SUI Coed To Compete For Miss Iowa Title

Ellen Moody, A4, Cedar Rapids, will be the Iowa City Junior Chamber of Commerce's candidate in the 1956 Miss Iowa contest at Clear Lake July 27-29.

Since 1954 Miss Moody has been a baton twirler with the SUI marching band. While a high school student in Mississippi she was awarded first place in drum majoring and twirling for four consecutive years in the state music contest. She was also named Miss Majorette-Mississippi in 1952.

For the talent contest in the Miss Iowa competition she will give a twirling exhibition.

The contest will be held at Clear Lake during the annual Governor's Days celebration. The winner of the Clear Lake contest will represent Iowa in the Miss America contest to be held at Atlantic City in September.

The News In Brief

SEN. RICHARD NEUBERGER (D-Ore.) said Wednesday Surgeon Gen. Leonard A. Scheele informed him medical authorities differ on the safety of a blood anticoagulant used in treating President Eisenhower. Neuberger asked Scheele for scientific opinion on the safety of the medicine. Scheele cited a medical book which said patients treated with the medicine "may have minor, major or fatal hemorrhage."

SENATE-HOUSE conferees Wednesday agreed on legislation to increase payments to dependents of servicemen who die on active duty. The bill was requested by President Eisenhower. He said it was needed to make the military more attractive as a career.

Ike Calls Strategy Session To Map '56 Campaign Plans

Third Injunction May Halt Stadium Pickets

A third injunction issued by Judge Harold D. Evans—this time against Iowa City local unions No. 1260 and No. 308, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners—is expected to stop picketing at the SUI Stadium construction project, John L. Johnston, business agent of the locals, said Wednesday.

Johnston said the previous injunctions included all building trades and crafts in Cedar Rapids. The first named Local 89 of Cedar Rapids and the other, the Cedar Rapids Building and Construction Trades Council. The latter also named Iowa City Local 43.

Wednesday's injunction was issued after two pickets appeared at the stadium in the morning. The Frantz Construction Co. filed a petition asking that the injunction be granted immediately. The injunction papers were served early Wednesday afternoon.

Named as defendants in the injunction were Johnston, Ralph Thompson and Roy Linnell. The latter two were picketing the stadium.

The petition stated that the Frantz firm would be violating the Iowa "right to work" laws if it entered into bargaining with the groups named. It also stated that the carpenters and joiners unions do not represent the majority of workers on the stadium job in the employ of the Frantz firm.

Wilbert Frantz, president of the construction company, said Wednesday that construction on the project is still ahead of schedule, but will be delayed if the picketing continues. Union plumbers employed by another firm and bricklayers employed by the Frantz firm stayed off the job during the picketing, Frantz said.

Johnston said he has not heard of plans to protest the injunctions. Bonds of $1,000 have been posted on all three injunctions by the construction company.

To Build Thickest Highway in Iowa

PALO—A nine-mile stretch of Highway 74, scheduled for completion between Palo and Cedar Rapids by Aug. 18, will have the heaviest type of stabilized base construction which the Iowa Highway Commission has ever designed.

The $48,667 stretch of asphaltic concrete will be constructed as follows, from bottom to top:

Granular sub base, 6 inches; crushed stone, 12 inches; asphaltic concrete, 4½ inches.

Ultimately, the 26-foot-wide highway will extend through to Shellsburg, Vinton and LaPorte City.

When completed, No. 74 will provide a more-direct Waterloo-to-Cedar Rapids route and will relieve much traffic on Highway 218.

In Shakespeare's 'Merry Wives of Windsor'

SUI Theatre Performance Comic, Enjoyable

By IVARS LIEPINS

Probably one of William Shakespeare's weakest comedies, "The Merry Wives of Windsor" came off brilliantly and enjoyably at the University Theatre Wednesday night.

The play which New York Times critic Brooks Atkinson after a recent performance in Stratford, Ontario, Canada, called "a silly, witty, less, scrawlingly-written prank that makes no sense and speaks no poetry," might have been all that; in which case, the credit for the fine performance here goes to Director Harold C. Shiffler and the SUI acting crew.

Robert Paulus carried most of the weight of this rather long play on his shoulders in the role of Falstaff. He did it well and gave the audience a valid characterization of the old soldier of fortune who can't maintain himself without resorting to shady practices. His Falstaff was a good natured egotist, vain, mercenary and weak,

Steel Heads Meet with Union Today

WASHINGTON—The new face-to-face meeting of labor and management in the nationwide steel strike was set for 4 p.m. EST Thursday in Pittsburgh.

This was announced late Wednesday by Joseph F. Finnegan, the chief government mediator, after morning and afternoon meetings he held in his office with representatives of management.

"Both sides have expressed willingness to go further," Finnegan told reporters. He said that while no other joint meeting beyond today's had been agreed on, he hoped others would follow.

Finnegan said "both sides have appeared agreeable and cooperative."

But Finnegan described the situation in the 11-day-old strike as "still a serious one."

Management's last offer was a 52-month contract, which it said would raise pay 17½ cents an hour for the first year. The steel workers union said it actually would amount to 14 cents. It called the raise too small and the length of the proposed contract too great.

Highlanders Say Goodbye

SUI HIGHLANDERS, parents and friends wait for the train which took the Highlanders to Washington, D.C., Wednesday. The Highlanders, starting for a tour of Europe, will appear on the Ed Sullivan show Sunday night.

yet a sympathetic and amusing character.

Falstaff's comical antics were especially entertaining in the third act, which was the fastest moving and most enjoyable of them all.

His boisterous humor and conceit in the beginning of the play was well carried through to the last act when he was called upon to retain the same attitude even though realizing that he has been fooled by everybody. "I am an ass," Falstaff admits, but then reconciled with his fate, walks off to continue in his mischievous ways.

"The Merry Wives" is well known for its weak and dull passages, but Wednesday night there were none. For this, praise should go to Paulus, who kept Falstaff moving, to the actors who supported him, and especially to the expert job of cutting.

The two "merry wives" whose love and money Falstaff desires were played by Dorothea La Frida as Mistress Page and Pat Cliff as Mistress Ford. Their scheming was amusing capably, mischiev-

House Cuts Ike's Foreign Aid Bill

WASHINGTON—The House voted $3.6 billion for foreign aid Wednesday, less than 75 per cent of what President Eisenhower wanted to keep the mutual security program going for the next 12 months. The appropriations bill was passed on a roll call vote of 284-129 and sent to the Senate, where a new attempt will be made to increase the figure to around $4 billion.

Buses Return To Tallahassee

TALLAHASSEE, Fla.—Cities Transit Co. announced Wednesday it soon would resume bus operations in Tallahassee on a segregated basis, but over altered routes.

Charles L. Carter, manager of the transit firm, said the company was acting in response to requests from the city's Chamber of Commerce which had pledged its efforts to increase patronage in a ride-the-bus campaign.

Buses which serve the Florida capital ceased operating July 1 because of financial losses resulting from a boycott by Negro riders. Since then this city of some 40,000 has been without a public transport system, except taxicabs.

Under the plan Negroes would be permitted to sit where they wish on the buses serving Negro routes except for one 3-passenger seat reserved for white patrons.

The boycott was called almost two months ago in support of demands for integrated seating. The City Commission refused to approve full integration, saying it was prohibited from doing so by state segregation laws.

Iowa's delegation in the House was divided evenly Wednesday on the roll call which that body passed a $3,600,000 foreign aid bill.

Reps. Dolliver, Cunningham, LeCompte and Schwengel voted for passage. Reps. Gross, Hoey, Jensen and Talle voted against the bill.

Last week Congress passed separate authorization legislation fixing the program at about $4 billion for the bookkeeping year which began July 1. The President has indicated he will be satisfied if he finally gets the same amount in the appropriations bill, which must be passed before money can be spent.

On a voice vote, the House defeated a move to kill the whole bill.

Then, on the final roll call, 160 Democrats and 124 Republicans voted for passage. Seventy Republicans and 50 Democrats voted "no."

A proposal to cut out aid to Communist Yugoslavia, made by Rep. Alvin Bentley (R-Mich.), was rejected on a tellers' vote of 117-65.

While the House was finishing work on the appropriations measure, the Senate passed a bill providing for a $300,000 investigation of the whole foreign aid program. The inquiry probably won't start until next January.

Eisenhower said Tuesday that he will campaign "very vigorously" for his foreign aid program in the presidential campaign this fall.

Some Republican leaders have represented the President as being "irritated" at the way the Democratic-controlled Congress has handled foreign aid this year.

This brought a blast from Democrats Wednesday. "Before Eisenhower starts trying to convince millions with his leap year liberalism," said Sen. Hubert Humphrey (D-Minn.), "I suggest that he try convincing about 225 Republicans in Congress who don't go along with him."

President, GOP Head Meet Today

GETTYSBURG, Pa.—President Eisenhower stepped swiftly back into a role of political leadership Wednesday and called a hurry-up strategy session with Republican National Chairman Leonard W. Hall.

Hall will come here from Washington today to talk convention plans and campaign strategy with the man whose political intentions were clouded with some uncertainty as late as Tuesday.

Once President Eisenhower let the word go out for a second time that he wants a second term, the GOP chairman was ready to go to Gettysburg for his first chat with the President since his intestinal operation June 9.

The Republican National Convention in San Francisco now is less than six weeks away, and there still has to be some planning for that and the campaign.

Presidential press secretary James C. Hagerty, who announced Hall's impending visit at the Eisenhower farm home, declined to say whether the President may embark on a schedule of more active, energetic campaigning than has been expected.

President Eisenhower himself had pretty much ruled out whistle-stopping and Hall had indicated the President might confine himself largely to a dozen radio-television appeals to voters. But Senate Republican Leader William F. Knowland of California, who disclosed Tuesday that President Eisenhower is still saying "yes" on a second term, quoted the President as saying he planned to campaign vigorously this fall, at least on the foreign aid issue.

As to whether that indicated a stepped-up campaign pace for Eisenhower, all Hagerty would say was:

"Neither myself nor, I am sure, the Republican National Committee have any intention of saying, now, in July or August, what we are going to do in September and October. We have quite a few plans, but we will wait until we get into a campaign... We are not going to give any blueprints now."

But Hagerty also said that he never knew the President not to put all his energy "into anything he does."

If Nominated, Nixon Would Run with Ike

WASHINGTON—Vice President Richard M. Nixon, home from a world tour, said Wednesday his April 26 announcement that he would accept renomination "has not changed."

He told reporters: "In April, I indicated I would be happy to abide by any decision of the President and the national convention."

"Since the President has indicated his decision to stand for reelection has not changed, the announcement I made in April has not changed."

There has been general agreement that the 1956 Republican ticket will duplicate 1952's "Ike and Dick."

Nixon and his wife visited the Philippines, Formosa, Viet Nam, Thailand, Pakistan and Turkey.

His return coincided with an attack on him in the Senate by Sen. Estes Kefauver (D-Tenn.).

Kefauver, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, told the Senate that "it is an incredible fact" that the vice president, during his tour, got into a feud with Prime Minister Nehru of India.

The senator said the question has now been raised whether the policy of Nixon and Secretary of State Dulles "will not serve to drive India and the other nations of Asia who follow her lead into more open friendship with the Soviet system."

Needed: Discontent

It is no secret that campaign oratory has a lamentable tendency to distort reality. What is too often overlooked and forgotten is the reality so unfortunately mangled. "Everything is booming but the guns!" is a good selling point, but by catering to people's greed for security, comfort, and placidity, it obscures the meaning of freedom and a free country.

The powers concentrated in the presidency make the election of a President the best opportunity for the people to express their will. This should mean that every voter must diligently examine each presidential aspirant and his views by reading, discussing, listening, even by watching that bane of culture, television.

At least as important as achieving representative government is deciding what ends that government shall pursue. Surely the common good is comprised of more than material prosperity. Essential to it is the creation of an atmosphere in which each individual can fully realize his potential.

Yet freedom isn't designed just to achieve personal perfection it is the means by which we can and must communicate and cooperate with all men to make this a better world.

Hard Work Pays Off

Iowa received further recognition this week as a leader among the farming states when the U.S. Department of Agriculture announced the future location of a new animal research laboratory at Iowa State College in Ames.

In the words of President James Hilton of Iowa State, "This means that Iowa and Ames will become the greatest animal research center in the world."

The selection of our sister institution came after an advisory committee had narrowed the field of possible sites to nine out of 34 land grant colleges and universities. The committee gave seven reasons for its selection of Iowa State.

What the people of Iowa have to be proud of is that six of those seven reasons were the result of many years of hard work on the part of the Iowa State staff, Ames citizens, and state government officials.

As President Hilton said last night, we have these people to thank for the fact that Iowa State is an outstanding scientific center, that the college has had continuous research productivity, that the library and laboratories at Iowa State are excellent, that Ames has excellent public schools, that Iowa is a major producer of cattle, hogs, sheep and poultry, and that Iowa has a suitable site available near the college.

The seventh reason was the locale of Iowa State. The committee had been directed by Congress to find a site away from any critical target area. This was done to eliminate the necessity for costly blast-resistant construction.

Further, the lack of political maneuvering (at least on the surface) was particularly noteworthy. The selection of this site to all appearances was done in much more of an orderly and business-like manner than the selection of the U.S. Air Force Academy site two years ago.

The laboratory will cost $18,900,000 and will provide facilities to conduct 25 separate animal disease studies at one time.

In approximately two years the lab will be fully constructed. About 400 persons will be employed. Approximately half of this number will be scientific personnel and the other half operating personnel.

This is a great event for Iowa. The funds made available by the state government for the development of Iowa State certainly paid off.

Villains and Heroes in Business

"Mass production apparently makes even stranger bedfellows than politics"

By DONALD MALCOLM From The New Republic

It has been argued, by people whose judgment has been addled through looking at too much television, that the very worst efforts in any of the arts have a certain fascination of their own that they are, in fact, screamingly funny. In triumphal refutation of this thesis I offer The Empire (by George de Mare), another novel of the struggle for success in big business, only occasional passages of which rise high enough above vacuity to be seized upon and pronounced dull.

Mr. de Mare, the present author, finds himself in an even odder predicament when he tries to create a believable businessman-martyr. One of these poor wretches—not the cardiac martyr—is shuffling along the streets when he catches sight of the building which houses the firm.

Mr. de Mare, at any rate, retires in some confusion before the problems of creating a viable hero and villain. Not that there is too much difficulty telling them apart in his novel. Who but a villain would be "gnawed more than once by the rats of midnight disappointments?" Who but a hero would seek out and read "the cool, smooth, detached phrases of Gibbon like chilled cream to soothe the hotness of his inexplicable melancholy?"

It might be described as a "sympathetic expose" of big business, the purpose of which is not to stimulate correction of abuses but to indicate what a heroic little fellow the executive really is for managing to function under such circumstances. Young as the genre is, it has already acquired a characteristic formula: the villain and the hero compete for promotion or control while, off slightly to one side a senior executive quietly expires of a coronary thrombosis as a martyr to the rigors of the free enterprise system.

Mr. de Mare, the present author, finds himself in an even odder predicament when he tries to create a believable businessman-martyr. One of these poor wretches—not the cardiac martyr—is shuffling along the streets when he catches sight of the building which houses the firm. His mind, the author informs us, "began to haze over": "Yes, he said with a sigh, looking up once more at the great Building—now a huge shadow on the horizon in the still and confusing air, a giant bulk rising out the canyon of other lesser shadows in the late afternoon—yes, he said to himself with a sigh, man goeth forth unto his work and to his labor until evening, but you, you will stand there long after those that went forth and came worth mentioning. The villain seeks promotion to rise above his co-workers; the hero seeks merely to advance himself, but of course he rises above his co-workers for all that.

I GREATLY PREFER Mr. Hawley's treatment of the problem (in the movie version of "Executive Suite") at any rate in which the hero and villain are at least identified with rival philosophies of production, which they argue before the board of directors. I treasure still the memory of William Holden's impassioned peroration, in the course of which he smashed the company's product against the wall, decried its flimsiness, and in ringing tones called for sturdier stuff, arguing not that the consumer was entitled to value for his money, or that the company should be ashamed of producing rubbish, but that quality production just happened to be the policy of greatest profit to the stockholders at that particular moment in history. At which point the villain's "crime," if we put aside his offensive personality, amounts to nothing worse than urging a mistaken and unprofitable course of action on the company; or, to translate it into the language of a certain foreign ideology, he is "objectively guilty" of "deviationist error."

Mass production in apparently makes even stranger bedfellows than politics. Mr. de Mare, the present author, finds himself in an even odder predicament when he tries to create a believable businessman-martyr. One of these poor wretches—not the cardiac martyr—is shuffling along the streets when he catches sight of the building which houses the firm. His mind, the author informs us, "began to haze over": "Yes, he said with a sigh, looking up once more at the great Building—now a huge shadow on the horizon in the still and confusing air, a giant bulk rising out the canyon of other lesser shadows in the late afternoon—yes, he said to himself with a sigh, man goeth forth unto his work and to his labor until evening, but you, you will stand there long after those that went forth and came home are gone and new ones to take their place have come and gone also. You will still be there. You are eternal."

NOT EVEN Mr. de Mare's labored effort to make himself clear can quite obscure his meaning here: the company is a sort of industrial juggernaut, under the wheels of which junior executives are invited to hurl themselves in an Oriental ecstasy of abasement. And so perhaps they do, but if this is martyrdom, then so is the mass march of lemmings into the sea. The executive who finds his graying temples, Cadillac, expense account and ultimate coronary occlusion inadequate compensation for the life he leads, will, if he seeks my sympathy on the grounds stated above, be directed with cold civility to apply elsewhere.

On the page which carries the customary, if in this case totally unnecessary, declaration that the characters of the novel do not represent living persons, Mr. de Mare has installed a quotation from Sir Thomas Malory's "Le Morte d'Arthur" which further expresses his feelings on the matter: "Alas most noble . . . realm whom I have loved above all other realms and in thee I have gotten a great part of my worship and now I shall depart

If the author had looked into Luke, he might have found something even more appropriate to the businessman-martyr. I mean the verse which cheerfully describes how the Gadarene swine "ran violently down a steep place into the lake, and were choked."

Bulganan Promises To Abolish Heavy Work for Women

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet Parliament cheered Wednesday a promise by Premier Nikolai A. Bulganin that the use of women for heavy labor in the Soviet Union will be abolished "in the near future."

The 1,300 deputies in the Supreme Soviet heard this pledge during a speech on a new pension bill recently announced by the Council of Ministers. Bulganin said heavy labor by women already had been greatly reduced.

The promised emancipation of the women from this sort of work undoubtedly will arouse much comment throughout the country, already intrigued by a campaign to downgrade the dead Stalin.

Bulganan plodded through an hour and 12 minutes of prepared text. Communist-party boss Nikita S. Khrushchev got up in the middle of Bulganin's address, and after a few remarks to Vice Premier V. M. Molotov, walked out of the hall. Khrushchev had not bothered to attend earlier separate meetings of the Parliament's two houses, the Council of the Union and the Council of Nationalities. At these meetings, the two houses approved an appeal to parliaments of the world for support for Soviet disarmament proposals.

Intelligence, Ethics—Task of America In Leisure Society

From an Address by Adlai E. Stevenson

To really believe in the future and to have an ardor for mankind is to be driven by the feeling that we are wasting precious time as a nation in not doing the things which are possible now for the first time in our history. . . . Surely, no one can suppose that even in our blessed land we have reached the limits of human welfare, or harnessed our abundance. Nor can we in a world undergoing revolutionary change hope to prosper by standing still. The most urgent need for new thinking springs from the fact that we are constantly by our science, our techniques and our inventions, altering out of recognition the contours of the human scene. The old landmarks are going. We need new roadmaps in a world that is, whether we like it or not, being remade every day.

In America today the quantity of goods and services available to ordinary families has banished, for the great majority, the oldest, grimmest specters of human misery. The ancient struggle for just food and raiment and shelter is about over, in this fortunate section of the world at least.

But free society cannot be content with a goal of mere life without want. It has always had within it a visionary spark, a dream that man, liberated from crushing work, aching hunger, and constant insecurity, would discover wider interests and nobler aims. If quality comes first so that men may eat, quality comes next so that they may not live by bread alone. Free society in the West has brought most of its citizens to that great divide. The next frontier is the quality, the moral, intellectual and aesthetic standards of the free way of life.

OF ALL THE challenges faced by our new society of leisure, none equals that of education. It strikes at the central problem. In a community where at last we have time to ourselves, and where the social order is designed to give us a free range of choice, what sort of people do we want to be? What aims do we seek to fulfill ourselves, what ideals do we set before our children? We have come to the point at which, as a nation, we are beginning to recognize the inadequacy of our physical apparatus

Campus Censorship

From National Press Photographer

The news profession, always seeking young blood, has seen a radical change in its recruits during the last decade or so. Colleges and universities, establishing journalism schools in increasing numbers, have provided the basic training which once was obtainable only through a curriculum of coffee runs, copy carrying and a dedication that helped fill out a cub's paycheck.

Recently we have begun to notice that some of these schools were, by example, teaching the principle that press freedom is a sometime thing, subject to change without notice by self-styled "judges of what's fit to print. The colleges were defending their own "intellectual freedom" and, at the same time, restricting freedom of the press in many newsworthy matters that occurred on the campuses.

More Criticism of PCC Clean-up

UCLA Wants Athletic Revision

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Chancellor Raymond B. Allen of UCLA Wednesday urged alumni of all Pacific Coast Conference schools to write their presidents demanding revision of the athletic code which he branded as "archaic" and "unworkable."

Dr. Allen made his appeal in a speech before the Beverly Hills Realty Board. It dovetailed with a demand sounded Tuesday by Dr. Fred D. Fagg, president of the University of Southern California, calling for another meeting of the PCC presidents to straighten out the athletic mess in the conference within two weeks.

Dr. Fagg's request went to Dr. Robert Gordon Sproul of the Universities of California, chairman of the PCC Presidents' Council. Dr. Sproul, who returned Wednesday from Washington, D.C., announced he was polling the presidents "as to their response to President Fagg's request."

Dr. Allen's address in the main concerned UCLA's expansion program and its relation to community welfare in West Los Angeles.

Turning to the athletic side, in which UCLA, USC and Washington have suffered heavy penalties for illegal athletic subsidization, Dr. Allen declared:

"My great concern about the purge is that it be complete and that every institution unearth all of the unsavory and irregular patterns of subsidization which are carried out by its supporters."

"No institution, including UCLA, condones these practices."

An Ace in the Hole

A HOLE IN ONE WASN'T ENOUGH for Dick Herman, right, of La Canada, Calif., as he lost to Bob Patterson, left, of Portland, Ore., Wednesday in the 31st annual Amateur Public Links Championship golf tournament at San Francisco. Herman scored the ace on the 166-yard third hole. Patterson fired a birdie two on the hole.

Medalist McBeath Wins In Public Links Golf

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. (AP)—Medalist Scotty McBeath, of Palo Alto, Calif., continued to fire sub-par golf in the National Public Links Golf Tournament Wednesday as he won his opening match by a margin of 4-up and 3 holes to play over youthful Ferd Hubert of Peoria, Ill.

McBeath, 34-year-old salesman, was three-under par for the 15 holes played. He won medal honors Tuesday with a 36-hole score of 69-72-141.

Veteran Vern Callison, Sacramento, Calif., tavern owner, took his opening round match by a 2 and 1 margin over George Roddy of Indianapolis.

Eddie Langert, 20-year-old from Memphis, Tenn., put himself among the favorites with an impressive 7 and 6 victory over Dick Heise of Bloomington, Ill.

Langert played two-under-par golf for his 12 holes and included birdie putts of 25, 25 and 12 feet in so doing.

Most favorites came through in the opening round but one to fall was 19-year-old Joe Gallardo Jr. of Los Angeles, one of only three to break par in the qualifying. He lost 4 and 3 to Mike Mural of Parma, Ohio.

The two rounds Wednesday over the par 36-36-72 Harding course, a 6,883-yard layout, reduced the field to 16 for play today.

Both Knorr and Fetzer said Wednesday.

Crosby in Bid for Detroit

DETROIT (AP)—Singer-actor Bing Crosby, who is part owner of the Pittsburgh Pirates, has joined with 20 other men in a syndicate that reportedly has the inside track on the multi-million-dollar bidding for the Detroit Tigers.

The famed crooner was en route to his Elko, Nev., ranch and was not available for comment. His brother Larry, a business associate, called a report of Bing's participation in the syndicate "ridiculous."

Until Wednesday, only two men had been identified in the syndicate. They are Fred Knorr, president of the Knorr Broadcasting Co., which operates four Michigan radio stations, and John E. Fetzer, president of Fetzer Broadcasting Co., operator of several Michigan and Nebraska radio and television stations.

Both Knorr and Fetzer said Wednesday.

Some question was raised that Crosby would have to dispose of his stock in the Pittsburgh Club if the syndicate's bid is accepted by trustees of the estate of the late Tiger owner, Walter O. Briggs Sr. But Knorr said that possibility had been explored "before we ever decided on a definite bid."

Jackson Injured; Idled for Week

BROOKLYN (AP)—Third baseman Randy Jackson, who has given the Brooklyn Dodgers a lift at the plate, gashed his left thumb in a household accident and probably will be out of action for about a week, the club announced Wednesday.

The mishap occurred Monday, but because of the All-Star game full Dodger officials didn't learn about it until Tuesday.

The accident happened while Jackson was in the shower. He grabbed the porcelain knob to turn off the water and it broke in his hand, cutting the thumb. The cut required three stitches.

Manager Walt Alston said he would have Jackie Robinson in Jackson's spot at third base when the Dodgers open a western trip with a two-night doubleheader at Milwaukee Thursday.

Balding Late; Almost Out of Quebec Golf

BOISCHATEL, Quebec (AP)—A squabble blew up, then blew over Wednesday as Al Balding, one of Canada's leading golfers, checked in late for today's $26,800 open tournament and almost found himself left out.

Registration for the event for the 6,500-yard Royal Quebec course closed Tuesday.

Balding, the 1955 Canadian PGA champion and only Canadian pro ever to win a major U.S. tournament, said Wednesday he had overslept in Toronto and missed his plane.

Some of the American players in the field of 121 squawked about the incident and Ray O'Brien, PGA tournament director, was unhappy.

Balding said he didn't try to contact tournament officials because he thought fellow-Canadian Stgn Leonard had registered for him and had paid his registration fee.

Bliss Wins In Amateur Golf Tourney

DES MOINES (AP)—Defending champion Rod Bliss and three former titleholders swung successfully through the perils of first round play in the Iowa Amateur Golf Tournament Wednesday.

Bliss, the Des Moines insurance executive who has appeared in the title match four of the last five years and won in 1951 and 1955, opened his drive for a third crown with a sub-par blast. He blew up the hopes of Wayne McClintock of Waterloo 3 and 2.

Bob Leahy of Denison, Fred Gordon of Belmond and Jack Webb of Spirit Lake were the former titleholders advancing with Bliss.

Jack Rule of Waterloo, 17-year-old state junior champion, was 2 over par in a 5 and 4 triumph over Bruno Dempsy, a Des Moines veteran.

John Liechty of Iowa City, the 1955 state junior ruler, was even par in defeating Floren DiPaglia, Des Moines, 4 and 2.

Two rounds will be played today with Bliss leading off against Ivan Altman of Newton.

Holmes Resigns as Portland Manager

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)—Tommy Holmes quit as manager of the Portland team in the Pacific Coast League Wednesday, saying, "maybe someone else can perk up the club."

Portland was in fifth place in the league, but was first in attendance.

General Manager Joe Ziegler did not name a successor at once.

Holmes, former player and manager of the Boston Braves, said he had no plans other than going home to Woodbury, N.Y.

Andrews Eliminated in Western Tennis

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP)—Art Andrews of Iowa City, Iowa, was eliminated from the singles competition of the Western Tennis Championships Wednesday.

Andrews gave third seeded Eddie Moylan of Trenton, N.J. a tough before losing, 9-7, 1-6, 6-4.

Wreck West of Iowa City

TWO MEN ESCAPED SERIOUS INJURY when this trailer went off the road on Highway 6, four miles west of Iowa City early Wednesday morning. (Daily Iowan Photo by Bill Nelson)

Truck Crash Injures Two

Two men were injured when a loaded semi-trailer truck went off the road four miles west of Iowa City on Highway 6 about 9:45 a.m. Wednesday. Albert Wagner, the driver, suffered bruises and James Houpt, a passenger, was taken to University Hospitals where he was treated for cuts on his forehead and left foot. Houpt has been released from the hospital. The truck, loaded with general freight, was going to Chicago from Denver when a tire blew out near the curve near the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad Co. The truck swerved off the highway and crashed 400 feet into a ditch. The truck, owned by Watson Brothers, was damaged when the trailer tore loose from the cab and overturned.

State Closes Highway 153 For Repair

Highway 153, which runs between Highway 6, west of Coralville, and Highway 218 near North Liberty, is closed for an indefinite length of time for construction work. Work on the culverts is the first phase now underway. It is expected that grading will start about Aug. 1.

Straightening of the road will be another part of the project. When completed the highway will run straight south from the edge of the Oakdale Sanatorium to Highway 6, eliminating a 400-yard jog. The completed grade will be 4.6 miles in length.

The State Highway Commission has awarded contracts totaling approximately $92,000 for the grading, straightening and culvert construction.

During the construction period, Oakdale Sanatorium may be reached from an open portion of Highway 153 off of Highway 6. The sanatorium is about one mile north of Highway 6.

The construction work which is now being done on Highway 153 is the first step toward a frequently-made proposal that Highway 218 be relocated over the present route of Highway 153 from North Liberty to Highway 6, west of Coralville.

Auditor Faces Ouster For Financial Troubles

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Illinois State Auditor Orville E. Hodge was threatened with possible ouster Wednesday after refusing to answer a prosecutor's questions about alleged financial irregularities in his office.

Gov. William G. Stratton, like Hodge a Republican, told a hastily summoned news conference he had ordered Hodge to double his $50,000 bond in 20 days or he would declare the auditor's post vacant.

"In my estimation the public and party confidence in the office and its official operations no longer exist," Stratton said. The governor said that under his interpretation of the law, Hodge will have to find a bonding company that will put up another $50,000 bond for the office — the maximum required by Illinois law. He said the surety will have to be approved by himself and two members of the Illinois Supreme Court. Stratton declined to spell out his exact words with Hodge at a conference Tuesday.

State's Atty. George P. Cottrick of Sangamon County (Springfield) has announced that a grand jury investigation will be started July 23 into possible misappropriation of funds in Hodge's office. The investigation centers on 41 state warrants totaling around a half-million dollars.

Camera Trap Develops Wrong Way

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Somebody tried to break into George Marshall's auto parts store here on two occasions this month so Marshall readied himself for the third attempt.

He set up a small flash camera opposite the window entered by the burglar before and rigged up a trip cord so the intruder would take a picture of himself.

Early Wednesday the burglar came back. He succeeded in opening the window. But the only thing he took, Marshall told police, was the camera, valued at $10.

Health Board Re-elects Top

DES MOINES (AP) — Dr. Franklin H. Top, head of the SUI Department of Hygiene and Preventive Medicine, has been re-elected president of the State Board of Health.

The board also re-elected Dr. Charlotte Fisk, Des Moines, sister of Henry L. Fisk, 234 Hutchinson Ave., Iowa City, secretary.

The board is an advisory group with power to make rules and regulations.

At its semi-annual meeting this week, the board learned that deaths of several infants have been traced to the presence of nitrates in water supplies. The board ordered private laboratories which make water tests to watch for nitrates as well as bacteria.

Dr. Edward G. Zimmerer, state health commissioner, said the nitrates cause a serious illness in infants.
