Beyond Des Moines

The three-man majority on the Des Moines city council fired Police Chief Howard Eade and replaced him with someone who would acquiesce to their will, in effect, by legislative fiat. For what purpose the councillors wanted to replace Eade, they did not say, though at least one of them took pains to explain that Digital Images and gambling (in comparison with other Iowa towns) was worse in Des Moines.

The council majority consistently tried to influence Howells comportment. They repeatedly urged him to fire police chief Howard Eade and replace him with someone who would assert their will. Des Moines has a reserve obligation. Then they were never able to find a replacement.

They can point to Dc Moines as an alleged example of what happens if a mayor can't get along with Howell. They said by firing police chief Howard Eade, they were able to find someone they liked better to replace him. They repeatedly urged him to fire police chief Howard Eade and replace him with someone who would assert their will. Des Moines has a reserve obligation. Then they were never able to find a replacement.

Wants No Strings To South Asia Aid

By JOHN BLAISELY

American economic assistance to South Asian countries should be given with no strings attached, President E. R. Meusser of the Harvard University Graduate School of Business Administration said in a talk here Thursday.

Meusser pointed out that those countries which desire help and are sufficiently motivated would bring better economic results.

"The best we can do for them is to help them develop and a country which is politically stable can develop on its own," Meusser said.

The Harvard economic professor added, "South Asia has a very limited ability to develop to its own advantage. It needs economic help but it cannot easily develop on its own.

"Some countries are backward by any standards and they could use help. But they must be willing to help themselves."

Meusser pointed out that there are 100 countries which have aid from the United States for agricultural purposes and that out of these 100, only a few have developed in the right direction.

"It is better to give aid to countries which are politically stable and which are willing to develop on their own."

Meusser also said that the United States should give aid to countries which are politically stable and which are willing to develop on their own.
