrent $5,000 All-American women's pro tourney found Patty Berg moving into a 7-stroke lead with a second-round 71, one under men's par, for a halfway total of 146.

Giants Win, 12-9; 2d Baseman Hurt

CINCINNATI (AP) — The New York Giants scored in four clusters of threes Friday night to beat the Cincinnati Redlegs 12-9 but the Giants lost another second baseman, Wayne Terwilliger, at least temporarily.

Terwilliger was beaned by Johnny Klippstein's fast ball in the second inning.

X-rays of Terwilliger showed no evidence of fracture but attendants at Christ Hospital said he would remain under observation for at least 24 hours.

Bobby Hofman took over the duties at second base. By the time Terwilliger left the game, the Giants had a 6-0 lead. They scored three more in the sixth and three in the eighth, the latter powered by Ray Katt's fourth homer of the season.

Yanks Beat Tigers, Tie Indians for 2d

NEW YORK (AP) — Yogi Berra's 200th career home run boosted the New York Yankees into a virtual three-way tie for first place in the nip-and-tuck American League race Friday night with a 3-0 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

The big belt, Berra's 19th of the season, came with two men on base in the fourth inning and moved the Yanks up from third place into a neck and neck standing with Chicago and Cleveland, both of whom lost Friday night.

Don Larsen, recently recalled from Denver got his third victory. Berra's blast placed him with Bill Dickey, Gabby Hartnett and Roy Campanella as the only catchers to hit 200 or more homers in the majors.

THE WISTFUL HUNCH

plays by ear and lets his mind take a holiday

The HUNCH is a manufacturer who says advertising is an art — so why try to be scientific about it?

He bets on horses by the sound of their names, draws to inside straights, and always uses a putter when driving off a tee.

He's an amateur's amateur.

Fortunately, the HUNCH is a rare creature. Most advertisers realize that there is a degree of science in all human endeavors — and advertising is no exception.

Most manufacturers carefully weigh their markets, and watch competition closely. They time their advertising campaigns to meet seasonal and regional opportunities.

Naturally, they use newspapers. Because with newspapers they can pin-point any market and really cover any market.

Their national advertising starts at the local level because that's where success is founded.

All business is local . . .
and so are all newspapers!
