Good Job, Well Done

An unusually pleasant and unusually encouraging sign that SU Students are taking an interest in more than football games and politics;

While the results of the mock election may not have any validity as far as indicating how the national election will go, or for that matter, how the state election will go, the value of these mock elections may be in the stimulus provided by the election process itself.

There is nothing like actually doing it to get the "feel" of the process and early interest and understanding may establish a sound basis for activity in the future.

Incidents and Student Disinterest

By Omar Carmichael

Student disinterest did not turn out to be a problem in the 1956 Homecoming activities. A lot remains to be done in student participatory voting procedures. The two organizations took advantage of the opportunity to get students interested in the issues and the election process and made good on the opportunity.

We support the idea of a permanent campus political organization for the discussion of issues and the election procedure. This need not be a permanent group; it could be a group for the various election periods. The organization could be a part of the Student Senate. It would provide a forum in which students could discuss issues and the election processes.

Like most successful things, the mock election did just happen. There were several periods of "on again, off again," the problem of the university was that the student interest would warrant the trouble. The "on and off" aspect of the election probably excited many students, and made campus political discussions competitive. This created a larger turnout and marked the mock election campaign.

Finances were a problem that was suitably exercised upon the two student political groups, the Young Republican and the Young Democratic. These organizations took advantage of the election to require some involvement and interest in the election process.

Student disinterest did not turn out to be a problem in the election, and for that the student union can take part in. Drake University held a mock election, its returns were published and the students were asked to vote.

If student disinterest did not turn out to be a problem in the election, and for that the student union can take part in, the student disinterest is to be expected in the election campaign.

The Daily Iowan

The Daily Iowan is an independent, staff-written, student-edited, non-profit daily newspaper, published weekly, by the students of the University of Iowa. The Daily Iowan is an independent newspaper, unaffiliated with the University of Iowa or any other institution.

The students are taking an interest in more than football games and campus politics.

While the results of the mock election may or may not have any validity as far as indicating how the national election will go, or for that matter, how the state election will go, the value of these mock elections may be in the stimulus provided by the election process itself.

There is nothing like actually doing it to get the "feel" of the process and early interest and understanding may establish a sound basis for activity in the future.
SUI Faculty String Quartet Opens Chamber Music Concerts Sunday

The SUI string quartet will present the first of a series of chamber music concerts Sunday at 8 p.m. in Shambaugh Auditorium of the Library. The program, given by family members of the SUI department, will be open to the public free of charge.

Composed in the program will be works of Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, Schubert, Shostakovich, Schoenberg, and Barbirolli. The concert will be preceded by Soli violist Pardis Ramezani, member of the Muncie String Quartet, and will be conducted by Robert Shoemaker, assistant professor of music.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — A group of 12 men, including four former St. Paul's boys, have been trapped in a coal mine in eastern Pennsylvania for more than a week. They are believed to be alive, but their location remains unknown.

Lost Hope of Saving

The miners were trapped in a mine near Scranton, Pa., when a methane explosion occurred. The mine's ventilation system was destroyed, trapping the miners underground. Rescuers have been working to locate the men, but so far have been unsuccessful.
