NATO Agrees to Stockpiles, Missile Bases for Continent

Decision Is Summit Meet Compromise

PARIS (AP) — Atlantic alliance leaders agreed unanimously Wednesday to gird Europe for pushbutton rocket warfare.

This victory for President Eisenhower's strategy of nuclear stockpiles and medium-range missile bases in Britain and on the Continent was a NATO summit conference compromise.

The United States gaves its consent to cautious and guarded overtures to the Kremlin to see if any success might be achieved by fresh negotiations with the Soviet Union.

Thus the United States and its European allies, dangerously split on these issues when the 15-nation conference opened Monday, found themselves in agreement, if not completely satisfied, with only one day's talks remaining.

Mr. Eisenhower and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles will report to the American people on the summit conference on a 30-minute radio-TV broadcast from Washington at 7:30 p.m. (CST) Monday.

NATO Secretary General Paul-Henri Spaak said Mr. Eisenhower, British Prime Minister Macmillan, West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, French Premier Felix Gaillard and other alliance leaders stamped their approval on the military and diplomatic programs Wednesday.

"There is no Atlantic crisis," Spaak told a news conference. "Everything goes well, and the heads of government have reached final agreement on almost all points. Some details on some few things have to be completed tomorrow."

Among these, he said, was dotting "I's" and crossing "T's" on where and when to sound out Moscow about a new parley.

But, the Belgian statesman added, the government chiefs have already given a definite go-ahead to French Foreign Minister Christian Pineau's suggestion that Western foreign ministers try for separate new disarmament talks with the Russians. These would be attempted if the United Nations negotiations, broken off by Russia, cannot be restarted.

Norway, Denmark and Iceland reportedly do not want to bypass the United Nations so long as there is any chance of using that disarmament machinery.

This is also the U.S. view.

Norwegian Premier Einar Gerhardsen convinced the delegates they should make it clear to the whole world the only reason they were pushing ahead with superarms was because Soviet weapons-brandishing in those fields forced them to. This, informants said, will be embodied in the communique to be issued today.

Although the NATO members agreed on the principle of the nuclear stockpiles and medium-range missile bases, they were far from agreed on which countries will accept missile sites when they can be set up about a year from now.

Britain, The Netherlands and Turkey are agreed. The Scandinavians and the West Germans are opposed. Others are lukewarm.

The agreement also covered a program for joint science research and more efficient use of the alliance's resources in this field.

Iowa City Isn't Dead Spot for Holidays

By KAREN CLAUSE
Daily Iowan Staff Writer

If you have the idea that Iowa City is a "dead city" during the Christmas holidays, you are wrong.

Many of the 1500 married students at SUI, as well as faculty members, remain in Iowa City during vacation. Most University facilities stay open during this time, at least on a limited basis, to accommodate these people and other students who don't go home for Christmas.

Although Commons and Currier, women's dormitories, will be closed during the holidays, dormitory officials report that Hillcrest and the Quadrangle, men's dormitories, will remain open, although food service will not be available to residents.

The SUI University Library will be closed only four days during the 16-day holiday period — Sunday, Dec. 22; Wednesday, Dec. 25; Sunday, Dec. 29, and Wednesday, Jan. 1. On vacation weekdays, library facilities will be available from 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., and on Saturdays hours will be 7:30 a.m. to 12 noon. The General Library was used by approximately 500 students daily during the Christmas holidays a year ago.

The Iowa Memorial Union will accommodate people from Dec. 20 to Jan. 5, but on a limited basis. Monday through Friday the Union facilities, including the bowling allys, pool tables and Gold Feather Room, will be open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., but no food will be served, Union officials stated.

Although Student Health authorities hope to have little business during the holidays, the health center will be open on week-days from 9 a.m. to 12 noon and 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. On Saturdays and Sundays Student Health will maintain the usual hours of 9 a.m. to 12 noon. The only two days Student Health will close during vacation will be Dec. 24 and 31, authorities said.

Special Christmas services are being planned by the 27 Iowa City churches for permanent residents and those faculty and students who will remain here.

The Daily Iowan will remain in operation except for four days during the vacation period. The paper will not be published on Dec. 25, 26, and Jan. 1, 2. Those who wish to have a Daily Iowan delivered on the other days should notify The Daily Iowan office in writing by Saturday.

Iowa City stores will remain open for last minute Christmas shoppers until 4 p.m. on Dec. 24, but will be closed Christmas day, the Chamber of Commerce office reported. The stores will close at 4 p.m. on Dec. 31 and will not open again until Jan. 2.

Council Urges Student Seats Be Extended

SUI's student council voted unanimously Thursday to recommend to the Athletic Board of Control that the student seating section in Iowa stadium be moved from the north to the south 40-yard line.

The council's decision was based on a student opinion poll conducted this fall in which 85.4 per cent of returned ballots favored the move and 14.6 per cent opposed.

Also, in response to the opinion poll, the council voted to recommend moving the Hawk-I Pep Club's card section to the center top half of the south "horseshoe" bleachers to enable the card section to be visible to all other sections of the stadium and to television cameras.

The student opinion poll indicated 77 per cent of those returning the questionnaire favored the move and 33 per cent opposed it.

John Ellis, representative of married students, objected in council to what he characterized a poor public relations gesture toward married students on the part of the married student housing office.

He told council members that a complaint by Mrs. Daniel Berry, chairman of the married student wives committee, concerning a fire hazard in Stadium Park was met by the housing office with the rebuff, "If you don't like it, move out."

He said that the objection of residents of Stadium Park concerned a recently built high board fence fronting the area and preventing ready access to it by fire trucks.

Chest Drive Still Short, To Continue Until Jan. 1

By GRETA LEINBACH
Daily Iowan Staff Writer

A conspicuous 19 per cent of the 1958 Community Chest Drive goal was lacking as of noon Wednesday, according to Community Chest officials.

A total of approximately $32,000 has been raised with almost $7,100 to go before the goal will be attained.

Community Chest officials this year did not ask SUI's assistance in the soliciting of faculty members and employees, as has been done in previous years.

No assistance from SUI was sought because a faculty advisory committee recommended to the SUI administration that no exception be made to the Board of Regent's policy of not allowing campaign drives through University channels.

As a result, Chest solicitors have attempted to reach faculty members at their homes, and not at their university offices.

Otherwise, Community Chest campaigners have contacted Iowa City residential homes and professional establishments. They have also solicited national firms doing business in Iowa City.

According to Murvin H. Perry, publicity chairman for the campaign, the Drive has not suffered from the lack of University assistance.

"We have raised approximately the same amount of money through residences this year as we did through residences and university offices combined last year," Perry said.

Last year's goal of $37,000 fell short by almost $3,000, Perry stated.

George B. Mather, 1958 Community Chest chairman, explained that "the major reason we have not reached our goal this year is because too many people regard the Community Chest Drive as just another drive. They give to it just as they would give to a single agency drive," he said.

"Unless the community is willing to accept the Comunity Chest as cooperative efforts of several agencies and support it accordingly, we will have difficulty in reaching our goal."

January 1, 1958, has been set as the final deadline for contributions.

Organizations which will be aided by the Drive wil be the Iowa City Visiting Nurses Association, the Boy Scouts, the Girl Scouts, the United Service Organization (USO), the Iowa Children's Home Society, the Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation, the Fund to provide milk, eye glasses and hearing aids for needy school children, and the American Home-finding Association.

Special Trains Scheduled For Yule Rush

A third special train has been scheduled by the Rock Island Railroad to take care of students during the Christmas exodus, Robert Libby, local ticket agent, said Wednesday.

The train will leave Iowa City Friday at 3:45 p.m. and will make stops in the tri-cities, Bureau, Ill. (allowing for connections to Peoria), Joliet, Englewood, and Chicago.

Tickets may be purchased any time today or tonight, Libby said, because the ticket office remains open continuously.

Two other special trains previously had been announced by the Rock Island. One will leave Iowa City today at 2:15 p.m. and arrive in Chicago at 6:30 p.m.

The other, a westbound train, will leave Chicago at 2:40 p.m. on Jan. 5 and arrive in Iowa City at 6:50 p.m. Seats on this train will be sold on a reserved basis and may be purchased at the local ticket office.

Confidential, Whisper Each Fined $5,000

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A judge Wednesday found Confidential and Whisper magazines guilty of obscenity charges and fined each $5,000.

The case against the sister scandal publications was submitted on the transcript of a sometimes sensational trial last summer which ended in a hung jury.

Texas A&M Officials Contact Evashevski

Dr. Chris Groneman, athletic council chairman at Texas A&M, told an Associated Press reporter late Wednesday that Iowa football Coach Forest Evashevski has definitely been contacted by officials at the Texas school.

Groneman said, "Yes, we have contacted Evashevski, but we haven't offered him anything; just told him we were interested and he said he was."

Evashevski was unavailable for comment Wednesday night.

Earlier Wednesday the Dubuque Telegraph-Herald quoted Texas A&M president M. T. Harrington as saying Evashevski is being considered for the head football coaching job there. "Evashevski's name is one of several on a list of possibilities for the job," Harrington said.

Evy said in Davenport Tuesday night, "Don't count it out," in referring to the Texas A&M job.

The Texas college has been seeking a head coach since Paul Bryant resigned to go to Alabama. Officials there were interested in Dan Devine of Arizona State, but Devine Wednesday signed a pact with the University of Missouri.

Groneman consulted UCLA football coach Red Sanders Wednesday night. Groneman said a four-member faculty group discussed who would be next (to consult), if Sanders did not take the job.

Evy has said he is willing to listen to any offer, including the one at Texas A&M.

The Los Angeles Times said the Aggies would pay Sanders $15,000 a year, plus an expense account of $5,000 per year, in addition to two television shows that would net him $10,000 a year.

Evy receives $17,500 at Iowa, in addition to money gained through speeches and television appearances.

Check Auto Before Taking Christmas Trip

SUI students who plan to go home by car for vacation should take certain precautions to insure that an auto accident doesn't mar their holiday.

Before starting the trip, car equipment including the battery, brakes, tires, wiper blades, heater, muffler chains and anti-freeze should be checked, local filling station manager Willy Jordan advised Wednesday.

Lights should also be checked, Jordan said, as they frequently are left unchecked by students during the semester.

Jordan said students should be aware of the possible weather conditions they may meet on the trip home, and carry emergency equipment such as sand and shovels if the road conditions are reported as bad.

Drivers can determine the condition of the road by trying their brakes occasionally while driving slowly. In order to avoid a spin ending in possible disaster, Jordan said the driver should remember to steer his car in the direction of the skid if one should start.

Students were also advised that snow tires and chains will make stopping easier and should be used if road conditions are poor or weather reports predict bad weather.

Is Christmas Really a Time Of Good Will?

Iowa City Christmas shoppers were reminded this week to guard against having Christmas packages stolen, although Iowa City Police Chief, O. A. White said he has not heard of any such complaints here this Christmas season.

The Iowa State Sheriffs Association warned all Iowans they might lose their Christmas gifts or their cars if they fail to lock cars left in unlighted parking lots, or on streets.

"This same season of 'good will' also brings out a new crop of shoplifters, short-change artists, and bad check writers," the association said.

The association recommends that people lock their cars tightly, wrap valuable presents so they do not disclose their worth, keep parcels in the trunk, carry adequate and accurate identification and use checks or credit arrangements which reduce the amount of cash carried.

Sputnik Will Soon Plunge to Earth

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Sputnik I, history's first man-made satellite, will plunge to its death the first week in January, the director of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory predicted Wednesday.

The 23-inch 184-pound sphere was launched by Russia Oct. 4 in a scientific feat that astonished the world.

Dr. Fred L. Whipple said he based his estimate of a three-month life for the Soviet moon on recent calculations of its orbit.

Dr. Whipple foretold the Nov. 30 death of the final stage rocket that launched Sputnik I, pinpointing its final plunge almost a week in advance.

A Fraternity Stand?

The announcement Tuesday that the SUI Student Council is considering a discussion of fraternities and their membership practices is good news to those who have in the past called for progressive and intelligent action on this matter.

And the decision to wait until the SUI Interfraternity Council has a chance to draft a preliminary resolution on the subject also is a wise move. Fraternity men now have the chance to make their position clear and to take the lead in establishing a sound policy for the future.

In the past several years, many national fraternities have acted toward the gradual elimination of sentiment which in the past barred individual houses from pledging some one whose race or religion was not "socially acceptable." A majority of fraternities have dropped their so-called "racial clauses."

Unfortunately, some of the fraternities have not lived up to the spirit of their actions. Last September, for example, two houses on the Amherst campus were suspended after they pledged Negroes. And the problem was brought into a bright spotlight at Colorado Springs in November when the National Interfraternity Council unanimously adopted policy statements in violent opposition to any anti-discrimination action on college campuses.

Neither SUI nor the Board of Regents have taken any stand on the NIC's position. The State of Iowa is not renowned for extremely liberal sentiments and the silence by the officials is understandable. But it was interesting to note that Iowa State College was one of more than 60 colleges and universities attacked by the NIC as a campus where anti-discrimination "agitation" is practiced.

The situation at ISC, press reports after the NIC meeting showed, does not contain any grave threats to the farternity system's status quo. It is mild indeed when compared to such campuses as the University of Colorado, where fraternities have been given until 1962 to eliminate "discriminatory clauses" or leave campus.

SUI, unfortunately, has taken no stand on fraternities and their membership practices. Rush weeks have come and gone and very rarely has a hint of trouble arisen. But, looking toward the future, it is entirely conceivable that it can. The problem has cropped up at other Big Ten schools. An attitude of "ignore it and it will go away" is only foolish.

That is why the Student Council's announcement is refreshing. A progressive stand now by the IFC, the Student Council and, it is hoped, the University Administration, cannot help but prove the best for both SUI and its fraternity system.

A Pool of Knowledge

A very interesting proposal was made at a recent meeting of AGARD (NATO's Advisory Group of Aeronautical Research and Development) as reported by Aviation Week of Dec. 2: Let all free world aeronautical scientists work on the super-sonic and missile programs now almost exclusively being carried out by America – and Russia.

The AGARD members making the proposal point out that their own countries are not financially strong enough to conduct extensive basic research projects – and if the free world is in common danger, then there is a real need for cooperative research. It doesn't make much sense to rant and rave about "the shortage of scientific personnel" when we are aggravating the situation by failing to utilize the talents of capable and willing scientists in other countries.

As the situation now stands, the technology of Western Europe is neutralized – its scientists (here, aeronautical) limited to work in sub-sonic practical engineering. In a shooting "missiles" war, these people would be little help to us or to their countries because they will have had no experience with the tools of the trade, the actual "hardware."

The basic research program in America has been inadequate, according to AGARD members, prior to World War II, most basic research was done in Western Europe – America merely put the concepts to practical use. We must now lead the way, yet we are still flailing along in an inane aura of confusing classifications and limited cooperation among American research projects – let alone with our allies – and so the problem emerges as a maladjustment of talent and factors rather than an actual shortage of capable people.

We must cooperate or strangle our missile program in a tangle of self-erected barriers, waste, and inefficiency – a tragic paradox of famine in the midst of plenty, or at least, adequate resources!

'Red Brick' Schools of the 20th Century–

British Universities

(Editor's note: This is the second of two articles on British technical universities. The author is a former university correspondent of the Birmingham (England) Gazette.)

In Scotland's capital city, Nobel prizewinner Edward Appleton is vice-chancellor of the University of Edinburgh. Despite heavy administration duties he carries on his studies in the nature and behavior of the ionosphere, where his pioneering work was so significant. Edinburgh's medical faculty — Joseph Lister, founder of the principles and practice of antiseptic surgery was once a member — still commands a high reputation in the medical world.

There are active centers of research in the constituent colleges of the University of Wales in Bangor, Aberystwyth, Cardiff and Swansea. Notable and first-class contributions are being made here in embryological studies and important discoveries in carbohydrate chemistry.

University education is open to any young man or woman in Britain today if the brains and the will are there. Money is no stumbling block.

AT THE PRESENT TIME there are little over 85,000 students studying for degrees, and three-quarters of them are assisted by scholarships or other awards from public or private funds.

As long ago as the academic year 1934-5 nearly 42 percent of the students in Britain received some form of help.

Oxford and Cambridge are often thought of as being the 'aristocratic' preserves in British education. But the facts belie that. From 1934-5, for example, the percentage of assisted students at both places was above the general average; the figure was 43.4.

Today the figures for Oxford and Cambridge are 74 and 75 respectively. The cost of attending university varies between $980-$1,120 a year, depending on whether the students live in or out.

In some cases, depending on domestic circumstances, the State pays the whole cost.

DESPITE THEIR eminent achievements, the 'Red Brick' Universities suffer from one serious handicap — a lack of residential accommodation for their students. One of the finest aspects of a university education is the benefit of a common residence with all its facilities for discussion, fellowship and student 'inter-education'.

The existence of colleges, characteristic of the ancient universities such as Oxford and Cambridge, is developed in the more modern universities in the form of halls of residence, in which students live as members of a social community subject to the influence of corporate life.

The number of students residing in university colleges or halls of residence is at present 23,415 (27.5 percent of the total); in lodgings 38,072 (44.7 percent) and at home 23,707 (27.8 percent).

OXFORD AND CAMBRIDGE have always been unique, and still are, in having a greater proportion of their students 'living in'.

Although students who live at home or in lodgings miss the advantages of student 'inter-education', it is interesting to see how, under handicaps, they create a life of their own with their students' societies and clubs. Some of these societies have an athletic purpose, others are concerned with professional, religious or cultural interests such as politics, drama, music, modern languages, literature and science.

In many universities there is an all-embracing Students' Council or Union which has the oversight of all these extracurricular activities. Also, they provide cheap meals, common rooms, reading rooms, libraries, game rooms, dance and concert halls.

The buoyant spirit met with in the Unions in many ways symbolizes the succes of Britain's 'Red Brick' universities.

1 Man's Christmas Poll

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like a chance to confront each member of the entire student body with this one question: "What does Christmas mean to you?" Would that it were possible to hear each of the 10,000 odd answers it might receive!

Since we can't hear them all, I'd like to pose a few possible replies to this question myself.

One might call these answer: "A Student's 8.5 Theses." After all, a theses on Halloween. Shouldn't an undergrad be allowed to post (mail) a few on the eve of Christmas?

These are only theoretical answers. (I didn't have the guts to ask myself — afraid it's too tough to answer.)

Mr. Undergrad, what does Christmas mean to you?

1. "Two weeks vacation!"

2. "I'm dreaming of . . . dashing through the snow . . . and through the woods to grand . . . 'Scuse me, I'm late for my appointment at psycho."

3. "Money down the drain."

4. "It means presents, man, presents and more presents!"

5. A "bright, lit tree (Symbolic of Christ). With gifts heaped high below; A fat young tom (with seas'ning spiced). And tramps through the woods in fresh snow." (This of course, would be from a lit student.)

6. "Futility. Evree Chrissmass I assk Ssanta for my two fron' teess, an' I sstill ain' goddum."

7. "To visit at home with family, friends, and dog alike. It helps one to appreciate the merits of a scholastic environment."

8. "It makes me think of carols, and Carols of Bettys and Bettys of Shirleys and . . ."

8½. "Christmas." (an inspired look.) "Say, just what does it mean?"

'Needle Talk' by John Sunier

Some time ago in this column I talked about one of two "heroes" that I have in music, Alec Wilder. Today I'd like to discuss the recordings available by the other, who is Kurt Weill. The two composers have some things in common. Both of them write a style of music that is almost impossible to pin down as to style, having elements of both popular and classical in it. Both composers were born about the same time — Wilder in the United States, Weill in Germany.

Weill wrote his first opera at the age of ten. Later he studied with Humperdinck and Busoni. He tried his hand at the atonal style then gaining popularity in Germany, but soon switched to simpler techniques as he felt, "if music cannot serve the interests of all, its existence is no longer justified." His best work was in the theatre, where, with the collaboration of librettist Bert Brecht, he produced several very popular operas whose music mirrored the jazz of the cabarets and whose texts were in slangy vernacular. Most successful was "The Threepenny Opera," which opened in Berlin in 1928. It was based on John Gay's "Beggar's Opera," the robustious ballad-opera of eighteenth century England, and received over 4,000 performances in Germany.

KURT WEILL and his wife, Lotte Lenya (who sang the part of Jenny Diver) had to flee the Nazis in 1933 and later came to the United States. The Nazis set up a "Museum of Decadence" in which were a phonograph and some recordings of the Threepenny Opera. People stood around and listened to them so much that the museum had to be closed. You can hear these original 1928 recordings today, remastered on a Telefunken record (LGX66053).

Although regarded as a period piece of the "Twenties," "The Threepenny Opera" has been running for enthusiastic audiences at an off-Broadway theatre since 1954. An English version was made by Marc Blitzstein, whose job was doubly difficult because the work was already an adaptation from John Gay to begin with. This version is available on MGM E3121, with Lotte Lenya still singing the part of Jenny.

MANY OF Kurt Weill's best songs are sung by Lotte Lenya on a recently-recorded Columbia album titled Berlin Theatre Songs. It has three songs from the Threepenny Opera, along with many others, including the English-lyric "Alabama Song" which was popular during the late twenties here in the U.S. And if you still haven't had enough, and I haven't, you can hear the "Orchestral Suite" from "The Three-Penny Opera" on MGM 3095.

In 1930 Weill wrote a true piece of "Gebrauchsmusik" (useful music) in his opera "Der Jasager," which is to be performed by schools and musical amateurs. It is adapted from an ancient Japanese play, and possesses an interesting plot and music. It is not quite as useful to us, though, since it is in German only. Available on MGM E3270.

IN 1933, after escaping to Paris, Weill again joined with Bert Brecht to write the ballet-with-song, "The Seven Deadly Sins." This bitter, strange and very psychological poem and dance is on Columbia records, again sung by Lotte Lenya, with male quartet (in which a bass sings the role of her mother). Upon his arrival in the U.S., Kurt Weill pounced on Broadway with his first score for the American theatre, "Johnny Johnson" (MGM E3447). The story was a fantasy by Paul Green with pacifistic leanings, dealing with World War I. It was tremendously successful.

The gap between grand opera and musical comedy, which Weill was trying so hard to bridge with his works, was filled with "Street Scene" in 1943. If there ever was a real Broadway opera, this was it. The setting of Elmer Rice's play by Weill seems to deserve a place beside George Gershwin's similar creation of "Porgy and Bess." Anne Jeffreys, Brian Sullivan, and other original-cast members are heard on Columbia's recording (OL4139).

WEILL'S LAST production before his death in 1950 was "Lost in the Stars," a musical play based on Alan Paton's novel, "Cry, the Beloved Country." The fears and problems af the South African Negro are presented by singers Todd Duncan and Inez Matthews, with words by Maxwell Anderson. The original production is on Decca DL 8028. By the way, Weill was the only Broadway composer who orchestrated his own music.

MGM Records has been editing and setting into order the musical effects Weill left behind after his death, therefore most of his music in on this label. "Music for the Stage," on E3334, was arranged from selections from "Lady in the Dark," "Johnny Johnson," and "Lost in the Stars." It is played by the MGM Chamber Orchestra conducted by Arthur Winograd, as is "The Threepenny Opera" suite mentioned previously. On the other side of this disc is Aaron Copland's "Music for Movies."

WEILL FAVORITES, played by organist Richard Ellsasser, is proof that as a pop-song writer, Weill easily merits a place beside our greatest — Gershwin, Kern, Rodgers and Porter. The recording of the organ is terrible, however. (E3447).

You might like to look into Kurt Weill's "Concerto for Violin and Wind Orchestra" on E3179, but don't expect it to remind you of the Threepenny Opera.

OK Santa Claus, Get That Address Straight!

Don't blame the post office if that Christmas package you expected last year didn't arrive. The chances are the gift was not properly addressed or packaged.

University students may not have received cards and packages in the past because their proper address was not given, Iowa City postal authorities said.

Many times "State University of Iowa" is the only address given, authorities said.

Since the Iowa City Post Office no longer maintains a directory service, cards and letters sent to students with faulty or unclear addresses are taken to the SUI Campus Mailing Service.

There names are checked against the student directory or in the Registrar's Office, Charles H. Metzger, head of the Campus Mailing Service said.

The amount of mail that needs to be checked usually doubles around Christmas time and that which cannot be forwarded to the owner is sent back to the Iowa City Post Office, he added.

A package with no return address is held by a post office for 30 days. If it is not claimed during that time, it is sent to a dead parcel post department. The contents are then sold at public auction. The Iowa City Post Office sends its unclaimed packages to Chicago.

When you are getting ready to mail your Christmas packages, postal officials ask that you follow these simple rules:

1. Put the return address on the package.
2. Address the package carefully.
3. Write the name of the state in full or make sure the initials of states are readable and correct.
4. Send by first class mail, registered mail or insured parcel post if the contents are quite valuable.
5. Use postal zone numbers when mailing to big cities.
6. Wrap the package with heavy paper and tie it with a strong cord.
7. Pack solidly to keep the contents in place.
8. Put more postage on the package if you are not sure of the correct amount.
9. Mail the package early.

Follow these rules, postal authorities say, and your package will be opened under a Christmas tree — not in the dead parcel department.

Burmese Cycles 20,000 Miles to SUI

By KAREN CLAUSE
Daily Iowan Staff Writers

Traveling more than 20,000 miles through jungles, deserts and rebel country, a 22-year-old Burmese student risked his life to attend SUI.

Maung Gyi, son of U B Than director of physical education in Burma, arrived here in September after spending five months on the saddle of a British motorcycle. He rode through 23 countries in Asia, the Middle East and Europe.

Gyi was accompanied by his friend, Tom Manton, an 18-year-old American student now at Ohio Wesleyan University in Delaware.

Gyi and Manton, the son of Methodist missionaries in Rangoon, started their trip last February in Singapore. From there they went overland to London, England, arriving in mid-August.

After having seen a large slice of the world from their 500 c.c. Norton motorcycle, they sailed from Southampton, England, to New York on Aug. 23. The British machine was crated as their only luggage.

When asked why he risked his life to make such a trip, Gyi answered, "I wanted to seek adventure, to understand people and to know life. But the real truth is that I wanted to get to the great State University of Iowa."

Gyi's opportunity to attend SUI was made possible by Frank Wachowiak, professor and art director at University High School, who was in Burma three years ago on a Fulbright exchange. Acting as the professor's translator while he was in Burma, Gyi became a good friend of Wachowiak.

"Professor Wachowiak has won the hearts of students and teachers all over Burma and it is very kind of him to sponsor my studies here at SUI," Gyi said. "An excellent ambassador, not only politically but culturally as well, Prof. Wachowiak has exerted a great influence on my people."

Although Gyi and Manton made the trip primarily for good will purposes, the lads encountered adventure — and plenty of it.

Gyi said the most dangerous parts of their travels came when they rode through dense jungles in Malaya, Thailand, Burma, Assam in northeast India, and India, and in the deserts of Baluchistan, north of the Arabian Sea, Afghanistan, Iraq and Turkey.

"For over three weeks, while going through the jungles we could travel only 20 miles a day. In the deserts, the stand storms, roadless seas of sand, and the blazing 135 degree heat melted our courage and endurance," Gyi stated.

As the two traveled on their motorcycle, they were exposed to the dangers of heat, wind, storm, monsoon rains, and bullets from rebel snipers. The boys had seven major accidents. The most unforgettable accident was in Turkey, Gyi said, when they were going over mountainous terrain.

Gyi explained that their motorcycle took a severe beating while they traveled through the hot miles of jungle and desert, and finally gave out on a mountain pass, more than 1,000 feet above sea level.

"Both brakes went out just as we started down the high mountain road," Gyi said. "We headed straight for a valley of boulders and rocks, traveling at 70 miles an hour."

Gyi said his companion was thrown from the run-away vehicle. "When I regained consciousness, all 560 pounds of the motorcycle were on my leg."

The boys managed to escape death more than once during their adventurous trip, and more than once American missionaries saved their lives.

While riding through the Persian desert, Manton fell ill with a disease similar to Asian flu. Gyi drove his companion hundreds of miles, riding three straight days, until he arrived at a missionary hospital. The doctors said Gyi had saved his friend's life, for the American was almost dead.

Part of their journey took them through territory held by Communist terrorists, and there were times when the boys starved for days in the swamps and jungles before they were helped by tribesmen.

Gyi reported that at one time in the desert they were without food and water for three days. Even in Europe there were times of hunger before kind-hearted people offered them meals, he said.

In the jungles they slept in trees to get away from the insect-infested swamps, while in Europe they were "guests" in police stations where they slept behind bars and were given free breakfasts.

"In New York I tried to sleep in a park," Gyi said, "but the police officers did their duty and kicked me out."

Almost at the end of their journey, Gyi and Manton were in debt, with many hospital and repair bills. In an attempt to earn some money, Gyi entered the Manx Grand Prix motorcycle race in Kent, Brend. Competing against entrants from seven nations on the famous scramble course, he placed first and won $600.

In London, they appeared over BBC (British Broadcasting Corporation) and earned enough money to start eating again. Gyi said the entire trip cost about $2,500.

When asked about his reactions to university life, Gyi said SUI was all that he had anticipated and much more. The University is well known all over Burma, he said.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Maner, counselors at the SUI Foreign Student Center, do a great deal to make foreign students feel at home on campus, Gyi said.

"This feeling is so important for all foreign students studying in the United States, and we all regard the Maners as our 'Papa' and 'Mama'."

Gyi thinks Americans are very friendly and kind. He wishes Asians could come to know the real nature of Americans instead of viewing them as being so completely different from what they are.

New York amazed Gyi. "This is the peak of civilization," he exclaimed, "but it sure gave me a sore neck!"

When Gyi asked a New Yorker why they built the buildings so high, the man told him that New York wanted to be nearer to heaven. "I could believe this," commented Gyi, "because I heard Billy Graham speak that night."

Football at SUI was another new adventure to Gyi. He thought American football would be similar to the English game of soccer, but it didn't take him long to discover the differences.

"It was the first time I had ever seen mass wrestling," Gyi stated. "I just wish we could send some of these football giants to Burma — then I know there would be no Communist uprisings."

Gyi went to India in 1950 and attended Woodstock High School, where he met Manton. While at Woodstock, he went on three expeditions to the Himalaya Mountains. On one he reached 15,000 feet above sea level.

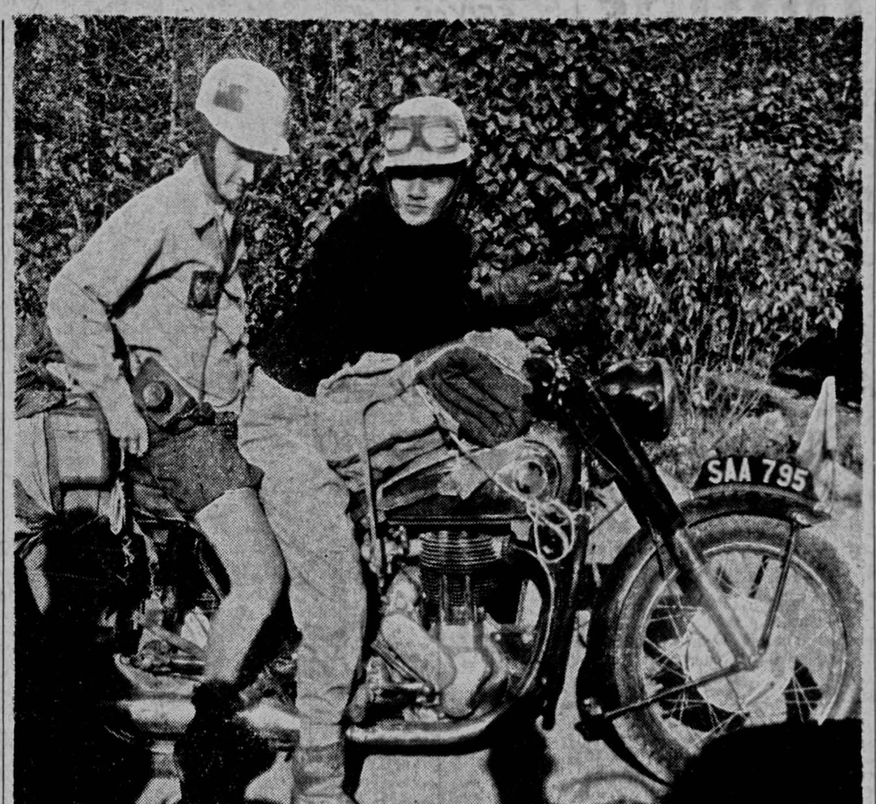
In 1953 Gyi attended the University of Rangoon. While there he took part in the Christian Youth and Student Conferences in Malaya and Bangkok. In 1955 he was elected presidet of the Burma Conference Methodist Youth Fellowship, and joint secretary of the United Christian Youth in Burma.

Already, Gyi said, traveling has given him a wealth of practical experience and knowledge. He said he has made friends with students in at least 30 universities throughout the world.

After his studies here are completed, Gyi plans to return to Burma via Russia, Red China and Japan — on the same motorcycle. Gyi will make this trip alone, and he says that arrangements are now being made by companies in London for his next adventure.

Asked about his plans for a career, Gyi said he wants to travel as much as possible. "When my health wears out, I might settle down to work."

One final comment. Gyi says the British motorcycle "is a wonderful invention."



Motorcycled For 20,000 Miles

SUI STUDENT MAUNG GYI and his companion, Tom Manton, rode this British-built motorcycle more than 20,000 miles through jungle and desert from Singapore to London. Gyi (at right) enrolled at SUI this fall after series of adventures that rival a Jules Verne novel. Their machine was damaged seven times and Manton narrowly escaped death after the motorcycle went out of control at 70 miles an hour.

Girl Scouts Begin Camping Season Friday

Girl Scouts of Cardinal Council are hoping for ice and snow over the Christmas holidays as they prepare for the winter camping season which will start Friday at Camp Cardinal, west of Iowa City.

The schedule for the campers will include ice skating and sledding, if weather permits, hiking in the area, and games and crafts inside the lodge to keep the girls busy, says Mrs. Hugh Carson, executive director of Cardinal Council.

The first "overnight" which will officially open the camp will be Troops 20 and 54, consisting of eighth graders. The troops are led by Mrs. Robert Herdliska and Mrs. C. E. Radcliffe.

At the camp Dec. 21-23 will be Troop 30, freshmen in Iowa City High School. Their leader is Mrs. William Wright.

Troops 15 and 37 will camp Dec. 26-28, with their leaders, Mrs. Robert Herring and Mrs. Warren Wallen accompanying the group.

Mrs. Arnold Maas and Mrs. Paul Kries will take their troops, 80 and 81 from Marengo, for a camp session Dec. 28-30, and Troop 11 of Iowa City High School will camp Jan. 1-3 under the supervision of their leader, Mrs. Louis Shimon.

The last session of the winter camp, Jan. 3-5, will find Troops 14 and 51, made up of seventh graders at Iowa City Junior High, St. Mary's School and St. Patrick's School, at the camp with their leaders, Mrs. Robert Cronk, Katherine Nolan and Betsy Funke.

PROOFREADING TESTS

A test for those interested in government proofreading jobs will be given by the U.S. Civil Service Commission. A printer's apprenticeship of at least five years or equivalent practical experience in the printing trade is required. Further information and application forms may be obtained from Lester P. Parizek of the Iowa City Post Office.

Iowa City Optimists Told of Early Yule

If Christmas celebrations are too secular today, they were even more so about 15 centuries ago, a local clergyman told members of the Iowa City Optimist Club Wednesday.

The Rev. Joseph Jardine, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, spoke to the Optimists after their annual Christmas dinner at the Jefferson Hotel.

The rector said he was not dismayed that secular and material influences are present in the modern Christmas celebration. Both spiritual and material practices have been historically influential in forming the Christmas celebration, he said.

The Church, he said, should be able to live with both a secular and religious observance of Christmas.

The early popes, the Rev. Mr. Jardine continued, issued many decrees deploring pagan celebrations which marked the anniversary of Christ's birth.

These celebrations, he said, stemmed from times long before the Christian period. Many of the Earth's inhabitants were sun worshippers, he explained, and were accustomed to celebrating the winter solstice period (when the days begin to lengthen) with rousing festivals, often accompanied by a general relaxation of morals. The people believed, he said, that their celebrations would help bring back the sun.

In Rome, this was the time of the Saturnalis. In northern Europe, people lit bonfires. The latter practice, the rector explained, may account for the present-day custom of decorative candles and lights.

Transition from the pagan to the Christian celebrations was gradual, the Rev. Mr. Jardine said. For several centuries, Christmas was merely a celebration of the founding of the Church. But as Christianity spread into pagan lands, he said, the Christmas celebration became blended with the winter solstice festivals.

Much of the American Christmas celebration, the Rev. Mr. Jardine said, came from England where King Arthur in the sixth century is said to have originated the Christmas festival.

The Pilgrims, he said, spent their first Christmas in the New World working. Owing to Puritan influence, the festive aspects of Christmas were not accepted in New England until the latter part of the eighteenth century, the speaker concluded.

Weather Halts Plane Search

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Stormy weather prevented search Wednesday for a Reno-San Francisco chartered plane which disappeared over the Sierra foothills Sunday afternoon with seven persons aboard.

Heavy snow lay over the Sierra down to an altitude of around 3,000 feet.

Planes tried to search the area Tuesday but were forced back by the storm.

The chartered plane's owner, Ed A. Rost, 28, and A. J. Geisler, 42, both of Castro Valley, Calif., were at the controls when they reported the wings were icing.

Joseph Travis, operator of a travel agency which chartered the flight, identified the passengers as George Trinidad of Oakland, Calif.; Mrs. Ellen Dalzell, Ukiah, Calif.; Donald Conway, 21, Alameda, Calif.; Jerry Cunningham, 21, Alameda, and Orland Antencio, whose address was not known.

Conway and Cunningham are formerly of Sioux City, Iowa.

Plane Kicked, Horse Shot

SHANNON, Ireland (AP) — Pan-American Airways disclosed Wednesday night a $9,800 thoroughbred horse had to be shot dead high over the Atlantic because it was trying to kick out the side of a cargo plane flying it to New York.

The Italian-bred yearling colt named Rockwoods had been due to reach New York Sunday in the plane that also had nine persons aboard and eight other horses.

Rockwoods broke the tethering device used in horse cargo flights to keep horses from damaging themselves and the plane.

It then began battering the side of the pressurized cabin, endangering the lives of the persons aboard, a Pan American spokesman said.

The decision to shoot the horse was made by the pilot, Capt. Ed Mulholland, in consultation with the grooms who accompanied the horses bound from London to New York.

The incident occurred about 500 miles off the Irish coast. Pan American said the mishap was the first of its kind since trans-Atlantic air shipment of horses began in 1946.

The woman also was hit and was reported in critical condition in Turner hospital. All names were withheld pending notification of relatives. Earlier reports listed the wife as killed.

Family Argues About Stock Apportionment

CHICAGO (AP) — Vice president Charles Comiskey, 32, Wednesday won the opening court round of a family fuss over apportionment of Chicago White Sox stock.

Probate Judge Robert J. Dunne granted a temporary order restraining Comiskey's sister, Mrs. Dorothy Comiskey Rigney, executrix of the Mrs. Grace Comiskey estate, from voting for 60 days the 4,062 shares of Sox stock she controls in the estate.

The action postponed indefinitely a scheduled meeting Thursday of club stock-holders at which a new team president presumably was to be elected.

Comiskey had petitioned the court for 1,781 shares of his inherited stock, or an order restraining Dorothy from voting any of the estate stock. Mrs. Comiskey, mother of Chuck and Dorothy and former club president, died Dec. 10, 1956. In deference to her death, no president was to be named for one year.

Mrs. Comiskey willed Dorothy 2,281 shares of stock, 500 more than the 1,781 she bequeathed to Chuck.

Comiskey claimed in two days of sharp charges and counter charges that Mrs. Rigney, whose husband,

Chuck Comiskey

John, is a co-vice president with Comiskey, was holding up distribution of the estate to maintain control of the club.

Mrs. Rigney's attorneys said she had no other motive than careful administration of the estate and was concerned over her personal responsibility in paying federal and state estate taxes.

Judge Dunne continued the hearing to Feb. 18. He ordered Mrs. Rigney not to vote the stock until further order of the court.

Hawks Rank Near the Top In Statistics

High rankings of Iowa's football team and individuals in the final compilations of national statistics are revealed by the report of the National Collegiate Athletic bureau.

Iowa ranked fourth in total offense with an average of 384.3 yards per game, third in scoring with an average of 29.2; and sixth in rushing defense, 112.7 yards.

Other team rankings included ninth in forward passing offense. 77 of 146 for 1,298 yards, .527 and 11 touchdowns; twelfth in rushing offense with 241.1; and fourteen in points after touchdown with 30 of 38 for .789.

Individually, end Jim Gibbons was fifth in pass-receiving, 36 catches for 587 yards and 4 TDs and end Bob Prescott was fourth in points after touchdown, 21 of 28 for .750. Quarterback Randy Duncan was ninth in total offense, with 1,183 yards in 154 plays and thirteenth in forward passing, 70 in 119 for 1,124 yards, .588 and 10 touchdowns.

Dolphins Sponsor Trip To Florida—

Iowa Squads To Attend Forums

By DALE KUETER
Daily Iowan Assistant Sports Editor

Iowa swimmers and head coach Dave Armbruster along with other members of the Dolphin Club will travel to Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. Friday to attend the NCAA swimming forum, and participate in the East-West swimming meet.

The trip, sponsored by the Dolphin fraternity for more than twenty years, includes attending a gymnastics forum at Sarasota, Fla.

The purpose of the trip in attending the forums, is to learn new techniques and variations in swimming and gymnastics, Dolphin president John Bogert said. Bogert added that panel discussions and lectures are scheduled, with Coach Armbruster and Iowa's assistant swimming coach, Bob Allen, to talk.

Bogert said the swimming forum, which starts Dec. 23 and runs to Jan. 1, will be attended by the "big schools in the country," including all universities in the Big Ten.

Coach Armbruster said the Hawkeye swimmers will be working out twice a day in Florida in preparation for the East-West meet and upcoming Big Ten meets following the holidays. Iowa meets Wisconsin in the Hawks Big Ten opener Jan. 11 in the Iowa pool.

The main teams participating in the East-West swimming meet the coach said, will be North Carolina, Navy and Yale for the East and Iowa, Michigan, and Oklahoma for the West.

Iowa swimmers making the trip are mostly senior members of the swimming squad. Those going are Lincoln Hurring, Gary Morris, Jim Coles, Bob Pratt, Jake Quick, Estel Mills, Joel Jones, Jim Davidson, Charles Mitchell, and Earl Ellis.

Gymnastics members making the Florida trip are Staffen Carlsson, Bob Justice, Hon Boulton, Dick Plato and assistant coach Sam Bailie.

Bogert said that besides members of the swimming and gymnastics team, other Dolphin members will also make the trip.

On Christmas day, Bogert said, the Dolphins will particiapte in a water show in which they will present two acts from their fall program. Bogert said the group will also present exhibitions at a few of the larger hotels.

Working in these shows besides members of the swimming team, will be Ann Cooper, Marcia McGovern, Winifred Naughton and Jean Niemeir.

Rookies Give 49ers Chance In Big Game

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Huge Frank Morze sat on the rubbing table at the San Francisco 49ers training camp and commented, "You know, in this game you learn something new every game."

The 276-pound rookie center from Boston College added, "each game the fellow playing opposite you is big, fast and good. This game is great football."

Sunday at Kezar Stadium the 49ers tangle with the Detroit Lions in the playoff for the western conference title of the National Football League. A major factor for the 49ers will be how well Morze and a half dozen other rookies have learned their lessons.

In addition to Morze, the starting offensive lineup for the home club includes flanker back R. C. Owens, the alley oop pass catcher from College of Idaho, and Gene Babb, 207-pound fullback from Austin College of Sherman, Tex., both pro yearlings.

Recent switches on defense have rookie Karl Rubke of the University of Southern California at a linebacker spot and freshman Jim Ridlon from Syracuse at a defensive backfield post. In addition, Morze rushes into the center of the line when the enemy approaches too close to the 49ers goal.

Sunshine broke out Wednesday allowing both clubs to get in their workouts. The Lions, arriving by plane Tuesday, worked at Stanford, and the 49ers at Redwood City.

Tighter Defense Noted in American League During '57

CHICAGO (AP) — Tighter defensive play was a keynote of the 1957 American League baseball season, official statistics showed Wednesday.

The overall league fielding average of .979 was four points better than that of 1956.

Chicago led in team defensive play for the second straight year with .982, three points better than a year ago. Baltimore was second with .981.

New York was tops in double plays with 183, but it was far short of the 214 twin killings made by the 1956 Yankees. Chicago made the fewest errors, 107, and Boston's catchers had the fewest passed balls, 9.

The defensive stars by positions: Third base — Frank Malzone, Boston, 954; shortstop — Joe DeMaestri, Kansas City, .980; catcher — Yogi Berra, New York, .995; outfielders — Charley Maxwell, Detroit, .997; Al Pilarcik, Baltimore, .996; Ted Williams, Boston, .995; pitcher — Bobby Shantz, New York, .986.

Boston's Jim Piersall handled the most chances of any outfielder, 413, and fielded a brilliant 990. He had four errors.

Thirty-four pitchers fielded without error, with Dick Donovan of Chicago the leader. He had 55 chances.

Drake Survives Rally; Nips AF Academy, 74-69

DENVER (AP) — Drake University, showing better backboard control and free throw accuracy, Wednesday survived a last-period rally by the Air Force Academy to post a 74-69 basketball victory.

The Iowans led 38-31 at halftime. But the cadets, led by Bob Beckel, were behind only 65-66 with 3:36 left.

Both teams hit 29 field goals but Drake scored on 16 of 24 free throws while AFA collected only 11 of 17.

Devine Named Head Coach At U. of Missouri

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — The University of Missouri Wednesday named as its new head football coach Daniel J. Devine, the 33-year-old mentor who led his Arizona State Sun Devils to an undefeated season.

Devine was the only one of the field of candidates to be interviewed by university officials.

He will succeed Frank Broyles, who resigned 10 days ago after a year's stint to take the head coaching post at the University of Arkansas.

No salary figure was announced in connection with Devine's three year agreement which contains a renewal option of two years. But it was understood that his salary would be $15,000 a year.

Devine is expected to build toward a different kind of football from the iron-bound defense and punting and quick-kicking which Broyles features. Devine says he likes to score touchdowns. His team led the NCAA teams last season with 397 points in 10 games.

He features the multiple offense, a version of the style at Michigan State where he coached before going to Tempe three years ago.

Devine said in a telephone conversation with Faurot he was enthusiastic about the M. U. plan which concentrates on obtaining Missouri athletes, but maintains an open door for outstate athletes.

At the time Broyles resigned to go to Arkansas, there were reports he was unhappy about the Missouri plan, feeling it handicapped him in the development of a contending team.

The Broyles-coached Tiger team ended up with a 5-3-1 record.

Detroit Piston Coach Charley Eckman Resigns

DETROIT (AP) — Charley Eckman resigned Wednesday as head coach of the Detroit Pistons pro basketball team. The club had won only nine of 25 games so far this season.

Eckman, 36, was working on a three year, $12,000 contract, which was to have run to June, 1960. He came to Detroit this year when the Fort Wayne franchise in the National Basketball Assn. was moved.

U.S. Captain Says He May Combine Seixas and Macka

MELBOURNE (AP) — There were growing indications Wednesday that the United States would throw a two-man team of Vic Seixas and Barry Mackay against the Australians in the Davis Cup challenge round next week, giving them the ironman role of both singles and doubles.

"I have made up my mind on the doubles team," Captain Bill Talbert said, "but I would prefer not to reveal my choice at the moment. I don't want the boys to relax their training efforts."

As far as Talbert would go in disclosing his hand was to say that Mackay, the 6-4 Davis Cup freshman from Dayton, Ohio, continues to occupy a "key role" in his challenge round plans.

8 Chosen To Appear Supreme Court Day

Eight juniors in the College of Law at SUI won the right to appear in Supreme Court Day Arguments in their senior year during traditional junior arguments which closed this week.

The eight students were among 16 juniors chosen on the basis of grades to argue hypothetical cases before Iowa judges. Lawyers who served as judges for the 1957 arguments were the Hon. Robert L. Larson, Iowa City, Iowa Supreme Court justice; the Hon. Heinrich C. Taylor, Bloomfield, judge of the 2nd judicial district of Iowa; the Hon. Clay LeGrand, Davenport, judge of the 7th judicial district, and the Hon H. D. Evans, Iowa City, judge of the 8th judicial district.

For the arguments, the juniors were assigned in teams as "lawyers" for the plaintiff or defendant in cases being appealed to a higher court.

On Supreme Court Day members of the Iowa Supreme Court convene at SUI to judge a hypothetical case argued by senior law students.

Here are the winners and their hypothetical cases.

Myron L. Enfield, Anita, successfully appealed the conviction of an epileptic who had suffered an attack of epilepsy while driving a motor vehicle and struck and caused the death of a pedestrian.

Heinrich Taylor, Bloomfield, successfully appealed the conviction of an epileptic who had suffered an attack of epilepsy while driving a motor vehicle and struck and caused the death of a pedestrian.

David R. Hols, Burlington, successfully appealed the conviction of a client for interfering with the custody of a child by taking the child away from its living parent.

Robert H. Baker, Humboldt, successfully appealed a lower-court ruling that the defendant had committed specific breaches of law while a trustee of the plaintiff's funds.

John H. Allen, Indianola, successfully appealed a lower-court ruling that the defendant had committed specific breaches of law while a trustee of the plaintiff's funds.

Francis J. O'Rourke, Iowa City, successfully appealed the case of a plaintiff, a patient who charged that a sponge had been left inside his body during surgery performed by the defendant, a surgeon.

Richard G. Howard, Lewis, successfully appealed the conviction of a client for interfering with the custody of a child by taking the child away from its living parent.

Richard Baskerville, Monona, successfully appealed the case of a plaintiff, a patient who charged that a sponge had been left inside his body during surgery performed by the defendant, a surgeon.

WSUI To Remain On Air Through Holiday Season

Radio station WSUI will remain on a full operating schedule from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Saturday during the Christmas holidays. Only Christmas eve, Christmas day and New Year's day will be omitted from the broadcast schedule.

This will be the first time in the history of SUI's radio station that it has stayed on the air full time with students away for the Christmas holidays.

Throughout the holiday period, WSUI will provide programs predominately in keeping with the spirit of Christmas. Included will be a reading of Dickens' "Mr. Pickwick's Christmas" by Charles Laughton at 7 p.m. Monday.

Within the music field, Handel's "The Messiah" will be presented. The highlight of the pre-Christmas presentations will come on the day before Christmas when WSUI will play host to children on "WSUI's Christmas Children's Party" from 8:30 a.m. until noon, when WSUI will leave the air until after Christmas.

Stratojet Crashes Near Observatory

PALOMAR MOUNTAIN, Calif. (AP) — A six-engine B47 Stratojet bomber crashed in the Palomar Observatory grounds Wednesday, not far from the dome housing the world's largest telescope.

An Air Force spokesman in Los Angeles said three men were aboard, but the San Diego County sheriff's office said four or five bodies had been located in the wreckage.

March Air Force Base, the plane's home station, said there may have been five aboard.

Strikes Close Both Papers In St. Paul

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Chain reaction strikes Wednesday closed down the Dispatch and the Pioneer-Press, leaving Minnesota's capital city of 312,000 without daily newspapers.

City editions of the Pioneer Press, morning publication, failed to reach readers this morning after the newspapers' 27 mailers went on strike shortly before 11 p.m. Tuesday.

A few hours later the typographical union announced its 210 members also were on strike. The American Newspaper Guild unit, representing about 350 reporters, circulation, maintenance and some other workers, refused to cross mailer picket lines and met in special session shortly before noon. They voted to join the walkout.

The three unions seek new work contracts calling for increased wages and other benefits. No attempt was made to publish the afternoon Dispatch as pickets from the three unions marched in front of the newspapers' combined plant. The dispute idled about 900 persons.

In adjacent Minneapolis, W. P. Steven, executive editor of the Minneapolis Star and the Morning Tribune said the papers have no plans to step-up press runs or make other attempts to serve St. Paul.

Some Minneapolis-St. Paul radio and television stations immediately increased their news coverage, adding as many as six newscasts daily.

Combined daily St. Paul papers circulation totals 214,768, and the Sunday Pioneer Press 190,736.

Give Address Aliens Told

Non-immigrant foreign students at SUI must report their addresses to the United States Department of Justice before Jan. 31, 1958, Wallace Maner, SUI foreign student advisor said Wednesday.

Maner was commenting on information released by Robert C. Wilson, Omaha, district director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The release states all aliens — except diplomats, persons accredited to certain international organizations such as the United Nations, and persons admitted temporarily as agricultural laborers — must report their addresses to the Immigration and Naturalization Service during January.

Forms to make the report can be obtained from any post office or immigration office during January. The release said the law provides severe penalties for failure to comply with immigration and naturalization requirements.

Former SUIowan Schedules Opera Tour of Europe

Margaret Roberts, former music student at SUI, has been engaged to sing four performances of "La Tosca" at the Convent Garden Opera in London next month. Richard Tucker, Metropolitan Opera tenor, will appear with her.

Miss Roberts, formerly of Muscatine, was a student of Herald Stark, professor in the SUI Music Department. In private life she is Mrs. Tom Nobis of Davenport.

For the past two years Miss Roberts, a soprano, has been singing opera in Italy. This fall she opened in Lausanne, Switzerland, and Bologna, Italy, opera festivals.

After her London performances, she will fly to Milan to prepare for a performance of Verdi's "Requiem" at La Scala. She will sing two performances of "Il Trovatore" at Modena, Italy, later in January and in February she will appear in "Aida" to open the opera season in Cremona, Italy.

2 Cedar Rapids Men Jailed After $1,700 Bank Robbery

NEW VIENNA (AP) — Two Cedar Rapids men, captured in a lumber shed here about 90 minutes after the New Vienna Savings bank was held up and robbed of $1,660.09, were held Wednesday night in the county jail at Dubuque.

CHIEF DEPUTY Sheriff Matt Kostle identified the men as Don Roloff, 38, and Ted Grapes, 47.

He said that E. K. Smith, cashier of the bank and Hugo Ahlers, 71-year-old New Vienna businessman who was slugged by one of the bandits while the robbery was in progress, identified Roloff and Grapes as the holdup men.

Kostle said that Anton Klostermann, 51-year-old farmer of near New Vienna, also identified the men as the ones who kidnaped him at Dyersville and used his car shortly before the bank robbery.

OFFICIALS SAID Roloff is a house painter and Grapes worked for the Universal Manufacturing Co. in Cedar Rapids. The men were wearing new coveralls purchased prior to the holdup.

Dubuque County Attorney Robert Oeth said he obtained a statement from Roloff and Grapes but he withheld filing of charges.

Deputy Kostle said the men were intoxicated when they were apprehended, that each was carrying a .45 automatic pistol and that they had a paper sack containing the same amount of money stolen from the bank. He said they had gone to the lumber shed to divide the bank loot.

STATE HIGHWAY Patrolman Lloyd Etschied, accompanied by a local feed dealer, Carl Burbach, found the two men in the lumber shed about four blocks from the bank.

The patrolman and county officials told this story of the capture of Roloff and Grapes and the kidnaping of Klostermann:

About an hour before the robbery at 2:57 p.m. Klostermann was sitting in his car at Dyersville about four miles south of New Vienna.

The two armed men got into his car, forced him to vacate the drivers seat and then drove to New Vienna.

DURING THE RIDE one of them produced a bottle of whiskey and asked Klostermann if he wanted a drink, which he refused.

They used a strand of picture wire to tie the farmer in the back seat and left him in the car.

"We're going to rob a bank" one of them told Klostermann. That was only a short time before the holdup.

It took Klostermann about a half hour to free himself and he heard about the robbery. He immediately reported the kidnaping to authorities and from his story they deduced that the bandits still were in New Vienna.

ETSCHIED SAW tracks in soft mud leading to the lumber shed. He figured the bandits were inside and called to them to surrender.

One man emerged holding a gun and the patrolman ordered the man to drop it. A little while later the second man came out and both surrendered.

Etschied summoned another patrol squad car and the two men were taken immediately to Dubuque about 35 miles east of here.

Deputy Sheriff Kostle said the men appeared to be in such an intoxicated condition that they could not be questioned immediately.

Ahlers, the businessman who was slugged during the holdup, was stunned momentarily but was treated by a local doctor and then was taken to Mercy Hospital in Dubuque. It was found there the head wound he suffered was not serious and he was released.

Cashier Smith said the bandits did not appear nervous during the holdup.

Nikita Again Hits Europe Atom Bases

LONDON (AP) — Nikita Khruschev in a magazine article Wednesday raised the specter of nuclear destruction for any West European nation allowing American atomic bases on its territory.

At the same time he said he wants meetings of Soviet and American leaders to discuss coexistence.

The Soviet Communist party boss said countries which accept American atomic bases face shattering retaliatory attacks in the event of a war launched against Russia as a result of a misunderstood order or at the discretion of some American officer.

"The cold war and the arms drive will lead to a new and very bloody war," Khruschev warned in a letter published by the New Statesman, a leftist weekly review.

"Nuclear weapons, brought from across the ocean, are imposed on West European member states of NATO under the guise of defense against aggression," Khruschev said.

"In reality, the deployment of nuclear weapons on the territories of these countries is a mortal blow to their security.

"If an aggressor breaks the peace, then, in accordance with the inexorable logic of war, shattering retaliatory atacks on the territories of those countries in which atomic bases are situated will be inevitable."

Khrushchev wrote to the New Statesman in reply to an open letter by the British philosopher Bertrand Russell, an earl who never uses his title.

Benson Announces Dairy Support Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson announced Wednesday that government price supports for dairy products will be reduced to 75 per cent of parity — the lowest legal minimum — next April 1.

He said it should bring cuts of around 2½ cents a pound in the retail prices of butter and cheese and ½ cent a quart for fluid milk.

Dairy state senators attacked the move immediately as a shocking injustice which would be disastrous to dairy farmers.

Both Sen. William D. Proxmire (D-Wis.) and Sen. Edward J. Thye (R-Minn.) announced they would introduce bills at the next session of Congress to keep the price supports at their present levels or even raise them. The present supports are 80 per cent of parity for butterfat and 83 per cent for milk used for manufacturing purposes.

Benson argued that cuts would be in the best interests of the dairy industry in the long run.

He suggested dairymen could help adjust themselves to lower supports by using greater care in culling low-producing cows which, he said, do little more than provide their owners with companionship.

Benson's action on the politically explosive price support issue came just ahead of a congressional session likely to be marked by a bitter fight over farm legislation.

Reductions in dairy supports, Benson said, do not necessarily forecast reductions for other basic farm commodities.

Benson told a news conference the April 1 support prices will be pegged at 75 per cent of parity for both butterfat and milk used for manufacturing purposes.

Farm law sets a support range between 75 and 90 per cent of parity.

Parity is a price deemed fair to the farmer in relation to his farming costs. It is fixed under standards established by law.

"Mr. Benson has taken the place of Scrooge," Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D-Minn.) remarked to a reporter. "What a Christmas present he has given!"

Secretary Benson
Cuts Dairy Supports

Proxmire called it "a shocking injustice to Wisconsin dairy farmers whose earnings last year averaged only 43 cents per hour."

Sen. Everett M. Dirksen (R-Ill.) indicated he generally favors lowering price supports to cut down farm surpluses.

"We've got to get rid of the surplus or else it will be a constant depressant on the price structure," he said.

Benson said the present rates are costing taxpayers around $375 million a year for removal of surplus butter, cheese and dried milk which, he said, are equivalent to 5 per cent of the milk output.

Out-Of-Season Tornadoes Damage Illinois and Missouri

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Out-of-season tornadoes ripped into Mount Vernon, Ill., and dipped down on rural areas in southern Illinois and eastern Missouri Wednesday.

Illinois State Police said they had reports of three deaths at Murphysboro, Ill., and one near DuQuoin, Ill. The injured included 40 at Mount Vernon, two near Farmington, Mo., and one at Truxton, Mo.

In addition, the state police said there were injuries reported from Willisville, Murphysboro and Chester, Ill., although they had no information on the number or extent.

Several other Illinois towns reported some property damage.

A WHIRLING WIND smashed into a residential section known as Country Heights at the northwestern corner of Mount Vernon, a city of 15,000 population 65 miles east of St. Louis, Mo.

"We stood on the roof of the radio station WMIX. "We could see a round, whirling wind that passed over that corner of town and disappeared to the northeast. It looked like a big, fat funnel with the spout cut off."

Fire trucks were summoned from the nearby communities of Salem, Benton and Centralia. Police estimated 50 homes were damaged in Mount Vernon.

ONE TORNADO HIT about six miles south of Farmington which is 65 miles south of St. Louis. Two farm houses were shattered.

A funnel 200 feet wide bounced through Truxton, 50 miles northwest of St. Louis. One house was moved 30 feet and six others in the village were damaged.

Almost on the eve of winter, the weather bureau issued warnings of tornadoes and thunderstorms for parts of Illinois, Indiana and Kentucky.

A tornado was sighted at Rockville, Ind., 58 miles west of Indianapolis, but it didn't touch the ground.

A TORNADO also whisked across a short strip of southern Illinois from near Chester, 40 miles south of St. Louis, to Pinckneyville, a distance of 30 miles.

The Perry County Pinckneyville sheriff's office reported telephone lines were toppled in rural regions and some cattle were injured in a field near the intersections of Illinois Highways 150 and 154 west of Pinckneyville.

The storms — common in the spring and fall — let loose just three days before the officials start of winter Saturday.

St. Louis suffered a scare. A tornado alert was issued for the city at 2 p.m. CST. The skies darkened and heavy rain and hail fell when squall line blew into the city about 3 p.m.

But, a half hour later, the danger was gone.

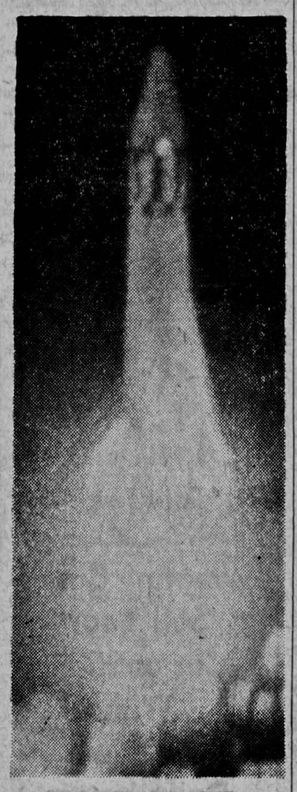
A COLLISION of cool air moving down from the north and warm air rolling up from the Gulf of Mexico touched off violent weather in the middle stretch of the Mississippi Valley.

Hail and heavy rain hit Mexico, Mo., west of St. Louis. Thunderstorms boomed over Ottumwa, Iowa, and Moline, Bradford and Peoria, Ill.

A drizzle slicked roads and streets in much of the Midwest and the wet pattern extended eastward into the Appalachians.

Fog hampered travel during the morning in parts of Iowa and Wisconsin, northern Illinois, northern Indiana and southern Michigan.

Army Jupiter Fired; Allays 'Race' Fears



JUPITER IN FLIGHT

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The Army successfully launched its mighty Jupiter intermediate range ballistic missile (IRBM) Wednesday night in a spectacular display of rocket power.

The launching was the second in two days of one of the powerful new weapons being developed by the United States. It followed the launching of the Atlas intercontinental ballistic missile Tuesday.

The identification of the firing as the Jupiter quieted the suspicions of some observers that the Army might be trying to sneak a launching of an allied vehicle, the Jupiter-C rocket designed to place a satellite in an orbit around the earth.

The Defense Department announced in Washington an hour and a half after the launching that it was a Jupiter, and added:

"This test of the Jupiter, under development by the Army, is one of a series of IRBM and ICBM flight tests conducted at the Cape Canaveral Range."

Later, the department said "the missile did not complete its full flight because of technical difficulties." A spokesman would not amplify.

There have been other Jupiter launchings at Cape Canaveral before, and they always have been among the showiest in the nation's rocket arsenal.

This one was especially dramatic in the early evening darkness and in almost clear weather.

Illinois Nabs Iowa Escapee

OTTAWA, Ill. (AP) — A woman identified by authorities as Mrs. Donna Lee Mason, 27, alias Helen Stewart, an escapee from the Rockwell City, Iowa, reformatory was seized Wednesday.

Mrs. Frances Lambert, sheriff of LaSalle County, said Mrs. Mason escaped April 26, 1956, from the Iowa institution, where she had served four months of a 10-year term for forging a $67 check.

The fugitive had been working as a waitress in nearby Troy Grove for the last three weeks, the sheriff said.

Criminal Case Fixed Say 2 Tennesseans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Tennesseans swore Wednesday that $1,000 was paid to fix a criminal case before a Chattanooga court. A third witness insisted the money was a campaign contribution to the judge, Raulston Schoolfield.

Harold E. Brown told the Senate Rackets Investigating Committee he accepted the $1,000 for Schoolfield. But he said the money was to help finance Schoolfield's unsuccessful attempt in 1954 to win the Democratic nomination for governor.

Committee members scorned this explanation but Brown said that if a payoff was involved, "it was unbeknownst to me." Brown is an assistant district attorney general in Tennessee.

The committee took testimony Tuesday that $18,500 was passed in 1951 to quash an indictment against 13 Tennessee Teamsters accused of violence in labor disputes. Schoolfield killed the indictment and two witnesses said there was a lot of talk he got the money.

Schoolfield was invited to attend the two-day hearing, which wound up late Wednesday afternoon. He did not appear and Chairman McClellan (D-Ark.) told reporters the committee had no plans to subpoena the jurist. McClellan added there was a chance a summons might be issued later.

The judge has made no comment on testimony taken by the committee, saying he would have to first make a study of the hearing record.

Schoolfield's activities were but one phase of a broader series of committee hearings that dealt with labor violence, and the prosecution of offenders, in Tennessee.

This inquiry was also wound up Wednesday, with McClellan saying it revealed "a pattern of wanton disregard for the law."

Wednesday's first witness was James Spence Galloway, who testified he gave $1,000 in cash to Sam C. Jones, a Chattanooga bondsman, to fix a case in Schoolfield's court.

Galloway said he wanted a new trial after having been convicted of concealing stolen property. He had been given a three-year prison sentence.

The witness said Jones told him "he could get it handled for $1,000."

Galloway said he sold a filling station he owned to raise the $1,000, which he said he gave to Jones in cash shortly after June 10, 1954.

On June 23, Schoolfield granted a new trial to Galloway, who then pleaded guilty and received a three-year sentence which was suspended.

"You felt the $1,000 was well spent?" inquired Robert F. Kennedy, committe counsel.

"I did," Galloway replied.

Jones testified without hestitation that he took the $1,000 from Galloway to get the case "fixed."

Brown testified he had prosecuted the case against Galloway and had refused to have anything to do with getting the defendant a new trial.

He conceded he accepted $1,000 from Jones and took it to Schoolfield. But he said he thought he was merely conveying a campaign contribution and was not aware that it came originally from Galloway.

Kennedy reminded Brown he had first told committee investigators he hadn't accepted money from Jones. The witness agreed to this but said he had refreshed his memory in the meantime.

Dutch Through In Indonesia, Premier Says

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Premier Djuanda told newsmen Wednesday the government has officially taken over major Dutch industries in Indonesia and if the Dutch want compensation they must turn over Dutch West New Guinea.

But, he said, whether West New Guinea is yielded to Indonesia or not, the Dutch never will regain the powerful economic position they had held in Indonesia.

If the Netherlands refuses to give up the New Guinea territory, he said, "We will continue our present course and eliminate Dutch economic interests in Indonesia."

Shortly after he spoke, 700 Dutch citizens sailed on the Dutch ship Waterman for Singapore in the biggest evacuation since the campaign against Hollanders opened three weeks ago. There were indications that most of the 46,000 Dutch nationals will leave within the next two weeks.

In its campaign for possession of West New Guinea, Indonesia has ordered all nonworking Dutch to get out of the country. Indonesia workers — without official government approval—have seized Dutch firms.

Djuanda's statement was the first official admission that such Dutch interests as shipping, port facilities, electricity and gas had been nationalized. Previously officials had said that only Dutch port facilities had been permanently taken over by the government.

He said the takeover of Dutch enterprises was carried out under state of war and siege regulations.

Djuanda denied reports that unions had gotten out of hand in seizing Dutch firms.

He said trade relations between Indonesia and Holland have not been officially cut off but that Indonesia is making every effort to shift its foreign markets from Holland.

The seizures and the evacuation of the Dutch have hit Indonesia's economy hard. Government quarters admitted Tuesday that famine and severe food shortages had flared up in parts of heavily populated Java and in the Moluccas Island group near West New Guinea.

Shipping among the republic's 3,000 islands is almost at a standstill. Rice, the nation's staple food remains in closed warehouses.

Race Tension Mounts After 2 Girls Fight

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A dispute between a white girl and a Negro girl over the ownership of a sweater triggered a walkout Wednesday by 50 white students at Central High School here.

The principal, A. B. Jordan, said however, that 45 of the students returned to their classes shortly.

At first, the 50 students formed a jeering crowd across the street from the school with an enrollment of 1,300 — more than half of the pupils are white. Six carloads of police scattered the crowd.

Jordan said he planned no disciplinary action at this time against any of the 50 students or the two girls who argued Tuesday over the sweater.

"The young folks just made some mistakes," Jordan said. "There was a little racial tension due to the misunderstanding."

Jordan said the white sophomore and the Negro freshman argued and an altercation followed with the white girl receiving several minor facial scratches. Both girls were then sent home.

SUI Orchestra—

Christmas Concert

—Childrens' Choir

★ ★ ★

Christmas Concert by the SUI SUI Orchestra, and childrens' choir, Dec. 18, Iowa Memorial Union, Herald Stark, conductor.

Dettingen Te Deum ..... Handel
Hansel and Gretel excerpts ..... Humperdinck
A Christmas Cantata .....Honegger
Soloists: Malcolm Westly, tenor; Gerald Lawson, baritone; Kerin Moldenhauer, soprano; Walter Jessup, voice from childrens' choir.

★ ★ ★

Three of the world's finest "Christmas works" were presented at last night's concert. The program was an ambitious undertaking but it is unfortunate that Mr. Stark could not bring out everything the musicians had in themselves.

The longest work of the evening, the Handel, seemed like a chore that had to be endured. Singing is a product of the whole body, but the chorus did not seem to understand this.

The surface singing was good, though. Throughout the composition, the soprano projected clear, rich tones and demonstrated an excellent voice range. The men were also very good; their well-supported voices were mature, clear and resonant. The altos may well have been good, but they were never audible long enough to be able to judge.

The most outstanding performances were turned in by the soloists. Mr. Westly's presentation of "When Thou Lookest Upon Thee" was a thrill. Seemingly effortlessly he projected his rich full voice with polish and confidence in his song of praise. Mr. Lawson, also, was good; he had fine control and a pleasing presentation, but he seemed a bit strained.

The small choir was good, but at times the fact that every member is of soloist caliber proved their undoing. Their best selection "Thou Sittest at the Right Hand of God," when they did blend into a nearly-perfect whole, although maybe pausing a bit too long to revel in their lush chords.

The small choir seemed to realize what it was singing. When they sang "praise" they meant it. If the large chorus would have taken heed they would have sung "Thou Art King of Glory, O Christ" as though it did not have a question mark.

The Humperdinck was well done. The orchestra introduction was a bit mechanical, and the dream scene wasn't tender enough to show angels, but the singing made the piece live. Mrs. Moldenhauer's almost-lyric Sandman's Song was well done — her mature voice and imaginative gestures set the scene for the Prayer almost perfectly.

The Prayer at last awoke some interest and sincerity in the women; they sang with good tone, pitch and imagination. Maybe the fact they sang without music in their hands helped; maybe it was the universal appeal of the piece; but the cupped hands seemed like so much high school stuff.

The cantata was a wonderful ending to the formal program. Its beautiful, ominous, repetitive character was deep and challenged the explorer. It gave a near-perfect setting to the childrens' choir, under the direction of Carol Uhlenhop, which was angelic and charming. They found their way through the modernistic movings to make a simple presentation of an arrangement of "Lo, How a Rose e'er Blooming" that was very delightful and Master Jessup did a fine piece of solo work, before the spell was broken by the singing of Christmas songs by the audience.
