Ike May Use T-H Act In Steelworker Strike

Management, Union Told To Settle Dispute

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Eisenhower administration Wednesday "bluntly warned the steel companies and the steelworkers union to settle their wage contract differences within a week," a Pittsburgh newspaper said Wednesday night.

The newspaper said the administration's sudden action in the nationwide basic steel strike came after a meeting in Washington Wednesday between the President and his top economic advisors.

The report said there was an "implied threat" that President Eisenhower would invoke the Taft-Hartley Act if necessary to get the 650,000 striking members of the United Steelworkers back on the job.

A source close to David J. McDonald, president of the union, said he did not know the President's reported action. Industry sources were not immediately available for comment.

Earlier Wednesday in Washington, Murray Snyder, acting White House press secretary, said he knew of no plans for the government to invoke the Taft-Hartley Law or for the President to confer with officials of management and the union.

Negotiators trying to end the walkout Wednesday held their longest meeting since the 18-day-old strike began but failed to make any apparent progress.

In a joint statement the two parties said they will meet again today.

After the two-hour negotiating session, both sides conferred separately with the Federal Mediation Service team headed by Director Joseph P. Finnegan.

Finnegan, who earlier in the day personally told President Eisenhower that both sides are "determined to make an effort" to end the strike, said he would have no comment.

Finnegan did say he carried a message from President Eisenhower to the striking United Steelworkers and the basic steel-producing companies. He said the message expressed concern about "effects of the strike on the national economy, but more important for the 650,000 workers who are on strike."

John A. Stephens, U.S. Steel Corp. vice-president and chief industry negotiator, told newsmen just before entering the conference with the union that "we have not changed our offer; we came here to go to work."

McDonald parried a question on whether the union had moved from its position, saying:

"The United Steelworkers are ready, willing and able to make a contract."

The union has rejected the industry offer of a 52-month contract which would have given the workers a package increase of 17% cents an hour the first year.

Reduction in Forces By All Countries Forecast by Dulles

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State John Foster Dulles Wednesday forecast new reductions in the armed forces of nations around the globe, including Russia.

He told a news conference this is a "general trend" mainly because nations are relying more on atomic-hydrogen weapons and less on manpower.

A reduction of East-West tensions is also a factor he said, because this means "there is less risk of war than was the case."

Replying to questions, Dulles said he would make no political objections to any move by North Atlantic Pact allies to cut back their forces, if competent military authorities decided fewer men were needed to guard Europe against surprise attack.

Dulles spoke out in the wake of reports that some Defense Department authorities are considering substantial cuts in the American Army, Navy and Air Force during the next three years.

Adm. Arthur Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, has been reported pressing this drive in the face of bitter opposition from Army leaders.

Miller Gives Insights, Impressions of Russia

A classless society in Russia is a myth, Harlan S. Miller, Des Moines columnist, said in a panel interview Wednesday.

"I think society in Russia is definitely more stratified than in our country," Miller said. "Scientists, writers, students, young soldiers and artists are all an elite group," he added.

The stratification is due in part to the rise of education in Russia, he indicated. Commenting on the University of Moscow, Miller said, "The buildings are beautiful, as if built as a symbol. They are a utopia when compared to other buildings."

Students are an alert, intelligent group and "have to buckle down and study if they expect to go very far," he stated.

The appeal of education to the Russian people is the downfall of the dictatorship, Miller said. "The dictators created an adult group and now they have to deal with it."

"The Russians are intense book readers," Miller said. "My impression is they read the classics," he added. "They also read books in translation."

Commenting on drinking in Russia, "I never saw Khrushchev sober, however, I never saw him drunk," Miller said. "I'd say socially stimulated," he added. He went on to explain Russians have strong ties to the pre-revolutionary days, including the drinking by youth. "My impression is Khrushchev will not be severely criticized for his drinking," he said. "I think he is in complete control of himself," he added.

Prof. Arthur M. Barnes, SUI School of Journalism, served as moderator of the panel. Members of the panel were Prof. Hugh E. Kelso, SUI Department of Political Science; Prof. William E. Porter, SUI School of Journalism; and Prof. Harold W. Saunders, SUI Department of Sociology and Anthropology.

Once College Prof; Now a Mountaineer

By AL WORTMAN

Norman Dyhrenfurth, a man who once was a college teacher, has once again felt the call of the mountains.

Dyhrenfurth, who will show a film and lecture at 8 tonight in the Iowa Memorial Union, has a background which speaks of mountains and more mountains. His father and mother are both mountaineers and he was born in Zurich, Switzerland, in the land of mountains.

In an interview Wednesday Dyhrenfurth said from 1949 to 1953 he was the Director of the Motion Picture Division of the Department of Theater Arts at U.C.L.A. When in 1952 he received a call to participate in the Swiss attempt to climb Mt. Everest he accepted. He explained he went along first as a mountaineer and second as a photographer.

When he returned from the expedition Dyhrenfurth said he decided the mountains and all they hold for him was his life. Since that time he has spent some time Italy on a Fulbright Award lecturing on documentary film production.

In 1955 he led an expedition to the Himalayas for further assaults on the formidable barriers. His last expedition was called the International Himalayan Expedition and was composed of Americans, Austrians, Nepalese and Swiss. The international aspect of such adventures is an important one to Dyhrenfurth. He believes such joint activities are possible and necessary and he feels he proved his point on this last expedition.

"It is high time we had an American foundation for research and exploration in the manner of the Swiss Foundation For Alpine Research," he said. Of the 14 peaks above 26,000 feet that were not climbed before WWII, 10 have now been climbed but none of these by an American team, Dyhrenfurth said. This is not because of inability on the part of American climbers, but rather because of the lack of financing, he said.

U.S. Forces In Far East Consolidate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department, in a sweeping change, Wednesday shifted command of all U.S. military forces in the Far East and the Pacific to Hawaii.

It placed a Navy man, Adm. Felix Stump, in over-all charge. Since World War II Army generals have headed the Far East Command.

The department said it will abolish the Far East Command in Japan and move the United Nations Command from Japan to Korea.

The Pentagon said the general overhaul of its command structure will take effect next July 1 to "simplify the command and organization" of the Pacific Fleet for three years.

The Army has held the senior command in the Far East since Gen. Douglas MacArthur set up his headquarters in Tokyo at the end of World War II. The present Far East and UN commander is Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, who has headed both commands since July 5, 1955.

The Pentagon said a lesser headquarters will be set up in Japan to administer U.S. forces remaining in that country. The United States has one Army division and support units in Japan plus Air Force and Navy forces.

A spokesman for the Joint Chiefs of Staff said the command changes were designed to achieve four things:

1. Eliminate divided responsibility between the present Pacific and Far East commands, particularly in such key areas as Formosa and Okinawa.

2. Provide flexibility for the control of forces of all the services — land, sea and air.

3. Reduce the number of headquarters, with a probable reduction in personnel.

4. Concentrate under one commander the important responsibilities for all naval, ground and air activities in the entire area stretching from the U.S. Pacific coast to the coast of Asia.

The Defense Department said Lemnitzer's United Nations Command will be retained as a separate headquarters when it is moved to Korea.

'Truth' and 'Power' Subjects of Religion Speech Wednesday

There are two distinct opposites in the concept of truth—truth is the opposite of a lie and truth is the opposite of error, Prof. Kenneth E. Boulding, Department of Economics, University of Michigan, said Wednesday.

Boulding, member of the Society of Friends, spoke to an audience of 50 persons at a lecture sponsored by the SUI School of Religion.

"Truth is an inward teacher in the human organism and is a feeling which develops under favorable circumstances in the individual," Boulding said.

It is an obedience to truth, to ourselves and to others that leads to power in an individual, he said. The power concept refers to an area over which the individual can make decisions, Boulding explained.

"A person who has 'power' is one that is free to make his own decisions," he said. Political leaders seldom have power, according to this definition, Boulding said, since they very seldom are in a position of making their own decisions.

The Weather

Cloudy

and

Warm

More thunderstorms are predicted for the Iowa City area today with temperatures again climbing into the 80s.

High temperatures today will range from 75 to 85 degrees, with lows in the middle 60s.

Temperatures in Iowa City Wednesday reached into the low 80s, but rapidly fell when the thunderstorms began. The Iowa City sewage plant reported an official 1.4 inches of rain from Wednesday's storm.

Rain Causes Traffic Jams, House Floods

Although only 1.4 inches of rain fell in Iowa City Wednesday, the water collected in streets and low spots to cause traffic jams and flooded basements throughout the city.

Ralston Creek, which flows through Iowa City, overflowed causing flooded basements in houses near Benton Street and South Dubuque Street. Iowa City police reported city crews were pumping water out of basements in that area.

Parked cars and cars driving through low spots in the streets stalled, causing traffic jams and delays.

Highway 218 was blocked for a short time Wednesday afternoon when a semi-trailer truck skidded on the mud and jack-knifed across the road. Traffic was jammed until the semi was straightened out. No damage resulted from the incident.

A tornado was reported south of Iowa City by a United Airlines employee. The tornado was traveling approximately 200 feet above the ground. There were no reports that the tornado struck near Iowa City.

Elsewhere in Iowa, Estherville and Alden reported hailstorms with general rain throughout the rest of the state.

Highlanders Sail For Europe Today

The SUI Scottish Highlanders will sail for Europe today on the Queen Mary. Their destination is Cherbourg, France.

This will be the first European trip for the majority of the 73 SUI coeds, and for 36 of them it will mean a chance to visit the land of their ancestors, Scotland. For these girls, claiming Scottish forebears, the two weeks to be spent in Scotland will be a highlight of the trip.

During their 8-week tour of Europe, the Highlanders also will visit in France, Belgium, Germany, Holland and England, with some members planning side trips to Denmark, Italy, Switzerland and Ireland.

Highway Commission OK's New Road Plans

DES MOINES (AP) — The Iowa Highway Commission took the first steps Wednesday toward the initial $70 million worth of four-lane highways under the new federal interstate road improvement program.

The commission authorized its administrative staff to proceed with preliminary plans, studies and surveys and the purchase of right of way for relocations of segments of U.S. Highways 69, 6 and 75.

The first work in the multi-million-dollar, several-year program will be done on 69 and 6 near Des Moines, on 75 between Council Bluffs and Missouri Valley, in the Sioux City area, Osceola to near Martensdale, Dexter west on 6 to U.S. 71, and on 6 in the Davenport area.

Paving contracts are scheduled to be let in the summer and fall of 1957, and in the winter of 1957-58 in the same order as the schedule for contracts for grading and bridge work.

The commission made no estimate on when the improvements will be ready for travel.

The total cost of these projects was estimated at $70.8 million. Under the interstate program, the federal government will pay 90 per cent and the state 10 per cent of the cost. Payment will be spread over 1956, 1957 and 1958.

Rights of way costs are included in the grading projects. None of the land for the rights of way has been purchased yet. All of it will represent relocations of the various highways.

Rights of way will provide for four-lane highways, except that the commission plans to obtain enough property in metropolitan high-traffic areas so as to eventually make the roads six-lane, and even eight-lane highways.

The commission said some preliminary studies have been made on all of the initial projects, except for the one in the Davenport area.

On July 27 the commission will meet with Illinois highway department officials at Davenport to make tentative plans for connecting No. 6 in Illinois and Iowa.

House Bill Rejects Sale of Surpluses To Red Countries

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Wednesday flatly rejected Administration pleas to permit barter of American farm surpluses with Soviet satellite nations.

It rebuffed both President Eisenhower and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles in refusing to include the barter provision in a bill increasing authority for disposal of government-held farm surpluses to friendly nations for foreign currencies.

Then on a 389-6 rollcall vote, it passed the bill raising from $1 1/2 to $3 billion the amount of surplus commodities which may be sold to non-Communist nations in return for their own currencies.

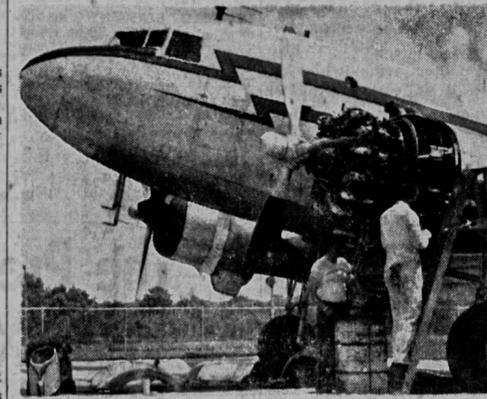

Payments by foreign nations in their own money go toward construction of military housing at U.S. installations abroad, to pay for construction of U.S. overseas bases and to defray other U.S. expenses like embassy costs.

Officer Condemns McKeon's Action

PARRIS ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — A stern Marine lieutenant colonel said Wednesday the type march on which S. Sgt. Matthew C. McKeon led six Marines to death could be called maltreatment.

Lt. Col. Robert A. Thompson of Syracuse, N.Y., McKeon's former superior, appeared as a prosecution witness in the general court-martial of the 31-year-old former drill instructor from Worcester, Mass.

McKeon has been charged with involuntary manslaughter, oppression of recruits and two counts of drinking in a duty status as a result of the march by the 74-man recruit platoon into a tidal creek.

The impassive sergeant pleaded innocent Tuesday to the major counts and the court entered a plea of innocent for him on the lesser counts.

Thompson's opinion was offered on cross-examination in a "hypothetical case," the circumstances of which were identical to the McKeon incident of April 8.

Before Thompson, recruit battalion commander, appeared on the stand, the defense argued that McKeon owed "no apology to anyone" for marching the six Marines to death in a soggy marsh.

Defense attorney Emile Zola Berman of New York city held that if any apology is due it "should not be made by McKeon."

Berman has contended all along that the training methods used by McKeon were normal at this training center.

Thompson, under cross-examination, was asked if he considered a march such as that conducted by McKeon maltreatment.

"Without adequate reconnaissance, without adequate safeguards . . . with full knowledge that some members of the platoon could not swim . . . it would be maltreatment," Thompson told Berman.

Thompson told of a briefing he gave McKeon and other new drill instructors as they reported for duty with the battalion. He said he warned them against practices of hazing and maltreatment and gave them a lecture on the "common pitfalls."

Four members of the platoon taken on the night march have gone "over the hill."

One has been missing since early June. He was identified as Pvt. Francis Armitage of New York city.

Pvt. Stephen J. Milnalsick Jr., of Fairfield, Conn., has been declared an "unauthorized absentee" missing since June 25.

The other two absent are Pvt. Paul R. Hartman of Elgin, Ill., and Pvt. Richard L. Ferkel of Republic, O. They were missed from this base July 13.

The remaining members of the platoon, which completed its recruit training several weeks ago, are here. Since they may be called as witnesses they have been instructed not to talk about the incident.

Copper Wire Theft Reported to Police

About 9,000 feet of insulated copper wire, valued at $1,500, was taken from the Robbins Electric Co. warehouse here Tuesday night, Hadden Pumphrey, foreman, reported to police Wednesday.

Entrance was made through the west end of the warehouse near College Street by picking or breaking the lock on the door, Pumphrey said.

The wire was described by Pumphrey as being slightly heavier than that used in wiring a house.

India's Point of View

It may come as a complete shock to you, but we actually learned something watching television the other day. It wasn't in the script, but India's Foreign Minister B. K. Krishna Menon considerably enlightened the audience of the program, "Meet the Press." And he was able to do it in spite of some of the most assinine, juvenile badgering ever seen on a program noted for vicious baiting of its guests.

Mr. Krishna Menon made it quite clear that any aid India accepted, no matter from whom, would have to be tendered sans strings. Despite Vice-President Nixon's declaration that Communist aid can only be accepted at the price of a rope around the neck of the recipient, India's attitude seems to preclude the possibility of her being "strung up." This is especially true in view of India's off-stated position, reiterated by Mr. Krishna Menon, that she would much prefer that all aid be channeled through the United Nations. That such a channel should be dug seems to us clear; it would quiet half-baked charges that Nehru is just playing East against West to the benefit of India, and it would remove aid from the realm of cold war competition. This would place pressure on the U.S.S.R. to act responsibly, and would increase the cooperation so necessary to world peace.

Mr. Krishna Menon was asked why India had for nine years blocked the holding of a self-determination plebiscite in Kashmir. In view of the large amount of military aid we have given Pakistan, and the failure of our Vice-President to stop in India on his junket from Thailand to Pakistan, Mr. Krishna Menon's answer has especial pertinence. For he made it clear that India regards Pakistan as its enemy. Kashmir is and always has been part of India, and Pakistan's maneuverings are regarded as an invasion of Indian soil.

He pointed out that we had refused to allow the South to secede from the Union we should be somewhat hesitant to belittle that Kashmir should be allowed its freedom to secede.

The Indian diplomat also pinpointed two glaring distortions we so often make. Our reaction to criticism from Nehru is not seldom based on the conviction that a critical remark about the West implies approbation of the East. We similarly regard it as a great victory if any relative bystander makes even a small disparagement of Russia. Actually India is only trying to denounce any action she considers to be wrong, not the government that makes the "mistake."

This television interview left us more aware of reality, and it made clear the positive benefits to be derived from not only aiding nations, but trying to appreciate their culture and point of view.

After 29 Years

The Civil Aeronautics Board, meeting in Omaha, Neb., has before it the United Air Lines proposal to suspend that airline's service to Iowa City.

Iowa City has been for 29 years a regular stop on cross-country flights. From 1927 to 1931 Boeing Air Transport Co. operated out of here. The United Airlines took over in 1931 and has had flights in and out of Iowa City since then.

It is understandable why United wants to withdraw from Iowa City. The airline daily operates a full schedule of flights out of Cedar Rapids, only 26 miles from Iowa City. The number of passengers leaving Iowa City daily has not been large enough to meet operating expenses.

The airline's contention is that Iowa City can be served as well by the Cedar Rapids stop, which has more daily flights. United has further indicated the city would have better service if a feeder line were allowed to make Iowa City a stop. Central Air Lines has asked permission to establish a Kansas City-Chicago route through Iowa City.

This action, however, presents a serious problem to the city and the State University of Iowa.

It is somewhat of a loss to be taken off a cross-country flight after being on it for 29 years. It is also an inconvenience to drive to Cedar Rapids to make airline connections when you are used to having local service.

The University has many staff members and students who make use of the present airline service. The volume of business United has now is probably due in large part to the University. There will also be some inconvenience created for these people.

Judging the whole affair, however, it appears that Iowa City will have adequate access to airline service if United does leave and the feeder line is established.

The President—To Preside or Lead?

Dispute Without Acrimony Does Work Well

By Alan Otten in The Wall Street Journal

When Dwight Eisenhower moved to the White House, Congress quickly passed the signal that the legislature would listen respectfully to but would not take dictation from 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue. As it turned out, Mr. Eisenhower was not the kind of President who asked, or expected, the lawmakers to rubber stamp his every proposal.

The result has been — first with the Republican, now with the Democratic Congress — an almost classic example of the co-equal powers of Executive and Legislative branches.

Each year, the President has submitted a legislative program to the House and Senate. Congress has rejected some of the Eisenhower proposals, accepted others, and tailored most to the lawmakers' specifications. In a few instances, Mr. Eisenhower has rejected what Congress has done. In most cases, he has accepted their handiwork.

OF COURSE, this could all be said in lesser degree about the relations between the executive and legislative in many a Congress. But what seems to make this something special, especially during the current Democratic Congress is the rather calm mutual tolerance that accompanies it all.

With one or two exceptions, notably the farm controversy, there have been no prolonged battles between Mr. Eisenhower and Congress. By and large, each side has spoken softly to the other. The President has occasionally needed Congress gently on its legislative progress, but he has carefully avoided intemperate criticisms and ultimatums. On the other side, the Democratic leadership on Capitol Hill has, except on rare occasion, been mild in its criticisms of the Republican President.

CONSPICUOUSLY missing during the past two years has been the acrimony that was so prevalent during the 80th Congress when Mr. Truman and G.O.P. Congressional leaders engaged in endless bickering and name-calling.

This relative calm cannot be attributed to good liaison work between the President and Democratic Congressional leaders, because there's been practically none. Democratic Congressional leaders have been at the White House rarely. It wasn't so long ago, in fact, that Speaker Rayburn was complaining that he couldn't even get an advance copy of Presidential messages and had to find out about them from reporters.

What then does account for it? The President apparently firmly believes that under the Constitutional system, Congress has a complete right to put its own stamp on many programs, and that it is the job of the President to suggest legislation and then to accept the Congressional decision unless it goes against the very heart of his policies.

THE PRESIDENT has not taken a "play-it-my-way-or-I-quit" stand. There have been no "take it or leave it" messages, no attempts to dictate every last comma and period in a bill. Mr. Eisenhower has used his veto very sparingly — the natural gas bill and the farm bill are conspicuous exceptions. In numerous instances, the President has approved and implemented without a murmur bills that the Administration objected to entirely or in part.

The President has rarely attempted to pressure Congress into doing something it obviously did not want to do. The wisdom of this has been illustrated pretty well by the fact that on the few occasions that he has broken this rule he has not succeeded too well. If Congress hadn't quite made up its mind, a Presidential prod has sometimes made the difference; but if Congressional sentiment was already running pre-

What Is Wrong with Being a Passive President?

By WALTER LIPPMANN

To judge by what is happening in Congress to the President's legislative program, he is the unanimous candidate of a party that will not follow him as leader.

A heavy majority of the Republicans, acting contrary to the President's advice, has voted for the Powell amendment which made it impossible to pass the bill to give federal aid to the public schools.

But for the Republican defectors, the Democrats could not have gotten Congress to overrule the administration on the dent is not the leader of the system who makes it work but the officer who presides over the executive branch. He exhorts, he preaches, he proposes measures, he pleads for them. But he does not lead the Congress.

IN HIS BOOK there are no rewards for men, like Senator Wiley, who take risks in order to follow him; there are no penalties for those who, like Senator Knowland, so often oppose him. Yet in order to lead a party it is necessary not only to talk but also to use a discipline of rewards and penalties.

It is Eisenhower's unwillingness to insist upon party discipline, his virtual neutrality between those who oppose him and those who support him, that account for his inability to lead Congress. His personal popularity, which is his party's prime asset, is freely available to all Republicans without any reciprocal obligation on their part. So the Republicans opposed to Eisenhower want him for President, being under no obligation to follow him.

THE AMERICAN political system has never worked well when the president is passive and unable to give a strong lead to Congress. For the American Congress is like other legislative bodies as, for example, the French national assembly. It is almost incapable of dealing successfully with big questions except under the leadership, which includes the discipline, of the executive.

On measures where the national interest is more than the net sum of opposing local interests, the executive, that is the president, must be the active political force.

HE CANNOT DROP the big measures into the legislative assembly, making an occasional public comment and doing some private lobbying, but on the whole standing aside in an attitude of respectful neutrality. For the big measures are almost certain to be ground to bits by Congressmen responding to local pressures from their constituents.

These measures can be saved and carried through the legislature only if the representatives can feel behind them, and can point to, a national pressure which is stronger than the local pressures. Except when there is an upheaval of popular sentiment, only the president can generate the national pressure.

1st Idea of Japan Is Unpainted Buildings

The first impression a visitor to Japan receives is that it is unpainted, a former civilian employee of the U.S. Army told Iowa City Kiwanis Club members Tuesday.

Margaret Ryan, Iowa City, went on to explain that very few Japanese structures are painted because the price of paint is too high.

She also talked about the famous sites she visited while in Japan. She accompanied the lecture with slides she took in Japan.

Mrs. Ryan served as a civilian librarian with the U.S. Army's Special Services in Japan during and after the Korean War.

President Eisenhower

ty strong one way or another, the President has been unable to change it.

OFTEN THE President has submitted some far-reaching proposals which Congress has then proceeded to modify in important ways leaving the broad outlines unchanged. This has permitted both Congress and the President to take credit for accomplishment.

Congress showed little hesitancy in substituting its own high-way program for the Administration's, for hedging the extension of the Reciprocal Trade program with protectionist amendments, for substituting a prototype atom-powered merchant ship for the President's exhibition atom ship, for going beyond the housing recommendations, for boosting the Federal minimum wage more than the President sought.

The Administration will certainly take credit for initiating these programs, and Congress will get credit for remodeling and enacting them.

None of this is to suggest there's a moratorium on politics between the White House and Capitol Hill. Far from it. But thus far it has been more a battle of subtle maneuver than of loud partisan fighting.

No doubt the summer political campaign will emphasize the differences between the President and his political opposition. And the differences are real, to be sure. But the common ground of mutual respect on which the President and Congress have tried to stand goes a long way to explain the absence of acrimony.

Horror Comics Thing of Past In Iowa City

By A. C. WORTMAN
Daily Iowan Staff Writer

Iowa City has for the past two years been the scene of a civic operation that could show all observers that the best way to get anything done in this country is still through friendly cooperation and understanding.

The question at hand, since the operation has been so successful that many readers may have to be reminded of it, is, "Can anyone tell us what has happened to horror comic books on Iowa City magazine racks?"

TWO YEARS AGO when Detective Harlan Sprinkle first took action on this issue Iowa City was a place, like many other cities, where children could have easy access to all kinds of lurid, mind twisting literature. Today, after a survey of the shops in this city that sell comics, there is not one piece of such literature to be found on any of the stands.

What does this mean? It means that through the voluntary cooperative efforts of every merchant in this city that was approached on this issue and through the initial efforts of Detective Sprinkle Iowa City has become a place where children can go into any store and not be confronted with the lewd, grotesque, delinquency breeding literature that used to sell under the name of "comic books."

SEVERAL YEARS ago the nation became aware of the comic book situation and began to take action. A meeting of leading comic book manufacturers in New York city gave birth to the idea of the Comics Magazine Association of America whose label, "The Comics Code Authority" appears on all the books printed by them. Here in Iowa City through the initial efforts of one man this plague on the minds of children was wiped out almost overnight.

Today in Iowa City in any establishment that handles comic books there are no more of the "war and battle" comics. These comics, though still on the shelves, do not show the children that there is any sense in violation, crime, or horror to their fellow man.

A survey of the leading establishments of the city has brought out the fact that children do not feel in any way the loss of this particular brand of comics. Little or no comment has been heard by the store owners about the absence of these comics.

AT FIRST there was a bit of difficulty with the distributors of these comics when the self-imposed ban went into effect. Today, according to one of the city's leading druggists the distributors do not even bother to bring these comics into Iowa City since they realize that they haven't a chance to sell them.

This experiment in joint civic action has been a tremendous success and should be classed as a prime example that American individualistic action has not in the least faded from the national scene. But, the battle is only partly won.

In an interview with Detective Sprinkle he said that he was quite pleased with the success of this venture but, there are other kinds of literature that still menace the minds of our youth. He stated that adult literature of the "girlie type" is still displayed everywhere on counters for all to see, including our youth.

No immediate action has been planned on this issue. Yet, who can say what might be accomplished after the lesson that has been taught to all in the instance of the fight against horror comics.

History of Man Exhibit Underway

An exhibit showing the history of man in Iowa from 10,000 years ago until now—is being prepared by Prof. Reynold Ruppe, SUI Department of Sociology and Anthropology. The exhibit is for the 1956 Iowa State Fair in Des Moines Aug. 24 to Sept. 2.

Ruppe will be assisted by Lee Cochran, Department of Audio-Visual Instruction, and artist Dale Ballantyne in setting up the display. He found most of the prehistoric remnants, including a skeleton of a child, at recent excavations near Turin and Cherokee. Material turned in to the Archaeological Department for further study also will be included in the display.

The migration of prehistoric man from Siberia to North America and down through Canada will be displayed. Also, pictures of the different Indian types, and indications that these primitive peoples had some of the diseases common to Iowans today will be shown.

The exhibit will show relics from early hunters of the "ice age," the "food collectors," dating back to 5500 B.C. as well as the "woodland period" of Iowa's first farmers, which were supposed to have lived about 1000 B.C.

This will be followed by evidence of the development of religion among primitive Iowans, and steps which gradually led to a more abundant life for the people.

Officials of the exhibit said there will be many examples of early arrows, blades, spears, pottery and other objects developed by prehistoric man. These relics were discovered by the SUI experts in diggings in Iowa.

State Fair secretary L. B. Cunningham said, "We regard this as one of the most important exhibits that has been brought to the fair in many years."

"It will give Iowans a glimpse of the whole record of human life in Iowa."

BERRY SPEAKS TONIGHT
Clyde E. Berry, associate director of the SUI Institute of Agricultural Medicine, will speak on the Institute and its relation to other health activities in the county tonight to the Johnson County Public Health Council. The meeting, open to the public, will be at 7:30 p.m. in the recreational conference room of the Memorial Union.

Marshalltown Cuts Gas Prices Again

MARSHALLTOWN — Gasoline prices were slashed another 5 cents here Wednesday in what observers termed the "worst" gasoline price war in the community in the past 20 years.

The Skelly Oil Co. ordered its stations to drop the price of their regular gasoline to 21.9 cents a gallon to match competing prices of independents. Ethyl gasoline is 3 cents a gallon higher.

Most of the other "chain" stations were selling gasoline for 22.9 cents, with a few selling for one cent less and absorbing the loss themselves.

The price of gasoline has now dropped 10 cents since Friday evening when the Eddy Oil Co., an independent, started the war with a special promotion.

The owner of this firm said he could not predict if another drop would be made.

Most station owners expect the low prices will continue for some time.

Stations outside Marshalltown on Highway 30 also have joined in the price cutting.

Eyesight Gone, 8-year-old Has Even Chance for Life

ORLANDO, Fla. — Mike Sibole's eyesight was sacrificed Wednesday to give him a 50-50 chance of growing to manhood but in a world of darkness.

The surgeon who removed the 4-year-old boy's left eye Wednesday morning, asking to remain anonymous, said it is an even chance that with the eye and a large section of the optic nerve came all the cancer cells which have cost Mike both eyes.

The last thing Mike saw was a doctor in a green skull cap bending over to administer the ether at 7:55 a.m. The operation started at 8:10 and ended at 8:51.

The lad's father said beforehand he was going to tell the boy about the operation. He brushed aside questions Wednesday whether he did or what was the boy's reaction.

Mike was a brave patient, the doctors reported. He didn't cry and he wasn't afraid.

He looked a little sleepy when he walked into Holiday House Hospital at 7:20, holding the hands of his mother, Mrs. James M. Sibole, and grandmother, Mrs. Henry Malone of Miami.

While Mike was in surgery, the family sat in his quiet room overlooking Lake Lurna praying for God to guide the surgeon's hands.

"It went according to schedule," the surgeon said of the operation. Whether he excised all the cancer cells and saved the child's life can't be determined yet.

Cancer cost Mike his right eye two years ago.

It is the danger that some cells slipped past the removed section of optic nerve that makes the surgeon cautious about proclaiming Mike's life saved.

If any cells have gone beyond, they will go into the brain. Mike will be kept in the hospital three days.

A MODEL OF THE ROCKET which will be sent to Berlin, Germany, by the SUI Physicists is examined by George Ludwig, G. Tiffin. The mechanism shown here will be encased by an outer shell on the actual rocket.

SUI Physicists Send Rocket to Berlin Show

A rocket used for atmospheric tests by SUI physicists will be sent to Berlin, Germany, Monday. It will be on display at the Berlin International Exposition this September.

The rocket, designed by a group of SUI physicists, headed by George Ludwig, G. Tiffin, is an extra from the Department of Physics annual expedition to the north geo-magnetic pole.

For the past four years, SUI physicists have gone to the north geo-magnetic pole and with the use of the rocket have measured cosmic rays in the atmosphere.

The rocket is released by a method called "Rockoon." By this method, the rocket is attached to a balloon which is released and rises to a height of approximately 70,000 feet. At this height, the rocket is ejected by a special ejector, which propels the rocket to a height of approximately 300,000 feet, or about 20 miles.

Upon reaching this elevation, the rocket measures the cosmic rays in the atmosphere and transmits the information to the physicists on the ground.

The rocket, which is being handled and shipped by Carl Mellwain, SUI Department of Physics, will be shown at various cities throughout Western Europe after the Berlin International Exposition. The Exposition is being planned and handled by the U.S. Information Service.

Research in cosmic rays was first started at SUI by Prof. James Van Allen, head of the SUI Physics Department. Research of cosmic rays is extremely useful in determining atmospheric conditions and their influence on the earth.

Hodge Talks To Attorney

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — Former Auditor Orville E. Hodge, key figure in an investigation of alleged irregularities involving more than half a million dollars in Illinois state cash underwent questioning for almost five hours Wednesday.

Hodge, Republican politician who quit Monday, had the long conference with State's Atty. George P. Coutrakon.

The prosecutor declined to disclose details. He said Hodge had talked at great length.

"I don't have any promises of a plea of guilty," Coutrakon said at a news conference. "I haven't made any promises. None were discussed."

Hodge has said he will waive immunity when he appears before the Sangamon County grand jury next week, and has stated he will make restitution to the extent of his resources.

Newsman asked if talk of restitution meant there is a possibility of prosecution being dropped.

"Nobody should draw the conclusion of no prosecution," Coutrakon replied.

The investigation revolves about the cashing of at least 42 state auditor warrants — they are orders to pay, like checks — totaling some $340,000.

MILWAUKEE — Bobby Thomson drove in four runs and Lew Burdette scattered eight hits Wednesday night as the first place Milwaukee Braves defeated the New York Giants 7-3 in a game delayed twice by rain.

The Braves jumped on New York starter Al Worthington for four runs and three hits in the first inning. Adcock drove in the first run with an infield single. The second scored on a wild throw and Bobby Thomson's double scored two more.

Thomson accounted for two more Milwaukee runs with a homer in the sixth off reliever Dick Littlefield. It was his 12th round tripper.

The victory widened Milwaukee's hold on first to two full games over the second place Cincinnati Redlegs who were defeated 6-3 by third place Brooklyn.

PeeWee Reese singled and Duke Snider scored. Sandy Amoros followed with a homer and Klippstein bowed out after walking Al Walker.

Reliever Joe Black throttled the Dodgers until the fifth when Snider started trouble with a single. Carl Furillo singled but on the throw to third the ball hit Snider and he scored and Furillo took second. Furillo scored on Walker's single.

Greengrass supplied the bulk of the power in this romp, delivering a base-clearing double. Chicago's lone run came in the seventh as Mousie Moryn singled behind doubling Monte Irvin.

The Cubs built up a 4-0 lead with two run spurts in the first and fifth innings. Then the Phillies launched their catch up operations with a run in the sixth when Stan Lopata doubled Marv Blaylock, who bunted safely, across.

Pirates vs. Cards

ST. LOUIS — Dale Long's two-out double in the ninth ruined a shutout bid by Vinegar Bend Mizell and enabled the Pittsburgh Pirates to hold the St. Louis Cardinals to a 1-1 tie in a game called in the 10th because of rain.

BOSTON SLUGGER Ted Williams holds the bat with which he hit his 400th home run, a 430-footer against Kansas City Tuesday. Williams ranks fifth among all time home run hitters, but far behind fourth place Lou Gehrig.

Gomez Draws Suspension; Adcock Fined

MILWAUKEE — One of the wildest melees of the current National League season resulted in a $250 fine Wednesday for pitcher Ruben Gomez of the New York Giants, a $100 fine for first baseman Joe Adcock of the Milwaukee Braves and a three-day suspension for Gomez.

In addition, Gomez drew a severe reprimand from Warren C. Giles, league president, who stipulated that the fine be paid personally by the Giants' pitcher, not his team.

The Puerto Rican righthander touched off a fracas involving players of both teams in the second inning of Tuesday night's game at County Stadium when he twice hit Adcock — once with a pitched ball and once with a deliberately thrown ball.

Adcock, with most of his teammates in pursuit, charged after Gomez who ran to the dugout and disappeared up the ramp leading to the clubhouse. Order was restored by the umpires and half a dozen police officers. The Giants eventually won 8-6 in 11 innings.

Giles told Gomez in a telegram: "Your conduct in the game at Milwaukee last night was the most unsportsmanlike nature and could have had extremely serious results. For that conduct you are fined the sum of $250, payable at the league before game time July 23. This fine is to be paid by you personally and the New York club is not to reimburse you in whole or in part."

The telegram to Adcock contained no comment other than to notify him that he had been fined $100.

Both players were banished from the game after the incident which had 33,239 spectators in an uproar.

The suspension means that Gomez won't face the Braves in the remaining two games of the series here, Wednesday night and, Thursday.

But Manager Bill Rigney of the Giants said he planned to pitch him against Milwaukee "the first chance I get. That's the only way we can straighten this out. I can't hide him from them. . . . It certainly will be no later than next week when we play them in New York."

The league-leading Braves will play the Giants at the Polo Grounds July 24, 25, and 26.

Gomez had no comment Wednesday, but Rigney said he had talked with him and that the pitcher regretted the incident.

Burnes, Cohn Advance In Women's Golf

CLINTON — A match between two Judys — Judy Burnes of Des Moines and Judy Kimball of Sioux City — looms as one of the feature contests of Thursday's third round competition in the Iowa women's State Amateur Golf championship here.

Miss Burnes, co-medalist from Des Moines, defeated Kathleen Heningner of Davenport 2-up Wednesday in the second round while Miss Kimball took a 5 and 3 victory over Bonnie Reid of Keokuk. Miss Kimball, a long-hitter, went out in 39 as compared with a first nine 44 carded by Miss Burnes.

Another youngster, Andy Cohn of Waterloo remained in the favorite's niche by easily defeating Judy McCoy of Indianola 5 and 4 Wednesday. She shot par golf on the outside nine. Miss Cohn's Thursday opponent is Mrs. Waldo Lohmiller of Davenport who gained a 6 and 5 victory over Mrs. Stan Simmons, also of Davenport.

Pearl Van Eschen of Ackley defeated Linda Nordyke of Ames 1 up to earn a Thursday match against youthful Sharon Fladoos of Dubuque who Wednesday eliminated Mrs. E. W. Eslinger of Clinton 5 and 3.

The other quarter-final match sends Mrs. Robert Van Horn of Des Moines against Linda Cahill of Keokuk. Mrs. Van Horn coasted to a 7 and 6 victory Wednesday over Mrs. Harry Schultz of Clinton while Miss Cahill was eliminating Mardelle Hertzberg of Davenport 3 and 1.

Snider, Fan Forget Fight

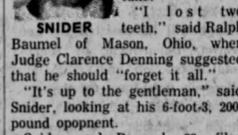

CINCINNATI — Duke Snider, the fiery center fielder for the world champion Brooklyn Dodgers, agreed, along with the fan with whom he exchanged punches Tuesday night, to forget it Wednesday, but the harmony a police judge tried to create was a bit off tune.

"I lost two teeth," said Ralph Baumel of Mason, Ohio, when Judge Clarence Denning suggested that he should "forget it all."

"It's up to the gentleman," said Snider, looking at his 6-foot-3, 200-pound opponent.

Snider and Baumel, 33, filed charges of assault and battery against each other after a brief altercation on the field Tuesday night following a 4-3 victory by the Cincinnati Redlegs over the Dodgers. Both charges were dismissed.

Both of them agreed that Baumel said: "What's the matter, Duke? Ain't you got no guts?" Snider said that as he moved toward Baumel, he was hit on the lip. He said, "I might have swung back."

Favor Snead In PGA Golf

CANTON, Mass. — It takes a strong back and a bold hitter to win the match-play marathon known as the PGA Golf Tournament, and that's why all the boys are talking Sam Snead around the Blue Hill Country Club.

The annual battle of the teaching and touring pros begins Friday, and the 43-year-old Snead is one of the few topnotch players still willing to buck the taxing five-day grind.

Semi-retired Ben Hogan, who has only won once (1948) decided after his 1949 automobile accident that the rigors of the tournament were too tough. National Open champion Cary Middlecoff has never played in the event again.

Snead occupies the favorite's role with a group of match play fighters including Tommy Bolt, Walter Burkemo, Shelley Mayfield and the defending champion, Doug Ford. Ford beat Middlecoff in the 1955 final.

The tournament opens with 64 first-round matches. Two rounds of eliminations are scheduled Saturday and Sunday. The 36-hole semifinals are slated Monday and the 36-hole finals Tuesday.

PHILADELPHIA SHORTSTOP GRANNY HAMNER escapes a run-down and scores in the 7th inning of the game of the Cub-Phil twin bill Wednesday. Cub third baseman Don Hoak, rear with ball, and Hobie Landrith, (15), could do nothing as home plate was left unguarded. The Phils swept both games of the doubleheader, 6-4, 6-1.
