The Daily Iowan is written and edited by students and is governed by a board of five student trustees elected by the student body and four faculty trustees appointed by the president of the university. The Iowan's editorial policy, therefore, is not an expression of SUI administration policy or opinion in any particular.

Tidal Wave

(From the Milwaukee Journal)

With a tidal wave of students heading for our public universities and colleges, there is increasing sentiment for tightening requirements.

The University of Illinois made a move in that direction recently, as have a few others.

THERE ARE some logical arguments for it. The number of highly qualified and promising youth who will be knocking at college doors will be increasing faster than college budgets, facilities and staffs are apt to expand.

Private institutions, for one reason or another, will probably expand very little, relatively, and will be in a position to be much more selective.

They are likely to take a smaller proportion than now of the applicants with only fair to poor high school records, the "calculated risks" — except, perhaps those who may be the children of loyal and generous alumni.

SO THE BULK of the burden will fall on public institutions such as the University of Wisconsin and Wisconsin State colleges.

By a most conservative estimate the number of students in these institutions will about double in the next dozen years, if there is no change in admissions policy.

WHEN FACED with the staggering cost of making provisions for that many students, the question is bound to be raised: Why accept applicants who haven't done even average work in high school?

In most cases they are much less likely to complete their college work creditably than the applicants with superior high school ranking.

It takes more time, talent and money to teach dull students than bright students.

THE UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN, along with most mid-western universities, will admit almost any resident high school graduate recommended by his principal. (Nonresident admission standards are higher.)

And many a principal will hesitate to refuse such a recommendation. The refusal would cause hard feelings and reflect perhaps, on the standards or programs of his own high school.

SOME OTHER state universities won't take applicants who were in the bottom half, third or quarter of their high school classes unless they pass an entrance examination.

Still others have academic measuring sticks which, in effect, bar absolutely those with poorest high school records.

The University of Wisconsin could boost admission requirements and make them more rigid. So could state colleges.

It is not rules but results, however, which should determine need of changing such important policy for our state university or colleges.

THE RESULTS suggest that there may be better ways to screen out least promising applicants than by boosting the arbitrary academic barriers.

Red China's Dilemma

(From the Des Moines Tribune)

Red China's zigs and sags during the Hungarian and Polish revolutions were even more puzzling than Russia's.

Just before the massive Soviet tank attack which crushed the armed Hungarian revolt, the Red Chinese government issued a statement saying that "the Polish and Hungarian peoples' demands for democracy, independence and equality... are fully justified." The statement denounced "great-nation chauvinism" and said it must be resisted.

A few days later Red China was wholeheartedly supporting the ruthless Soviet repression in Hungary. Later still it said flatly that to "depart from the dictatorship of the proletariat to prate about so-called democracy" was counter-revolutionary.

Red China has its "Hungaries" in North Korea, Viet Nam, Laos, Tibet, and its "Middle East" in South Asia. There was an armed revolt in North Viet Nam at the same time as the Hungarian revolt. In the face of such danger, Communists had to forget their internal struggle for advantage and rally round the red flag to protect their home bases.

Red China is heavily dependent upon Soviet Russia for capital, technical experts, and machinery, and will be for some time. It is working toward economic independence, but it does not wish to be orphaned prematurely.

The Gifted Student

What Can Be Done to Hold His Interest

In High School Classes?

(From Time Magazine)

Though he had an IQ well above 125, the dark-haired ten-year-old boy had his teachers at San Francisco's Roosevelt Junior High School near despair.

Day after day he would blurt out answers he knew were wrong, was so bored with his lessons that he rarely bothered to do them. His teachers had a name for him: He was just one more "gifted drifter."

In Des Moines's Roosevelt High School another bright boy had a different problem.

He did his work conscientiously but he usually kept mum in class because he "didn't want to be the one who always knew the answer."

To teachers in every school across the U.S., such talks of hidden or squelched talent are common.

In 1951 the National Manpower Council reported that of the top one-fourth of all U.S. 18-year-olds, 60% never went to college and 20% did not even finish high school.

What can be done to encourage the gifted student? Ten years ago, says Robert Havighurst of Chicago, scarcely anyone was asking that question. "Today, educating the gifted has almost become a fad."

SKIP OR ENRICH. Though the fad is still largely in the talking stage, scores of U.S. cities have joined the talent hunt.

But once the talented student has been identified by elaborate tests and teacher reports, the experts disagree on the best way of treating him.

In some places there are special schools for the bright (e.g., The Bronx, N. Y. High School of Science). Some cities have set up special classes; others allow a few gifted students to accelerate or skip grades. But since the experts do not agree on whether acceleration or segregation might do the talented more harm than good, many cities cautiously keep their gifted in regular classes and give them extra work — a procedure that the educators call "enrichment."

Like the majority of school systems with programs for the gifted, Dade County, Fla. uses a combination of methods. It has a separate program for a group of children with an IQ of 130 or over.

But for the most part the schools keep the bright with their regular classmates, separating them only in certain subjects. A fifth grade studying reading might have three groups — one reading at third-grade level, another at fifth-grade, the rest plunging into such classics as "Moby Dick" and "The Swiss Family Robinson." The schools are also on the prowl for such students with a special talent as the eleven-year-old girl who shows promise of becoming a topnotch composer.

Cleveland's gifted spend part of their time in regular classes, the rest in "major work" classes, which now have 715 boys and girls in eight elementary schools.

While Baltimore likes to keep most of its gifted in their own grades, it does have four high schools in which students can do four years' work in three.

THE MISSIONARIES. In some cities, local colleges and universities are beginning to help the schools with their bright students.

Last summer the University of Texas organized an intensive five-week course in advanced chemistry for high-school juniors. It stirred up so much enthusiasm, says Education Dean L. D. Haske, every year, Engle stated.

One-third of the most recent edition of "Poets Under Fire" was written by two former students of Engle, Henri Coulette and Bert Mezey. "Poets Under Fire" is the poems of the best poets in America.

Three of the top four Philadelphians, Emmanuel Torres, G. M. Rolando S. Timio, G. M. Dominador I. Ilio, are or were students of Engle.

Theodore Holmes, a forty-year-old student, was named "Scribblers" magazine as one of the three top new American poets.

One student, Julia Maria Morrison, A2, Iowa City, has published poems in "New World Writing" and "The New Yorker."

They ate, drank and slept chemistry, and they are regular missionaries back in their schools.

With the help of Reed College, Portland has started one of the nation's most ambitious programs for bright high-school students.

One mathematics seminar took up everything from calculus to topology (a division of geometry dealing with the properties of figures unchanged by deformations not involving tearing or joining).

A history seminar finished the regular senior high-school work on "American Problems" during the first third of the year, spent their remaining months studying the development of law, delving into Hammurabi's code of laws and discussions of such works as Mill's On Liberty and Vernon Parrington's Main Currents in American Thought.

While regular English classes reviewed grammar and read abridged editions of Homer, superior students examined various translations of the full text, supplemented their readings by writing college-level papers.

RESENTMENT OR PRESTIGE? Will such special treatment breed of intellectual snobs, or represented by their less gifted contemporaries and deprived of a well-rounded education?

Judging by the evidence so far, most experts say no. Portland found that its program created a greater respect for scholastic ability.

While only two out of 865 gifted students claimed they had become popular because of the special work, 150 said they had actually gained in prestige.

Indeed, special classes are sometimes essential for certain superior talents. If the gifted are afraid to seem too bright or go unchallenged by equal minds, they can become complete failures in regular classes.

And what about the charge that even partial segregation is undemocratic?

Says Director Boyd McCandless of the Iowa Child Welfare Research Station: "It is an interesting quirk of our national mind that we condemn segregation of the intellectually gifted as undemocratic, but we do not think twice about segregating other talents. No one expects the slight, late-maturing boy to play on the football team or the tone-deaf youngster to be in the school band."

Adds Psychologist Paul Witty of Northwestern University: "The gifted must be identified, guided and challenged from the elementary grades right through college. They are as much a natural resource as oil or uranium — and far more perishable."

One Hopeful Aspect

(From An Article by James Reston in The New York Times)

There is one hopeful aspect of all this, for the British, in their search for a new way of life, are thinking seriously at last of making common cause with a united Western Europe. But every crisis that weakens them inevitably leads Washington to take over their burdens.

The question, therefore, is whether the new world is going to continue to assume the responsibilities of the old, whether the government in Washington, which is trying desperately to level off its overseas expenses, is prepared to assume new costs with every crisis; in short, whether Washington is going to deal with these questions piecemeal at the point of danger, or to get to the heart of the crisis, which lies not in the Middle East but in the divisions and weaknesses of the Atlantic community, and particularly in the failure of the British to replace their old system with the political and economic unity of Europe.

Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

A FISHERMAN in the Arabian Sea pulled in one day a strange copper bottle with a golden seal. When he broke it open, a cloud of smoke rushed out, and turned into a huge genie. "I'll revenge myself for my imprisonment in that bottle," roared the monster, "by killing everybody I see, and I will begin with you."

The quick-thinking fisherman said, "Go ahead and kill me. Still I won't be convinced that a giant like you could be contained in that tiny bottle!"

"You won't, hey?" boomed the genie. "Doubters like you really burn me up. Look at this, you twerp!"

Condensing himself in the twinkling of an eye, he poured himself back in the bottle.

"Amazing!" chuckled the fisherman as he replaced the cork and threw the bottle back into the sea.

Congress Woman Gets Footwear Shiner

By GEORGE DIXON

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A sedate gentlewoman, who professes to believe in settling all arguments via parliamentary, not Queensbury, rules, should not go about the halls of Congress with a black eye.

Or, if she does, she should be prepared to encounter a measure of skepticism when she explains she acquired the shiner because her expensive footwear didn't fit.

REP. KATHARINE ST. GEORGE, the rich GOP lady from Tuxedo Park, N.Y., currently finds herself in this anomalous position. She blames the shanty on her French slippers, and becomes quite aggravated when her explanation produces only digs in the ribs and sky winks.

The story Mrs. St. George tells, with a forthrightness that should overwhelm the most intransigent skeptic, is that she wished to be able to keep an open mind on President Eisenhower's message to Congress and felt she couldn't keep her mind loose in tight shoes.

So she donned a pair of Paris boudoir imports and began the long hoof from the House office building to the Capitol. But halfway through the subterranean tunnel she flopped out of her slippers and fell on her face.

Rep. St. George is a philosopher, however, as well as a stateswoman. When last seen making her way into the house Republican cloakroom behind a pair of dark glasses she was offering this aphorism:

"Most women are accused of wearing shoes too tight. But mine were too loose."

AFTER THE BATTLE to curb the filibuster was lost, one of the Capitol Hill reporters was assigned by his office to go out and sample the reaction of the "Man on the Street."

But it was cold outside, and the Capitol was full of tourists, so the newspaperman decided he could do the sampling comfortably indoors.

In Statuary Hall he found two tourist-looking types standing in front of the statue of Will Rogers, so he figured they might be liberals.

He asked one whether he thought debate should be limited, and the fellow replied he didn't know but he'd heard that senators talk too much.

THE SECOND MAN suffered no such uncertainty. He launched into a violent diatribe against the anti-filibusterites — and wound up by introducing himself as Rep. Joe L. Evins, of Tennessee, one of speech-limitation's most violent opponents.

"I was beginning to suspect you weren't a tourist," finally interrupted the reporter, and executed a strategic escape.

SENATOR WAYNE MORSE of Oregon, one of the preachers of gab restriction, although he does precious little practicing, had an interesting after-the-vote set-to with Senator Richard Russell, of Georgia, leading filibuster champion.

Morse later related the encounter to Senator Lister Hill, of Alabama, another talk-as-long-as-you-like.

"DICK RUSSELL just stopped me in the cloakroom," Morse told Hill. "Dick said, 'Don't talk to me — and don't come into Georgia again.'"

"What did you say?" gawped Senator Hill.

"I said, 'nonsense, Dick. I still like you, no matter how you talk, and I am going to do something very nice for you. I am going to make you chairman of my campaign deficit committee.'"

"How did he take that?"

"Just the way I wanted. He went away laughing."

SINCE THEY began televising joint sessions of Congress, about the only people in the whole country who can't see the president delivering his message are the newspaper reporters covering the event.

We are in the gallery directly above him, and can't see him for the overhang.

I think I'll stay home one of these times and see what he looks like.

FAST DRAW

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — Adolph Mogavero, 36, was making like Gene Autry. His "six-gun" was fairly leaping from the holster, his draw had become so lightning fast, in fact it leaped so fast, police say, it got away from him.

And, as it landed on the floor, it exploded, sending a .38 caliber slug through Mogavero's left calf and into a nearby wall.

Off the Fence

U.S. Is Becoming More Positive Friend of Dependent Nations

By J. M. ROBERTS

(Associated Press News Analyst)

The United States, after years of fence-sitting in deference to her European allies, is moving more and more into her traditional posture as the friend of the dependent nations.

THE COMMUNIST EFFORT to play on resurgent nationalism since World War II has given the term a very bad name.

The President, however, referred to it in his State of the Union message Thursday as akin to the motives of the American Revolution.

In his Middle East message last week, he said the United States would not interfere with internal political developments in states which she would help to economic stability in order that they might preserve their independence from Russia.

LAST FALL, Secretary Dulles made remarks at a press conference which were later modified, but which were nevertheless interpreted at home and abroad as endorsing the will for independence in all countries, regardless of the orbits in which they now revolve. The American reaction to the Anglo-French action against Egypt has been widely accepted as putting new emphasis on this position, and presaging the end of colonial action by Western nations.

ANOTHER INTERESTING facet of the President's address was the way he related domestic affairs to foreign affairs.

He said American prosperity and development depended on maintaining peace against the world's well-known troubles which he cited.

He reiterated the need for his Middle East program. He expressed belief that communism was running into fatal troubles although it might take years for its defeat. He stressed the need for free world unity.

But he painted this well-known picture as a background for what the United States must do herself to advance and safeguard her constitutional aims for human liberty, human welfare and cessation of effort for human progress.

Reward Offered For Finding Body

SPIRIT LAKE — A $500 reward was offered Friday to any person who finds the body of Wayne Swezey, high school student who was drowned along with a companion while duck hunting on West Okoboji Lake Nov. 23.

Announcement of the reward was made after the Iowa State Conservation Commission reopened to ice fishing Emerson Bay, an arm of the lake where Swezey and Robert Wyatt, 17, drowned.

The reward offer is good until Feb. 20, the date set by the conservation commission for removal of ice fishing shacks from the lake.

The bay had been closed to ice fishermen because warm weather in late December and early January made the ice unsafe.

The reward money will come from the Lakes Emergency Fund, started after the two boys drowned, which has reached $9,200.

The fund was started to finance an all-out effort to recover Swezey's body. The plan is to make the fund a permanent thing for use whenever any future large-scale emergency operation becomes necessary in the Iowa Great Lakes area.

Methodist Conference Buys Youth Camp Site

RED OAK — The Iowa-Des Moines Conference of the Methodist Church has purchased a 60-acre camp site on the east side of new Viking Lake State Park near Stanton.

The land was purchased from Mr. and Mrs. Fred Pfeiffer, Red Oak, and a committee is being set up to start work cleaning up and building a road into the site for use this summer by youth groups of the Methodist Church in southwest Iowa.

March of Dimes Contributions Start

With $10,000 by early February as a goal, donations for the annual March of Dimes polio fund raising campaign are beginning to come in.

The Iowa City JayCettes have mailed more than 12,000 letters with addressed envelopes for contributions by county residents. Those who do not receive the March of Dimes mailers may still contribute by sending money to Box 530, Iowa City.

Ralph Runkle has been named the 1937 March of Dimes county chairman. Runkle is being assisted in the drive by Vern Nagatz, county co-chairman, and Richard Oliphant, city chairman.

Runkle said, "The iron lung canisters and dime boards will be distributed by the Women of the Moose. The iron lung canisters have not arrived in Iowa City due to a shortage at the March of Dimes headquarters in Des Moines, but about 400 dime boards have been distributed."

A porchlight campaign is planned later this month and will be handled by the Iowa City JayCees. Details of several other projects will be announced later.

Mrs. Betty Young, Cedar Rapids, has been named honorary county chairman. She has been a patient in the polio ward at University Hospitals since 1931.

Killed, 17 Hurt In Ohio Explosion

COLUMBUS, Ohio — One person was killed and 17 others hospitalized Friday afternoon in an explosion which rocked a 1-story building in northwest Columbus.

The blast flattened three inside walls of the research and testing laboratory at Ranco Inc., a firm that manufactures thermostatic controls.

The explosion occurred in the firm's laboratory when a 20-pound tank of liquid propane gas exploded. The gas spread throughout the large room and then the gas itself blew up.

Dead was Paul Burke Jr., 21, of Columbus, a lab employee.

In addition to those hospitalized, at least seven persons were treated at the scene for burns and other injuries. Another employee was injured when a wall fell on him.

THE OUTSIDER

HAGGERSTOWN, Md. — Biazio Castellucci, a driller and blaster for a cement company, was retiring after working 30 years in the firm's quarry. Hawks Face Gophers, Try for 1st Loop Victory

Height Lone Advantage for Iowa Tonight

By JIM NEY
(Daily Iowan Sports Editor)
Iowa seeks its first Big 10 basketball victory of the season at 7:30 here tonight when it meets arch-rival Minnesota who will be trying to avert its first loss.

Apparently the only advantage the Hawkeyes will have, besides the home court, is in height. Iowa's starting aggregation will average practically 6-4 while Minnesota's will be 6-2.

The Gophers, rated a title contender again this year, will send an all-veteran quintet against the young Iowa team. Their starting lineup tonight will be the same five who forced Iowa's championship club of a year ago into an overtime win at Minneapolis late in the season.

The Gophers appear to have one of the most potent front line scoring punches in the conference this year. Forwards George Kline and Dave Tucker, and center Jed Dommeyer accounted for 74 points a week ago when Minnesota took a tight 91-88 decision from Illinois. The victory established them as one of the teams to beat this year for anyone with title aspirations.

The young Hawkeyes have been having their troubles getting started this season. Having the misfortune of meeting three of the league powers in their first trio of games, the sophomore-dominated Hawks are still winless in conference play as they enter the game tonight.

The first two Iowa games were losses to tough Ohio State and Frank Howard, and to Illinois, the team many experts picked to finish on top of the league.

The Iowa-Minnesota series, an interesting one in any sport, has certainly been close in basketball in the past four years.

The Hawks have come out on top six times during this time, but three contests have gone into overtime and four others have been decided by not more than four points.

Only one game in the four years has been one-sided. The encounter at Iowa City a year ago, 84-62 for Iowa, was the single game of the eight.

And Ozzie Cowles' men remember that one only too well. Almost certainly revenge for it will be one of the prominent thoughts in their minds as they take the floor tonight.

Iowa Coach Bucky O'Connor says his inexperienced team is developing and "one of these nights will put together 40 minutes of good basketball and surprise somebody."

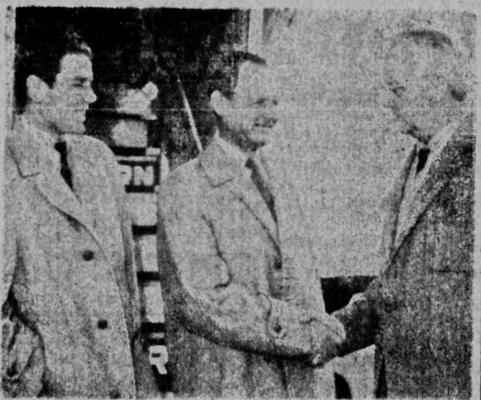

O'Connor says his team's fast break has been working better and that the rebounding has improved. Right now he is looking for more consistency in scoring, and better accuracy from the free throw line.

STARTING LINEUPS

Swimming, Fencing, Gymnastics—

Hawk Winter Sports Season Opens Today

The fortieth swimming team at the University of Iowa developed by Coach Dave Armbruster takes off on its ten-meet schedule today against Wisconsin at Madison.

And this could be a strong team, one which is anxious to defend its winning streak of nine Big Ten dual meet victories. In 1956, the team won all eight contests.

Nine lettermen are listed but the most important one, Lincoln Hurring, won't return from Australia until February after competing in the Olympics. Hurring is the National Collegiate and Big Ten 100 and 200-yard backstroke champion.

Team balance is fairly good, even though several of the swimmers will not be available until the second semester opens next month. The veterans include Earl Ellis, distances and individual medley; Tom Jacobson, 100 and 220; Harold Begel and Bob Pratt, 50 and 100; Tom Christensen, breaststroke and individual medley; and Ken Miner and Jake Quick, divers.

Hill, breaststroke is a second semester returnee but Begel will complete his eligibility with the two January meets.

One of the finest sophomores in many years is Clinton's Gary Morris, who holds national high school 20-yard course records for the 40, 100, 200 and 220-yard freestyle races, made in 1955. Another strong sophomore is Jim Austin of Honolulu, T. H., a good butterfly and orthodox breaststroke specialist.

Enough veterans to produce strong teams, along with a scattering of promising sophomores, are present on the University of Iowa's gymnastic and fencing squads which open their seasons here this afternoon.

Gymnasts face Indiana at 1:30 p.m. in the Fieldhouse gym and the fencers take on Wisconsin and Indiana in dual meets starting at 1 p.m. on the basketball court.

There are seven lettermen in gymnastics, including the great Sam Baillie, who competes in all seven events and who has scored 628 1/2 points in two seasons.

Baillie will be helped in scoring efforts by Staffan Carlsson, the Swedish junior who competes in six events. Other veterans are Bill King, Bill Voge, Godfrey Stych, Mike Stolte and Stanford Beebe, Bob Justice, trampolines and tumbling, is a fine sophomore prospect. Another good sophomore, Joe Tim, will become eligible in February.

In fencing, Frank Craig, the new coach, is drilling three major lettermen and four winners of the minor letter. Coach Craig, who lettered here in 1953, 1954 and 1955,

Evy Denies California Offer

CHICAGO (AP) — Head Football Coach Forest Evashevski of Iowa's Rose Bowl championship team Friday denied reports he was offered the University of California head coaching job and said he intended to remain at the Hawkeye school.

Evashevski was in Chicago to narrate films of the Rose Bowl game won by Iowa over Oregon State 35-19, before the Executives Club of Chicago. He left late Friday for Washington to receive the Washington Touchdown Club's "coach of the year" award tonight.

Evashevski, one-time Michigan blocking star for Tommy Harmon, conceded he had conversations with U. of California representatives Thursday night at the NCAA convention in St. Louis.

A San Francisco report stated California's Athletic Director Gregg Engelhard and Executive Director Paul Hastings offered Evashevski the Bear coaching job from which Lynn (Pappy) Waldorf resigned last fall.

Evashevski, who last fall achieved one of Iowa's most brilliant coaching feats in the third year of a 10-season contract said he talked "about a lot of things" with Hastings and Engelhard, but stressed that no job offer was made.

"I've known Gregg and Paul for a long time," said Evashevski. "We talked about some problems connected with the California coaching job, but no specific offer was tendered."

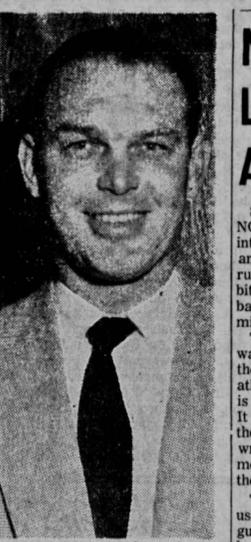

"I like the Midwest and plan to remain here," Evashevski said. He took over as Hawkeye coach in 1952 only a few hours after he had resigned at Washington State.

Iowa won the Big Ten title with a 5-1 record and finished third in the final Associated Press poll with an over-all mark of 8-1.

Evashevski admitted that California offered "great possibilities for a coach."

As far as a championship season and Rose Bowl assignment at Iowa were concerned Evashevski pointed out that such accomplishments "naturally come few and far between. You go uphill all the way in tough competition."

Reviewing the Rose Bowl game, Evashevski said that just three days before the meeting with Oregon State he despaired of Iowa's attitude. "The boys seemed lethargic, like they had gone Hollywood," he said. "But they snapped out of it and surprised me again New Year's Day like they had all seasons."

NCAA Group Levels Blast At Pro Ball

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The quietest NCAA convention in a decade got into a lively hassle Friday over an amendment to its amateur rules and stamped its okay on a bitter attack on professional baseball by the NCAA Baseball Committee.

The controversial amendment was designed to put a ceiling on the amount of financial aid an athlete may receive if his ability is considered in making the award.

It barely passed on the floor of the 51st annual convention after a wrangle about whether government grants should be included in the total figures.

The Baseball Committee report used some of the strongest language ever employed by the college baseball men in their negotiations with the professional leagues. Convention delegates referred it to a special committee which will study relations with all pro sports.

The report, presented by Colgate's Everett D. Barnes in the absence of Committee Chairman John Kobs of Michigan State, virtually accused the major league of acting in bad faith in their dealings with the colleges and said "professional baseball wishes to reap the benefits of the college game and at the same time exploit and retard it."

The lengthy report of the 1956 TV Committee was accepted and its "blank check" resolution for the appointment of a new committee, which would have a free hand in establishing a 1957 football program was passed. The only object was the Rev. Edmund Joyce, Notre Dame faculty representative, who said "for the record" that Notre Dame still doesn't believe in TV controls.

The amateur rule which started the big argument was one which would limit athletic scholarships to athletes plus other possible grants and earnings, to a total which would not exceed "commonly accepted educational expenses."

The fleet centerfielder was quoted in Detroit Wednesday as saying, "If Cincinnati gets a little pitching help, the National League race could be a runaway."

Reached by telephone at Cleveland where he is winding up a good-will tour for a Milwaukee Brewer, Bruton said:

"I couldn't make a statement like that, not the way I feel about our own chances this year. What I meant was that Cincinnati could win the pennant if it gets a little pitching help."

Illinois should have little trouble re-establishing itself as the prime conference title contender against a Wisconsin team which has won only two of 10 starts this winter. The lone Illini setback came at Minnesota 91-88.

West Team Can Run Also

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Head Coach Paddy Driscoll Friday discounted the supposition that his West team is strictly a passing outfit, its aerial weapon the main fear of the East team in the post-season Pro Bowl football game Sunday in Memorial Coliseum.

True, the head man of the National Football League Chicago Bears pointed out, he has tremendous passing game personnel in his three quarterbacks, his own Ed Brown and Bobby Layne of Detroit and Tobin Rote of Green Bay.

He also has such superb receivers as Harlon Hill, Billy Howton and Billy Wilson along with Rookie Leon Clarke of Los Angeles.

"But don't forget," said Driscoll, "the Chicago Bears always have had a strong running team and the Bears led the league in running this season."

The report, presented by Colgate's Everett D. Barnes in the absence of Committee Chairman John Kobs of Michigan State, virtually accused the major league of acting in bad faith in their dealings with the colleges and said "professional baseball wishes to reap the benefits of the college game and at the same time exploit and retard it."

Indiana Vs Purdue Tops Loop Agenda

Indiana's surprising Hoosiers risk their perfect conference record against arch foe Purdue in the top battle of Saturday's four-game Big Ten basketball program.

In other league contests, Minnesota (1-0) is at Iowa (0-2); Northwestern (1-0) invades Michigan (1-1); and Illinois (1-1) appears at Wisconsin (0-2) for a TV matinee.

Ohio State, which like Indiana has won both of its Big Ten starts for a 2-0 mark, is idle until Monday night when the Buckeyes will be host to Minnesota. Michigan State (0-2) is inactive until a Tuesday night nonloop joust at Notre Dame.

Indiana's neighborhood scrap with Purdue provides a sharp test for the Archie Dees-paced Hoosiers. Although the host Boiler-makers bowed to Ohio State 75-68 at Columbus last Monday, Coach Ray Eddy's club boasts the best over-all record in the Big Ten, 7-2.

Furthermore, the Boiler-makers whipped Indiana in their last two meetings. Purdue defeated Michigan State 72-71 in its other loop start. The Boiler-makers have a dangerous "Mutt and Jeff" combination in 6-foot-6 Lamar Lundy, football end; and 7 Joe Campbell, a star golfer.

Campbell with 110 points and Lundy with 106 back up Purdue's top shooter, Bill Grove, who has 126. Dees is almost the entire Indiana attack with 224 points. His closest teammate is Jerry Thompson with 95.

Illinois should have little trouble re-establishing itself as the prime conference title contender against a Wisconsin team which has won only two of 10 starts this winter. The lone Illini setback came at Minnesota 91-88.

The fleet centerfielder was quoted in Detroit Wednesday as saying, "If Cincinnati gets a little pitching help, the National League race could be a runaway."

Reached by telephone at Cleveland where he is winding up a good-will tour for a Milwaukee Brewer, Bruton said:

"I couldn't make a statement like that, not the way I feel about our own chances this year. What I meant was that Cincinnati could win the pennant if it gets a little pitching help."

'Misquoted' Says Bruton

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Billy Bruton Friday denied making a statement about Cincinnati's "Runaway" pennant possibilities that had raised eyebrows and temperatures among his teammates on the Milwaukee Braves.

The fleet centerfielder was quoted in Detroit Wednesday as saying, "If Cincinnati gets a little pitching help, the National League race could be a runaway."
