Machine Grades 1,400 Tests a Minute

A machine that can grade the papers of 1,400 Iowa high school students in an hour and a half—a speed never before achieved—has been developed by Professor Robert E. Lindquist, head of the Iowa Testing Program at the University of Iowa.

The machine, which has a daily capacity of 1,800,000 papers, consists of 31 separate units for answering the questions on each test. It is divided into sections which are controlled by a master section. The machine is capable of grading 1,400 tests a minute, a speed never before achieved.

The machine is designed to handle the Iowa Testing Program's annual statewide test, which is given to high school seniors throughout the state. The program, which has been in operation for 23 years, is administered by the University of Iowa's College of Education.

The machine is being used for the first time this year to grade the tests of the state's high school seniors. The program is aimed at providing a comprehensive evaluation of the students' abilities and achievements.

For Illinois Program

The machine was developed for the Illinois Testing Program, which is similar to the Iowa program. It is the first time the machine has been used for a state-wide testing program.

The Illinois program, which has a similar format to the Iowa program, is administered by the University of Illinois. The program is designed to evaluate the progress of students in grades one through twelve.
