WASHINGTON, D.C. — The United Auto Workers (UAW) Tuesday passed a resolution in favor of "profit sharing" for auto workers. The resolution was passed by a vote of 10-0, with no abstentions.

The resolution, which was proposed by the UAW's national executive council, calls for the establishment of a profit-sharing program for auto workers. The program would allow auto workers to share in the company's profits, based on their earnings and the company's performance.

The resolution was supported by all the UAW locals that were represented at the meeting. The locals also endorsed a call for higher wages and improved working conditions for auto workers.

The resolution was introduced by the UAW's national bargaining committee, which has been negotiating with the auto companies for a new contract. The committee has said that it will continue to negotiate with the companies in an effort to reach a fair agreement.

The resolution was passed by the UAW's national council, which includes the union's officers and directors. The council meets once a year to discuss the union's policies and strategies.

The union's leadership has said that the resolution is a first step in a longer-term effort to improve the lives of auto workers. The union has said that it will continue to fight for better wages, benefits, and working conditions for its members.

The union has also called for an end to the use of temporary and part-time workers, who are often paid less and have fewer benefits than full-time workers.

Will Diplomacy and Morals Mix?

There seems to be a growing and growing wave of talk disturb. Some people think the way to work is to back in and do something, and do it in such a way that the world is convinced the way to go is to back in and do something. This is a very common view.

Many organizations in SIU that need the students enjoy themselves. One is the Union Board, and its free movies on Sunday nights are presented for the enjoyment of the students.

It was a joy to sit in the movie "Teat and sympathy," last Sunday and watch the students enjoy themselves. Because the students go to a Union movie that is fun to watch, the students have a great time.

The action follows seven scenes, and so did a scene where the students are all sitting in the auditorium. The lights dim, and clapping starts up. The lights dim, and clapping starts up. The students are all sitting in the auditorium. The lights dim, and clapping starts up.

A question for Union: Why weren't more good movies on Sundays?

Nightly Ritual

Across the campus community nightly ritual includes a routine of water. Often there are the simple prayers offered in childhood by the children, bathed and then after a busy day comes a time each evening known as Bed Time. While the steps in nightgowns are varied from family to family, regardless of the home the hall without the traditional drink of these many families.
