GOV. AVERELL HARRIMAN speaks at the Oxford Homecoming Democrat Day where he made a shirt-sleeves attack on the Republican administration and farm policies. Harriman stated the administration supported "the fifth freedom, the freedom to suffer. They've not only allowed it, they've delivered it." Harriman stated he favors high parity.

Views on Harriman's Oxford Speech Differ

By DERYL FLEMING

Gov. Averell Harriman's speech at the Oxford Homecoming Saturday brought varied comments from Iowa City Republicans and Democrats. "It is obvious what Harriman does is try to revive the New Deal philosophy of FDR (Franklin D. Roosevelt), the other Democratic candidates have drifted away from that policy," Kirk Porter, head of the SUI department of political science, said. "Harriman feels the New Deal philosophy is being abandoned by the Democrats. He is the only one of the Democratic hopefuls carrying the banner of FDR. How successful he might be, I don't know," he added. "It is interesting that a man of Harriman's wealth should be interested in the New Deal philosophy, but he is," he said.

The News In Brief

Compiled from Associated Press Dispatches

State —

AN ARMED BANDIT fled with $120 Monday after firing several shots at an employee of the Erickson Elevator, Boone. The employee told the Sheriff he was alone in the elevator office doing bookwork when the bandit walked in and demanded "all the money you got."

A FONDA TRUCKER, Floyd Clymer, Jr., was killed Monday when he was pinned between the cab and trailer of his truck when it crashed down a 40-foot embankment. The accident occurred on a country road a half mile south of the Fort Dodge Limestone Co. mine.

National —

THE BRUTAL KNIFE slaying of Carol Drennon, 14, Springfield, Mo., was admitted Monday by her 13-year-old cousin who "just had a sudden urge to kill." The murder weapon, a steak knife with a four-inch blade, was found under the youth's home, where, he told police he had thrown the weapon.

TRIPLE SLAYER Alfred Wilson, 37, object of a 12-day manhunt after the slaying of three women, died Monday night near Warren, O., a few hours after he was shot out of a tree by a state highway patrolman. The truck driver lived about 3½ hours after two bullets from the officer's pistol had pierced his brain.

DEFENSE SECRETARY Wilson Monday ruled out any new speedup in B52 bomber production, but said an extra 800 million dollars voted by Congress for warplanes will be used "when needed." "I don't intend to recommend the additional funds be impounded," Wilson told the Senate Airpower Investigating subcommittee.

A FORMER FBI undercover agent in the Communist party testified Monday there was talk of "eliminating" Florida Circuit Judge George E. Holt in 1948. "It was that year we received instructions to lay plans for armed invasion of the United States by Soviet forces."

OHIO STATE POLICE Monday night investigated reports an aircraft which seemed to be in trouble had crashed about four miles east of Lisbon. But several hours later they gave up the search. "If the plane was in any serious trouble, it must have made the Pittsburgh Airport. We verified it still was going east at an altitude of 500 to 1,000 feet as it left Ohio."

Hoegh Asks Iowa Be Disaster Area

DES MOINES (AP)—Gov. Leo Hoegh Monday asked U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Benson to declare 33 Iowa counties a major disaster area and to permit grazing of livestock on lands in the soil bank acreage in those counties.

The governor sent Benson a telegram asking the drought disaster designation following a meeting Monday of his Drought Advisory Committee.

$35 Billion Defense Bill Signed by Ike

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP)—Described as feeling stronger day by day, President Eisenhower signed the huge $34,656,727,000 defense appropriation bill Monday and okayed but complained about a public works measure.

The President put in his heaviest working session since his intestinal operation June 9 — an hour with aides in which he signed 21 bills, vetoed 2, nominated 48 postmasters and approved a proclamation.

The White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty told newsmen:

"The President this morning got up at about 7:30, and the doctor told me that he is coming along fine and that he told them this morning that he realizes he is feeling stronger and stronger each day."

Does he feel up to running for a second term? There still is no clear cut answer on that, and no indication when there will be one, Hagerty replied.

The big defense bill carried nearly a billion dollars more than Eisenhower wanted for the Air Force. Congress had insisted on upping the ante, regardless of holddown pleas from the administration.

Hagerty said no, Eisenhower didn't have any comment when he signed the measure.

But Eisenhower sounded off in a formal statement about legislation appropriating $863,127,000 for the Tennessee Valley Authority, various Interior Department agencies and Army civil functions.

He said he is for "the wise conservation, development and use of the nation's water resources," but Congress had added 52 unbudgeted projects for the Army Engineer Corps committing the government to future appropriations of 1½ billion dollars.

This, he said, threw out of kilter a priorities system he said was intended to "achieve a proper balance between water resources development and other federal programs."

Still, he signed the bill in spite of his concern over what he termed its "serious effect" on "the future financial commitments of the federal government."

Suggest Improved Junior High

Rehabilitation of the present Junior High School and Gymnasium buildings at an estimated cost of $213,750 was recommended to the Iowa City School Board Monday night.

Harold J. Stewart, representative of Louis C. Kingscott and Associates, architectural firm from Davenport, told the Board the recommendations of the firm were made after consultation with Junior High teachers and Buford Garner, superintendent of schools.

The estimated costs were $146,900 for the present Junior High building and $66,850 for the Gymnasium building. Cost estimates did not include fees or equipment.

Recommended improvements for both buildings included relighting and rewiring; installation of temperature controls including new air lines, thermostats, and compressors; installation of acoustical ceilings, new asphalt floor coverings; and repainting.

The Junior High building would have new entrances, chalkboard, a smoke screen at stairway entrances and rest room facilities. The present combination study hall and auditorium would be divided into classrooms and office space. The kitchen and cafeteria would be improved and enlarged.

Improvements in the Gymnasium building would have new boys' and girls' locker rooms, a home economics department with five kitchen units and a new manual training shop.

The Board took no action on the recommendations until a tour of the buildings has been completed.

Earlier the Board accepted a $1,310.95 quotation from Francis W. Collins for the painting of the Iver A. Opstad Auditorium at the Iowa City High School and a $3,179 quotation from the Hawkeye Lumber Company for material and installation of a fence around the High School football field.

Garner asked the Board to consider the need for an extra all-purpose room at the High School. He said that at the present time

The Weather

Warm with Showers

Rainy weather is expected in the Iowa City area today with temperatures staying in the mid-70s and 80s.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms are predicted for both today and tonight. Today's high will range from 75 to 85 degrees with lows in the 60s.

Monday's temperature in Iowa City stayed down in the 70s. Above average temperatures are predicted for the remainder of July.

Double Explosion Ruins Secret Atomic Lab

NEW YORK (AP)—A double explosion shattered a secret atomic laboratory Monday. Three hundred employees and rescue workers faced examinations in a routine check against radioactive contamination.

The blast of uranium metal scrap injured nine employees — one of them a woman.

Experts said the explosion posed no radioactive threat outside the plant itself.

Recovery Operations Delayed in Air Crash

GRAND CANYON, Ariz. (AP)—Turbulent winds swished through the Grand Canyon Monday and interrupted recovery operations at the desolate, grisly scene where 128 persons died in commercial aviation's greatest disaster.

Before the operation was halted, the remains of several of the victims were brought out in five rubber sacks from the eastern end of the canyon, where a TWA Super Constellation and a United Air Lines DC7 hurtled into jagged buttes Saturday, presumably after colliding in flight.

There were indications that the recovery operation would be restricted again today. The Weather Bureau said strong winds will develop in northern Arizona by late morning, and added that flying conditions in the canyon probably will be "extremely turbulent."

Twelve men were left at the crash scene when the operation was halted.

The temporarily stranded party included four Paramedics and their warrant officer, two Civil Aeronautics Board representatives, two TWA officials and one United Air Lines representative, and the Coconino County coroner and deputy county attorney.

It was still uncertain Monday night how many bodies could be recovered at any time. The first recovery crews to make the perilous flight to the site of the scattered wreckage described it as "a mess" and said "There isn't much left."

Second Lt. Philip S. Prince, USAF, who flew within 25 feet of the disintegrated DC7 said, "I don't think there were any bodies where we were. If there were, we couldn't see them."

"The job of removing bodies, even from the more accessible peak into which the TWA plane crashed, is complicated by the rugged terrain."

A National Park Service official said it would be impossible for mountain climbers to reach the United wreckage.

A big grease spot and bits of the DC7 are located on Chuar Butte about 2,500 feet above the Colorado River near its confluence with the Little Colorado.

National Park Service officials flew over the DC7 wreckage again Monday and reported that apparently not all of it is on the peak. Some may have fallen into the river.

The TWA wreckage is spread over another peak about 1,000 feet above the river.

Investigators for the Civil Aeronautics Board, both airlines and the Airline Pilots Assn. sought evidence which might show the cause of the tragedy.

Virtually all observers at the crash scene agreed the planes must have collided at about 21,000 feet while both were flying from Los Angeles to the East.

Thousands of Rail Workers Out of Work

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Railroads and other carriers, feeling the pinch of the nationwide steel strike, posted layoff notices for thousands of workers Monday as the Federal government took action aimed at moving contract negotiations off dead center.

The furloughs were the first to be announced as a result of the two-day strike of 650,000 United Steelworkers members in basic steel plants across the country.

Even as repercussions of the strike began spreading through the nation's economy, Joseph F. Finnegan, director of the Federal Mediation Service, arranged separate meetings here Thursday with steel industry and union leaders in an effort to revive bargaining.

The meetings will be "exploratory in nature and for the purpose of discussing the real difference between the union and the industry representatives," Finnegan said.

The government action indicated plainly there is no hope for the negotiators to resume contract talks before the July Fourth holiday, Wednesday. Negotiations were broken off in New York Saturday night.

The union's basic steel members walked out at midnight Saturday, putting off 90 per cent of the nation's steel production.

Finnegan scheduled the meeting after holding telephone conversations with USW President David J. McDonald and John A. Stephens, vice president of U.S. Steel Corp., and chief industry negotiator.

Accompanying Finnegan will be Asst. Director Clyde Mills and special assistant, Robert H. Moore. They will meet McDonald in the morning and Stephens in the afternoon.

Neither McDonald nor Stephens were available to newsmen Monday.

The Baltimore and Ohio and Pennsylvania railroads were the first to post furlough notices.

The B. & O. scheduled layoffs for 5,000 workers for the duration of the strike. The Pennsylvania said its initial cutback will affect about 18,000.

The New York Central Railroad said it expects a "large number of layoffs" due to the strike. Other railroads were expected to take similar action.

Along the great inland water system, many tow boats and finished-steel hauling barges were tied up at their docks. There was no estimate of how many marine employees were affected.

Across the nation small groups of union pickets idled around steel mill gates. No disturbances were reported.

Correction

Due to space limitations, The Daily Iowan was forced to condense the Republican county convention resolution on education. In the event that this may have been misleading, the entire resolution appears below.

"The destiny of our state and country will soon be in the hands of our children of today. When equipped with an adequate education, our children are Iowa's greatest asset. In order to assure every child an opportunity for an adequate education in these critical times of teacher and school building scarcities and increased pupil enrollments, we favor:

"1. Increased state support for education. Our ultimate objective should be to provide 25 per cent state aid with the specific understanding that schools must remain under local control.

"2. A school district reorganization program controlled at home.

"3. Appropriations for the three state institutions of higher education sufficient to maintain leadership in education and research fields.

"We oppose the taxing of present day students by increased tuition charges for the building of permanent buildings at our institutions of higher education of the state of Iowa."

Plight of the Intellectual

A recent issue of Time magazine discussed the "reconciliation" of America and her intellectuals. While the magazine admits no American intellectual could be considered typical of them all, it feels Columbia University historian Jacques Barzun best represents this reconciliation and the "growing host of men of ideas who not only have the respect of the nation, but return the compliment."

Time culls several compliments from Barzun's numerous eulogies of America to prove its point. Those who grumble at America are merely singing a worn-out tune, says Barzun. "They forget that the true creator's role, even in its bitterest attack, is to make us understand or endure life better. Our intellectuals do neither when they entice us to more self-contempt."

Barzun admits that there is still a traditional distrust of ideas in the U.S., but the men who have them have "won recognition beyond any previous group of their peers."

He feels the intellectual today has little cause to complain, for he has numerous backers. These backers are "the museums of modern art, the foundation patronage, the universities eager to be baffled, and the leagues of women armed with print to defend this or that 'ism'."

Though the Time article loses its way in a maze of unrelated quotations from every conceivable intellectual, the magazine and Barzun both seem to say the proper place of the intellectual is in the center of the American Dream, extolling the virtues of his "grand land." A Life editorial sums up this attitude in some advice to writers: "the better the writer, the less likely he is to complain of his environment."

Life also reveals the assumption underlying this attitude, when it comments "our current fiction wasn't speaking for the country; that it was gloomier, more sordid, and less affirmative than befits the most successful society in human history [sic]."

If you agree "success" for a country consists in material well-being, technological progress, and a general feeling of security, America has been successful and should be praised. We feel there is a bit more to success than this, just as there is a bit more to being an intellectual than the "getting the facts" Prof. Barzun so admires.

John Aldridge, in his book "In Search of Heresy," notes the goal of Americans is "a condition of life in which they will not be required to do anything ever again." The schools in which most intellectuals are trained are continually giving evidence of this blindness. In a time of political stress and world unrest, the number of political organizations on campuses and their membership have continued to dwindle. Students are especially hesitant about voicing a radical opinion; they are less critical than their instructors. They are even reluctant to express what few opinions they do have.

The pressures of our society are in large part responsible for this conformity. The demand for intelligence is measured in terms of shortages developed by the cold war; the student is persuaded to become an engineer, scientist, or business major by high salaries, and patriotic laments. But this is an extenuating circumstance, not an excuse. As Philosopher Sidney Hook says, "the intellectual betrays his vocation when he becomes a poet laureate of the status quo."

Babies and Foreign Relations

From the Nation

The mass of small new facts published every day tends to bury the few great, key facts on which events really wheel. One such, which France successfully forgot for twenty years, was the exhaustion of the Grande Armee's reserves in 1917 and the fact that no matter who was to win the first World War, France had lost it. It finally lost it officially in 1946. A similar fact about Russia has now come half-way to the surface: the price for Stalin's management in 1939-45 is given in the coming classes of sixteen-year-old Russian boys. They will shortly drop from three and a half million a year to under a million in 1960 — an item which may go a long way towards explaining Russia's reduction of military personnel.

In this situation, Russia must look for near and effective friends, and easily found overnight. Russia has to remember that a strong China, for example, could become very bad news indeed. What Moscow wants in the Western Pacific is a strong navy, not a strong land force; the United States wants just the opposite, and has got it — thanks to Rhee and Chiang. Considering the neat complementary situation, it is perhaps a good time to reflect that history has indeed greater ironies than a Russia suing for the friendship of the United States.

America To Serve the World

"The dealings of the United States with such regimes present a most delicate problem"

Excerpts from an address delivered by Luis Marin, governor of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

The Western World, with the American Union in the leadership, is facing the military challenge of communism. It is facing it by preparedness and vigilance. But we know that the conflict with Communist totalitarianism is not just an attempt to guarantee survival by military means, or even by disarmament. In a way, the armament race, gigantic and ominous as it is, gives one a feeling of anachronism, that it is a symbol of a world ailing because of its own physical strength.

Disarmament, if it comes, will not by itself stop the challenge to freedom. It would, however, make it a creative challenge. The struggle would then increasingly shape itself, I believe, as the ideological clash between the attempt to defeat economic poverty by political slavery and the purpose to enhance political and human freedom by economic productivity and social justice.

AS IT STANDS today, both struggles are going on, the military and the ideological. Within recent months we have witnessed an intensification of the ideological fight. We have observed the moves of the Soviet Union into the field of technical assistance and economic aid to the underdeveloped areas, as well as of Russian support for old grievances against Western powers. In a world still bedeviled by undernourishment, evil housing conditions, scant protection against disease, little economic security, the Soviet thrust is more challenging to the Western World, that believes in fighting these evils through freedom, than a stockpile of hydrogen bombs.

The Soviet Prime Minister has announced Russia's intention of offering technical assistance to Latin America and to find better trade channels for its commerce. One of the top men of the Soviet is about to initiate a tour through Latin America offering manna. No doubt, a vigorous offensive shall be followed by the Communists and their friends in Latin America to picture the Soviet pattern of life as most enticing to the underdeveloped economies of the Western Hemisphere and to unfold before their eyes a vision of a swift industrial revolution that may bring, in a generation, the abolition of poverty. They will speak of freedom as well as of economic salvation.

THEY WILL PROBABLY not be believed as to freedom but they need not be, because many of the peoples are living under governments that are not democratic. The peoples are unfree and miserably poor. Even if only half of the Russian picture is accepted, the vision would be one of familiar surcease of extreme poverty even if under the familiar absence of democratic freedom. All such governments in Latin America claim to be anti-Communist, and there is no reason to believe that they are not. There is, however, no doubt that in practice, in relation to the lives of their own people, they are also anti-democratic.

The dealings of the United States with such regimes present a most delicate problem. There is no question that the United States must be on friendly official terms with all governments of the hemisphere. But there should be no question either that the United States must assure the peoples of the hemisphere their political freedom and human rights. And it is called upon to do this difficult feat while keeping its skirts clear of any suspicion of intervention in the internal affairs of other countries. It is a dilemma. But I believe there are ways for the United States to make a sufficiently clear distinction between its friends who are democrats and anti-Communist and its friends who are only anti-Communist.

IN THIS RESPECT, we should convince ourselves, and so become strongly convincing, that the answer to the Communist challenge lies in the ability of the Western Powers, and especially the United States, to show to the less fortunate countries of the world that a greater transformation can be achieved, at an even faster rate and on sounder economic foundations, without shattering, or ignoring, as the Russians and the Red Chinese have done, the fabric of political and individual liberties — and that the transformation need not be patterned after the capitalist mores that have been so successful in the United States.

It is urgent that this answer be ready and available in dealing with Latin America.

TOO GREAT IS the disparity between the wealth and industrial might of the United States and the economic insufficiency of Latin America. Even with a great fund of good will it imperils long-range understanding. To bridge that gap in the least possible time, with the most efficient techniques available, with the most effective partnership of governments and peoples is, in my opinion, the task of the inter-American system in this generation.

I think we all would have in mind not only a more productive but a finer social order, where there is more nourishment and more adequate shelter for the body, more of the modest good things of life, more opportunities for a general education stressing the values of our common heritage and the contributions of the individual cultures, as well as the search for scientific knowledge and its technological application — an order evolving into a democratic union of free peoples, where the human spirit, more clearly perhaps than today, is served by the economic process.

IT IS IN this connection that the Puerto Rican experience can be clarifying. It demonstrates a joint political creativeness of the United States and a people of Latin American origin. We have been healthily indoctrinated, with no fixed taboos, no immutable sacred cows, in the use of instruments to achieve a better standard of living, caring only that all the instruments used conformed to the democratic process and could be tested periodically by approval of the public will at the polls.

The Commonwealth government pioneered in building and operating factories when there was need to do so, because private capital was hesitant to do it. It socialistically established and managed industries, and then capitalistically sold them to private enterprise and used this money in further stimulation of economic development by some more private enterprise.

IT HAS PIONEERED in attracting United States and foreign capital, in stimulating private initiative and investment, to promote prompt and effective industrialization. It has used United States techniques and ideas, adapting and rejecting them with a frank experimental temper. It has engaged in land reform without destroying the basic unit of production and without unfair expropriation. It has launched an educational program for young and adults which consumes nearly one-third of our budget.

AS WE SCAN the social, economic, and political horizon, as we shape the course of the future generation in terms of a fuller and richer society, conducted with freedom and order, with more education than conspicuous consumption, with more imagination than acquisitiveness, we feel the deep spiritual urge to link our experience and hope to the wider search for hemispheric unity.

Let us solemnly declare that our essential goal is to wipe out extreme poverty in this hemisphere within the lifetime of children already born. Let us encourage Government and private initiative to share in a good partnership with a view to better distributive justice for all; and let's not be doctrinaire about it. Let us not be doctrinaire either as to socialism or capitalism, but only as to freedom and human dignity. Let us give friendly support to all groups thinking in terms of a greater, truly hemispheric America, not merely Latin, not merely Anglo-Saxon, and not merely temporary while a Russian danger lasts. An America to serve the world.

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER, still silent on his political future, went to his farm home in Gettysburg, Pa. Saturday after his release from Walter Reed Army Hospital. With the President and Mrs. Eisenhower were weekend guests Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Leonard D. Heaton, who celebrated their 30th wedding anniversary Saturday. The President and Mrs. Eisenhower observed their 40th anniversary Sunday. Heaton was the doctor who operated on the President June 9 for ileitis.

THE GOVERNMENT SATURDAY ended the 1956 fiscal year with a prospect of a surplus running around $2 billion—the first time in four years it has come out in the black. Further, Administration leaders led it to be known they confidently expect to balance the budget again in fiscal 1957, which started Sunday.

THE NATIONAL SAFETY COUNCIL estimated Saturday that 130 persons may be killed in traffic accidents during the one-day Fourth of July holiday observance Wednesday.

THE CHIEFS OF STAFF of the U.S. and Chinese Communist air forces, Gen. Nathan E. Twining and Gen. Liu Yia-lo, clinked glasses in Moscow Saturday night and drank a toast to "world peace and friendship." It was the last day of Twining's 8-day inspection of Soviet planes and installations.

These Days

George E. Sokolsky

ROBERT J. DONOVAN who has written a pro-Eisenhower book entitled "Eisenhower—The Inside Story," recounts the following with regard to the Nasser-Soviet transaction. Nasser first tried to deal with the United States, desiring to buy $30 million of weapons, paying in cotton. The United States, having a cotton surplus, did not want Egyptian cotton. Did the United States want cash or did it propose a credit? Now I quote Donovan:

Nasser then suggested buying the arms on credit. Washington was slow in reaching final policy decisions in the matter, and Egypt dropped it.

"In the following month, June (1955), the Administration got word that Nasser was having discussions with the Soviet bloc about buying arms. Next—before the 'summit conference' in July—American Ambassador Byroade received word from high sources in the Egyptian government that the talks with Russia had been discontinued. So Eisenhower did not bring it up at the Geneva Conference. But in September, the Soviet-Egyptian arms deal was sealed."

THE SIGNIFICANCE of Donovan's report is that the White House did not have what is called "intelligence" on this subject. Our Ambassador in Egypt, Henry Byroade, apparently permitted himself to be misinformed by the Egyptians as he had been misinformed by Chinese when he was in that country with General George Marshall. The information from Byroade which reached the White House, if Donovan's account, bearing all the earmarks of an approved book, is correct, was misleading. One reason that a country keeps an Ambassador in another country is to know what is going on. Ambassador Byroade did not know in July that conferences between Russia and Egypt were going on and, of course, in September all the world knew what had happened. Russia had scored a tremendous victory.

A NATION without information is blind. Surely President Eisenhower at Geneva should have known of the Nasser-Soviet deal; otherwise, the Russians had an advantage over him of enormous value to them. Khrushchev must have been astonished that Eisenhower did not know what Nasser was up to. In March, 1956, Eisenhower said: "We do not believe that it is possible to assure peace in that area (the Middle East) merely by rushing some arms to a nation (Israel) that can absorb only that amount which 1.7 million people can absorb; whereas, on the other side, there are some 40 million people."

The absurdity of that statement is now obvious to everyone. If we sell Israel arms are we to make sure that the Arabs have 40 times as much? The alliance of Egypt, Saudi Arabia and Syria, with enormous influences upon Jordan and Yemen and other Arab states, including Morocco and Algeria, gives Soviet Russia a foothold in the Mediterranean which is as important as a tremendous military victory. Already the very important American air base in Morocco is in peril and our enormous investments in Saudi Arabia need to be reviewed.

ISRAEL IS hardly a factor in this situation. Israel may be the Arabs' excuse for being quarrelsome, but what is clear is that the Arabs are concluding that they can, at this stage, get more out of Russia than they can out of the United States and they are acting accordingly. Their principal interest is to use both Russia and the United States to their advantage.

To Nasser, this situation opens the prospect of building a career that makes him at least of equal importance in international relations to Nehru and Tito, if not of greater importance in due course. Therefore, it is absurd to make a comparison of 1.7 million people to 40 million people. If that is the basis of our thinking, why not knock under to Red China which has a population of 500 million people?

The answer is that whoever briefed the President on the Middle Eastern situation gave him a wrong steer. Whoever put those statistics before the President was using a trick argument to support a private opinion, not the national interest. This has happened so often that it is astonishing that Congress does not investigate.

What is the national interest? The answer must depend upon whether one believes that the expenditure of $50 billion to purchase friendship could ever have succeeded. As of June, 1956, this policy shows many signs of having proved to have been a failure. Nevertheless, Congress is voting more money. Certainly this phase of American policy requires re-thinking and review.

Reds Take NL Lead; Beat Milwaukee, 2-1

Klippstein Over Spahn In Tight Duel

CINCINNATI (AP)—The Cincinnati Reds rode back into first place in the National League for the third time this season Monday night on the strength of a tight 8-hit pitching performance by Johnny Klippstein which produced a 2-1 victory over the Milwaukee Braves. A standing room only crowd of 28,635 saw the Reds out Milwaukee from the top spot in the league.

IT LOOKS LIKE a real argument, but actually umpire Bill Jackowski, left, was hit by a batted ball and is getting assistance from all the other people in the above picture. The ball was hit by Pete Whisenant, right, in Monday's 6-3 Cub victory over the St. Louis Cardinals. Umpire Art Gore at right, Ed Miksis of the Cubs at left rear and Hal Smith of the Cardinals all come to the injured umpire's aid.

It was a close pitching duel all the way between Klippstein and southpaw Warren Spahn, an old Redleg nemesis. Spahn went into Monday night's game with a 36-12 record against Cincinnati. But his wavering control, particularly in the early innings, helped create his downfall. Gus Bell, Redleg centerfielder was the hitting hero of the Cincinnati victory. His first single contributed to Cincinnati's first run and his second one-base blow drove in the deciding tally.

Giants 5, Bums 2

PHOENIX (AP)—Willie Mays and Al Sarni banged back-to-back home runs in the third inning to trigger a 5-2 victory by the New York Giants over the third-place Brooklyn Dodgers Monday night.

Cubs 6, Cards 3

CHICAGO (AP)—The Chicago Cubs dug out of the National League cellar by defeating St. Louis 6-3 Monday as Warren Hacker ducked in and out of trouble despite a yield of 11 hits.

Bo Sox 3, Nats 2

WASHINGTON (AP)—Ike DeLoach held the Senators to one tainted hit in four innings of relief Monday night as Boston defeated Washington, 3-2. Helping DeLoach post his fifth win was Ted Williams, who collected two doubles and two singles in five chances.

Player Paces Open

Boyer Is Now 'New Faces' Cast in All-Star Game Next Week

NEW YORK (AP)—Regardless of the outcome of the 1956 major league All-Star game at Washington, the 23rd annual midsummer contest next Tuesday, July 10, will be remembered for at least four things:

1. Not a single starter from 1955's victorious National League squad will be in the 1956 opening lineup.
2. Not one member of the world champion Brooklyn Dodgers will be among the starters.
3. The 1955 batting champion, Richie Ashburn, home run king Willie Mays, runs batted in leader Duke Snider, pitching placemaker Don Newcombe and most valuable player Roy Campanella all will be absent from the starting

BOYER

Boyer, 25, is hitting .338 and trails pace-setting Ed Bailey of Cincinnati by only five points. Boyer has slugged 19 homers, one less than Chicago's Ernie Banks and already has exceeded last season's total of 18. His RBI production is 59. Figures include games through Sunday.

Rookie Frank Robinson of Cincinnati gained 11 points to move from eighth to third at .324. Mickey Mantle of the New York Yankees continues to thrive on American League pitching as he dominates the batting, home runs and RBI departments. Mantle is hitting .379, has walloped 29 homers and has driven home 71 runs.

He opened up a 17-point bulge over runnerup Charley Maxwell of Detroit. The Tigers' Harvey Kuenn remains third at .349.

Brooks Lawrence of the Redlegs has the best pitching record in the National League, having won 10 games without a setback. Pittsburgh's Bob Friend is the strikeout leader with 89. In the American League, Billy Pierce of the White Sox boasts the top win-loss percentage, 12-2, .857, and Cleveland's Herb Score has fanned the most batsmen, 106.

Bidding Opened on New Girls' Dormitory

Bids for the construction of Bunge Hall, women's dormitory at SUI, will be accepted up to 1:30 p.m. Aug. 23, in the Old Dental Building office of George L. Horner, SUI superintendent of planning and construction.

The sealed proposals will be publicly opened and read the same day at 2 p.m. in Horner's office. The contract will involve only the construction of the dormitory on the block just south of Currier Hall.

Construction of the dormitory, named for the late Adelaide La Sheck Bunge, dean of women from 1920-1946, is expected to start this fall. Officials expect it to be completed by fall of 1958.

The estimated cost of constructing, equipping and furnishing the dormitory will be about $4 million, according to Ted Rehder, SUI director of dormitories. No tax funds are used for dormitories. Construction is financed by borrowing which is repaid from board and room rates paid by occupants.

Bunge Hall, which will accommodate 1,200 students, will be a six-story building with one of the staircases located underground. The main floor of the dormitory will cover the entire block south of Currier.

Living areas will be located in four units above the main floor. Each housing unit will be four stories high, Rehder says, and will house 300 students.

A total of 75 girls will live on each of the four floor units in each "house," Rehder says, with each floor unit in the house having its own kitchenette, lounge, space for ironing, toilets, shower and tub space. In addition, Rehder points out that the shower and tub units on each floor will be equipped with special lavatories for hair washing and each will have electric hair drying equipment.

Living quarters for counselors will also be included in each floor. Two-occupant rooms will measure 19 feet, two inches by nine feet, six inches, and three-occupant rooms will measure 19 feet, two inches by 12 feet, 10 inches.

The basement will contain a recreation room and a fountain and grill room for the entire dormitory, Rehder says. In addition, there will be typing rooms, meeting rooms, rooms for student organizations, and ironing, sewing and automatic laundry rooms. The remainder of the basement will contain storage rooms, refrigeration rooms and employee's locker rooms.

The main floor will house an information desk, a large lounge, mail room, parcel post room, and a library, as well as office space for building officials.

The dormitory kitchen will be on the main floor, with two major dining rooms, seating a total of about 700, adjoining. The dining rooms will be partitioned so each of the four "houses" will have its own dining area.

Living quarters for permanent dormitory personnel will also be located on the first floor, as well as a private dining room for student governing groups.

Copies of the plans, specifications and other contract documents may be obtained at Horner's office in SUI's Old Dental Building.

Standing is William Dates; inside the jeep is Vincent Lawla, both members of the 34th Reconnaissance Co. At this intersection last July 4th, 8 people lost their lives in an accident. Since then, one three-car collision resulted in extensive property damage, but no personal injuries. The guardsmen are teaming up with the Iowa Highway patrol. They work in 8-hour shifts patrolling highways between Iowa City, Cedar Rapids and Homestead.

NAMED TO PARK SERVICE
OMAHA (AP) — M. H. (Mel) Harvey, assistant to the National Park Service director in charge of the National Park Trust Fund, took over Monday as assistant director of the Region 2 office of the park service. Harvey succeeds John C. McLaughlin who is becoming superintendent of Grand Canyon National Park.

Dulles reported the Soviets, under their "new look," have put up about $1 billion worth of foreign aid of their own in the last 18 months in the form of easy-term loans. He said $289 millions in Communist bloc aid went to Yugoslavia.

Dulles said, too, the Russian plan to cut back its number of men in uniform by 1.2 million would not reduce Russia's military potential but continued:

"These men that may be moved to factories and farms are all persons who are highly trained," he said. "They could very quickly be brought back again. And the Soviet Union has not indicated any intention to do away with armaments that these men would use if they were called back."

Questioned as to whether the outlook is now more favorable than it was last year, Dulles replied: "I think, as far as the Soviet Union is concerned, that there is less likelihood of a general war originated by the Soviet Union than was perhaps the case a year ago."

He drew a picture of encouragement from what he called "forces of liberalism" at work in Russia since Stalin's death.

Highlanders Ready for Europe Trip

Seventy-three SUI coeds, members of the Scottish Highlanders, will end brief summer visits at home Wednesday to return to campus for a week of rehearsals before departing for an eight-week tour of Europe.

For these girls the Fourth of July will be no holiday. That afternoon they begin a practice schedule totaling seven hours daily — two hours of marching, two hours in choral rehearsal, and the remaining time devoted to practicing novelty numbers and dancing.

The Highlanders will leave Iowa City at 9:15 a.m. July 11, and arrive in Washington, D. C., the following morning. The group will spend two days sightseeing in the nation's capital, during which time they will be feted at a picnic by Iowa alumni who live in the Washington area and will perform in the outdoor Sylvan Theatre, next to the Washington monument.

Arriving in New York July 14, the group will begin rehearsals for their appearance July 15 on the Ed Sullivan Television Show.

Following their TV performance, the group will remain in New York for four days, sailing on the Queen Mary July 19.

During their eight-week tour of Europe the Highlanders will visit France, Holland, Germany, England and Scotland, with some of the group scheduled to take "side-trips" to Ireland, Denmark, Italy and Switzerland.

In England, the group will perform in London and Plymouth. Climaxing the trip will be a visit to Scotland Aug. 17-Sept. 5, where the Iowa girls will perform in Aberdeen, Dundee, Elgin, Edinburgh, Glasgow, and Inverness.

The Highlanders will sail Sept. 6 from Southampton, England on the Queen Elizabeth, arriving in New York Sept. 11.

Girl, 17, Studies Earthworms—

Experiments in Mom's Kitchen

By VIC GEORGE
A 17-year-old high school girl who started experimenting with earthworms in her mother's kitchen is now applying her results in a University Hospitals laboratory.

Suzan Hopkins, Waterloo, came to SUI Monday to test an antibiotic she extracted and purified from earthworms as a science project for her high school chemistry class.

At the invitation of Dr. Ian Smith, head of Infectious Disease Laboratory, who was doing work with the same type of bacteria as Suzan isolated, Suzan will spend two months at SUI.

In her high school project which won first place in the girls' biological sciences division at the National Science Fair May 11 at Oklahoma City, Suzan used earthworms dug by her sister, Mary Ellen, 12. "I don't like worms," explained Suzan.

Suzan dissected the earthworms and took out the bacteria growing in the intestines. Using her mother's refrigerator for storing her culture and a pressure cooker for sterilization of materials, Suzan was able to grow the bacteria in a liquid media, a combination of several chemicals.

Then she separated the antibiotic from the liquid and purified it for testing. "She was well on her way," Dr.

Suzan Hopkins 'Hates Worms'

Smith said. "Now, we will test it on mice."

Suzan said the antibiotic might be effective against common plant diseases, food poisoning, boils and abscesses. Dr. Smith said it might be useful for treating people, but chances are that the antibiotic is one already known. If it is a new one, the fact that it may work against boils is important, Dr. Smith said.

Suzan and Dr. Smith will inject into mice the organisms which cause boils. One group of mice will be fed normal food while another group receives the antibiotic. Theoretically, for a perfect experiment, all the mice fed normally would die and the ones fed the antibiotic would all live, Dr. Smith explained.

Dr. Smith's work in the field of finding a defense against the bacteria in humans that cause boils is being financed in part from a $12,000 grant of the U.S. Public Health Service.

Such research is the vocational goal of Suzan. A senior at East Waterloo High School next year, she plans to become an M.D. and do research in biochemistry.

Iowans Want Animal Lab

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iowa's congressmen have appealed to Agriculture Secretary Ezra Taft Benson to locate a federal animal disease research laboratory at Ames.

A site committee, considering locations for the laboratory, which has been authorized by Congress, visited Ames Sunday.

Rep. Henry O. Talle made public the delegation's letter to Benson, which said in part: "It is our unanimous, well considered, and firm judgment that a federal animal disease research laboratory should be located near Ames — center of the nation's livestock industry."

The 10-member committee which will pick the site of the new $19,000,000 research laboratory made a six-hour inspection of Madison area and University of Wisconsin locations Monday.

The site committee held hearings in St. Louis last week at which 90 schools and universities presented their qualifications.

During the weekend the committee weeded out all except the most promising possibilities and agreed to inspect them this week. Later this month a final recommendation will be made to the secretary of agriculture.
