

Hawks End Season Against Notre Dame Today

Eighth Ranked Iowa Is 7-Point Favorite

By ALAN HOSKINS
Daily Iowa Sports Editor

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — The Iowa Hawkeyes wind up their 1957 season today against traditional rival Notre Dame in a battle of nationally ranked teams.

The Hawkeyes, who lost the Big Ten championship last Saturday at Ohio State, 71-13, are the nation's eighth ranked team, while Notre Dame, fresh from an upset victory over Oklahoma, is the nation's No. 9 ranked team.

Approximately 57,000 fans are expected to jam Notre Dame Stadium to capacity while thousands more are expected to view the contest over regional television. Game time is 1 p.m. (Iowa time).

Iowa, 48-8 victors over the Irish last year, is a slim 7-point favorite. The Hawkeyes boast a 6-1-1 mark and have clinched a third place finish in the Big Ten. Notre Dame is 5-2 for the season, with their losses coming at the hands of Navy and Michigan State.

Iowa coach Forest Evashevski has expressed concern that the Hawkeyes will be unable to "get up" for the game, after their heart-breaking defeat last week. Evashevski also is worried about the condition of the team. Snow and cold weather kept the Hawkeyes inside all week.

Injuries too are a cause for concern in the Iowa camp. Tackle Dick (Sleepy) Klein has been bothered by a back injury all week and will be replaced by senior Frank Rigney in the Hawkeye lineup.

Also, center Mac Lewis has been on the injury list this week with a sore hand. However, Lewis is expected to be ready for at least part time duty.

Notre Dame, on the other hand, worked hard outside all week and are reported in top physical shape. Co-captain Ed Sullivan and halfback Aubrey Lewis who both missed the Oklahoma game because of ankle injuries, are expected to be ready for at least part-time duty today.

All indications are that the Irish will also be ready mentally for the Hawkeyes. Irish students staged an impromptu pep rally at practice Thursday afternoon in an effort to help fire-up the team.

Iowa's main concern today is stopping the bursts of fullback Nick Pietrosante, who is rated as one of the best in the nation. The Hawkeyes, who were supposed to have the best line against rushing in the country, have had trouble in the past weeks in stopping the ground attacks of Minnesota and Ohio State.

Also of concern to the Hawkeyes is Notre Dame's passing game. The Irish have two good passers in Bob Williams and George Izo.

Iowa will center its attack around the passing of Randy Duncan and running of halfbacks Mike Hagler, Bill Hoppel, Bill Gravel and Kevin Furlong.

Duncan is the Big Ten's total offense leader this year, picking up 747 yards in 116 attempts for an average of 6.5. He's 212 yards ahead of his nearest rival.

The Hawkeyes also boast the Big Ten's top end in captain Jim Gibbons. Gibbons has hauled in 26 passes in Big Ten play, to lead his nearest rival by 12 catches. For the season, Jim has been on the receiving end 33 times, one more time than the rest of the Iowa team combined.

Iowa will have a big size advantage over the Irish. The Hawkeyes average 216 pounds per man on the line while Notre Dame's forward wall averages 201 pounds per man.

3% Less Buying Power For Workers Reported

WASHINGTON (AP) — The average factory worker is going into the Christmas shopping season with about three per cent less buying power than he had a year ago.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics reported this figure Friday on the basis of its living cost data.

Living costs did not rise last month, the bureau said, but previous price advances and a sharp drop in working hours in October reduced the take-home pay and the "real spendable earnings" of factory workers.

The consumer price index for October stayed at the record high it touched in September, 121.1 per cent of the 1947-49 average.

It was unchanged from September because a seasonal drop of 1/2 to 1 per cent in food prices offset the marked-up price tags on most other things that city families buy.

This was the first time in 14 months that consumer prices have not risen. They now average 2.9 per cent above a year ago, but Commissioner Ewan Clague of the bureau suggested that commodity prices "are beginning to reflect the general business slowdown."

The price level probably will show another rise this month because the new car models came in at higher prices, Clague said, and the December price trend may reflect the strength of Christmas buying.

"The question is: How well will consumers take Christmas goods at these prices?" Clague said.

"I think I detect some consumer hesitancy. . . . Some people haven't got as much money in their pay envelopes.

"It will be a good Christmas shopping season, but people are not quite as prosperous as they were."

The January clearance sales, he suggested, may bring the first significant downturn in an almost uninterrupted two-year rise in living costs. It will not necessarily start a downward price trend for 1958, he emphasized.

LANDSLIDE IN VANCOUVER
VANCOUVER, B.C. (AP) — Three homes were reported demolished and eight people are missing in a large scale landslide at Prince Rupert, B.C.; 500 miles north of here, amateur radio operators reported Friday night.

The city has been cut off from both telephone and telegraph communications since heavy rain and 85 m.p.h. winds struck the area two days ago.

Graduate Students Protest Draft Notice

By JOSEPH FELL
Daily Iowan Staff Writer

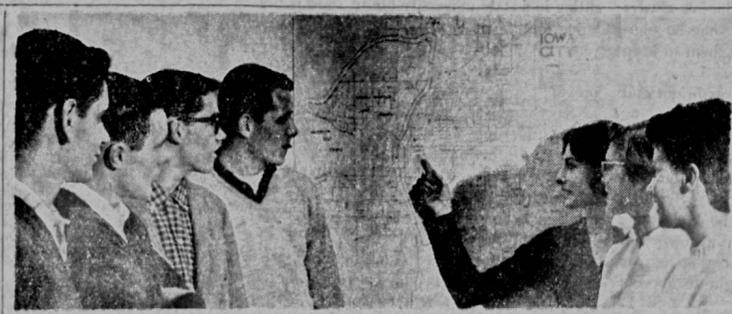

A telegram was sent to President Eisenhower Friday and another to Sen. Wayne Morse (D-Ore.), by seven SUI graduate students protesting a draft notice received from a Wisconsin draft board by Albert Macek, G, 412 1/2 E. Bloomington St.

Macek, 25, an experimental psychologist, who has eight months' work left toward his Ph.D. received the induction notice Nov. 15 ordering him to report Dec. 5, 1957.

Unknown to him, his fellow students sent the telegrams protesting the action of the Wisconsin State Selective Service Board because they felt the present selective service system is too uncertain for students.

The telegrams said, "Recent events indicate high level government officials are aware of and concerned with this nation's urgent need for efficient training and utilization of its scientists. The nation cannot afford the loss of useful time by scientists in any phase of their careers.

"The following incident represents a waste of at least six months of one scientist's career. It is clear that the selective service system in this case has made a decision contrary to the most efficient allowing.

More than $3,300 was collected during the 1957 SUI Campus Chest drive, drive chairman Charles Schmidt, E2, Charles City, reported Friday.

This is more than three times the amount collected in last year's drive, Schmidt said, but still short of the $5,000 goal for this year. He attributed the larger collections this year to a concerted effort to solicit students living off campus.

The more than 700 volunteer contribution solicitors from Interfraternity Pledge council, Panhellenic Pledge council, Student Christian council, Newman club, and Currier and Quadrangle freshman groups made the drive a success, Schmidt said.

New Incidents Set Middle East Boiling

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A series of new incidents from Lebanon southward through Jerusalem to Cairo set the Middle East pots to boiling again Friday.

Lebanese security forces refused to permit 17 members of the Syrian Parliament to cross the border into this tiny republic on the Mediterranean shoreline. The Syrian government was reported incensed.

Egyptian authorities refused to let a Jordan airliner land in Cairo with its 20 passengers, including a seven-man Jordan delegation to an Arab educational conference, a Jordanian airline spokesman charged in Amman.

No official explanation was given for either action.

At the same time a blockade in Old Jerusalem and new outbreaks of gunfire sharpened Jordan-Israeli enmity.

High-ranking Israeli officials said they believed Jordan's King Hussein, whose enemies in Soviet-aided Syria and Egypt have been calling for his assassination, had started a new campaign to disprove charges that he is soft toward Israel.

These incidents occurred as an interview with Soviet party boss Nikita Khrushchev was published in Cairo reviving charges that the United States had tried to inveigle Jordan and Iraq, and then Turkey into an attack on Syria.

Lebanon's slap at the Syrian Parliament delegation was the first hint that an open break between Damascus and Beirut might be imminent.

The Lebanese government has been trying to avoid stepping on any Syrian toes. But for two weeks now its security forces have been cracking down in an effort to

Rocket Hurls Metal Pellets Toward Sun

Could Have Hit Moon In Ten Hours

BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — The Air Force said Friday that artificial meteors consisting of tiny aluminum fragments were fired from an Aerobee rocket over New Mexico and could have hit the moon in 10 hours. Their top speed was estimated at 40,000 miles an hour.

Scientists said the moon was not in the right position, however, and the fragments — fired from the same charge — probably were drawn into the sun.

Maurice Dubin, physicist of the Air Force Cambridge Research Center, told a news conference that he had every reason to believe the artificial meteorites represented man's first breakthrough into outer space, although he implied that he was not in a position to know what Russian scientists have produced.

The meteorites were fired from three "shaped charges" in the nose of the rocket, launched on Oct. 16. They consisted of fragments resulting from the force of an explosion set to take place at an altitude of 54 miles.

A "shaped charge" was defined as one that causes a blast to take a desired direction.

Dubin said it was impossible to say precisely how large or how numerous the fragments were, but that photographs of the explosion confirmed that at least two pieces were headed for space outside the pull of the earth's gravity.

The physicist said the actual number may have exceeded 1,000. In response to a question at one point, he said they were about the size of small ball bearings and weighed only a few grams.

Dubin displayed the section of the Aerobee rocket from which the explosive-laden nose tip had been detached at a height of 35 miles. It was about four feet long, made of shiny lightweight metal and appeared to be undamaged despite its long drop back to earth.

This section was that part of the rocket immediately aft of the nose tip which, by a spring attachment, was cut loose from the rocket proper and exploded at the 54-mile altitude.

The physicist said photography offered proof that the meteors — or fragments or pellets, as he also referred to them — had been fired successfully.

Dubin said Harvard's Baker super-Schmidt meteor camera at Sacramento Peak Observatory in New Mexico was able to make a

Red Parties Ask A-Ban, World Peace

LONDON (AP) — Communist parties of 64 nations published a made-in-Moscow peace manifesto Friday night.

They appealed to the world to stop the arms race, ban nuclear weapons and abandon military bloc parties.

"We are extending our hands to all people of good will," the manifesto said. "Jointly we will throw off the burden of armament which suppresses the people. We will free the world from the danger of war, death and destruction. Before us is a bright and happy future of mankind, which is advancing toward progress."

The manifesto — like world communism's declaration Thursday on unity of aims under Soviet leadership — was born of the party conference held in Moscow Nov. 16-19. The conference followed the celebration of the 40th anniversary Nov. 7 of the Bolshevik Revolution.

Backers of the manifesto included the Yugoslavs, who had declined to join the representatives of 12 other Communist nations in signing the unity declaration.

That declaration is widely interpreted in Western capitals as a prelude to a stepped-up Red drive to dominate strategic areas outside the Soviet orbit.

Yugoslavia, which formed many ties with the West in the years it was ostracized by the Soviet bloc, gave a hint as to the nature of some of its objections in releasing an edited text of the declaration Friday night through the official news agency Tanjug.

The Yugoslav version pointedly deleted all the attacks on the United States. It retained the praise of Communist achievements, but attacked no one.

In Moscow, Yugoslav Ambassador Veljko Micunovic said the Yugoslavs did not sign the declaration "because we did not agree with it."

In Belgrade, Communist sources said Yugoslavia wanted to continue independent policies and to stay out of blocs.

But the peace manifesto was another matter.

The Yugoslav press printed the full text of it.

The manifesto also called for an end to what it called "attempts of imperialist military provocations in the Middle East."

It stressed that all peoples detest war.

2 Senators Issue Bipartisan Call On Missile Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Senate leaders issued a bipartisan call Friday for a faster U.S. missile program.

"Information available to us," said Sen. Lyndon Johnson (D-Tex.), "indicates clearly that our present target dates are far too modest and not adequate to the needs of the nation."

Sen. Styles Bridges (R-N.H.), concurred.

Johnson heads the Democratic Policy Committee in the Senate, and Bridges is chairman of the GOP Policy Committee there.

Johnson is also chairman of the Senate Preparedness subcommittee, which will open on Monday a sweeping investigation of American progress in the missile field.

"We are trying to determine the state of the nation's defenses," Johnson said. "We are seeking methods of stepping up the target dates of achievement in the missile program."

Bridges, senior GOP member of the subcommittee, added that a speedup would be the principal objective of the inquiry.

Expressing concern at the strides being made by Russia, Bridges said:

"I don't think there is any cause for fear now, but there might come a time in the very near future when we might perhaps be in mortal danger."

Leading scientists, military experts, aeronauts and defense officials will be called upon to testify at next week's Senate inquiry.

Johnson said the hearings would run through Wednesday, with day and night sessions a possibility. There will be a second round of hearings Dec. 13, 14, 16 and 17, he said.

Ashes Over L.A. As 1,000 Men Fight 100 Foot Flames

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hundred-foot-high flames, wind-driven across 50 square miles of mountain brush and timber in less than 18 hours, defied 1,000 fire fighters and sifted ashes Friday over downtown Los Angeles, 20 miles to the southwest.

"I don't remember a fire ever spreading so fast," a veteran county fire official said as the blaze roared through cotton-dry vegetation to within about four miles of the Los Angeles suburbs of Sierra Madre, Monrovia and Azusa.

The Angeles National Forest fire started Thursday morning. A county prison road crew in Bear Creek Canyon lit a fire in an oil drum to keep warm. A gust of wind tumbled the drum down a steep slope, scattering burning wood. Prisoners and forestry men lowered themselves by rope but could not put the flames.

The fire spread across some 20,000 acres in the San Gabriel Mountains.

UN Votes $38 Million Mid-East Aid

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The United Nations authorized Friday the spending of an additional $38 1/2 million to maintain its Middle East Emergency Force through 1958.

By a vote of 51-11 the 82-nation General Assembly decided that the sum should be paid on the basis of the regular scale of U.N. assessments. Nineteen nations abstained.

The Soviet bloc announced it would not pay anything toward maintenance of the deficit-ridden force. Its assessed share would amount to about 20 per cent of the total.

There is no way for the U.N. to compel a country to pay an assessment. The U.N. can deprive a member of its Assembly vote if it falls far enough behind in assessments, but such a penalty was not believed likely in this case.

The vote was on a 21-nation resolution supported by the United States. The countries in opposition included the Soviet bloc, Chile and Ecuador. Among the abstainers were the Arab countries, some Asian and Latin-American nations.

Soviet Ambassador Arkady A. Sobolev denounced the force as illegal and said it does not guarantee peace in the Middle East.

Rep. A. S. J. Carnahan (D-Mo.), a member of the U.S. delegation, told the Assembly there can be no doubt that financial support of UNEF is a United Nations responsibility all must share.

He endorsed the view of U.N. Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold that the 10-nation force, sent to the Middle East after the French-British-Israeli invasion of Egypt last November, had made a significant contribution toward evolving a method by which the U.N. can keep the peace.

The force ran $18 million into the red for 1957. The United States has agreed to put up $12 million. Britain one million, and several other nations smaller contributions to cut down that deficit.

The 21-nation resolution authorizes spending of $38 1/2 millions through 1958 with all members billed on the regular assessment scale. Total cost of the force through 1958 is estimated at around $55 millions. Counting contributions and assessments, the United States will shoulder almost 50 per cent of that sum.

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Dist. Judge Edward M. Curran Friday reversed himself and acquitted Dr. Otto Nathan of contempt of Congress charges. But Curran said he disagreed with the Supreme Court ruling which caused the reversal.

Nathan, 64, executor of the estate of the late Albert Einstein and an associate economics professor at New York University, was convicted by Curran May 30 on the charges but never sentenced.

The case came before Curran again Friday on a motion to reverse himself. He said he had no choice but to do so, on the basis of the Supreme Court's Watkins Case decision handed down June 17. He added he did not subscribe to that ruling.

Nathan told newsmen after his acquittal that it represented "an important victory in the hard and long fight for the vindication of our freedoms and for the abolition of congressional committees investigating political beliefs and associations."

Meteor from Rocket First Space Breakthrough?

Stanley Reads A Book

One of Stanley's professors gave him an assignment the other day that took him to the library to look for a book.

You see, Stanley isn't exactly one of the brighter boys on campus, not nearly as bright as his friend Sidney, for instance. Sidney is slight, has a big shock of blond hair and wears heavy black horn rimmed glasses. Sidney always has the answers. Stanley would bet that if Sidney got on one of those television quiz programs he would just win lots of money.

Stanley's not like Sidney. Stanley can see good without glasses, even when he reads, which isn't often. And Stanley has big strong muscles. He's going to be a coach when he gets his degree. And Stanley doesn't always know the answers, but at exam time he manages to turn up with enough of them to keep himself on campus.

Stanley liked the library; it was bright and shiny inside and made him feel all learning was clean and good. The quiet bothered him a bit, though. He liked noise and rah-rah better, you know, having the fellows around talking.

Well, when he'd found his book, he took it over to one of the tables and sat down next to Sidney. He thought that as long as he was going to read a book, he ought to impress Sidney.

"Hi ya, Sidney," he said as he sat down. Sidney said, "Shhhhh."

Stanley opened his book and began to read. He found it was a hard book to read. Not because the subject matter of the book was difficult. Stanley had a way of avoiding anything intellectually difficult. Not because his eyes bothered him. But because students who had read this book before Stanley had underlined so many sentences in pencil.

He asked Sidney, "Sidney, who drew all these marks?" And Sidney said, "The Students." "Why?" Stanley asked.

"Because those things they underlined are important and they wanted to be able to find them quickly when they wrote up their reports.

Stanley read another page. Then he poked Sidney and asked, "Why is this important? Listen. In the year 1492, the voyage of Columbus proved that the world was no longer flat. Everybody knows the world isn't flat. I don't need an underline to remember this. I know it already."

"That discovery," said Sidney, "introduced a new era. It was like Sputnik beginning the Space Age."

"Oh," said Stanley. It must be wonderful, he thought, to be able to see important things like that, and as he thought about it he got a mental picture of his great grandchildren, sitting in a state university library, and underlining a sentence in a book that read, "In the year 1957, the Russians launched Sputnik, which proved . . . well, what did Sputnik prove?"

"Say Sidney," he asked. "How come the students underline these books. Isn't marking them up destroying property?"

"You don't understand about property, taxes, and tuition," Sidney told him. "Who do you think pays for these books, Governor Loveless?"

This was a bit too deep for Stanley. He supposed that maybe bright boys like Sidney could see reasons why they could underline passages they thought were important in library books.

But he wouldn't underline anything. One reason, he didn't figure he knew enough to underline something that would be important for every student who would read the book after him.

And another reason was that, well, even though he didn't understand about property, taxes, tuition, and Governor Loveless, it seemed that the books belong to all the students who would ever come to the University, not just to him.

He just had no right to draw black marks on somebody else's property.

We're going to fight for every foot.

This play should net us about 25 yards per carry. We'll paint a football on every backfield man to improve deception.

RASMUSSEN-11-23

Lowering of the Discount Rate

By GEORGE KAUFMAN Daily Iowan Economic Columnist

The recognition of the slackening in business activity throughout our economy is now "official." This in effect is the significance of the recent lowering of the discount rate — the interest rate banks borrowing from the Federal Reserve Bank to meet reserve requirements have to pay — by five of the Federal Reserve Banks.

This action in itself should not be construed to mean that all interest rates charged by banks, finance companies, etc., will now be lowered and credit become more available, but rather as a turning point, signifying the end of credit and monetary restriction and the beginning of what may or may not, depending on future business conditions, become an "easier money" era.

ONE OF THE MAIN, if not the chief, function of the Federal Reserve Bank is to help stabilize business fluctuations or cycles as you may, by controlling monetary activity. This action is commonly referred to as "monetary policy." To influence the money market, the Federal Reserve System has been granted three classes of authority: direct control, indirect control, and moral suasion. The latter depends mainly on the goodwill of private bankers and can readily be seen as not too effective.

On the other hand, direct controls are the most effective though they are not compatible with free capitalist enterprise during normal times. In case of war or runaway inflation, such direct controls as limits on installment buying and real estate credit are justified. Margin requirements for stock purchases also come under this heading, but seem to have been accepted as a permanent control.

This leaves us with indirect controls as the Federal Reserve Banks' main tentacle into the monetary system. There are three ways in which the Federal Reserve Bank can exert pressure indirectly through the banking system: 1. Through changing reserve requirements; 2. Through its open market policy (buying and selling of government bonds from both the public and banking system); 3. Through changing the discount rate.

All private banks which are members of the Federal Reserve System (nearly 50% of all banks, holding about 85% of all demand deposits) must maintain a certain amount of cash reserves with the Federal Reserve Bank. This decreases their ability to make loans and discounts (Deposits = Loans and Discounts plus reserves) and thereby restricts the banking system's ability to expand the money supply.

BY INCREASING the required reserve rate (the percentage of deposits "sterilized"), the multiple expansion of credit decreases, and inflation which is nourished by excess money can be slowed down. The reverse is true in a recessionary period but not as effectively, for similar to the horse analogy, you can give the private banks more reserves to make loans but you can't force them to lend.

The main disadvantage of frequent reserve requirement changes is the bluntness of the action and its possible disorderly effect on the money market. By buying and selling government bonds from and to the banks, the Fed's best express policy without carrying "a big stick." The beauty of this control is that the initial initiative is on the part of the private banks themselves, for by purchasing or selling government securities they mean to change their liquidity. The Federal Reserve Bank can not only assist or hinder their desire for such a change, but by doing so also affect the all important interest rate. A rise in the price of bonds due to the increased demands by the Fed lowers the effective interest rate (value increases, money return constant, and therefore effective return less) and stimulates borrowing and investment and vice versa, a policy of selling (in effect not buying from the banks) raises the interest rate and lowers investment incentives.

A SIMILAR WAY to affect the interest rate is by changing the rate charged to member banks for borrowing from the system, the discount rate. This method is probably the most indirect of all, for the private banking systems need to borrow from the Federal Reserve Banks has decreased greatly over the years, so that the rate is now mainly an "expression" of Federal Reserve Bank policy. This is in line with the free money market oriented thinking of the present Chairman of the Federal Reserve System, William Martin Jr., a former president of the New York Stock Exchange.

To counteract the recent boom, the discount rate has been steadily increased from a low of 1 1/2% in April, 1954, the relative depth of the 1954 recession, to a peak of 3 1/2% recently. With most present business indicators such as national income, freight car loadings, steel output, planned capital investment and many more, indicating lower business activity and the general atmosphere prevailing signifying that we may be in for another 1954-1955 type adjustment, the Federal Reserve Bank has deemed it proper to announce that it will have no objections to a slightly easier money policy.

The lowering of the discount rate as stated before transmits this feeling psychologically. ALREADY THE EFFECT has spread through the short term money market, lowering the interest rates on commercial paper and acceptances, but the important thing to watch for is whether it will be transmitted to the long term market and affect business activity positively. If it will, Mr. Martin will have triumphed on two points, one the significance of the discount rate which he had rescued from relative disuse; and two, the capability of the private money market to transmit changes in the short term side throughout the structure.

Many have argued that the Federal Reserve Bank has waited too long to make this step and that it may be too little and too late. This again reaffirms Mr. Martin's faith in minimum government intervention in the money sphere; and now is the time for the private sector to make itself worthy of the trust, for otherwise the action may well turn out to be too little and too late.

Dulles, Stevenson Entente

Mongoose Taking A Cobra To Lunch?

By GEORGE DIXON King Features Syndicate

WASHINGTON — It is my pious hope that Adlai Stevenson and John Foster Dulles are not sacrificing their natural distaste for each other in vain. If nothing constructive comes of this ceremonialization it will be a doleful setback to the strange new spirit of abnegation that is struggling to life in the land. The collaboration of the Democratic party's two-time loser for the presidency with the GOP secretary of state should appeal to the best in us, if there is any left. It could be as inspiring as the lion lying down with the lamb, or the mongoose taking the cobra to lunch.

If he was catering to his own inclinations, Dulles would as soon have Stevenson as an Atlantic Pact consultant as publicly beseech his predecessor, Dean Acheson, to tutor him at night on how to be a secretary of state.

Conversely, if Adlai was thinking only of himself, instead of running amok with altruism, he would not care to sit in the same ball park with John Foster, much less at the same conference table.

But both are now practicing the wonderful old doctrine of give and take. Each feels, in his selfless way, that he has to take more than he gives.

The alliance of Stevenson and Dulles, which would have been regarded as a grotesque misalliance only a few weeks ago, typifies the new spirit that is arising among us. Critics are wailing critics. Adversaries are huddling with adversaries. You'd almost think we were afraid of something.

There are features to the Stevenson-Dulles entente, however, that are not as bizarre as they may seem at first glance. After all, it may be easier for John Foster Dulles to get a NATO policy squared away with Dulles than for him to square anything with Harry S. Truman. And it may be easier for Dulles and Stevenson to get yesses and noes out of each other than any kind of answer out of Ike.

The letter that President Eisenhower sent to the man he twice defeated for the big job seemed a gem that ought to be preserved in a museum as the Kohinor of ambiguity. Ike wrote Adlai, "I am delighted that you and Foster will be getting together on Monday" and then voiced the hope that he would be out of Washington before Monday.

As my bride said, in winning the inter-state redundancy championship in Albuquerque in 1951, "That could be very ambiguous double entendre, meaning double talk."

The coalition is almost too out of this world for our mundane minds to grasp. It is as supernatural as if Perle Mesta had called in Gwen Craftz as special consultant on whom to snub at their next joint party. Who would have dreamed that when the Russians unloosed Sputniks I and II, those arrows in the air would have taken a tangential flight and shot both Dulles and Stevenson in their wilderness?

Khrushchev has done more to bring our politics together than the Republicans and Democrats could ever do.

Six more Sputniks, and Harry Truman will be invited to the White House — accompanied by General MacArthur.

Active God to Be Retreat Topic

Dr. Dale Miller Jr., assistant professor in the Drake University Department of Religion, will speak to forty members of the SUI United Student Fellowship (United Church of Christ) and Disciples Student Fellowship (Christian Church) at a joint conference today at Camp Wapsie Y, near Cedar Rapids.

Miller will discuss the contemporary social-religious problem, "Where Are You?" This is also the theme of the weekend retreat, and was taken from a booklet with the same title by Howard Clark Kee.

Kee, assistant professor of New Testament at the Theological School, Drew University, Madison, N. J., asserts the underlying theme of the booklet is that God is active in a changing world. He explores the biblical perspective for the contemporary domestic situation.

Miller will give various presentations designed to stimulate discussion in the conference on how university students are personally involved in world problems and questions which confront students in the campus situation.

The joint groups will discuss the specific problems of alienation or the separation of selves, decision and ethical choices, community with the reconciliation of selves, and freedom to be an individual.

Miller received his B.A. from Phillips University, Enid, Okla., a B.D. from Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn., and a Ph.D. from the University of Chicago Federal Theological Faculty.

Garlan Hoskins, Marion, national DSF president, will discuss DSF planning with DSF members this morning. Later in the day he will talk on the proposed merger of several student Christian movements and overseas work camps.

The joint conference is a movement toward closer cooperation and brotherhood of SUI student religious groups. The DSF voted at their national conference this summer to intend to merge with other religious movements in 1960.

The USF has proposed merging with other organizations at the earliest possible date.

Hoskins, who is a senior at Iowa State College in sociology, is traveling for the Disciples Office of Student Work this year to local, state and regional student groups. He spent the summer visiting student groups of the German student Christian movement on behalf of the DSF. He also served in an ecumenical work camp in Volkermarkt, Austria.

During the summer of 1956 Hoskins served on a cattle boat of Heifer Project, a relief program for refugees in Germany sponsored by several denominations, to Hamburg, Germany. He visited refugee camps in Europe, served in the Disciples-sponsored work camp at East Kilbride, Scotland, and visited some of the Churches of Christ in Great Britain.

The Rev. Herbert Gessart, minister at the Congregational

Garlan Hoskins Student Religious Speaker

Church here, will give a sermon Sunday morning entitled "What Must I Do To Be Saved."

A worship service built around the question of existence in relationship to science, existential philosophy and Judeo-Christian tradition has been planned for tonight by Paul Hager, A1, Waukon; Warren Maher, A2, Sioux City; Bob Clarke, A4, Mount Ayr; and Marian Blakey, A3, Enid, Okla.

Free Methodist Church To Be Dedicated Sunday

The Rev. Myron F. Boyd will give a dedication message following the dedication service of the Free Methodist Chapel at Muscatine and Third Ave., Sunday, Nov. 24, at 2:30 p.m.

The Rev. Mr. Boyd is the director and speaker of the "Light and Life Hour," a broadcast of the Free Methodist Church.

The chapel will be used for a sanctuary until the church is built. The chapel will then be used for an educational and student center.

The present remodeling which began in July includes the building of a new basement and the moving of a house to the back of the property facing G Street.

The Rev. D. Oscarson who planned the remodeling and buying said that an outlay of $8,000 is represented in the present changes. According to the Rev. J. W. Hansen, pastor of the Free Methodist Chapel, services will begin Sunday at 10 a.m. with Sunday School followed by Morning Worship. The Rev. C. F. Olson, conference superintendent, will deliver a message followed by the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

The Rev. Eldon Furman will speak to the young people's group at 7 p.m. Sunday. The closing service of the day will be given at 7:30 with a message from the Rev. Mr. Boyd.

Tickets Still Available For Tamburitzan Concert

Tickets are still available for the Duquesne University Tamburitzans folk song and dance concert to be presented Monday at 8 p.m. in Macbride Auditorium.

About 450 of the 850 available tickets have been sold to date, Jack Power, A2, New York, N.Y., Newman Club treasurer said Friday.

This number has nearly equaled the total sold for the Tamburitzans program last year, Larry O'Brian, Iowa Folk Dancers president, said. The Folk Dancers were one of the sponsoring organizations last year.

Tickets are available at Whetstone's Drug Store, The Catholic Student Center, and from representatives of the SUI Newman Club. Prices are $1 for students and $1.50 for non-students.

The Tamburitzans have completely remodeled their program from last year. During the past summer they completed a world tour and gathered many new songs, dances, and authentic costumes.

'You Name it, I Scratched It' Quest On

What is a sedimentary, a metamorphic, an igneous rock? What kind of rock is used in the foundation of the Law Building? Furthermore, what is a geode?

These are things 253 students of SUI's Earth Science course have been trying to determine during the past week.

The students, clip boards and notebooks in hand, have been scratching at practically all the foundations of buildings on the SUI campus.

This is the first time in five years this method of rock study has been used here, Course Chairman Sherwood D. Tuttle said Friday.

And what is a geode? Well, a geode is a . . .

Fawn Tired Of 'Job'; Takes Swim

CHICAGO (AP) — A fawn named Bambi — bored with life in a florist display — Friday went gambling down Lake Shore Drive, then plunged into chilly Lake Michigan to avoid recapture.

It took several squads of policemen, the Coast Guard, a passel of hotel employees, and the assistance of the park district to nab him. Bambi, a 6-month-old male fawn, is back on exhibition in front of the Edgewater Beach Hotel. He broke loose Friday by leaping over a barricade.

The fawn headed for the beach. As his pursuers closed in on him, Bambi swam into the chilly lake.

A park district employee lassooed him and the shivering animal was hauled aboard a Coast Guard ship.

But What If They Do? Money Back?

NEW YORK (AP) — The Wall Street Journal Friday carried an advertisement offering transparent ant houses to divert busy executives — priced at $2.98.

"Ants carry on their lives before your eyes," the advertisement said, "Provides hours of relaxation."

As an afterthought, the advertisement said, "ants cannot escape."

CALLING ALL MOTHERS CLEAR LAKE

— The search is on for the 1958 Iowa Mother of the Year.

Mrs. Rosenkild said nomination blanks are being distributed to state chapters of national women's organizations, religious groups, and others.

The Iowa Mother of the Year will compete with those of other states for the title American Mother of the Year.

Applications must be filled out and returned to the state chairman by next March 10.

Roman Comedy Tickets Adlai's Pay $60 A Day

Reserved tickets for the University Theater's "The Menaechmi" will be available at the East Lobby reservation desk of the Iowa Memorial Union, beginning Monday.

The ticket office is open from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Fridays and from 9 a.m. to noon on Saturdays.

The office will be closed from noon Wednesday through Dec. 1 for Thanksgiving Vacation. Students must present their ID cards, but there is no charge. Individual admission to non-students is $1.25.

Performance dates for "The Menaechmi" are Dec. 5, 6, 7, 10, 11, 12, 13 and 14.

The play is a Roman comedy by Plautus. Theater officials describe it as his most successful and humorous comedy of mistaken identity, and the play on which Shakespeare's "Comedy of Errors" and the musical "Boys From Syracuse" are based.

Erotium, a courtesan in Epidamnus, has invited her wealthy young lover, Menaechmus, and his parasite, Peniculus, to lunch in appreciation for a mantle the young man has stolen from his wife and given to her.

Erotium will be played by Peggy Nuckols, A4, Philadelphia, Pa.; Menaechmus, Robert Baker, A4, Erie, Pa., and Peniculus, Stanley Doerr, A3, Edina, Minn.

While the two men are at the forum, Menaechmus' twin brother from Syracuse, played by Oscar Korte, A2, Rock Hill, Mo., enters in search for the brother who had been kidnapped when a small boy. He is accompanied by his slave, Messenio, portrayed by Dennis Jones, A3, Marion.

The mistaken identities cause a series of complications before

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department said Thursday that Adlai Stevenson is on the payroll for $48.80 a day plus $12 expenses for every day he puts in as a special consultant on foreign policy.

The money shouldn't mean much to the 1952 and 1956 Democratic presidential candidate, who is a wealthy man.

However, the disclosure of his pay rate settled another bit of confusion about the circumstances of Stevenson's service with the Eisenhower administration.

It had been reported earlier by State Department officials that Stevenson was on a nonpay, non-title basis. Thursday, officials said he would be paid for each day he works, plus expenses, to a total of $60.80.

SUI Prof Flown Home; Had Stroke

Prof. A. K. Miller, head of the Geology Department at SUI, was listed in fair condition Friday by his physician, Dr. A. L. Saks, head of the SUI Department of Neurology.

Prof. Miller suffered a stroke Nov. 5 in Atlantic City, N. J. He had been attending the national meeting of Paleontological Society, of which he was elected president, when the attack occurred.

Dr. Saks indicated there was some paralysis to Prof. Miller's left side but that there was no immediate danger.

Prof. Miller was flown back to Iowa City Tuesday night.

Speculation

Speculation concerning the future of Iowa football coach Forest Evashevski has taken leaps and bounds in the past few days.

Many have Evy already retired while others figure he's certain to be coaching somewhere else next year.

What Evy's future plans are, no one knows, not even Evy. I do feel however, that Evashevski has no intentions of leaving the coaching game at present.

In talking to him Thursday evening, Evy said there definitely was nothing to the rumor that he had already resigned, and also hinted that he did not expect to quit now.

He explained the statement concerning only a few sands remaining in his coaching hour glass referred to only the fact that he believes the biggest part of his coaching career is behind him rather than ahead of him.

As far as his future is concerned, Evy had no comment. However, he did say that he was not sure what he'd be doing next year, but that he thought nobody knows for sure what they'll be doing next year.

As far as the rumor that Evy is considering another offer, it could very well be. After all, this isn't the first year that other colleges have approached him. In fact, probably every college in the country that isn't satisfied with its present coach would give a lot to get him.

Naturally, Evy will consider these offers. Everyone is looking for a way to get ahead and he's no exception. I seriously doubt though that many of these will be much better than Evy's position here.

For one thing, I believe Evy would prefer staying in the Big Ten. Also, I doubt if he would leave Iowa to go to a weak team, after his years of building the Hawkeyes into a national power.

As far as going to Michigan, I think that can be eliminated immediately. When the Wolverines hired Bump Elliott this spring, they practically guaranteed him that he'd be the next Michigan coach when Bennie Oosterbaan retired.

So, speculation will probably continue until Evy makes a final statement about his future. And Iowa fans, including myself, will probably be bothered at times with some of the rumors that spread so quickly.

It's the price we have to pay to have one of the best football coaches in the nation.

CORONET Magazine has a very amusing group of supposedly true anecdotes about weird happenings on the football field in its November issue. Written by Oren Arnold, the article is entitled, "Goofiness on the Gridiron."

Here are a few of the freakish events of the gridiron. I doubt the authenticity of some but it certainly provides entertaining reading.

The first of these concerns one about the Iowa Hawkeyes. An Iowa third stringer once heaved a snowball smack into the face of a touchdown-bound opponent, causing him to reverse his direction and lose 40 yards.

Another occurred in a game in Henderson, Texas, in 1918. A tackle became embittered with an opponent who was having a field day. So the tackle pulled out a small revolver from inside his uniform and shot twice at the running foe.

The only trouble was he missed, and the runner sped on with his fifth touchdown of the day. "This sort of thing is not done," calmly ruled the referee. "Get on with the game and I'll look into it tomorrow."

In 1951 at Houston, a Rice player prepared to kick off to Navy. He teed up the ball carefully, tested the wind, then signaled that he was ready. As 55,000 fans jumped to their feet, he ran mightily and kicked with a giant's strength — to miss the ball completely and fall flat on his back!

In Oregon, there's a football stadium with a railroad beside it. Once, during a big game, a locomotive came wheezing by and stopped, and as it did, a black cloud of smoke rolled from its smokestack.

Just at that time, a halfback received the ball from center. He galloped unseen for a 50-yard touchdown run behind the only known smoke screen in gridiron history.

Finally, in Georgia one day, a water boy raced back to the sidelines after a time out, but carelessly left his bucket on the field. Nobody noticed the thing, even when during a freakish fumble-and-pile-up, the ball somehow got into it. But then an alert quarterback grabbed the handle and trotted for a touchdown, while everybody assumed he was merely carrying it off the field.

Now, you tell one.

15 Seniors End Football Careers Today

Helped Hawks To Best Record In 35 Seasons

By JERRY LAMBERT
Daily Iowan Assistant Sports Editor

The curtain will fall today to end the final act of the college football careers of 15 seniors on the Iowa squad.

Many of these men have been in a large part responsible for the best two season record in 35 years for Iowa. Coach Forest Evashevski undoubtedly will find it hard to replace this group. Some of them have become almost a fixture in the starting lineup for the Hawkeyes.

This will be the last time for many of these men to don their football uniforms. Expectation of pro careers and post season games would be the only exceptions.

A brief sketch of the 15 seniors: Jim Gibbons — Jim has established himself as one of the all-time great ends at Iowa. He will be starting his twenty-fifth straight game for the Hawkeyes today. He has been the leading pass receiver for Iowa the last two seasons and is a cinch to repeat this year.

Gibbons is captain of the 1957 Hawkeyes. He set one record (gaining 164 yards on passes in a single game) and tied another (catching nine passes in one game) in the Minnesota game this year.

Jim is probably best remembered for catching the 17 yard pass from Ken Ploen against Ohio State that put the Hawks in the Rose Bowl. He has caught 66 passes for 960 yards and 11 touchdowns in his career.

Frank Bloomquist — Frank is one of the most underrated guards in the country. At the opening whistle today, he will be starting his twenty-seventh game for Iowa. He has missed only one game in the last three years, the Hawaii game in 1956. A pulled ankle tendon held him out of that game.

Bloomquist is a good blocker. He is fast for a big man, alert, and likes to mix it up. He is very smart both on and off the field. He was named to the 1956 Big Ten Scholastic team.

Alex Karras — Alex has had a true rags-to-riches career at Iowa. As a sophomore he was overweight and lacked the desire to play Big Ten football. He came back his junior year to live up to expectations held by the Iowa coaches.

He was named to four All-American teams in 1956. Coach Bob Flora calls him the best defensive lineman he has ever worked with. He excels in rushing the passer. He is very seldom fooled, but his fast reactions enable him to recover quickly when he is.

Bob Commings — Bob is probably the best lineman in the Big Ten, pound for pound. He is part of what coaches call the best pair of guards in the country. He commands great respect from opposing linemen, despite weighing only 174 pounds.

Commings lettered in 1953 behind the great Cal Jones. After two years in the service, he returned to boost Iowa in 1956 and 1957. His tremendous desire has kept him a starter for the Hawks since the Michigan game last year. He moved in when Hugh Drake was injured and refused to budge from the starting berth.

Collins "Mike" Hagler — Mike has given the Iowa fans many thrills in the last three years, despite his size. He weighs only 165. He started only four games at Iowa before this year. He started the two Oregon State games last year and the Indiana and Purdue games as a sophomore.

Hagler has run the ball 158 times, gaining 958 yards. He has scored 10 touchdowns, including a 66 yard sprint in the Rose Bowl.

Bill Happel — Bill has played right halfback along with Hagler for three seasons at Iowa. He has played only about 15 minutes as a sophomore until the final game of the season, when he started against Notre Dame.

Bill excels on defense. He led the Big Ten last year with four interceptions which he returned for 94 yards. Two of them came against Minnesota, one on the Iowa one-yard line and the other near the end of the game which enabled the Hawks to run the clock out. His great desire makes him especially tough in the clutch.

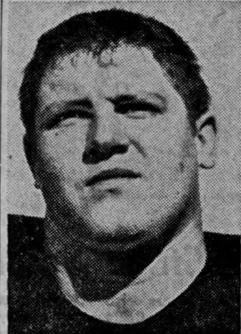

Frank Rigney — Frank is called the third string tackle by Evashevski. He has filled in for both Karras and Klein during the first eight games this year. Only tackles like these two could keep Frank from a starting position.

He came to Iowa as an end with high expectations. He was moved to tackle in spring practice in 1956, and named "the player who contributed the most to spring practice" that year by the Iowa coaches.

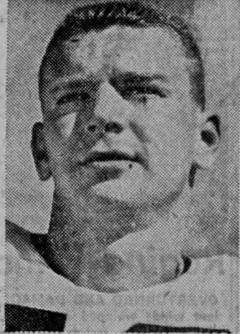

Don Bowen — Don started three games as a sophomore, but has been limited to reserve duty since then. He has exceptional speed and a terrific desire to play football.

Don is from East St. Louis, Ill. He came to Iowa with a fine high school record, where he didn't play in a single losing game.

Fred Harris — Injuries have hurt the big fullback this year. He started the final game of the season as a sophomore and all of the regular season games last year. A knee injury in the first

Iowa Harriers Will Bid For Top Honors

The Iowa cross country team makes its bid for a high national finish Monday in the National Collegiate Meet at East Lansing, Mich. The Hawkeyes, second place finishers in the Big Ten last weekend, are expected to finish among the top five along with Big Ten champion Michigan State, Houston, Kansas and Texas.

Iowa's top performer is expected to be Charles (Deacon) Jones, who has won only once this fall, and finished fourth in the Big Ten meet.

Iowa coach Francis Cretzmeyer believes Jones could possibly be among the top two or three individual finishers, but he expects a dog fight between Michigan State's Crawford Kennedy, Southern California's Max Truex, Houston's John Masey, and Minnesota's Bud Edelen.

Edelen is the Big Ten champion, while Kennedy captured the ICA meet last Monday, beating out Villanova's Ron Delaney by 90 yards. Truex competed for the U.S. Olympic squad last fall, running in both the 5,000 and 10,000 meter events.

As far as an overall finish is concerned, Cretzmeyer is hoping to finish among the top three or four. "If we have a good day," said the Hawkeye coach, "we could finish pretty good. But you never know about these meets."

Also running for Iowa along with Jones will be Bruce Trimble, who finished 10th in the Big Ten, and Jack Hill, who finished 14th. Others who are expected to run for the Hawkeyes are junior Quentin Wilkes, and sophomores Ralph Lyle, Rich Hermeier, Eric Clarke and Dave Drew.

UMPIRE GOETZ RETIRES

CINCINNATI — Larry Goetz, for 21 years an umpire in the National League, was retired Friday over his own protest.

League President Warren C. Giles said he took the action reluctantly.

Ratcliff accounted for two touchdowns. Fedge took a short pass from quarterback Wayne Dotzenrod for another marker and Dotzenrod plunged over for the final one. Luther also got two points on an automatic safety.

This game was rescheduled for one that had been cancelled earlier because of flu at Parsons. The teams agreed to play it, although Luther had a 6-1 record against Parsons' 5-1-1.

Two College Coaches To Lose Present Jobs

At least two coaches of major college football teams are due to bow out today as the dramatic 1957 season goes through its final big scene before heading for the exit.

Chuck Taylor of Stanford and Chuck Mather of Kansas will make their final appearances as head coaches of those schools in the big games against California and Missouri, respectively. They'll be joined in another week by J. B. (Ears) Whitworth of Alabama, for whom a successor already is being sought. Probably there'll be a good many others before next season.

Meanwhile the Michigan State team which Duffy Daugherty says is the best he ever coached, will be trying to cement the top national ranking it earned last week by a very slim margin over Auburn; Duke will try to wrap up the Atlantic Coast Conference championship, and Dartmouth, and Princeton will vie for the Ivy League title.

All the returns in the national and conference championship competitions won't be in for another week as several of the ranking teams either have a day off or face unimportant opposition.

Michigan State, which took over the No. 1 spot in The Associated Press poll last week, can't win the Big Ten title and probably has to whip Kansas State by a tremendous score to stay ahead of Auburn.

It's the final game for the Spartans, who can finish no better than second in their league even in the not-unlikely event that Ohio State should lose to Michigan. Meanwhile unbeaten Auburn, meeting Florida State in a non-conference game, gets a final chance at the national championship when it plays Alabama next week.

Duke, tied but unbeaten in the Atlantic Coast Conference, faces its traditional enemy, North Carolina, with the Orange Bowl bid in hand but the conference title still in doubt.

Dartmouth, because of a tie with Yale, has to win or tie the last game against Princeton to take the Ivy title. Princeton, the pre-season favorite, lost to Yale last week but won all its other league games.

An undisputed conference championship also hangs in the balance when Oregon meets defending champion Oregon State in the Pacific Coast League. Oregon already has clinched the Rose Bowl spot, since Oregon State can't make a return appearance. But a victory for State would tie up the race.

Echoes of last week's upsets are mixed in with the clamor over tra-

Yank Slugger Is Surprised

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP)—Mickey Mantle was named the American League's Most Valuable Player for the second straight season Friday, and the news almost floored the New York Yankee slugger.

"I thought Ted Williams would make it easily," the 26-year-old outfielder said as he prepared to leave for his Commerce, Okla., home after a physical checkup at the Mayo Clinic.

Mantle won the Baseball Writers Assn. of America award in a virtual photo finish with Williams, the veteran Boston Red Sox great, and outfielder Roy Sievers of Washington.

Mantle received 233 votes to 209 for Williams and 205 for Sievers. A year ago Mickey was a unanimous selection.

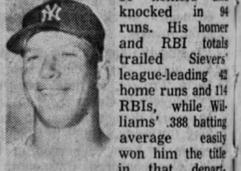

"I thought I lost my chance for Most Valuable Player when I was missing so much playing time near the end of the season," Mantle said. "I didn't expect to be picked this time, so it's a lot bigger thrill than last year."

Mickey hit .365 in the Yankees' sweep to the pennant, drove out 34 homers and knocked in 94 runs. His homer and RBI totals trailed Sievers' league-leading 43 home runs and 44 RBIs, while Williams' .388 batting average easily won him the title in that department.

Mantle polled six first place votes of a possible 24. Williams had five and Sievers four. But while Mantle was named no lower than fourth on all ballots, Williams unaccountably got one tenth place and one ninth place vote.

For Williams, whose 1957 achievements at the age of 39 may have constituted his greatest performance, it was the fourth time as runnerup in the MVP race. He won the honor in 1946 and 1949.

Nellie Fox of the Chicago White Sox was fourth in the balloting with five votes for first place and a total of 193 points.

Luther Wins Over Parsons To Take Title

DECORAH — Favored Luther wrapped up the Iowa Conference football championship Friday by crushing Parsons 28-0 on a field made sloppy by this week's new storms.

The Norsemen ran through the challengers for three touchdowns on the ground and stopped them once on their own 27 yard line to score through the air.

Star fullback Brad Husted, the leading conference scorer, did not get into the touchdown column but ground through Parsons for 118 yards to add to his previously established league rushing lead. Two Norseman halfbacks, Bob Ratcliff and Al Fedge rushed for 110 yards and 105 respectively.

Ratcliff accounted for two touchdowns. Fedge took a short pass from quarterback Wayne Dotzenrod for another marker and Dotzenrod plunged over for the final one. Luther also got two points on an automatic safety.

This game was rescheduled for one that had been cancelled earlier because of flu at Parsons. The teams agreed to play it, although Luther had a 6-1 record against Parsons' 5-1-1.

U-High Drubs Springville In 83-50 Victory

Iowa City University High drubbed Springville High in an Eastern Iowa Hawkeye Conference game Friday night, by a score of 83-50.

The Blue Hawks took the lead from the first on a basket by Pete Ellsworth and were never headed. They led at the end of the first quarter 14-11 and by halftime had increased their lead to 43-20.

In their big 29-point second quarter, Ellsworth and John Raffensperger were the leading scorers with 10 and 7 points respectively. Ray Card led Springville's scoring in the first half with 10 points while Dan Knapp added 6.

U-High continued to pour it on in the third quarter, and led at the three-quarter mark 65-28. Ellsworth with 10 and Bill Brechler with 9 topped the Blue Hawks scoring in the third period.

With the U-High reserves taking over for the last quarter, Springville outscored their rivals 22-18.

A tight full-court press and control of the rebounds were the outstanding features of the University High victory. Ellsworth led all scorers with 24 points as Brechler added 21 and Raffensperger 15. John Thoma led the Springville scoring with 16 points while Card finished with 10.

Rory Calhoun TKO's Boyd In Tenth Round

NEW YORK — Rory Calhoun, high ranking middleweight contender, stopped Bobby Boyd of Chicago on a technical knockout Friday night in 25 seconds of the second round of a 10-round match at Madison Square Garden. Calhoun weighed 160, Boyd 159 pounds.

Calhoun, of White Plains, N.Y., now owns a 31-2-1 record for 34 pro starts. He has stopped 16 opponents to solidify his claim for a title shot at middleweight champ Carmen Basilio.

Boyd now has a 46-8-2 record. It was the sixth time he had failed to go the route.

Research Findings Average 50 Years Before Acceptance

An overly long time lag between research findings and their applications in educational practice was pointed out Friday night by Dr. George D. Stoddard at the Facets of Child Development Conference banquet.

Addressing those who came for the one-day conference celebrating the 40th anniversary of the Iowa Child Welfare Research Station, Stoddard said educators have little cause to be smug about the low value placed on pioneering in research by some high authorities in Washington.

Stoddard, who was director of the Iowa station from 1928 to 1942 and is now dean of New York University's College of Education, estimated the lag between research findings and their general acceptance in education to average as much as 50 years.

Stoddard stressed the need for teacher familiarity with certain studies carried out over the years at the Iowa research center. He urged a substantial follow-through with similar research up through the grades.

Reliable measures of child aggressiveness and submissiveness, along with techniques of taming the bully and toughening up the "milk-toast," were worked out 20 years ago at SUU. But, like many such developments, these have rarely been picked up by the teaching profession, Stoddard said.

Why? Partly because research reports are often forbiddingly difficult reading, he pointed out. It is hard for a busy teacher to be as effective as a behavioral scientist in experiments with children.

"Some schoolrooms, drab and overcrowded, are breeders of frustration in teacher and pupil alike. We find them all grimly getting through the day, with the hope that release from school will bring release from tension. To change this pattern calls for basic reforms," Stoddard said.

In an earlier address Orville G. Brim Jr., pointed out the need for more research concerning sources or causes of parents' behavior and the need to assess parent competence in terms of the realism of the ends they seek to attain with their children.

Dr. Brim is director of the Project for Social Science and Parent Education sponsored by the Russell Sage Foundation and the Child Study Association of America.

In the area of causes of parent behavior, Brim singled out as needing special attention by researchers the influence of some of the structural characteristics of small groups.

"I suspect that parents seek to equalize the participation of children in family matters and thus struggle to prevent the development of the pattern in which one child participates greatly and the least participating child becomes withdrawn. The difficulty of achieving this clearly must increase as family size increases, and it may be that in four- or five-child families it is impossible," he stated.

Sputnik 1's Carrier Rocket Is Near Earth

CHESHIRE, Eng. (AP) — British scientists manning the world's largest radio telescope reported late Friday night that the rocket carrier for the first Soviet satellite is easing back into the earth's atmosphere. They said it may come down within hours.

Prof. A. C. Lovell, director of the big Jodrell Bank Radio Astronomy Station, said the rocket carrier swerved considerably closer to earth Friday evening and was running 26 minutes ahead of schedule.

"It is rapidly approaching the atmosphere," Lovell said. "Unfortunately if it comes into it tonight it will not be visible in our atmosphere."

"We have cabled America to take up the watch."

Lovell's announcement was heard with extreme interest at the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory, Cambridge, Mass., where aides quickly passed it to Dr. J. Allen Hynek, associate director.

A spokesman said this might mean a revision of estimates on the time of the rocket's death.

Smithsonian scientists previously had estimated the rocket might fall about Dec. 11.

"Until we have further evidence and information we can say no more. We are awaiting more information with interest. We have not as yet alerted Moonwatch teams for a special death watch."

In Washington, a spokesman for the Naval Research Laboratory said no trackings have been kept on the Sputnik 1 rocket because the laboratory follows only radio signals such as were put out by the satellites themselves.

At the Naval Observatory which does night-long watching of the skies, a spokesman said the last sightings of the rocket had not led them to expect it to be far enough into the atmosphere to start its final plunge.

Acting Supt. W. M. Robinson, said that in any event the Washington Moonwatchers would not be able to recheck on the rocket tonight because of overcast skies. Lovell said it was "a very exciting stage."

He said the satellite — Sputnik 1 — probably would continue in its orbit for several more weeks because of the drag on it was much less than on the rocket. The rocket carrier had launched Sputnik 1 into outer space on Oct. 4 and has been curving its orbit around the earth since then.

Moscow's last official report on the progress of its satellites had indicated that the rocket had made 734 trips around the world by 3 a.m. (GMT) Friday.

The first satellite itself had made 728 trips.

As the rocket carrier eases downward, the friction caused by the earth's atmosphere is expected to burn it up like a meteor.

But scientists have said that some fragments of the tough rocket cover may come down to earth.

Smithsonian officials reported they have received no visual sighting of the rocket from their some 150 Moonwatch teams in the past 24 hours.

However, this was not considered significant because the rocket lately has been orbiting far south and far north where there are few observers.

NEW YORK (AP) — A new program operations department has been set up by the Broadcasting and Film Commission of the National Council of Churches to supervise current programs and make long-range plans for future ones. Commission Director S. Franklin Mack said the department "will make for greater flexibility and a streamlined approach to the radio, television, and film media."

Shope Stresses Medical Training

One of the nation's leading medical scientists Friday stressed the need to attract and train good medical school staff members.

Dr. Richard E. Shope, member of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research and a 1924 graduate of the SUI College of Medicine, spoke to Iowa doctors and scientists attending the dedication ceremony for the new SUI Medical Research Center.

"Medicine thrives and advances on new knowledge and would wither and fade without it," he said, adding that teaching staffs must be skilled investigators as well as good teachers.

Urging that teaching staffs keep abreast of the swift-moving advances in medical science, Dr. Shope noted the reasons for active participation in research activities.

"By taking part in research, teachers are not only kept aware of what others in their field are doing, but also help create a body of new knowledge," he said.

A stimulating research program must be available at all medical schools to attract outstanding men to the teaching field, the scientist said. He listed five things a medical school must have to keep from remaining static and falling far behind the pack in research.

"FIRST, THERE MUST BE a stimulating environment — one in which originality of thought and action is encouraged and where new ideas can be born into a friendly atmosphere.

"SECOND, THERE MUST BE sufficient leisure from fixed responsibilities." A heavy teaching load can act as a deterrent to research, he added.

"THIRD, THERE MUST BE a certain amount of money to finance research." He warned, however, that too much money and too much specialized equipment might make a glorified technician out of a youngster who might use his brains and ingenuity toward discovering new and original principles.

"FOURTH, THERE SHOULD BE a certain amount of technical assistance." But he noted that this can also be overdone. An investigator over-supplied with help, doing research by proxy, not only misses the thrill itself, but may also miss a very large discovery, he explained.

"FIFTH, THERE MUST BE the physical facilities in which to work." Laboratories do not need to be fussy and elegant, but should be pleasant enough that the investigator can enjoy long periods of time working there, he noted.

Dr. Shope said he believed these five ingredients are present at SUI and added that he looks forward "to an era in which SUI not only graduates well-trained practitioners of medicine, but also attracts brilliant young men and women to the ranks of academic medicine and research."

In concluding, Dr. Shope said that the dedication of the new Medical Research Center is something more than a dedication. "It is a consecration of the men and women who will be working here through the years to come — dreaming, thinking, studying, experimenting and making discoveries."

A public open house will be held from 9 a.m. to noon today at the Research Center. Visitors will have a chance to see a mechanical heart, an artificial kidney, a cobalt "bomb" and other exhibits.

Sanderson Elected To Executive Post

Arthur M. Sanderson, editorial advisor to the Daily Iowan and instructor in editorial journalism at the SUI School of Journalism, was elected executive secretary-treasurer of the National Council of College Publication Advisers (NCCPA) at the third annual conference of the group in New York recently.

In addition, the SUI School of Journalism was established as the permanent national headquarters for NCCPA.

Sanderson had been secretary-treasurer of the organization for two years prior to being elected to his executive post. He will continue as editor of the Review, quarterly bulletin of NCCPA, which is devoted to information about college publications.

The NCCPA was formed in 1955 to maintain high standards of college journalism and to serve as an agency for the exchange of ideas and information.

The organization now has members in 39 states, Canada and Mexico.

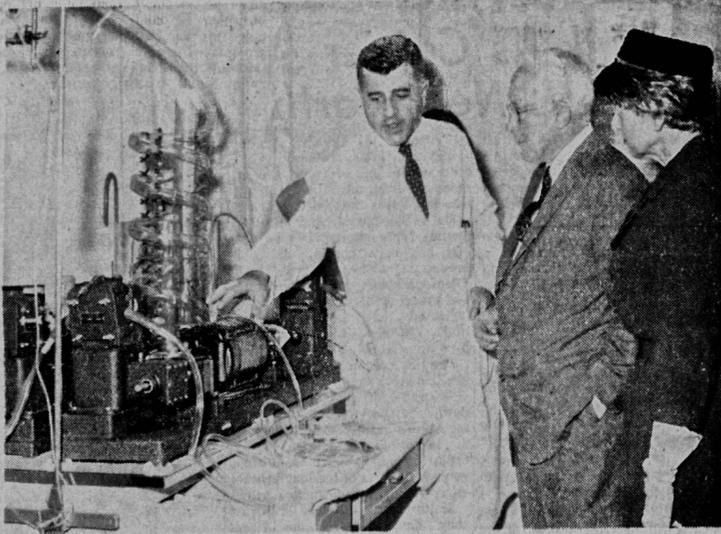

Pension Fund For Teachers Nearly Gone

DES MOINES (AP) — The Iowa Employment Security Commission Thursday estimated that the $250,000 appropriated by the 1957 legislature to assure $75 a month pensions to Iowa's older teachers for two years will be exhausted next spring.

More than $100,000 of the appropriation was paid out in August, September and October, the commission reported, and the balance will be required to pay approved claims through the middle of March.

The Legislature approved paying teachers over 65 who retired before July 4, 1953, enough more than any pension they were receiving to bring up their pensions to a minimum of $75 per month.

It appropriated $250,000 for two years, and provided that "any balance remaining" June 30, 1959, should revert to the general fund.

Mechanical Heart

DR. JOHANN L. EHRENHAF, left, SUI professor of surgery, describes the operation of an "Artificial Heart" to Senator and Mrs. Thomas E. Martin. The Martins toured the new $1 1/2 million Medical Research Center Friday during dedication week of the building.

Press Against Labor Says Union Official

By STANLEY MEISLER

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A labor official told the Associated Press Managing Editors Assn. Friday that the press had been unfair to labor. Several editors promptly arose to dispute the accusation.

"You can probably guess that I don't think we've had a fair shake," said George M. Harrison, vice president of AFL-CIO.

Harrison, who also is president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, singled out newspaper coverage of the hearings by the committee of Sen. John McClellan (D-Ark.).

"The McClellan group was set up to investigate labor and management," he said, "but you'll find most newspapers have put the emphasis on the misdeeds of labor."

This was challenged by Coleman A. Harwell of the Nashville Tennessean, William D. Reimert of the Allentown, Pa., Call and Chronicle, and Talbot Patrick of the Rock Hill, S.C., Evening Herald.

The three editors said their newspapers had given as much coverage to charges against Nathan Shefferman as to charges against Dave Beck and James Hoffa.

Beck, former president of the Teamsters Union, and Hoffa, elected to the committee when it investigated corrupt practices in unions. Shefferman, a labor consultant, was a major witness when the committee delved into corruption in management.

Reimert said he had checked 50 other newspapers and found the majority using the Shefferman testimony on front pages.

"I believe the majority did give fairly extensive coverage and similar coverage to that given the Teamsters," Reimert said.

Loveless—Dam Project 'Exorbitant'

BISMARCK, N. D. (AP) — Gov. John E. Davis Friday disputed a claim by Gov. Herschel Loveless of Iowa that cost of constructing the Garrison Dam diversion unit would be exorbitant.

Loveless suggested Wednesday that construction of an irrigation project such as the Garrison unit warranted detailed consideration before Federal money is spent.

In a statement, Davis termed the Loveless statement "unfortunate," and said that the Garrison diversion unit is an integral part of the Missouri River Basin plan.

The basin plan, said Davis, has been designed "to protect the rights of Iowa."

Added Davis, "The cost cited by Loveless as exorbitant is actually well below the average per acre cost of irrigation projects under development in the West today. The benefit-cost ratio of the Garrison diversion unit is favorable."

Legislation is now before Congress to authorize construction of the diversion unit, which would entail mainly irrigation of one million acres in central North Dakota and northeastern South Dakota.

KITE HAZARD

VANCOUVER (AP) — Control tower operators at Vancouver International Airport say that high flying kites may plague aircraft. Said one: "If those things got fouled up in a jet there would be an awful mess."

2 Bank Robberies Charged to Farmer

ELKADER (AP) — Charles Greathouse, 26, an unmarried Dubuque county farmer, was arraigned in justice court Friday on two charges of entering a bank with intent to rob.

Involved was the $791 robbery of the Farmersburg Saving Bank Thursday and the $2,782 holdup of the First Savings Bank of McGregor last June 25.

Greathouse, who authorities said also has admitted taking $2,800 last Aug. 15 from the Bagley office of the City Bank of Prairie Du Chien, Wis., made no statement when arraigned before Justice of the Peace Ray Barton in Elkader.

Bond was fixed at $25,000 on each of the two charges. Greathouse was returned to the county jail after he failed immediately to post the bonds.

Sheriff Forrest Fischer said Greathouse probably will be taken before District Judge G. B. Richter Monday to enter a plea. The sheriff related that Greathouse has indicated he wanted to enter a plea at that time.

Authorities say Greathouse apparently turned to bank robbery to help maintain a 136-acre farm he bought last year. The farm is at Richardsville, about 10 miles north of Dubuque.

The loot in the Farmersburg robbery was recovered when Greathouse was captured hiding in a barn near Volga City a few hours after the holdup. He had fled on foot after his getaway car went into a ditch. Sheriff Fischer said officials of the Lamont office of the Farmers State Savings Bank of Independence viewed Greathouse Friday but failed to identify him as the unmasked gunman who robbed the bank of $3,000 in February of 1955. In the Lamont holdup, nine persons were locked in the bank vault.

Fischer said the Farmersburg, McGregor, and Bagley, Wis., bank robberies are the only ones to which it has been possible to link Greathouse. The sheriff and county attorney went to Greathouse's farm home Friday and said they found $137 in bills and between $175 and $180 in change.

Bandits Take $2,400 from CR Tavern

CEDAR RAPIDS (AP) — Two young men wearing dark glasses took about $2,400 in cash from Koch's Tavern Friday and made their getaway in a car driven by a third man.

The bandits abandoned the car, which had been stolen earlier, about two blocks from the tavern and jumped into another auto.

Highway patrol cars and patrol airplanes immediately started combing the area for the second car.

Tavern owner Warren Koch said the two men entered his establishment about 3 p.m. and walked to the end of the bar. He said one drew a .45 automatic pistol and said:

"This is a stickup. Give us the money."

Koch, his wife and a customer then were forced into the back room. One of the robbers then ripped out the telephone.

Jolice said Koch told them the bandits got $2,399.50 — most of it in ten, five, and one dollar bills.

Koch said he had the cash in a box under the counter. He explained that Friday is payday at a factory across the street and that he usually cashes a number of checks.
