

SUI Negroes Asked To Vacate House

15 Neighbors Protest Move By Landlord

By JOHN BLEAKLY
Daily Iowan Staff Writer

Fifteen Iowa City neighbors signed a petition Tuesday protesting action taken by a local landlord who told two SUI Negro students to vacate a rented room by the end of the semester.

The students, Nate Williams, G. Nashville, Tenn., and Phillip Saunders, L.I. Mason City, received a letter Tuesday from Landlord Glenn M. Meeks saying he was asking them to leave his house because of circumstances beyond his control.

All those signing the petition live within one block of Meeks' house.

Meeks, a local insurance and real estate salesman, said Wednesday he received complaints on two different occasions concerning Williams and Saunders' presence in his house at 20 W. Harrison St.

A student tenant in the Meeks house, Dock Adams, G. Diehlville, Mo., said Wednesday that Meeks told him Tuesday evening that he had received two phone calls from "Harrison street residents" complaining about Negroes in the neighborhood.

Before that, Adams went on, Meeks had said objections came to him "through the grapevine."

The complaints showed, Meeks said, that the value of his and surrounding property would be reduced if Negroes rented space in his house.

The action is "nothing personal on my part," he went on. "I've got to stay in business here and something like this can hurt me."

"Some people thought I'd sold the place to a Negro family and I was sort of in bad over that," he explained.

Nine residents in homes neighboring Meeks' white frame house said Wednesday they had heard of no complaints concerning Williams and Saunders.

Meeks said he received no complaints on the students' conduct. "They've behaved themselves well," he said.

Saunders, a 1954 graduate of Cornell College, Mt. Vernon, has been living in Meek's house since last September. Williams moved in at the start of the spring semester.

Meeks said he was not at first aware that Saunders was a Negro.

"Phil is light-skinned and I didn't realize he was a Negro," Meeks explained.

"Williams moved into the house in January while I was out of town," Meeks said. "When I got back, I told Nate I couldn't let him stay."

Saunders said Wednesday that Meeks was present at the house the same day Williams moved into the room.

"He was there with Nate, myself and another student," he said.

"Meeks had told me to find a new roommate. He told me anyone I picked would be OK with him."

Williams said Wednesday Meeks was reluctant to let him move into the house last winter.

"He told Phil he couldn't have anymore Negroes living here," Williams said.

"Saunders answered 'I'm a Negro,'" he continued.

"Meeks said it was all right to have one Negro living here, but that anymore would be too many."

"He was afraid that the word would get around he was renting rooms to Negroes and his property would devalue."

Meek's eventually let Williams stay.

"He had already moved in," Meeks said, "and I had the rent money so I decided to let him stay. I told them we would see how things worked out."

Meeks said the students were staying at the house only "on a trial basis" and that he "couldn't see why there was any trouble" over his letter to them.

Meeks said he owns three separate buildings in Iowa City, all containing apartments. Saunders and Williams are the only Negroes to whom he rents.

The Meeks letter came as a surprise, Saunders said. "Meeks had told me April 20 that I could continue living in the house during the summer."

"He also said I could pick my own roommates."

Saunders said he knew of no tenants in the Meeks house who object to Negroes living there.

Williams, a 35-year-old musician, is at SUI on leave from Houston-Tillotson College, Austin, Tex., where he was head of the school's music department. He is studying for a Ph.D. in music here.

Saunders, 24, is a 2-year army veteran and is a first year SUI law student.

The petition circulated Tuesday was first signed by 17 immediate neighbors of Williams and Saunders. Two persons, both SUI students living in the Meeks house, later withdrew their names.

Tom McCarthy, A2, Tarrytown, N.Y., one of the two, said Wednesday he did so because "I was ignorant of some facts when I signed."

The petition registered a "strenuous" objection to "this outrageous example of racial segregation."

All but one of the 12 students living in the Meeks house knew of the petition, Adams said Wednesday. Five of the students signed the petition. Saunders and Williams did not.

John Reiser, A4, Oelwein, one of the five signers, hinted that more students did not sign the petition because "they want to keep on living here."

Adams said at least three of the students refused to sign because they didn't want to get involved.

Reiser spoke highly of Williams and Saunders. "They have been good tenants," he said.

"Meeks' letter was not written because of property damage."

Residents interviewed near the Meeks house voiced no hostility toward Williams or Saunders.

"They have been the quietest bunch of kids who ever lived there," said Mrs. L. L. Strickler, 21 W. Harrison St.

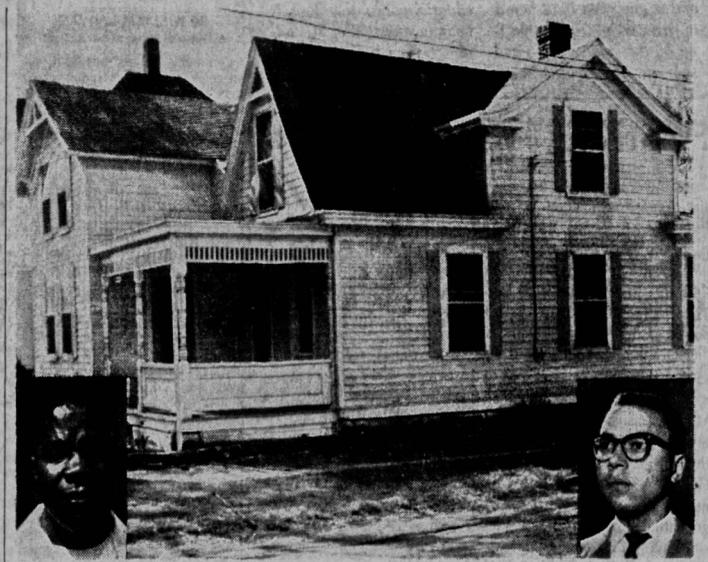

"I think it's terrible that they have to move," she added.

"I haven't heard any complaints about the boys at all," Robert Johnson, A4, Hawarden, of 30 W. Harrison St. said. "They've never caused me any trouble. It's all right with me if they stay."

"I've never heard of any complaints," George Leedom, 14 W. Harrison St. remarked. "I've got no objections to them living where they are."

Another neighbor, Orin Frantz,

NEGRO HOUSING—

THIS ORDINARY APPEARING white frame house, 20 W. Harrison, is the center of controversy today after two Negro students who rent here were asked to move by a real estate agent. Real estate agent Glenn M. Meeks told a Daily Iowan reporter that value of the property would be reduced if Negroes lived there. The students are Nate Williams, G. Nashville, Tenn., left inset, and Phillip Saunders, L.I. Mason City. This house shows the marks of age somewhat less than other houses in the neighborhood.

SPI To Pick Editor, Delays On Censorship

The question of censorship on the Daily Iowan may be dropped from the agenda of today's regular meeting of the SUI Board of Trustees of Student Publications because of priority of other matters.

Prof. Leslie G. Moeller, director of the School of Journalism and president of the Board said Wednesday that the matter probably will be passed over in favor of the selection of a new editor of The Daily Iowan, and recommendation for the appointment of a new SPI member.

"Selection of the editor must be made today," Moeller said.

Candidates for Iowan editor are Tom Slattery, A4, Chicago and John Bleakly, A3, Des Moines.

The main reason that the entire agenda cannot be handled this afternoon, Moeller explained, is because there will not be enough members for a quorum until 4:30.

The Board will discuss the freedom of the press question May 7 if it is not possible to take up today.

"When the freedom of the press matter is brought before the Board, Miss Benz will present her attitude and recommendations on the issue," Moeller said.

Eleanor Benz, A4, Iowa City, is the present editor of The Daily Iowan.

"She may bring with her to the meeting any Daily Iowan staff members that may have useful contributions to the discussion," he said.

The issue of press freedom came out of a student-faculty discussion of "Academic Freedom at SUI" April 4, when Kirk Boyd, A4, Davport, former Iowan editor charged that censorship was exercised on the Daily Iowan by faculty members.

Boyd's statements were contested by Prof. Hugh E. Kelso, Department of Political Science, who is a member of the Board.

The Board will also discuss whether or not future SPI meetings should be held open to members of the press.

Other business on the agenda for today include discussion of the budget for student publications, Hawkeye yearbook appointments and progress.

Liquor by Drink Hopes Look Dim

DES MOINES (AP) — A proposal to let the people of Iowa vote on whether to change the law to permit liquor by the drink in the state was in effect killed in the Senate Wednesday.

Death of the measure came on a technical point of order holding that the measure had been taken away from the Sifting Committee too soon and therefore was improperly on the calendar. A motion to suspend the rules and consider the measure failed.

Proponents of liquor by the drink had fixed their hopes on the measure after it became apparent that no liquor legislation would pass in this session.

I Like Ludwig

WE LIKE LUDWIG say Lynn Henderson, A2, Miami, left; Bruce Dorfman, A3, New York City, and Dorfman's wife, Sue, A3, as they listen to music of Ludwig van Beethoven. (See story p. 6). The three, with Mary Gregory, A2, Iowa Falls, are selling "I Like Ludwig" buttons at SUI. The movement was begun in New York City as an anti-Elvis Presley campaign by Dorfman's friend, Robert Cenedella. Profits from the buttons are being used to buy more buttons; eventually Cenedella hopes to use the proceeds for music scholarships.

SUI Council Approves Plan To Seek Student Insurance

Further investigation of group health and accident insurance for SUI students was given the go-ahead by the SUI Student Council Wednesday night.

M. L. Huit, Dean of Students, told the Council that the plan, if adopted, would be optional to the individual student and would offer protection in addition to that provided by the SUI student health program.

Administration officials are investigating only one company's program at present, Huit explained, but will look into plans offered by other companies as they are presented.

Huit said the plan under investigation would cost from $9 to $12 per student and would provide 24-hour, year-round protection no matter where participants were at the time of sickness or accident.

The plan would provide compensation up to $500 for each accident and $500 for any illness. Under the student health program students may receive up to 30 days hospitalization, plus examinations and special care within limits. This program is effective only while students are in school.

Statistics from the Student Health Council indicated that only about one per cent of SUI students exceed the limits of free care each year, Huit added.

The Council tabled a motion which would recommend that the University Parking Committee ban freshman cars in Iowa City next fall, and both freshman and sophomore vehicles in 1958.

The proposal was presented by Rod Miller, L2, Iowa City, chairman of the Council's parking committee and was tabled to permit further investigation by Council members.

Freshman and sophomore cars now comprise about 11 per cent of all student vehicles, Miller reported, and pointed out that expected increases in enrollment would add to the problem. Miller's committee estimates that 45 per cent of all SUI students have cars in Iowa City.

The proposal recommended that violators of the ban be expelled. Exemptions are provided for veterans, married students, commuters and handicapped persons.

Discussion on the proposal centered around the right of the University to forbid students to bring cars to Iowa City, and on the difficulties involved in defining the campus area if the motion were amended to apply only to campus parking.

The Council also voted $125 for payment of Hawkeye Pep Club debts. Bill Teter, L2, Des Moines, Council president, said this was in accordance with an agreement made last fall in which the Council agreed to underwrite pep club debts up to $300. The $125 was the only such payment required.

Hit Student Apathy Here

Ways of combating student apathy and building a stronger student government at SUI were discussed at the Wednesday night Student Council meeting by members of Instructor Donald Springer's speech class.

The panel, led by Judy Clark, A3, Preston, was invited by the Student Council to present their views on "the role of student government at SUI."

Other panel members were: William De Bruyn, A2, Garner; Bob Kunau, A3, Preston; Christine Price, A4, Ottumwa and Dean Ankrum, C3, Hayward, Calif.

A suggestion that all student organizations be subordinate to the Student Council to make that body truly representative of SUI students was made by Ankrum.

"The problems which other student organizations have with the SUI administration should be presented to University officials through the Student Council," he said. He suggested that liaison be established between student organizations and the Student Council.

Miss Price said that if the Student Council would take initiative in small matters, such as working to keep students off the grass, the Administration would be more willing to grant the Council added powers.

She pointed out that a human relations committee of the Council had an opportunity now to investigate the problem of two Negro students who may lose their Iowa City living quarters because of racial reasons.

William Teter, L2, Des Moines, Student Council President, said that the Council has no definite information on the incident yet. He suggested that the Student Council might make a study of Iowa City landlords to draw up a list of those willing to rent rooms regardless of race.

M. L. Huit, Dean of Students, said that his office "normally would be interested in a situation of this kind."

"We've got to get students to realize that the University provides an agency to handle such student problems."

The panel also questioned the present method of electing Council members and the Council president.

In reply to a suggestion that the president of the Student Council be popularly elected by the whole student body, Teter said,

"We can't get a popular president until the Student Council gets more power — the two problems go hand in hand."

"The president's power is limited," he said, "because the housing unit has power to impeach him."

Iowa House Stops Sales Tax Move

Senate's Solution Gets Knifed Again

DES MOINES (AP) — The House defeated late Wednesday the second attempt by conference committees to reach a solution to the sales tax controversy between the Senate and House. The vote was 60-44 to reject the latest proposal.

The Senate, about an hour earlier, had voted 30-18 to accept the second conference committee report on the matter. It also had approved the first committee's report Tuesday.

However, the result of the House vote is that a third conference committee would have to be appointed to make a new effort toward a solution.

As was the case of the defeat by the House of the first committee's report, the Democrats voted solidly against the second report and were joined by most western Iowa Republican representatives and some from other parts of the state.

Democrat opponents of the second report said it was "cut and dried" even before the committee met. The proposal was described as "a large last-minute sugar coated pill to get it passed and get out of here."

There also was an accusation that "railroad tactics" were used by the committee and that the proposal "smells of politics."

The bill would retain the sales tax at 2½ per cent for the next biennium with a provision that if there are any unobligated funds above $24 million at the end of each fiscal year, the surplus would be distributed to the school districts on an average daily attendance basis.

The measure, drafted by a second Conference Committee on a tax bill after the House had rejected a so-called flexible sales tax measure adopted by the first conference group, was described by Sen. Irving Long (R-Manchester), one of the conferees, as a measure which would assure enough money to pay all the Legislature's appropriations.

"It can't be said that we are building up surpluses in the treasury by collecting too much money in taxes because the extra money will be sent right back to the smallest taxing districts in the state in the form of school aid," Long said.

Opponents of the bill attacked it as one that would raise too much money and accused the Republican majority on the Conference Committee of agreeing on the report without consulting the Democratic members.

Sen. Sam Burton (D-Ottumwa), one of the two conferees who did not sign the report, accused the Republican majority of drafting a "cut and dried report right out here on the Senate floor."

"Once I got into the meeting I found that the whole thing was set and I didn't even have a chance to talk against it," Burton said.

Sen. Tom Dailley (D-Burlington) asked Sen. Long "isn't it a fact that you actually decided on a 2½ per cent levy and then looked for some way to use the money?"

When Long denied this, Sen. George O'Malley (D-Des Moines), declared,

"You have decided that one way or another you are going to ram this 2½ per cent sales tax down the throat of the minority and the Republicans who don't agree with the members of their own party."

"However, bad as this bill is, we seem to be making some progress. The rule of the yo-yo is gone. The rule of on again, off again, gone again, Finnegan is gone. Now we are down to the cut and dried rule."

O'Malley's references to "yo-yo" and "on again, off again, gone again, Finnegan" were two expressions used by Sen. Jack Miller (R-Sioux City), and Sen. Jacob Grimstead (R-Lake Mills), in discussing the report of the first Conference Committee Tuesday.

Miller described the flexible sales tax proposal, which could have reduced the sales tax rate from 2½ to two per cent and then raise it again during the biennium if quarterly checks by the state comptroller indicated the general fund balance would fall below a certain level or would rise above it, as "a yo-yo sales tax bill."

Tranquillizer Pills, Yo-Yos — A Gift

DES MOINES (AP) — Arrival of the May Day moved Sen. Jack Miller (R-Sioux City) Wednesday to deliver May baskets to his two chief adversaries on the compromise tax bill — Senators X. T. Prentiss (R-Mount Air) and J. Kendall Lynes (R-Plainfield).

The May baskets contained a yo-yo, tranquillizer pills, and headache tablets.

The yo-yo was representative of Miller's description of the floating sales tax measure which he said "goes up and down, up and down until the string gets tangled and the people get hit in the head."

Prentiss and Lynes both were members of the Conference Committee which drafted the compromise.

"I don't know what we are going to do — it is a very serious matter," Prof. Ralph L. Shriner, head of the Chemistry Department, said. "Our present facilities will be full by 1958."

Provost Harvey H. Davis said Wednesday enrollment in chemistry courses may have to be limited in the next few years. He expected the Regents would ask for money for the Chemistry building wing again next biennium.

The House bill also gave $295,000 for steam production and distribution from the Regents $565,000-annual request for Repairs, Replacements and Alterations (RRA).

The Regents' request for $550,000 for additional funds to build the new law building was cut to $350,000, and the $700,000 asked for equipment and an addition to the southwest corner of the library was reduced to $200,000.

The General Assembly appropriated $500,000 for the new law building two years ago. Phil E. Connell, assistant to President Virgil M. Hancher, said the cut in additional funds would probably mean that a smaller building would be built.

When asked for comment on the $200,000 slice, Dean Mason Ladd, of the College of Law, said, "I have no comment."

Several projects were given the green light by the House Tuesday: A $1,700,000 program of utilities expansion, $1,470,000 for the Pharmacy building, an increase from $130,000 to $150,000 for land purchase, $90,000 for new volatile solvent storage building.

The SUI Lakeside Laboratory at Lake Okoboji was given $30,000 for new quarters, and $150,000 was voted to remodel Westlawn dormitory. Regents plan eventually to make Westlawn into married quarters and integrate student nurses into the general dormitory system.

Plans to remodel the east wing of the General Hospital and convert it into an out-patient clinic were given $80,000, and $250,000 will go to equip the University hospital food service.

Lack of Funds May Hamper SUI Building

University Inspires Writers Says Poet

Henri Coulette
Young Poet

The university is a good place for a poet, said Henri Coulette, G. Angeles, Calif., who writes poems and teaches a course in understanding poetry at SUU. Coulette, 29, will give a lecture "The Young Poet, His Habits and His Habitat" at Cornell College, Mount Vernon, May 8. Describing the connection between modern poets and the universities as "a kind of patronage system," Coulette said that he disagreed with the view that poets find inspiration not available in the academic atmosphere of a university. "The only thing all poets must have is the gift of language," he said. "If a poet has that gift, the university can help him find out exactly where his talents lie and what direction to take in writing." The training available at the SUU Writers Workshop, Coulette estimated, can save the neophyte as much as five years of often wasted experimentation. "More than anything else," he said, "Writer's Workshop provides the poet with a community of writers, where differences in opinion help stimulate creative work, and where the student learns, through contact with both teachers and fellow writers, how to criticize his own efforts."

Coulette commented on the idea that modern poetry is too intellectual and difficult to understand. "The idea that anyone who can read a billboard or a newspaper should be able to understand poetry is simply not true. The reader, as well as the writer, has to work at it," he said. "Sometimes a poem is difficult to understand because the writer is confused," Coulette added, "but even a good poem will be difficult to understand."

Coulette described poetry as "a unique way of interpreting an experience — a combination of a statement and an idea. Through form and meter, the poet is able to make his statement and shape the emotions which he feels must accompany it."

"Poetry," he said, "helps the reader find out about other people, and in understanding others, we can begin to understand our own experiences."

Coulette received his B.A. in English from Los Angeles State College, Calif., and is working for a Ph.D. at SUU. He has published several poems in "New Campus Writing" and some of his other works are scheduled to appear in "New World Writing," "Paris Review," "Hudson Review" and a forthcoming anthology, "New Poets in England and America."

Concluding the program will be a woodwind quartet composed of Miss Korbelik; Margaret Steinmann, A2, Kahoka, Mo.; Sandra Williams, A2, Iowa City, each playing the flute, and Marjorie Frank, A3, Dover, Ohio, playing the clarinet.

Matrix Banquet Will Honor Outstanding Women Tonight

Two outstanding women, one an SUU student and the other an Iowa City resident, will receive awards for leadership and service in campus and civic affairs at the annual Matrix Table banquet at 6 p.m. today in the Iowa Memorial Union.

Mrs. Kay Metz, Chicago, of the Quaker Oats Company public relations department, will give the main address on "Women's Role in Today's World." About 100 women are expected to attend.

Candidates for the SUU undergraduate award have been nominated by campus organizations. The winner is being selected by a board of judges headed by Miss Helen Reich, assistant director of the Office of Student Affairs. Other judges are William Teter, L2, Des Moines, president of the Student Council, and Linda Gamble, A3, Fairfield, president of Associated Women Students. Last year the award went to Jobi Rankin of Tracy.

City women's clubs have nominated outstanding members to receive the award for leadership in civic affairs. The selection committee is headed by Mrs. Fred Pownall and consists of Mrs. R. F. Sheets, president of the Iowa City League of Women Voters, and Miss Janet Collins, society editor of the Iowa City Press Citizen.

Mrs. Metz is now serving as corresponding secretary of the International Press Club. Matrix Table is sponsored by the SUU chapter of Theta Sigma Phi, honorary professional fraternity for women in journalism.

The banquet gets its name from the bronze letter-mold called a matrix which is used by printing establishments to form metal into type. Each banquet guest will receive a small gold matrix as a souvenir. The two award winners will be presented with gold matrices on which their names and the award are inscribed.

Banquet arrangements are being supervised by Dorothy Schwengel, A4, Davenport, acting president of Theta Sigma Phi.

Trunk Affair Appears Not at All What It Is

MONROE, Wis., (AP)— Sheriff's deputies went into action when an excited motorist reported seeing a man "force a woman into the trunk of a car, close the lid and drive away."

Officers found the car at a local garage and ordered the owner to open the trunk. Inside was a garage mechanic trying to locate the source of a squeak for the owner.

The motorist who called police apparently had mistaken the mechanic's long shop coat for a woman's long coat.

'I Like Ludwig' Button Sale Wild

By WALTER KLEINE
Daily Iowan Staff Writer

Do you like Ludwig? Ludwig van Beethoven, that is. In the last five days, almost 200 SUI students have indicated that they like the master by purchasing "I Like Ludwig" buttons. "And we haven't even tried very hard to sell them," says Bruce Dorfman, A3, New York City, one of the quartet of SUI students who brought the buttons back from New York. "They just seem to sell themselves."

Help Atomic, Civil Defense, Says Menzer

Adequate knowledge of the effects of atomic explosions and radiation is the best protection during and after nuclear attack. Carl H. Menzer, SUI professor of Electrical Engineering said Wednesday at the Sixth Annual Labor Short Course at SUI.

In future wars, civilians will be in more danger than combat soldiers and must know what to do following nuclear blasts, Menzer said at the 8 a. m. session of the labor group, held at the Iowa Center for Continuation Study.

He emphasized that it is imperative for every person to support the Civil Defense program and to learn the procedures to be followed after nuclear explosions, especially procedures relating to re-entry of radiation contaminated areas.

Contaminated areas will be an important concern of those who survive atomic blasts, Menzer said.

Contamination occurs when atomic particles thrown out of the fireball settle to the ground. "Radioactivity frightens most people because they don't understand it. It deserves healthy respect, but it is not to be feared," Menzer said.

Training in the use of geiger counters, ion chambers and other detection apparatus can dispel much of this fear, he said.

Trained persons will be able to make accurate measurements of the degree of contamination in a radioactive area and can determine when decontamination work may safely begin, Menzer explained.

Supervisors who can take charge of decontamination operations immediately after an atomic disaster are essential if communities are to minimize casualties and work stoppage, he said.

Menzer recommended that all persons be supplied with dosimeters — small detection devices which record the amount of radioactivity to which a person has been exposed. The use of this instrument helps avoid dangerous amounts of radiation.

The belief that an area is contaminated forever if it has once been exposed to radiation is a misconception, Menzer declared. Radioactivity begins to decrease the minute the dust begins to settle after the blast.

The ingredients of the bomb determine how long radioactivity will persist, Menzer said. Some elements remain radioactive for thousands of years while others become inactive in seconds.

Radioactivity can be removed, but it cannot be neutralized, Menzer said.

"Decontamination is the process of removing radioactive material from a place where it endangers human existence, to a place where it can be lived with," he said.

"Washing with soap and water is the most effective way to remove radioactive substances from the human body," Menzer said. Clothing, because of its porous texture, usually cannot be decontaminated and should be buried, he explained.

Menzer demonstrated with radioactive iodine that properly wrapped foodstuffs are not harmed by radioactive materials.

Doctors from all parts of the nation will hear reports during the next ten days on treatment and research being conducted in the Department of Urology at SUI.

Dr. R. H. Flocks, professor and head of the department, will speak on the etiology of kidney stones before the American Association of Genito-Urinary Surgeons. The group meets today through Friday at Hot Springs, Va.

Dr. Flocks also will report on experiences at SUI in the management of cancer of the kidney.

Three members of the University's urology staff will participate in a meeting of the American Urological Association in Pittsburgh next week.

Dr. R. G. Bunge will participate in a symposium, Dr. D. A. Culp will present an exhibit, and Dr. Flocks will report on some aspects of the use of radioactive gold in the treatment of cancer.

SMILING PRESIDENT EISENHOWER accepts a bound volume at the White House Wednesday while posing in the rose garden with members of the National Council for the League of Women Voters. Making the presentation is Mrs. John G. Lee of Farmington, Conn., president of the League. The volume contained a document, signed by members of the national council, outlining the League's concern regarding conditions in the international field.

Ike May Appeal In Budget's Behalf

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower called Wednesday for financial sacrifices in the struggle for peace, and there were signs he might go to the public with direct appeals in behalf of his $71,800,000,000 budget.

Mr. Eisenhower made a special plea for his foreign aid policy in an off-the-cuff speech to the National Council of the League of Women Voters.

Earlier, at a White House meeting with Republican leaders of Congress, a general feeling was reported to have developed that the President should appeal to the people, over radio and television, for support of his foreign aid and other programs.

James C. Hagerty, White House press secretary, told reporters that Mr. Eisenhower "feels a great deal of misrepresentation" has been circulated about his budget and "he is going to point it out."

"I would think," Hagerty said, "the President would take the occasion quite frequently to express his opinions from time to time not only on the budget but also on other legislation he has mentioned in his messages to Congress."

An economy drive in Congress, more persistent than the usual ones that come along every spring, has imperiled much of the President's program, including his plans to spend $4,400,000,000 on foreign aid.

Sen. William Knowland (Calif.), the Senate Republican leader, reported after a White House conference there was a consensus that the President should go on the air to discuss the budget and foreign aid.

Next Mr. Eisenhower met with the Council of the League of Women Voters in the rose garden of the White House.

He told the women he would like to see, before he leaves office, an even bigger tax cut than the $7 billion one the Republicans claimed in 1954.

But, he said, the possibility of tax reduction depends on peaceful developments in the world.

In obvious reference to the cost of national defense against international communism, Mr. Eisenhower said: "As long as there is abroad a predatory force seeking to destroy our form of government, we are going to remain strong."

Henry Peterson, SUI Alum, Dies

Word has been received of the recent death of Prof. Henry J. Peterson, longtime chairman of the political science department at the University of Wyoming and SUI alumnus.

A native of Story City, Mr. Peterson received both his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees at SUI, the latter in 1914.

Mr. Peterson had been chairman of the Wyoming department for 27 years prior to his retirement ten years ago. He had lived in Denver, Colo., since 1947. Surviving Mr. Peterson are his wife and one son, Robert.

Television Carries Heart Operation

DES MOINES (AP) — A heart operation on a 2-year-old boy was telecast live over station KRM-TV Wednesday from Iowa Methodist Hospital.

The telecast was carried out in cooperation with the hospital and the Iowa State Medical Society. Two remote television cameras were used. One was trained on a mirror directly above the operating table and furnished a clear image of the actual surgery. The second camera gave overall coverage of the operating room including participants and such equipment as the mechanical heart and lung used during the surgery.

Negro Housing

16, W. Harrison St., said, "I don't care if they live next door. And I haven't heard any complaints about it."

Ralph E. Prusok, SUI Off-Campus Housing administrator, said Wednesday he "hasn't had a bit of trouble this year with landlords refusing to rent to students."

"It is true," he continued, "that married Negro students may have some trouble finding housing."

"But we have adequate off-campus housing space for single Negro students," he went on.

"We use our housing list for Negro and white students," he said. "The final housing arrangements are made between the student and the landlord."

Counselor to Men Paul L. Griffith said Wednesday that the Office of Student Affairs has had no complaints on the conduct of Williams or Saunders.

He described Williams, who led a dance band at SUI in the late '40s while he was working on his M.A. degree here, as a "hard working fellow."

The University can take no action regarding Meeks letter, Griffith said.

"We have no control over a landlord's actions. Our concern for the student is involved in finding housing for him," he explained.

Byron Beeler, president of the Iowa City Real Estate Board, said Wednesday that the board has no control over Meeks since he is not a member.

"He recently applied for membership," Beeler said. "There is no reason to believe that if he paid, his dues he wouldn't be made a member."

Beeler said if Saunders and Williams were living on his property he would let them stay.

"The real estate business should be governed by consideration of the individual, not his race," he commented. "Most of the fellows on the board feel the way I do."

Beeler said he thinks enough racial prejudice still exists in some Iowa City areas to make devaluation of property a reality if Negroes should rent or buy real estate there.

"There are certain areas in Iowa City where a Negro finds it hard to rent or buy property," he said.

Beeler pointed to Federal Legislation aimed at removing race restrictions on housing, FHA loans, he said, will not be granted to persons holding deeds containing a clause restricting tenancy because of race.

The area around the Meeks Harrison street house Beeler described as "not one of the higher priced neighborhoods."

Pastor Blasts Negro Ouster

The Rev. Alfred Henriksen, pastor of the First Unitarian Society in Iowa City, described the planned ousting of two Negro students from their rented apartment because of neighborhood discrimination as "un-Christian and undemocratic."

"It is deplorable," he exclaimed, "that in a community such as Iowa City we should have pressure against Negroes. It is a nasty situation."

"The only salvation for Iowa City is that a strong protest to Mr. Meeks be made on behalf of the decent and democratic element in our community."

Meeks is the real estate agent who requested that the students leave their apartment by the end of the semester.

The Rev. Mr. Henriksen is past president of the Iowa City Race-Relations Council.

"Those that feel this un-Christian and undemocratic must band together and strongly protest this thing," he said.

The Rev. Mr. Henriksen said that he is in full sympathy with Meeks for doing something that may be necessary to his business. He stressed, however, he thinks it is deplorable that some Iowa City people would start something like this.

"This calls for action from the City Council," he said.

Refused Profit

Got Airline Stock By Mistake: Oliver

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Washington lawyer testified Wednesday he got an anonymous telephone tip about a secret government air route decision — and next morning unwittingly bought 400 shares of stock in the airline that benefited.

Robert W. Oliver, a private attorney, told the Senate Investigations subcommittee he ordered — or meant to order stock last Aug. 3 in Northwest Airlines, and instead got shares in Northeast Airlines which had been awarded a lucrative New York-Miami route this evening before. This award was not announced until Aug. 10.

Sen. Henry Jackson (D-Wash.) presiding at the public hearing, challenged Oliver's story and the broker who handled the transaction said Oliver specifically ordered Northeast stock.

"Everything I have testified is true," Oliver replied.

Oliver said he refused to accept a profit of $878.45 on the purchase and subsequent sale of the securities. His broker backed up this statement — and said it was unprecedented in his 28 years in the brokerage business.

A Republican politician from Georgia who testified earlier Wednesday said he and his wife made a quick market profit of more than $2,500 after getting an indication of the route decision.

Robert R. Snodgrass of Atlanta, Georgia's Republican national committeeman, said he got his information from a Delta Airlines official, who in turn said he got the word from Oliver.

Oliver is partner in a Washington law firm which does legal work for Delta.

Snodgrass said he would not have made the transactions had he known any improper "leak" of information might have been involved.

The subcommittee is launching an inquiry which it said would show that Civil Aeronautics Board employees gave "information concerning the secret decision to certain outside individuals."

After hearing Oliver's story, the senators summoned Reginald H. Foster, the Washington broker who handled the sale, and Francis J. Hunter, Foster's boss.

Foster testified that Oliver specifically ordered 400 shares of Northeast stock.

Hunter, resident manager of the brokerage firm of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Beane, quoted Oliver as having come to him later in the day and stating that "he didn't want to have anything to do with" Northeast stock, and to sell it immediately and buy him 200 shares of Northwest.

Hunter said he didn't argue much, because Oliver refused to accept the profit of $878.45 realized on the resale of the stock that day and the profit was paid into the brokerage firm's "error account."

Membership Rises For High School Press Association

Membership in the Iowa High School Press Association has climbed to a record 178 schools in 1957, said Lester G. Benz, Assistant Professor of Journalism at SUI and Executive Secretary of the high school press group.

Membership in 1954 was 114 schools. Some 172 schools were members in 1956.

The Iowa High School Press Association holds annual conventions devoted to discussions of problems of high school journalism, and provides advice and evaluation to members on their high school newspaper and yearbook problems.

Europe Rates

For Tourists Lower: Panel

In general, expenses for tourists in Europe are lower than tourist rates in the United States, Hans Myhre, A2, Oslo, Norway, said at the European holiday information series Wednesday night.

Bernard Kernkamp, G, Netherlands, said it is possible to get a good meal in Amsterdam for less than $1. He said hotel rates are less than $2 a night, and a full evening of entertainment can be spent in the Netherlands for about $3.

"Those who are planning a trip to Europe should draw up a tentative schedule before beginning the trip," Kernkamp said. "This type of a plan facilitates the tourist's seeing more of the country in less time and at less expense," he explained.

"One of the first things a tourist should do upon entering a country is to obtain a good map of the country," Kernkamp stated. "The National Tourist Office" in any particular country should be consulted if a tourist has any problems while traveling in that country," he said.

Kernkamp outlined a plan for seeing most of the Netherlands in about four days, if the trip is planned in advance.

In addition to the Netherlands, points of interest in Great Britain, Belgium, and Luxembourg were presented.

The group was shown two color films. The first was on Holland and the other covered Great Britain and Belgium.

The other member of the student panel was Anita May, C3, Kronberg, Germany. The panel answered questions from the audience about European travel.

The next program in the series will be Wednesday, May 8.
