Martin, Harriman To Speak at Oxford

U.S. Senator Thomas E. Martin will be the featured speaker on the opening day of the Oxford Homecoming celebration today. He is scheduled to speak at 2 p.m.

The 2-day celebration, which opens with a parade at 10 a.m., has been divided into a Republican day and a Democrat day, with a speaker representing each party.

Speaking for the Democrats will be New York Gov. Averell Harriman who is scheduled for 2 p.m. Saturday. Harriman is seeking the Democratic presidential nomination.

Martin, who arrived in Iowa City Thursday night, will attend the Republican County Convention today at 10 a.m. at the Mayflower Inn before going to Oxford.

Harriman will arrive in Cedar Rapids by plane at 9:25 p.m. today. He will be driven to Iowa City and will spend the night at the Jefferson Hotel.

Harriman will meet with delegates to the Democratic National Convention Saturday at 10 a.m. at the Jefferson Hotel in an effort to secure support for the national convention. The Iowa delegation of 48 is going to the convention without instructions.

The governor will proceed to Oxford for a noon luncheon in St. Mary's Auditorium and a reception which will follow at 1 p.m.

The Oxford celebration, sponsored by the American Legion post there, will include midway and carnival attractions. A street dance today at 9 p.m. and a dance Saturday at 9 p.m. in St. Mary's Auditorium are also scheduled.

U.S. Consul Eludes Bomb

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP)—An attempt was made Thursday on the life of another American civilian working in Cyprus. Unlike the bomb killing of U.S. Vice Consul William Boteler, June 16, it failed. British authorities of this Mediterranean island colony said a homemade bomb was planted in the gasoline tank of a car belonging to Louis La Baue, 26, New Orleans, La.

But La Baue, a State Department employee at the U.S. radio relay station near here, escaped injury. He was inside his home on Nicosia's outskirts when the bomb exploded prematurely in his automobile parked outside.

Authorities said the crude bomb, a glass tube filled with gunpowder, probably had been planted by youths from a nearby schoolhouse sympathetic to EOKA.

EOKA designates the national organization of Cypriot fighters, an underground movement that seeks through shootings and bombings to induce the British to give Cyprus freedom to join Greece. EOKA was suspected of throwing two bombs that killed Boteler and wounded three other Americans in a Nicosia restaurant.

Ike to Wilson—'Lay It on the Line'

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower called Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson to his hospital room Thursday and told him to "lay it on the line" in reply to attacks on the administration defense program.

Reporting this quote, Press Secretary James C. Hagerly said it was the President's own.

Wilson will go before a Senate Armed Services subcommittee today and there he will face two of the sharpest administration critics in Congress, Senators W. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.) and Henry M. Jackson (D-Wash.).

Even as Eisenhower and Wilson met, a Senate-House Conference Committee agreed to increase the administration's budget for the Air Force by almost a billion dollars. This move had been initiated by Senate Democrats who contended the Eisenhower plans for defense were inadequate in view of Russia's increasing air might.

Today's testimony by Wilson will mark his first visit to the Capitol since he enraged many Democrats and irked some Republicans by using the word "phony" last week in a news conference discussion of the moves to give the Air Force more money than the administration asked.

The Armed Services subcommittee is headed by Symington, who used to be secretary of the Air Force and is a possibility for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The Symington-Jackson school of thought holds that America's air strength has been dangerously held down by what they call administrative efforts to make a good financial showing.

Hagerly related that Wilson gave Eisenhower, who is sitting up in bed, an oral sum-up of what he planned to tell the senators today and the President approved it.

Hagerly was asked about the possibility of Wilson's resigning, and said he didn't think there was any discussion of this at all by the President or Wilson.

The whole conference, Hagerly said, "would indicate to me that the President of the United States has complete confidence in the secretary of defense."

Hagerly also said he thought there was no discussion of the "phony" episode which set off a storm in the Senate. Wilson has said he never intended to say there was anything phony about the way the Senate was handling the Air Force fund issue.

During that storm of debate, Sen. Bridges (R-N.H.) had said Wilson had cast "an unwarranted slur" on senators, and Democrats variously described the secretary as inept, unfit, vain, arrogant and contemptuous.

In the end, the Senate voted 48-40 to give the Air Force nearly a billion dollars that the administration had said it didn't need.

This amounted to majority rejection of Eisenhower's judgment and the assurances of other leaders in the government, including Wilson, that the Air Force had enough without the extra sum to keep ahead of Russia in the struggle for air supremacy.

Thursday afternoon, Senate-House conferees agreed on a compromise $34,856,727,000 defense appropriation bill carrying almost an extra billion for the Air Force. The conference agreement carried $16,459,125,000 for the Air Force for the fiscal year beginning next Sunday. The House conferees accepted an 800-million-dollar increase the Senate had voted for the purchase of big intercontinental bombers and other aircraft, and another 100 million for Air Force research and development.

The Weather

Fair and Warm

Iowa City is heading into another mild weekend. Forecasters said a high pressure system that has brought the cooler weather of the past few days will continue to move eastward. In its wake will come a warming trend with highs this afternoon in the 80s.

AF Plans To Ask $7 Billion More for 1957

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Air Force may ask $23.6 billion for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1957, or $7.1 billion more than the Administration recommended for it in the fiscal year beginning next Sunday.

Secretary of the Air Force Donald Quarles broached the figure for fiscal 1957-58 at a meeting Thursday of the Senate subcommittee studying relative U.S.-Russian air power. Several Democrats on the committee have said the Administration has not been asking enough money for the Air Force.

Quarles said the $23.6 billion sum was not a firm figure, but was rather a "flash estimate" by Gen. Nathan Twining, Air Force chief of staff.

Meanwhile, Senate-House conferees agreed on a compromise $34,856,727,000 defense appropriation bill carrying almost an extra billion for the Air Force. The bill carries $16,459,125,000

QUARLES JACKSON for the Air Force.

The House conferees accepted an $800 million increase the Senate had voted for purchase of aircraft, and $100 million additional for Air Force research and development.

Quarles told the Senate subcommittee the Defense Department is considering increasing the number of strategic heavy bomber wings from 11 to 17 in the next three years.

Quarles denied a suggestion by Sen. Henry M. Jackson (D-Wash.) that "procrastination" had marked this Administration's policy in building up air power. Quarles maintained that plans for the gradual lifting of the B52 production rate to 20 a month are the result of "careful evaluation and progressive correction."

The unspent carryover, Long said, will total $9,643,575,000 when the books are balanced on the close of the fiscal year Saturday.

With the defeat of the Long amendment, the Senate recessed for the night at 11:08 p.m. (EDT).

Quarles also, without public elaboration, testified that the United States "has fired a supersonic ballistic missile." He said he could discuss this only in secret, and thus left in doubt whether he referred to one of several such missiles the Air Force is working on, or to the Army's Redstone missile. The Redstone has a present range of about 300 miles, 1,200 miles short of the desired range of an intermediate missile.

Senate Rejects Foreign Aid Cut

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate defeated late Thursday night an attempt to chop more than $1.7 billion out of President Eisenhower's foreign aid program.

It represented another victory for the administration in its struggle to get Senate approval of a $4.5 billion program of aid to friendly nations during the fiscal year starting Sunday.

Earlier in his hectic night session the Senate refused 50 to 33 to deny further aid to Communist Yugoslavia. As urged by Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and others, it left the important Yugoslav decision to President Eisenhower himself.

The proposal for a $1.7 billion slash in aid funds was contained in an amendment by Sen. Russell B. Long (D-La.) It was the deepest cut proposed by any senator and would have left about $2.8 billion in the mutual security program, less than two-thirds of the amount the President asked for.

Long told the Senate he has believed for some time that foreign aid spending has been "wasteful... even foolhardy."

"There is no reason why the adoption of this amendment should alarm or upset any of our allies," he argued. "It does not say to them that we are pulling out of NATO. It does not say we are liquidating our military obligations."

Rather, he said, it means a continuation at the present rate, unless the Administration wants to step up the spending of unexpended balances from prior years' appropriations. Last year's foreign aid appropriation totaled $2.7 billion.

The unspent carryover, Long said, will total $9,643,575,000 when the books are balanced on the close of the fiscal year Saturday.

With the defeat of the Long amendment, the Senate recessed for the night at 11:08 p.m. (EDT).

Government, Red Buildings Are Attacked

BERLIN (AP)—Red Poland's tanks and troops crushed a six-hour workers' rebellion for bread and a better life Thursday. A number were killed.

The general strike and revolt was at Poznan, an important Polish industrial city. Communist headquarters and government buildings were attacked.

The workers chose a time to strike when many visitors from the West could clearly hear their cries for more food.

Many Westerners are in Poznan for the annual industrial fair and the bloody revolt unfolded before their eyes. They were treated courteously by the strikers.

The Warsaw government said late Thursday night the rebellion had been overcome and the guilty would be punished severely.

The Warsaw radio called it "a well-organized revolt" fomented by enemies of the country. It called for a patriotic mobilization against future attempts.

The strike quickly paralyzed the city. Barricades stopped traffic. Shops were closed. Thousands gathered in city squares shouting "bread, bread."

Chanting workers massed to march on the fairgrounds in long columns of men 12 to 20 abreast. There most were turned back by police armed with machine pistols. A few managed to break through and enter the fairgrounds.

Polish army tanks and armored cars poured out. Antiaircraft guns were moved into position against the demonstrators.

Then the workers began to riot. They attacked government buildings and Communist party headquarters. They overturned autos and streetcars in Roosevelt street. Screaming people were described as running into their houses as army guns opened up.

Reports of the marching, chanting masses carrying anti-Communist slogans were brought out by West German businessmen who came back tonight from the fair. All telephone communication between West Berlin and Poznan was interrupted early in the day.

A Danish businessman said in Copenhagen on his arrival from Poznan he saw troops shoot at least 5 dead in one square. Other eyewitnesses told him at least 50 persons were killed at one place.

The Dane said he was told similar revolts had been planned in Warsaw, Krakow and Lodz.

Sefton Delmer, chief foreign correspondent of the London Daily Express, reported in a dispatch from Warsaw that aircraft attempting to go to Poznan were sent back. Delmer said hundreds of foreign businessmen in Poznan for the fair must have seen the rioting.

He said reports reaching Warsaw said the Polish troops fired into the crowd in the center of the city. Delmer called the clash the most serious outbreak since Poland came under Communist domination.

Delmer wrote that he could not telephone to Poznan and it appeared the area was being cordoned off. Warsaw was calm.

There, Delmer said he had reports that the crowd gathered at 3 a.m. outside a Poznan factory, protesting work conditions. They carried signs saying, "We want bread." As they marched to Communist party headquarters, their lines swelled. The violence soared. About noon they attacked police headquarters. The first shots were fired.

Then the troops were called out and at 2 p.m. the tanks rumbled out to clear the streets, he said.

Radio Warsaw charged that the enemies of the republic deliberately chose the trade fair time "to exploit the economic difficulties and grievances in certain work establishments."

It called the rioters "a street mob led by the imperialists and the reactionary underground."

A West Berlin businessman back from the fair said Western visitors had stirred resentment with their good clothes and shiny cars, demonstrating a better life in the West.

How many died in the riot was not announced.

Gee Whiz! Ivy Vine Could Use A Fig Leaf

NEW YORK (AP)—They smiled when pretty Ivy Vine walked into a Greenwich Village restaurant Thursday. But when she slipped out of her coat—wowie!

"She had on only a g-string and brassiere—and the brassiere was falling off," gasped the restaurant's co-owner, Fred Chastanone, later.

Management politely required Miss Vine, a dancer, to put the coat back on, adding "no coat, no service."

Twenty men in the restaurant looked on with avidity as their luncheons grew cold on their plates. Five males wandered in from the bar and stood transfixed as their forgotten martinis grew warm.

After 90 minutes of arguing, management decided it wasn't getting its message through to Miss Vine. Police were called. Miss Vine was assisted off to court—with coat—and posted $25 bail for a disorderly conduct hearing July 5.

Iowa Labor Blasts Secret Confabs Held By State Legislature

DES MOINES (AP)—Secret meetings by committees of the Iowa Legislature were denounced Thursday by the merged Iowa Federation of Labor, AFL-CIO.

One resolution asking open meetings of legislative committees and another urging reapportionment of the Legislature were among measures adopted by the 448 delegates at final sessions of the first convention of the new organization.

George C. Parks of Iowa City, chairman of the resolutions committee, said, "The majority of the work of state legislators is done in committee meetings."

"It is our understanding that the legislators are representatives of the people," Parks said. "The citizens of Iowa who elect and pay their state officials are entitled to know their legislators' stand on issues in the Legislature."

The resolution asked that legislative committee meetings be opened to the public and the press, unless an executive session is ordered by a majority vote of the committee members.

The proposal for reapportionment said: "The Iowa State Legislature, which has been predominantly controlled by the Republican Party for years, has failed to make even a sincere effort for reapportionment of the Legislature."

"This convention, once again protesting the philosophy of government by the minority, urges all candidates of both political parties to make public their position on the issue of reapportionment."

Stand up and Be Counted

The Congregational Christian church of the United States recently made a move which is unequalled in modern times. Action by church officials nailed down a decision to back a court case in a segregation issue.

The church's general council instructed its executive committee to carry on a case against the Omaha American Legion post on grounds it discriminated against a Negro delegate.

Involved in the case is A. Huston Gordon, Chicago, Legionnaire and delegate, who assertedly was refused a room — for which arrangements had been made at the Legion club — after the club learned he was a Negro. The Legion had advertised rooms for rent.

"This is our supreme opportunity to give witness, to be true prophets — to put up or shut up," said the Rev. Edward A. Hastings, of Tacoma, Wash.

"We've talked for years about our concern in this matter, but we've never had a real issue with which to come to grips."

The critics of this particular action will blame the Congregational church for getting into activities which should not be the primary function of a church. They might say that racial issues should be left to civil authorities and the church should concern itself with religious issues only.

We cannot but praise this particular church for its action. Our legislative bodies and civil organizations have not proved to be too effective in settling the segregation issue. With the great number of religious people in this country, it seems that church is the right place to begin to stand up for integration.

Probably by starting to fight segregation from the grass-roots level rather than by Supreme Court decisions will bring results. Of course not today or tomorrow, but if many churches follow the example of the Congregational church, the day of "justice and equality for all" might approach sooner.

People to People

With President Eisenhower's expressed hope for furtherance of "people-to-people contacts . . . to create understanding" among the civilized nations of the world there can be no disagreement. The public and private exchange programs under which foreigners come to this country and establish direct and personal communications with Americans, and vice versa, constitute one of the most effective of all methods of building up mutual comprehension and good will.

The President's support of these programs makes all the more puzzling the fact that the State Department asked this year for actually less money than last year for educational exchanges. It requested $22 million last year for the educational program and $20 million this year. Considering the importance of the program and the moral weight the President rightly ascribes to it, this is a paltry figure, especially when compared with a sum 7 times as great for the governmental exchange of technicians under a different program and also compared with an appropriation of more than $100 million for propaganda of dubious effectiveness put out by the United States Information Agency. While everybody from the President on down seems to believe that educational exchange is wonderful, the agency under which it is administered is treated something like a step-child in the State Department, with no top-ranking departmental official showing really vital interest in it.

But this is not the only puzzling feature about the working out of the "people-to-people contacts" with governmental encouragement. What could be more important in this area of activity than contact with foreigners along cultural lines — through the theater, music, art, and the like? Yet it almost seems that every time an effort is made to establish such serious contact some spineless official in Washington becomes frightened by the "Communist bugaboo" and the enterprise is called off, to the great detriment of American prestige abroad.

The Symphony of the Air, with a record behind it as one of the best American propaganda agencies ever sent to the Far East, lost a scheduled trip to the Middle East presumably for this reason, if it can be called a reason. An exhibition of American sporting pictures, to be sent to Australia, was withdrawn on the complaint of a small group of fanatics that some of the artists had un-American associations. One of the finest plays on Broadway will not be sent to the International Theater Festival this year because someone in Washington does not believe that real art appeals to people, even though it may offend a diplomat or two.

We are glad the President plans to have a conference in Washington to encourage "people-to-people contacts," and we hope some of the government officials who have done so much in their official capacity to alienate these contacts will be invited.

Hot Po-Tito

Cain and the President

Absolute security is undesirable and impossible except in total immobility

(Editor's Note: This is the second in a series of articles. The last part will appear in The Daily Iowan Saturday.)

By DANIEL N. BERMAN From the New Republic

THE APPOINTMENT had gone six minutes over the allotted half hour. The President looked at his calendar on which his next appointment was noted. He started to rise from his chair. Cain asked if he could have another minute. The President replied, no; there was someone waiting for him. "But, sir," persisted Cain, "this case concerns a soldier." The President dropped back in his chair. "What did you say?" he asked. Cain began to read excerpts from a letter written by a Korean veteran, and then Morgan knew what the earlier "combat badge" reference had meant. The letter had been addressed to the President, but no one in the White House had answered it. A former combat soldier, now an assistant field director for the Red Cross, had been refused the necessary Army clearance for an overseas assignment with the Red Cross. Protestating that he had been penalized unjustly, the veteran sent the President his combat badge and the following letter:

Mr. President:

I believe you to be an honest and a just man. I am appealing to you in your capacity as Commander-in-Chief of the Armed Forces to assist me in redressing what I believe to be a grievous error and injustice.

This Combat Infantry Badge, which I earned in Korea and which I have enclosed in this envelope, is a symbol of the injustice that I believe has been done to me. I wore this badge and the uniform of our country as a combat infantryman with pride and I would do nothing to disgrace either the uniform, the decoration or myself. Yet, despite the record of my faithful service in two wars, I have been branded as a security risk by Army G-2 and I have lost my good name as well as my livelihood.

I protest the injustice of this action, where I have had no opportunity to defend myself or even to learn with what I am charged. I ask your good offices to enable me to obtain a hearing so that I may vindicate my name and my honor.

Enclosed herein is a copy of a letter recently sent to the Acting Chief of Staff, Army G-2, which will explain my problem in detail. This letter was sent as a sworn and notarized statement, to invite prosecution for perjury if G-2 believes that I have made false statements.

Mr. President, my parents fled Europe and came to this country to escape injustice and oppression. I was brought up to believe that in our democracy every citizen, regardless of his circumstances, could get full and equal protection under the law and that this government existed to protect its citizens, not to oppress them. I believe that with all of my heart and soul; I fought for my country buoyed up by that faith, and I believe this still, despite what has transpired. I ask only for simple justice and fair play, an opportunity to know with what I am charged and a chance to defend myself.

Sincerely yours, Irving I. August

THE LETTER HAD NOT been acknowledged by the White House

staff, but instead forwarded to Army Intelligence, which was precisely the agency against which Irving August was complaining. G-2 wrote:

Under existing agreements with the American National Red Cross, the assignment of Red Cross personnel to Army commands overseas is contingent upon the approval of the Department of the Army. The authority of the Department of the Army in this respect is provided in federal statute. However, the action taken by the American National Red Cross on the basis of a disapproval under this authority is a matter outside the jurisdiction of the Department of the Army.

"In view of the foregoing, it is considered that your appeal should be forwarded to the American National Red Cross."

THIS MEANT that although the Red Cross had not the slightest intimation of why their man had been denied clearance, Mr. August was told to take up his grievance with them!

Henry M. Jackson Defeated Harry Cain

The President was visibly stirred. That was not the kind of Army he himself had served in, he said. Eisenhower punched a bell and a clerk appeared. The President sharply ordered her to investigate at once the routing of the letter. He promised to learn more about this affair. He acknowledged that Cain had told him some things he had not been familiar with.

Now the President made a specific suggestion: The Attorney General is responsible for security matters, but Cain should put his ideas in writing and meet with Morgan for further discussions. Cain was delighted, but he wanted to be sure. "Do I understand that I have your encouragement and directive to confer with Morgan on these matters?" The President assured him that he most certainly did. Eisenhower rose, accompanied Cain to the door, and for the first time, offered his hand to his visitor. They shook hands; Cain told the President of his profound gratitude for the meeting, and then he departed.

FOR ALMOST TWO YEARS, Cain acted as had been expected; he dutifully voted to cite all organizations that Brownell considered Communist fronts (except those that were no longer in business); he drew his $15,000 salary. His Board had nothing directly to do with the federal loyalty-security program. Its function was merely to review the Attorney General's recommendations that organizations be labeled subversive under the McCarran Act of 1950. It would hold hearings, make its citations (no organization has even won an "acquittal"), and then its registration orders would send their weary way through the federal courts.

But Cain became interested. The man read, studied, accumulated case histories. Then, in January, 1955, to a gathering of the conservative Republicans of Spokane's Fifth Congressional District, he told what he had learned; the security program was threatening to "snuff out the lights of learning while making cowards and mental robots out of free men and women." The dreamer and non-conformist, Cain told his conforming audience that he had thought it was dreaming, are the ones who make progress. And only through progress will the conservative have anything worth conserving.

years ago, no one predicted that he would end up fighting the battle of the unjustly accused. During his single term in the Senate, Cain had marched with the McCarthy-Jenner-Walker brigade. During the 82nd Congress, ADA considered that he voted "wrong" on every issue except home-rule for the District of Columbia and statehood for Alaska. He had fought savagely against postwar rent control. He voted against appropriating funds for NATO, but demanded the use of tactical atomic weapons in Korea; he assailed our "spending program," but favored "hot pursuit" and the bombing of Chinese bases even though he recognized that this meant risking World War III.

When he came up for re-election in 1952, Cain lost to Democrat Henry M. Jackson. But he remained in the Capital, waiting for the party to pay its debt to a Republican casualty. Cain's friend, Joe McCarthy, tried to help; he recommended to Defense Chief Charles E. Wilson that Cain be named one of Wilson's assistant secretaries. Cain didn't get that job, but his period of unemployment was brief. The Senate had failed to confirm the nomination of Charles M. LaFollette to the Subversive Activities Control Board. LaFollette, who had been serving under a recess appointment, stepped down, and Cain was chosen to fill out the unexpired term. The Senate had no qualms about confirming him, and in June, 1953, he won renomination to a full three-year term.

FOR ALMOST TWO YEARS, Cain acted as had been expected; he dutifully voted to cite all organizations that Brownell considered Communist fronts (except those that were no longer in business); he drew his $15,000 salary. His Board had nothing directly to do with the federal loyalty-security program. Its function was merely to review the Attorney General's recommendations that organizations be labeled subversive under the McCarran Act of 1950. It would hold hearings, make its citations (no organization has even won an "acquittal"), and then its registration orders would send their weary way through the federal courts.

The dreamer and non-conformist, Cain told his conforming audience that he had thought it was dreaming, are the ones who make progress. And only through progress will the conservative have anything worth conserving.

The former Senator gave three examples of how the loyalty program had miscarried: Wolf Ladajnsky had been fired by the Department of Agriculture, but was immediately scooped up by the Foreign Operations Administration; Milo Radulovich, a first lieutenant in the Air Force, had been called a security risk because of his sister's alleged pro-Communist activities; and Victor Havris, an Air Force master sergeant with 14 years of service, found himself labeled because, when he was at the impressionable age of 12, his father had taken him to a Communist meeting.

Says Early Career Choices Unnecessary

The idea that a high school senior isn't quite "savvy" unless he has decided what he wants to "be" should be dispelled, Prof. Clay Gerken told members of a Workshop for High School and College Counselors at the SUI Center for Continuation Study Thursday. Gerken is director of the SUI Counseling Service.

The idea that college students need to have their future vocational paths completely mapped out is in error, too, Gerken said, and has been the cause of much needless anxiety for both parents and students.

One of the major functions of the vocational counselor is to relieve anxieties concerning job decisions by letting students talk through their job worries and by pointing out to them some relatively unknown facts about changing job opportunities and values important in making vocational decisions, Gerken stated.

The counselor should help the student to think in terms of how he differs from others as he considers possible vocational fields, the speaker explained. "It seems that everyone wants to work with people — there are no lighthouse tenders among potential employees today.

"All want to make enough money to live comfortably, insist on advancement on the job, want to work for a good boss and in situations where they will be looked up to by colleagues and gain some prestige," Gerken continued. "And nobody wants a job made up of routine tasks."

So these are non-distinguishing desires which will not help in determining an individual's choice of occupation, he said. But the counselor can point out some considerations which will be of value in making decisions as the need arises. In the first place, the idea that the brighter the student is, the longer he should postpone specialization can be taken as a kind of "rule of thumb," Gerken suggested.

This is true because acquiring "trainability" or ease in learning and adapting to new situations is more important today than the early mastery of specific skills, the SUI professor said. Jobs are becoming more specialized, but most of this specialization comes after school days are over.

Some 2,000 new occupations are said to come into the job world every year, Gerken stated, and jobs themselves are changing rapidly, with work of the farmer, or doctor or accountant in 1956, for example, being quite different from their jobs in 1936. Deciding one's broad occupational area while in school is wise in most instances, the speaker explained, but no one should be penalized for not pointing toward a specific job as a student.

Parents tend to encourage their children to think too early in terms of their life's work rather than an "entry job" into their field, the speaker pointed out. The student should think of his life's work as a byproduct of training and early experience, rather than something to be sought immediately. Most of us change jobs a number of times, growing into our real work.

Routine, semi-skilled operations will be increasingly done by machine, Gerken pointed out, so that remaining jobs will become more complex, giving the individual a greater opportunity to build his job around himself and making it easier for him to achieve a good adjustment.

Students should be helped to realize that security and happiness are byproducts of their behavior on their jobs and in other activities, the speaker advised. "In the last 20 years we have become increasingly interested in security as a goal," he said, "with many afraid to take risks." This has been reflected in the interest of today's graduates in working for large corporations and in their concern about pension plans and other security provisions, even on their first jobs.

The United States has become great primarily because we have had what is known as a "risk" economy, Gerken explained. If we are to keep this economy, all of us will have to take some risks. The counselor should point out that the prizes in life tend to go to those who can take these risks comfortably, Gerken concluded.

Forty High School Girls To Present Twirling Exhibition—Forty high school girls from four states will present a baton twirling exhibition today at 6:45 p.m. on the Girls Athletic Field near the Iowa Memorial Union.

The 40 twirlers are attending the band, orchestra and baton twirling division of the SUI All-State Music Camp. The camp will close Saturday.

Demonstrations of flag twirling and of twirling fire batons will be included in the exhibition, according to twirling camp director Robert Welty, of Sturgis, Mich.

Use of lighted batons and of twirling with two batons will also be demonstrated, Welty says. Other features of the program will include solo twirling, duet twirling and ensemble twirling numbers.

The entire group of 40 twirlers will also participate in a marching demonstration "to show movements in common usage today on the football field," Welty says.

A highlight of the program will be a duet twirling exhibition performed by twirling camp instructors LaVonne Nolte, D2, Knoxville, and Janet Walter, a 1956 SUI graduate from Warsaw, Ind. Both have been baton twirlers with the SUI marching band for the past two years.

Forty-Five Enroll For Speech Clinic

The 1956 Summer Speech Clinic, a 6-weeks residential program for children with speech defects, opened this week at SUI with 37 boys and 8 girls enrolled.

The summer clinic is for children who need more intensive speech therapy than they can obtain during the regular school term and who need the growth opportunities provided by group living, explains F. L. Darley, SUI professor of speech pathology, director of the program.

Recreational supervisors, led by Bill Seaberg, Iowa basketball star for the past three seasons, provide the children with late afternoon, evening and weekend play, including swimming, games, picnics and movies.

Steel Parley Fails; Mills Bank Furnaces

NEW YORK (AP)—Steel wage negotiators failed again Thursday to reach a contract agreement that would avert a 650,000-man strike Saturday midnight.

"We are not closer to an agreement than we were May 28," said David J. McDonald, President of the United Steelworkers Union (USW). That was the date contract talks began in Pittsburgh before being transferred here three weeks ago.

McDonald, talking with newsmen after a three-hour bargaining session with company executives, was asked to describe the outlook in a word.

"I am never pessimistic," he said, "but believe me I am realistic."

As McDonald spoke, just 54 hours before the strike deadline, the nation's steel mills already were banking their fires.

The banking will cost an estimated $55 million in lost production even if a last-minute contract agreement is reached.

Shortly before Thursday's contract talks broke up, Secretary of Labor Mitchell ruled out any hope that the government might step in to the picture.

McDonald blamed the companies for the stalemate and said they had shown no inclination to yield.

"The next move is up to the companies," he added.

McDonald said the union had no plans to call federal mediators in to the negotiations.

Mitchell had said earlier in Washington that the Federal Mediation Service stands ready to step in to help with the negotiations, but only if requested.

"No change, no change," said John A. Stephens, U.S. Steel vice-president and chief industry negotiator, when asked about prospects of a settlement.

Other industry negotiators indicated that the companies had no new proposals to place before the meeting.

There was no indication of any union disposition to backtrack in its opposition to management contract proposals.

The present two-year contract expires at midnight Saturday—the strike deadline.

Banking the furnaces, a process of cooling them gradually to avoid cracks and other damage, takes about three days. Reheating them, also a gradual process, takes even longer.

So, even if a contract agreement were reached in the next day or two, there would be a production loss.

The USW's 170-member Wage Policy Committee is scheduled to meet this afternoon to get a report from McDonald on the status of the bargaining.

This committee, composed of rank and file workers' representatives from the various steel-producing districts, has authority to approve or reject any agreement if one is reached by the negotiators.

The companies Wednesday retreated for the first time from their previous insistence on a five-year contract and proposed one for four years and four months. This proved unacceptable to the union, some members of which have expressed a willingness to settle for three years.

Authorities said the accident occurred when Mrs. Sherman's car, going north onto Highway 6, collided with a car being driven by Miss Soukup west on Highway 6.

Both cars were reported extensively damaged.

Miss Peters and Mrs. Cook are both nurses at Mercy Hospital, while Miss Soukup is a laboratory technician at the hospital.

Ike Backers Defeat Farm Amendment

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Eisenhower administration drew first blood in the foreign-aid fight Thursday when the Senate defeated, 45-43, an amendment to curtail imports of farm products and textiles.

It was the first test of strength as the Senate began voting on a bill which would authorize a 4½-billion-dollar foreign-aid program for the fiscal year beginning Sunday.

Just before the roll call, Sen. Wm. F. Knowland of California, the Senate's Republican leader, advised his colleagues that the administration believed the import curtailment would be "highly detrimental to our foreign policy."

The amendment was offered by a bloc of senators from grain and textile states. It would have limited the importation of textiles such as cotton goods and all farm products which are now in surplus supply in this country.

These imports, in future years, would have been held to the average of the preceding three years.

Leading the opposition to the proposal, Knowland argued that it would have a severe impact on Japan and might shove that country closer to the Communist orbit. He said both the Senate finance committee and the tariff commission are working on proposals to help the American textile industry.

Sen. Olin Johnston (D-S.C.) next called up an amendment designed to bar any increase in textile imports pending action by the tariff commission and the President to protect domestic industry, but the Senate defeated this, too, 52-36.

Earlier, Sen. Allen J. Ellender (D-La.) called for cuts in the President's foreign-aid program, telling the Senate "the programs of western Europe are better off than they ever have been."

The measure would provide about 400 million dollars less than Mr. Eisenhower wants for mutual-security projects during the fiscal year beginning Sunday. Individual senators were planning attempts to cut it even further.

Ellender argued that the time has come to start cutting back. He singled out Belgium as one country he said no longer needs aid.

Army Research Chief Gives Warning—Millions Would Die in Atom War

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Army calculated that "several hundred million" deaths would result from radioactivity if the United States ever launched a full-scale nuclear assault on the Communist world.

It says casualties would extend to friendly areas outside the Red zone.

Lt. Gen. James M. Gavin, chief of Army Research and Development, gave the estimate to the Senate subcommittee investigating air power.

This and other testimony was released Thursday by the committee for publication.

Sen. James F. Duff (R-Pa.) asked Gavin:

"If we got into a nuclear war and our Strategic Air Force made an assault in force against Russia with nuclear weapons so that the weapons exploded in a way where the prevailing winds would carry them southeast over Russia, what would be the effect in way of death?"

Gavin replied:

"Current planning estimates run on the order of several hundred million deaths that would be either way, depending on which way the wind blew.

"If the wind blew to the south-east they would be mostly in the U.S.S.R., although they would extend into the Japanese and perhaps down into the Philippine area.

"If the wind blew the other way they would extend well back into Western Europe."

The transcript of testimony did not show how the estimate of several hundred million deaths was arrived at. Reference books estimate the population of the U.S.S.R., which includes both European and Asiatic Russia, at about 215 million. Red China may have a total of about 600 million.

Gavin said that if the attack included air burst of nuclear weapons there would be increasing accumulation of the element strontium 90.

That element is produced in fission bomb explosions.

It literally gets into the bones of men, either through direct exposure to fall-out or by eating food or meat which has been contaminated by the element.

Chiang's Downfall Pledged by Chou

HONG KONG (AP)—Premier Chou En-lai reasserted Thursday night Red China's determination to take over Formosa, and proposed direct negotiations with the Nationalist Chinese to arrange its "peaceful" transfer to the Communists.

He declared that there are two ways for the Communist government to "liberate" the Nationalist stronghold of the Chinese mainland—"by war or by peaceful means." Red China, he said, seeks to "liberate Taiwan (Formosa) by peaceful means so far as it is possible."

"The dying gasp of the Taiwan authorities under the United States cannot last for long," Chou said in a speech to the National People's Congress in Peiping which was broadcast by Peiping radio. The Congress is Communist China's Parliament.

Ellender argued that the time has come to start cutting back. He singled out Belgium as one country he said no longer needs aid.

"On behalf of the government," the Premier said, "I formally declare we are willing to negotiate with the Taiwan authorities on specific steps and conditions for the peaceful liberation of Taiwan."

"Liberation" is the term Peiping always uses for the transfer of Formosa to its control. Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalists were certain to reject Chou's proposal, as they have all previous suggestions that they give up the big island.

In his speech, Chou said Chiang could name the time and place for the talks. While firm in his call for "liberation," the Premier did not sound as belligerent as he has in the past in expressing his government's determination to take over Formosa.

The Premier asserted that the U.S. forces backing Chiang "are by no means dependable forces."

Reds Drop Bucs, 4-3 on Burgess' Home Run

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Catcher Smokey Burgess slammed a three-run homer in the eighth inning Thursday night to pace the Cincinnati Redlegs to a 4-3 victory and a clean sweep of a three-game series with the Pittsburgh Pirates. The Redlegs moved to within six percentage points of the idle league-leading Milwaukee Braves.

Burgess' four-bagger was his fifth of the season and the 100th for the heavy hitting Redlegs. The all-time major league record is 221 set by the New York Giants in 1947.

It was the third straight game in which Cincinnati came from behind in the eighth inning to defeat the Pirates. Cincinnati . . . 000 000 010—4 11 1 Pittsburgh . . . 000 000 000—3 7 2 Klippstein, Acker (7), Fowler (8) and Burgess; Munger, Arroyo (8), Face (8) and Folles, W-Acker (11-0). L—Arroyo (2-2).

Suggs Leads Field In Western Open

DES MOINES (AP)—Louise Suggs, golf's "Little Miss Poker Face," swept over Wakonda's wooded hills in a 4 under par 72 Thursday for the first round lead in the Women's Western Open championship.

The 32-year-old professional from Sea Island, Ga., who cracked the women's course record by one stroke, used only 28 putts in her flawless performance.

A four-time winner of the Open, Louise was out in par 38, then carded four birdies and five pars on the last nine for a 34. She had three straight birdies starting at the 14th hole.

Her longest putt was a 15-footer for a birdie 2 on the second hole. Overall she had eight one-putt greens.

Smith vs. Janssen In British Golf Final

SUNNINGDALE, England (AP)—Favorite Margaret (Wiff) Smith of St. Clair, Mich., and upset-minded Mary Patton Janssen of Charlottesville, Va., hammered their way into the final of the British Women's Amateur Golf Championship Thursday with relentless one-sided victories in the quarter and semifinals.

Miss Smith, 19, defeated Polly Riley of Fort Worth, Tex., 5 and 4 in the semifinal.

Miss Janssen, who has tumbled favored opponents one after another, polished off Britain's 19-year-old Angela Ward, 6 and 5 in the other semifinal.

Nielsen Loses At Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP)—Kurt Nielsen, an erratic Dane with a record for wrecking Wimbledon seedings, lost Thursday in his first Wimbledon Tennis Championships as a seeded player.

The seventh-ranked Nielsen lost out in the third round to Chilean Luis Ayala, 5-7, 6-4, 6-4, 5-7, 6-4.

In another key match on a cold, rainy day, Althea Gibson of New York, who is trying to become the first Negro to win a Wimbledon title, was on the edge of defeat before her opponent blew up and handed her the match. Miss Gibson defeated Ann Schilcock of Britain 4-6, 6-2, 6-1.

Vic Seixas of Philadelphia, the 1953 champion; Rhodes scholar Ham Richardson of Westfield, N.J., and unseeded Art Larsen of San Leandro, Calif., American champion in 1950, all won their matches handily.

The seeded women also did very well with Louise Brough, four-time Wimbledon winner, leading the way. Miss Brough seeded first, Mrs. Beverly Baker Fleet of Long Beach, Calif., No. 2, and Shirley Fry of St. Petersburg, Fla., No. 5, all gained straight set victories.

Tiger 'Mess' Brings Briggs' Apology

DETROIT (AP)—Coach Joe Gordon's abrupt resignation Thursday dragged the Detroit Tigers' family feud into the open again and an apologetic Tiger president, Walter O. (Spike) Briggs Jr., shouldered "all the blame for this entire mess."

It was a complete about-face for several days he has publicly censured the club's field and front office personnel.

Briggs' criticisms started during the slump that has carried the Tigers through 11 games without a victory. He blamed Manager Buck Harris and accused players of not hustling.

Then later, Briggs challenged the competence of General Manager Herold (Muddy) Ruel and coaches Gordon, Billy Hitchcock and Jack Tighe. All the coaches were infuriated. They said Briggs should have the "courage" to call them into his office and speak to them, rather than to reprimand them in the papers.

"I popped off," said Briggs. "I wouldn't want to hurt Bucky, Muddy or anyone else. But I've been going through a pretty tough period of time, with the ball club up for sale and everything and the club losing like it is. If I were up there in Detroit, I would ask Gordon to stay on."

Reached by telephone in Lake Wales, Fla., Briggs said he "made a lot of foolish statements without thinking and I plan to apologize personally to all persons concerned."

The Detroit Baseball Co., inherited by Briggs and his sisters in 1952 from their late father, is up for arrangement of a trust fund arrangement. Official bidding will open next week.

The 41-year-old Gordon, a second baseman who spent 11 seasons in the major leagues—most of them with the New York Yankees—was in his first year as the Tigers' first base coach.

Informed of Briggs' statement, Gordon said: "I appreciate it. It's very commendable of him. But I've made up my mind. I have decided to make a clean break and that's that."
