Up Goes the Budget

(From the Des Moines Tribune)

It appears to be a foregone conclusion that federal government costs and expenditures are turning upward again. The most conservative estimates are that President Eisenhower will present a 72 billion dollar budget to congress next month. That would represent an increase of approximately three billion dollars over the current fiscal year.

Regardless of the compelling circumstances that now appear to make this increase necessary, it is not news that will be joyfully welcomed by the taxpayers, members of congress or the administration.

The one comforting aspect of the spending increase is that the high level of the nation's economy is capable of producing the revenue needed for financing these increased costs. Full employment, higher wage levels, greater production and steady levels of corporation profits hold a promise of yielding increased tax revenue that will match increased government costs without resort to inflationary deficit spending.

The possibility of a tax reduction, however, appears to be definitely out of the picture.

A large part of the pressure for increased expenditures comes from the military departments. Rapid advances being made in the development of new weapons — guided missiles, supersonic planes, atomic submarines, atomic cannon — are forcing us into a stepped up re-equipment of our armed forces. Costly research programs are involved.

Never before has the armament race been more costly or more subject to rapid change. There is no end to this race immediately in sight. Until there is, we have no choice but to keep up our defenses to the maximum of our ability.

World tensions are responsible for another large chunk of the increased federal government costs. The need for foreign aid expenditures appears to be growing.

For the first time in a decade, a crack has appeared in the Iron Curtain. Should we be prepared to take advantage of a larger break if revolt in other satellite countries occurs? Should we bolster the economics and defenses of countries breaking away from Russian control? Can we afford to let things drift to an uncertain outcome in the potentially dangerous Middle East?

These are questions President Eisenhower has had to consider. They are the questions members of congress will have to answer when the foreign aid appropriations come before them. And they should be pondered also by the taxpayers, who ultimately must pay the bill.

Unless we are willing to throw away much of what has been accomplished during the past ten years, there appears to be little choice but to increase spending for foreign aid.

Here at home, the new federal highway program and the proposed school aid program account for the major expected increases in federal expenditures. Agricultural assistance programs also appear certain to require more money. Congressional pressure for the building of atomic power plants by the federal government could result in large expenditures.

There will be the usual demands for public works and improvements, all of which are becoming more costly as a result of higher wage levels and material costs.

All of these things involve difficult choices that must be made by congress and the people, themselves. And none of them represent reductions in the current rate of spending by the federal government. The choice, if one is made, is in the amount by which government costs are to be increased.

Only the miracle of peace and security against World War III could make that choice an easy one.

Oh, No!

(From the University of Cincinnati News Record)

When the powers that be allowed the price of filter tipped cigarettes to rise to thirty cents a pack, the News Record editorial board pondered, but decided to maintain a discreet silence.

When middle aged matrons joined the teen age mania over Elvis Presley, and rock and roll, we debated hotly, but again refrained from comment.

In fact, when Marquette University officials outlawed kissing goodnight in front of dormitories, the News Record voiced only a small protest.

But now the final blow has fallen. The administration of St. Francis College has officially forbidden the practice of going steady on that campus. This seems to include not only the accepted definition of going steady, but also the practice of walking to and from classes in the company of the same person too often.

We have only one question to ask: "What's this older generation coming to?"

Doctors Seek 'Spare Parts' For Humans

By ALTON BLAKESLEE (AP Science Reporter)

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Scientists here have made significant progress toward the goal of someday giving you new glands, skin, a kidney or a heart to replace your own old, sick and missing organs. They have partially repealed a law of nature which stands in the way. They succeeded in making skin grafts "take" and live in mice of a different strain. The secret was to give mice an injection of ground-up skin before the skin graft was made.

This feat could provide a key to future transplanting of skin and other organs between humans to save and extend lives. Nature's law right now prevents transplanting skin or kidneys or other organs from one person to another. For some reason, your body will set up a reaction to destroy the borrowed tissue.

You can transplant skin from one part of your own body to another successfully. And skin from an identical twin will survive on his twin's body. But skin from any other person lives only temporarily, then it dies.

The same thing happens ultimately to a kidney taken from another person, unless he's your identical twin.

Transplants of bones and arteries work well when taken from someone else, even after being frozen or dried and stored in a "bank." But these grafts don't stay alive or come to life in your body. They serve as a scaffold or bridge for new growth of your own bone or artery tissue.

The cornea or window of the eye can often restore sight to the blind. But the cornea is not tissue which is served by circulating blood.

The great medical goal is to learn why living bodies destroy living tissue borrowed from someone else. If that problem can be solved, then many of us need not die from an ailing kidney, sickened heart, worn out glands, or burns that had destroyed great areas of skin. We might someday even receive new arms or legs.

The supply of borrowed parts could come from healthy persons killed in accidents, or dying of ailments that didn't involve the organs someone else needed.

Many brilliant scientists are trying to solve this problem, and they have turned up numerous clues.

A scientific team here at the University of Kansas Medical School succeeded in making skin transplants live for more than a year so far, even though the borrowed skin came from mice of a different genetic strain. A year is half to a third the normal life span of the mouse.

Accomplishing this were Creighton A. Hardin, M.D., a surgeon; Alvar A. Werder, Ph.D., professor of microbiology; and Perry Morgan, Ph.D., an immunologist.

Power Shifts To Stalinists In Russia

By WILLIAM L. RYAN (AP Foreign News Analyst)

The Kremlin's shakeup of its planning staff is more than an economic decision by the Communist Party Central Committee. It indicates the beginnings of a far reaching political realignment growing out of the Soviet Union's bitter experiences in Poland, Hungary and Yugoslavia.

A gradual shift of the Kremlin back toward Stalinism is noticeable. The Stalinist group in Moscow has been piling up argument after argument against the Krushchev-Bulgarian line of sweetness and light. The Krushchev-Bulgarian wing of the collective leadership can remain the nominal leaders only through sharp concessions to the other side.

The recent squabble between Pravda, Moscow's political bible, and the Yugoslav Communists was most revealing. In this Pravda said, as clearly as any Communist organ can be expected to speak, that force is necessary to keep Communist power from crumbling.

Pravda accused the Yugoslav Communists of "revisionism." This means that the Yugoslav exposition of what was wrong in the Soviet satellite empire touched an exposed Soviet nerve. The Yugoslav argument in effect was that Moscow was wrong in trying to keep Communism in power in Eastern Europe by total dictation from the Kremlin.

Thus, Pravda was saying that rejection of force to preserve the Communist system wherever it might be installed was evidence of "revisionism," and to the Communists, "revisionism" is a mighty big sin.

The Yugoslavs, who knew their Soviet Communists well, have been wary all along that the trend in Moscow has been back toward Stalinism. In the argument with Pravda, the Yugoslav Communist newspaper Borba expressed fear that since the Hungarian revolt, the U.S.S.R. leadership was "switching back to the methods which the Yugoslavs rightly hoped and still hope would disappear." Only in an atmosphere of crisis can a back-to-Stalin movement prosper. In order to exercise it, the Soviet Union must generate outside troubles to relieve internal pressures.

Professor Reports On Weight Control

(Special to The Daily Iowan)
COLUMBUS, Ohio — If you're overweight and have become discouraged about the value of exercise in cutting weight and getting in good physical condition, Professor Frank Sills of SUI has data which will reverse your views.

Speaking to members of the College Physical Education Association Friday afternoon, Professor Sills reported the effects of exercise observed in students in college physical education programs. Dr. Sills, an associate professor of physical education for men at SUI, spoke at the association's 60th annual convention, which closes today in Columbus.

Although exercise does not take the place of diet in controlling body weight, it is still an important factor in weight control, Sills said. Recent studies have indicated that participating in physical activity regularly will enable an individual to control his body weight within normal limits, Dr. Sills reported.

Weight change is not necessarily a good guide to the amount of fat lost, Dr. Sills explained, since increase in muscle density caused by exercise may offset the fat loss, cancelling out or cutting down weight loss which might be expected.

Special conditioning exercises given to overweight students at SUI over four months brought a 6.5 percent mean weight loss, Professor Sills said, adding that during the same period these students made a mean gain of 148 percent on a physical fitness test which included such activities as situps and shuttles.

Other findings of the studies showed that the cross-section area of muscle may be increased by exercise, posture may be improved, and the soft tissues of the body affected even to the extent that body type may be modified.

Increase in the cross-section area of the muscle is accompanied by an increase in strength, Dr. Sills said. In an overweight person, the increase in muscle would not be apparent in external girth measurement, which might even decrease with exercise, he pointed out.

Developing a good understanding of body mechanics plus the strength and coordination to take and maintain good positions will lead to good posture, the speaker explained.

Studies have shown that the body type most favorable for developing physical skills is the mesomorph, or muscular individual. Both the endomorph, or fat man, and the ectomorph, or lean individual, are limited in the skills they can achieve. A combination of muscularity and leanness may be a greater advantage in some activities than muscularity alone, Dr. Sills reported.

Letters

Race

TO THE EDITOR:

Recently I received a set of application blanks for admission to the Graduate College. I note that in at least one spot, the applicant's "race" and "church preference" is asked.

To find that a public university still found need to ask such questions of its applicants was, to say the least, shocking to me. I had thought that most enlightened public institutions in the United States would be willing to accept each qualified student as a human being, regardless of race, creed, or national origin.

Perhaps I am just being oversensitive to something which has no significance to University officials. The information may, of course, not be used for "quotas," discrimination, or other anti-democratic purposes. But if this is the case, why ask for the information at all.

The misuse of information about "race" and "church preference" in the past is reason enough to be suspicious of finding such information asked for now, and reason enough to have it removed from all application blanks to the State University of Iowa. Or, the information blanks could be marked, "To be filled out at the applicant's option."

If this problem has already been discussed, and a decision reached, I would be interested to hear about it. If not, I hope what seems to be a noxious situation can be alleviated.

Crews Work Hard on Rose Parade Floats

By VIRGINIA LAZIO
(WSIU Staff Correspondent)

PASADENA, Calif. — Pasadena is getting ready for the Tournament of Roses parade on New Year's morning. Many of the floats are near completion and awaiting the final touches. Others are still in the intermediate stage.

Flowers won't be mounted on the floats until 72 hours before the parade. People assembling the floats have been working 12 hour days for the past two weeks. Their working day will lengthen as parade time approaches. They say there will be continuous 24 hour-a-day work on the floats the last two days before the parade.

Many of the reserved bleachers seats — at $5.50 each — are in position along the parade route in Pasadena. Thousands, however, will come to Pasadena very early New Year's morning to find vantage points along the parade route and then stand to watch as the 2-hour spectacle goes by.

Pasadena police estimate that 1.5 million people will come to Pasadena for the parade and other festivities planned. Nearly 1,300 police will be on duty. Many will be extra personnel on duty, costing the city of Pasadena about $33,000.

The biggest problem anticipated by the Pasadena police is the traffic problem. Helicopters will cruise over the entire city to spot places where traffic congestion is at its worst, to dispatch extra policemen to those areas.

One thing has revolutionized this year's float construction. It is a plastic spray called "Cacoone," a spray used on ships being "moth-balled" by the U. S. Navy. It's cutting down the number of man-hours being put into the building of the floats, but the number of hours needed in constructing a float still range from about 2,000 to 3,000 hours.

The Big Ten float, the one on which Miss SUI, Sandy Lohner of Sioux City, will ride will have some 4,000 flowers on it. It will cost $6,500.

The most expensive float in the parade will cost about $35,000 and the least expensive float about $3,000.

Accuses Astor

LUCILL STIGLICH, 25-year-old brunette model, filed assault charges Thursday against John Jacob Astor, wealthy socialite, charging he "spit in my face and struck me with his hand." She is at liberty under bond pending trial of his complaint that she broke in a door at his Miami, Fla. residence and created a disturbance.

3 Reporters Visit China; Lose Visas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department Friday revoked the passports of three U. S. newsmen who entered Red China in defiance of the department's ban on travel to that country.

A department announcement also said "their cases are being called to the attention of the Treasury Department in view of the relevant provisions of the Trading with the Enemy Act."

The statement, read by White, emphasized that Red China's continued detention of 10 Americans is "special impediment" to the travel of Americans in the Communist-held mainland.

This is the reason the department has given all along for its ban on American travel there.

The three newsmen include William D. Worth of the Baltimore Afro-American, and a Look Magazine reporter-photographer team.

The Look magazine team was reported to have arrived last Wednesday in Peiping from Moscow. They were named in dispatches from Peiping as Edmund Stevens, a reporter stationed in Moscow, and photographer Phillip Harrington.

At the time, a New York spokesman for Look refused to confirm or deny the report.

Worthy crossed into Red China through Hong Kong last Monday.

White called reporters together and read them the following statement:

"The Department of State has learned that three U.S. newsmen have gone to Communist China despite the fact that the passports issued to them for travel abroad were specifically marked not valid for travel to Communist China."

"They did this although the United States government opposes travel by American citizens to an area where their fellow citizens are held as political hostages and where the United States cannot provide normal diplomatic and consular protection."

"As a result of this misuse of the passports issued to them, their passports will be made valid only for return to the United States."

"Their cases are being called to the attention of the Treasury Department in view of the relevant provisions of the Trading with the Enemy Act."

"It should be clearly understood that in taking this action the United States is not motivated by any desire to deny to the American public information about Communist China."

"As the Department of State noted on Aug. 7, 1956, the Chinese Communists have created a special impediment to the travel of Americans in the area which they control. They have imprisoned American citizens and employed them as political hostages for bargaining purposes."

"This obstacle to travel by Americans has not yet been removed despite our efforts to secure the release of the Americans now imprisoned."

Last August the Red Chinese invited a number of American newsmen to visit their country. The invitations were turned down after the State Department notified the reporters that U. S. policy banned such travel.

White said he assumed the passports of the three men would be picked up and stamped good only for return home as soon as they arrived some place where there was an American consular official.

Legislators Plan Fair Employment Law

DES MOINES (AP) — Plans to enlist support for a proposed Fair Employment Practices Law in the 1957 Legislature were set in motion here Friday.

Names of nine senators and 17 representatives who will be asked to sponsor and co-sponsor the bill or bills also were selected.

Both steps were taken at a meeting of the executive board of a recently-formed Committee for Employment on Merit.

Fifteen persons attending the session included representatives of the United Packinghouse Workers of America, League of Women Voters, Catholic Woman's League, Episcopal Diocese of Iowa, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and Polk County Labor Council.

The committee was formed after the Governor's Commission to Study Discrimination in Employment made a report recommending enactment of a state law with "enforceable powers."

Ike Seeks Fighting Power in Mideast

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Eisenhower Administration has revived the idea of possibly asking Congress for "fight-if-necessary" presidential authority in the Middle East.

The suggestion came from the State Department as one way of putting Russia on notice that Middle East aggression would not go unchallenged.

Congress' reaction to the idea was cold when it was last broached eight months ago.

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, in a move further dramatizing U.S. interest in the Middle East, disclosed Friday he will fly to New York City Sunday to confer with United Nations Secretary Dag Hammarskjold on the "whole Middle East situation."

Dulles will be back in time for a New Year's Day White House meeting with Mr. Eisenhower and congressional leaders of both parties.

Two senators took opposite sides Friday in comment on the report, first published in the New York Times, that Mr. Eisenhower is considering asking Congress for authority to use U.S. armed forces as he deems necessary to maintain the Middle East peace.

Sen. Mike Mansfield (D-Mont.) said he would oppose any attempt by the United States to act alone. He said the solution to Middle East problems should remain in the United Nations.

Sen. Alexander Wiley (R-Wis.), on the other hand, said: "I think it is in the judgment of the executive it is necessary that President Eisenhower have this power. I would favor it." Wiley is a former chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Officials said Mr. Eisenhower and Dulles were expected to talk to the congressional leaders about possible standby authority for the President to use U.S. troops in the Middle East if he deems that necessary.

Mr. Eisenhower was specifically granted such authority for the Far East in early 1955.

Last April 10, when Arab-Israeli border clashes threatened to destroy the Palestine truce, Dulles sounded out congressional leaders at a State Department meeting on possible similar authority for the Middle East.

The reaction was negative. Some members of Congress by that time were having second thoughts about their approval of a resolution spelling out standby authority for the Far East.

In effect, the resolution lined up Congress in advance on the President's side should he find it necessary to fight Red China, then menacing the Nationalist China stronghold of Formosa.

Navy Probes Sailor's Death Near Oxford

Navy and civil authorities Friday investigated the death of a Naval prisoner whose body was found Thursday five days after he was reported to have escaped from a guard while enroute by train from Des Moines to Great Lakes, Ill.

The dead man was Seaman's Apprentice Everett Eugene Breneman, 22, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa. His body was found near the tracks of the Rock Island Lines close to Oxford, about 17 miles west of Iowa City.

The escape of Breneman and another prisoner, Dwight Melson of Des Moines, was reported by Delwone B. Bigger, a petty officer first class who had been assigned to escort the men to the Great Lakes Naval Training Center.

At Great Lakes, a Navy spokesman said that Bigger reported the two prisoners fled while the train was stopped in the Iowa City station at 4:20 p.m. Saturday. Melson was seized that evening by police but Breneman was not found.

The Navy spokesman said a preliminary report from a Navy investigator from Cedar Rapids indicated that Breneman may have fallen from a train while attempting to make his way west from Iowa City.

Breneman was listed as absent without leave from Great Lakes where he had completed a term of two months and 15 days, with time off for good behavior, imposed by a special court martial for an earlier AWOL offense when he was absent from his station at Quonset Point, R.I., from Jan. 23 to Aug. 16.

Breneman's most recent arrest was made by police at Iowa Falls, Iowa, Dec. 6. He had been in jail at Des Moines until turned over to Bigger.

The Navy spokesman said Bigger's account was disclosed to correct an earlier report that Breneman was killed in the act of fleeing from Bigger.

Uncle Sam Lets Iowans Know 1957 Is Close

DES MOINES (AP) — Uncle Sam's reminder that 1957 is near an end are being received in the mail by thousands of Iowans.

Most of some 950,000 residents who filed federal income tax returns for 1955 will have received their 1956 forms before Jan. 1.

The forms are mailed out from Internal Revenue offices at Kansas City, Mo., but on completion are to be returned to the Iowa director's office in Des Moines.

Judge Gives Boys Extra Practice for Misdeed

AURORA, Ill. (AP) — Five Aurora youths have been ordered to wing snowballs across the Fox River for three hours this weekend as punishment for breaking a truck windshield with one.

And Aurora Police Magistrate Bob W. Robinson Friday also ordered the boys to write the Ten Commandments 20 times daily for five days. He imposed a 7 p.m. curfew on the boys — 14 to 17 years old and all charged with malicious mischief.

In the three-hour throwing stints Saturday and Sunday will be Larry Zakosek, 16, Alex Bumber, 15, and his brother, Michael, David L. Podschweit, 16, and Robert Jesman, 17.

Supervising the punishment will be Larry's father, John. The tosses will be made from the Zakosek front yard which runs along the river. The Fox is 50 to 75 yards wide at that point.

The truck windshield was broken Thursday night while the boys were throwing snowballs at each other.

What if a snow ball lands in the river? Robinson didn't say.

Now that the holidays are over, the Hawkeyes in Pasadena are turning serious attention toward their tour of Oregon State on January 1. But for a few days pleasant distractions were fun. DePaul Edges Iowa, 73-72, in Overtime

2 Free Throws Beat Hawks' Last Comeback

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — DePaul fought off a determined rally by Iowa to edge the Hawkeyes 73-72 in an overtime thriller Friday in the semifinals consolation bracket of the Dixie Basketball Classic.

Behind by nine points early in the second half, Iowa staged a great rally behind the shooting and ball handling of Clarence Wardlaw to tie the score at 65-all at the end of the regulation game.

Iowa went ahead twice in the overtime, once by one point and again by two points, but DePaul came back each time to tie the score. With 50 seconds remaining, DePaul's Capt. Dick Heise sank two free throws to give DePaul a 73-70 edge.

Wardlaw hit on a goal with 11 seconds left to cut the margin to 73-72. DePaul had possession as the game ended.

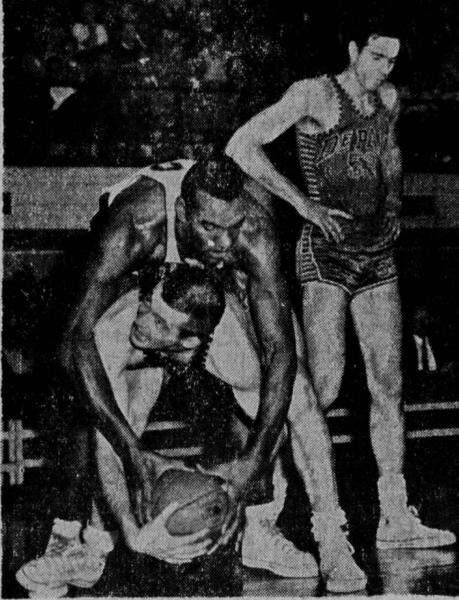

It was Wardlaw who dropped in a long shot from the side court with eight seconds remaining to tie the score in the regulation time.

Heise, with 23 points, led DePaul while Iowa was guarded by Wardlaw with 23 and Dave Gunther with 21.

Herky Sez..
By LARRY DENNIS

PASADENA, Calif. — Iowa Coach Forest Evashevski, surprisingly enough has made a very good impression on the Los Angeles writers, usually considered some of the "toughest" in the business. Evy got off to a bad start when, apparently through a misunderstanding, he cut short the picture-taking interview session which had been scheduled.

But he loosened up at a party and before the night was over had the scribes eating out of his hand.

Since then the writers have been enthusiastic over the cooperation Evashevski is giving them. Frank Finch of the Los Angeles Times put it into words when he said, "I've got enough quotes from him for five days. His cooperation has been wonderful!"

There have been some clashes with the press out here. For instance, there was the time when the television photographer came wandering onto the Iowa practice field shooting "the way our linemen were blocking, for crying out loud," as Evy put it.

The photographer hadn't been aware that Monday morning only was set aside for the press, so he apparently felt he had a right to take his pictures during the afternoon.

Needless to say, this didn't go over well with Evashevski. Then Wednesday afternoon Evy, cut short the picture-taking by Los Angeles photographers at Disneyland. The camera-men had both Iowa and Oregon State players lined up in an impossibly cramped position, and after about ten minutes Evy (in the absence of a Tournament of Roses official) broke it up and told the players on both teams to go their merry way — which they did.

This also was a source of irritation to the Los Angeles photogs, although in my opinion they were being unreasonable in their demands.

Apparently Evy is trying to make the best impression possible as a representative of the Big Ten out here.

One quality which has been discussed frequently — and admiringly, I might say — is Evashevski's inherent honesty. Bud Furillo of the Los Angeles Herald-Express put it this way: "Duffy" Daugherty (Michigan State Coach), for example, would talk for hours and not say anything. When Evy speaks you've got the straight goods."

The odds favoring Iowa in its New Year's Day tilt with Oregon State have jumped to 9½ points despite Evashevski's somewhat pessimistic comments concerning his team.

Evy is moaning that the Hawkeyes have a definite lack of speed and that anyone who rates them a favorite is out of his head.

This dark philosophy apparently hasn't affected those "experts" who are predicting the Rose Bowl outcome.

Sunshine, Nothing but Sunshine
The weather every day out here has been beautiful — clear skies and temperatures near 80. From what we can gather, it is a little unseasonable. For example, I went shopping with Bob Brooks of Radio Station KCRG in Cedar Rapids Tuesday noon. Bob wanted to buy a swimming suit, and had considerable difficulty doing so. Seems they are out of season.

The Huntington-Sheraton has a beautiful heated swimming pool. The combination of the warm sun and the perfect water tempts a man to give up his cold, existence back in Iowa.

At any rate, it's the first time I ever risked getting a sunburn in mid-December.

So far, there's been little trace of the famous — or infamous — Los Angeles smog, although the mountains in the distance sometimes get a little hazy.

This is all very nice, but according to legend out here, if the weather is nice now, it will rain either on Christmas or New Year's Day. It was sunny on Dec. 25.

The swimming pool at the hotel, incidentally, has been a boon to the wives of coaches and officials who brought their families along. The pool area has been filled with the shouts of the Iowa youngsters.

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Fabulous Wilt (The Stilt) Chamberlain scored 36 points and manhandled both backboards Friday night in leading the Kansas Jayhawks into the finals of the Big Seven Basketball Tournament with a 74-56 victory over the Oklahoma Sooners.

Iowa State's Cyclones, paced by its great little Gary Thompson who scored 20 points, outlasted Kansas State for a 74-64 victory Friday in the Big Seven basketball tournament consolation.

Except for a brief 17-18 deficit midway in the first half, Iowa State led all the way. The Cyclones once led by as much as 23 points in the second half, and were ahead 30-26 at halftime.

Kansas State center, Bob Boozer, salvaged one honor for the Wildcats. He was high point man with 29.

But Thompson by far and away outshined the field with his brilliant floor play and clutch shots off Iowa State's tricky offense.

'No. 19' Suit of Former Iowan To Be Retired—

Bob Feller Leaves Baseball

By CHARLES R. HORNICK
CLEVELAND (AP) — Bob Feller, who came out of Iowa as a kid with a bashful grin and blinding fastball 20 years ago to become one of baseball's greatest pitchers, hung up "No. 19" Friday.

The former righthand speedball artist announced at a news conference that he is retiring as an active player to devote more time to his Cleveland insurance business and other interests. "I could have gone with a couple of other ball clubs, but anything I FELLER might have done with them would have taken the edge off the success I have had with the Cleveland club the last 20 years," Feller said.

Had a nice visit with Jim Kelly, coach of the United States Olympic track team, who was out here for the Los Angeles Times dinner Thursday. Jim was pretty high on Iowa's Charles (Deacon) Jones, a 3,000 meter steeplechaser on the Olympic squad.

"Jones will be eventually one of the best distance men in collegiate circles," Kelly said. "Of course, the steeplechase was an unfamiliar event to him, but he ran a terrific race in the preliminaries. In the finals, he tried to start up with the leaders from the start, and he just burned himself out."

Jim also revealed that Ted Wheeler, ex-Iowa mile ace, was in terrible shape because of a cold and hay fever during the game. "If Ted had been the odds-on favorite, he wouldn't have done any good in the 1,500," he declared.

Among the Iowans I've run into out here are Jack Heeger, formerly of Sioux City and an ex-Daily Iowan sports writer, and Dean Sander, who once worked at WSUI. Heeger is now with United Press here in Los Angeles. Sander is one of the men in charge of the "It Could Be You" television show — the show on which Bill Krause, Hawkeye senior manager, appeared last week.

Herb Schoener, Iowa end in the 1940s and later with the Washington Redskins, visited press headquarters here at the Huntington-Sheraton the other night. Herb, now a local steel salesman, looks as fit as he did when he and twin brother Hal were terrorizing Big Ten backfields.

Jerry Jenkinson, Iowa reserve left end, became slightly irate at the Tournament of Roses Christmas party. Jerry loaned his beautiful new Rose Bowl watch to the lady magician for a trick. After various manipulations, the watch ended up in a locked box tied around the neck of a live monkey. Seems the monkey, while imprisoned there, decided he liked the taste of the watch band. He left a few teeth marks there, but Jerry guessed he'd live through it all.

Quote from Frank Bloomquist, Iowa's stellar left guard: "If we win, we're just another Big Ten team that got the job done. But if we lose, we're the goat of the conference. We've got to win."

HOLIDAY FESTIVAL
NEW YORK (AP) — Manhattan College advanced to the final round of the Holiday Festival Basketball Tournament, defeating Ohio State 82-67 in the opener of elimination doubleheader before 7,500 Madison Square Garden fans Friday night.

Manhattan triumphed over the crowd with its easy triumph over the taller and more rugged Buckeyes, who were so impressive in their first appearance here last Wednesday.

Evy Named L.A. Times 'Coach of Year'

Hagler, Nocera Stay On Iowa First String

By LARRY DENNIS (Daily Iowan Sports Writer)

PASADENA, Calif. — Here in this land of monotonous sun Iowa and Oregon State approach the wire in their preparations for their January 1 meeting in the Rose Bowl.

The Hawkeyes took it easy Friday for the second straight day, practicing only an hour and 20 minutes, in the smog filled East LA Junior College Stadium.

There was no scrimmaging during the brisk, lively workout. The Hawkeyes concentrated on offensive and defensive maneuvers and worked on punts, kick-offs and extra points.

Collins (Mike) Hagler and John Nocera again ran with the first unit during the workout. Chances now seem strong that they will replace Bill Hoppel and Fred Harris at right halfback and fullback, respectively, come next Tuesday.

Forest Evashevski, Iowa mentor and Los Angeles Times "Coach of the Year," Friday, reiterated his Thursday statement that "if we were playing the game tomorrow, Hagler and Nocera would be in the starting line-up."

"They are looking better than Hoppel and Harris right now. I think Nocera is even a little better than Harris on pass defense," Evy continued. "Of course, Hoppel is more reliable on defense than Hagler."

(The Associated Press reports from Los Angeles that Prothro will lead off with Francis, Earnel Durden at right half, or wing back, Tom Berry at fullback and Gerry Laird at quarterback, or blocking back, Iowa Coach Forest Evashevski will shoot first with Ploen, halfbacks Don Dobrino and Bill Hoppel and Fred Harris at fullback.)

Jerry Jenkinson, originally the number 4 end, was running in the number 2 position. Converted right end Toni Hatch replaced him at times on defense.

The Iowa left end situation again approached the critical mark with the death of Bob Hausman's stepfather. Hausman returned to Gary, Ind. for the funeral and definitely will be lost to the Hawkeyes for the Rose Bowl tilt.

Evashevski said in his daily press conference Friday that the Hawkeyes contact work definitely was over. "We're tapering off now," Evy revealed. "We'll have no more contact."

Evashevski did say that the squad will practice on Sunday. Working out on religious days has been against his policy in the past. Evy said Thursday that he considered it just like a Monday before a regular game, so he apparently plans to carry it through with the Sunday drill.

The Hawkeyes will work out lightly on Monday. They will not practice in the Rose Bowl tent. Permission to do so was denied Friday by the Tournament of Roses Committee.

Evy reported Friday that the squad is in good physical condition, as good as when the season ended November 24. The mental condition of the squad, however, is a mystery to him, the Hawkeye head man admitted. "This squad is the funniest group I've ever coached. You never can tell if they're going to be up or down for a ball game." Evy said that there is no indication that the Hawks are not ready mentally.

Evy optimistic over Iowa's chances next Tuesday? "No, I'm not," he said. "If I said that it would mean that I think we are going to win. I think the game is a toss-up. I can't say that talk of Prothro's about our big size advantage," he continued. "I think the two lines are about equal and I don't know of two better halfbacks in the country than Joe Francis and Paul Lowe."

Evashevski Thursday was named Los Angeles Times "Coach of the Year" at the newspaper's annual "Parade of Champions" sports award dinner.

Whitey Piro Turns White

By LARRY DENNIS (Daily Iowan Sports Writer)

PASADENA, Calif. — Had lunch with Whitey Piro, Iowa end coach, Christmas Day. "You heard about Gibbons, didn't you?" I asked casually.

"No, what about him," he said. "Had an automobile accident this morning," I replied.

Whitey turned pale. "How bad is he hurt?" he asked in a trembling voice.

"Nobody hurt."

Five minutes later, when Whitey had recovered his composure, he said, "I'm glad you didn't tell me that I sat down or you'd have ruined my whole meal."
