CARIL FUGATE missed her family's funeral yesterday. The 14-year-old girl and Charles Starkweather spent the night in jail before continuing to Lincoln where they are wanted in connection with 11 slayings.

LINCOLN, Neb. — Charles Starkweather, bantam killer, returned to Lincoln Friday night claiming for the first time that his 14-year-old girl friend was a willing partner in the murderous foray that took 10 lives in Nebraska and Wyoming.

Lancaster County Sheriff Merle Karnopp said that during the 524-mile trip back from Douglas, Wyo., Starkweather repudiated his earlier stand that he had forced Caril Fugate to accompany him.

Caril has maintained throughout she was a hostage.

Both have been charged with first degree murder.

Starkweather was conveyed by a handful of top Nebraska law enforcement officials on his return from Douglas, Wyo., where a skirmish with a nervy oil field worker checked his flight. The convoy stopped for gas at North Platte for gas but did not take time to eat.

As the convoy carrying Starkweather back to Lincoln toiled across Nebraska, funeral services were held in Lincoln for the first trio of his victims.

A small cluster of friends and relatives walked through sifting snowflakes to the graves where Mr. and Mrs. Marion Bartlett and their 2-year-old daughter, Betty Jean, were buried. There were only two caskets. Betty Jean was buried with her mother.

Missing from the group of mourners was Mrs. Bartlett's daughter by a former marriage — Caril Fugate.

Lancaster County Sheriff Merle Karnopp, who is officially in charge of Starkweather, said the ex-garbage collector admitted all 11 killings — 10 in Nebraska and one in Wyoming as they rode from Douglas to Gering, Neb., on the first lap of the homeward trip Thursday night.

Starkweather and his 14-year-old sweetheart, Caril Fugate, have been charged with first degree murder in Lincoln, but Caril insists she had nothing to do with the killings. Starkweather had backed her up.

But Lincoln Chief of Police Joe Carroll, asserting the girl had many chances to escape from Starkweather, said "it looks to me like she's trying to wiggle out of it."

At a closed luncheon session Nixon told the Republicans that to regain control of Congress their party's going to have to have favorable economic conditions prevailing before the election. He said he was confident an upturn would come before that time.

Mr. Eisenhower said in a prepared speech that the present period of business decline is one of "consolidating the gains of recent years." He said the economy "is catching its breath for a new advance after the fast expansion of recent years."

"The forces of growth may be expected to reassert themselves later in the year, because the American economy remains basically strong and the American people remain basically confident."

Mr. Eisenhower said it is a "good solid Republican conviction that Government should continue taking all proper measures wherever necessary to help promote renewed expansion in output and employment." But he said he rejects the suggestions of "a few political Casandras" that a deep depression is ahead that would require "panicky Government intervention on a massive scale."

Mr. Eisenhower told the Republicans he is giving his "closest personal attention" to modernization of the nation's defense organization.

Public opinion on the newly proposed junior high school bond issue is invited at a meeting of the Iowa City School Study Council next week.

The council will hold a public meeting at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Iver Opstad Auditorium of Iowa City High School.

An explanation of the bond issue will also be given in an effort to insure public understanding of the proposal.

The meeting will be held in answer to the Iowa City School Board's request to the council for public opinion concerning the bond issue.

The findings of the Plant and Building Committee of the council will be given at the meeting.

"We urge all residents of the Iowa City school district to attend the meeting and be heard," Mrs. Robert Herlika, head of publicity on the council, commented.

U.S. Satellite Orbits

Experts See Evidence of 3rd Sputnik

WASHINGTON — Government intelligence experts reported Friday they had some evidence Russia has fired a big missile into outer space.

They said this missile might have thrust a third and bigger Soviet satellite into the heavens but they acknowledged they were not sure.

No government department or agency was willing to say "on the record" that it knew positively the Soviets had launched what was described as a very large missile.

These authorities, however, who usually keep close check on Soviet developments, said evidence they have received seems good.

This information became available a few hours after these and other officials reported the Soviets were about ready to fire a missile. The implication of the new report was that, if true, the Soviets launched it recently.

The speculation was mainly about a new Soviet earth satellite but did not rule out other possibilities, including an attempt to hit the moon.

Guarded remarks of a number of officials, plus the refusal to comment by other usually well-informed sources, lent an air of expectancy in key government departments.

One informant said he was personally prepared for a Moscow announcement that "a new bigger and fancier satellite" has been put into orbit.

Some authorities long have expected the Soviets to launch such a satellite quickly as soon as the United States succeeds in putting its first such baby moon into the heavens.

Dollar Fines For Licenses Start Today

Several hundred Johnson County residents filed through lines at the county treasurer's office Friday to purchase their 1958 auto license plates.

The large number of auto owners are purchasing their license plates before the penalty begins today. A 5 per cent monthly penalty — with a $1 minimum — is imposed by the state on auto owners who have not purchased their license by Feb. 1.

County Treasurer Lumir W. Jansa said 11,500 auto plates were sold to county residents before the deadline Friday night. The number is nearly 1,500 above last year.

Jansa said SUI students have the alternative to purchase their license here or in their home county, if they are residents of Iowa.

Town Buries Young Victims

BENNET, Neb. — In a Bennet community church filled to overflowing with more than 600 persons, funeral services were held Friday afternoon for two teen-age victims of slayer Charles Starkweather.

All activity in this town of 350 persons about 16 miles southeast of Lincoln came to a halt as residents paid last respects to Carol King, 16, and Robert Jensen, 17, slain last Monday night while out on a date.

All business places, even gas stations, were closed. Schools were dismissed for the afternoon. Streets were deserted.

Junior class schoolmates of the dead couple sat in a group. The altar of the small church was solidly banked with flowers.

The crowd filled the main floor, the basement in which a loud speaker had been placed, and all standing room in the aisles.

"In my 30 years experience, I have never experienced anything which has affected me as much as the death of these two young people," said the Rev. Emil Gustafson, who officiated. "I knew them half their lives."

Egypt-Syria Union Details Worked Out

CAIRO, Egypt — The presidents of Syria and Egypt will proclaim, perhaps on Sunday, the union of their two countries.

Shukri Kuwalty, 65-year-old president of Syria, and Gamal Abdel Nasser, 40-year-old president of Egypt, met twice Friday, putting final touches to the normal proclamation of the new "united Arab state."

The new state will have one flag, one Cabinet, one Parliament, one army and one president — Nasser. Cairo will be the capital.

Many Arab nationalists hope it will be the first stage in uniting 10 other Arab countries, reaching from the Atlantic to the Persian Gulf.

Syrian Premier Sabri Assali told reporters all details of the union had been worked out.

The proclamation will be made before the two parliaments at a joint session.

Official Syrian sources gave this probable timetable for unification:

1. Separate parliamentary sessions in Cairo and Damascus next Wednesday to vote on the proclamation. Each will nominate a candidate for president of the combined countries.

2. A plebiscite to ratify the election of a president to govern the new state under a temporary constitution, for a transitional period of six months.

3. Automatic dissolution of both cabinets and formation of a new central Cabinet by the new president early in March.

4. The new president will appoint a governor-general to administer Syria during the transition period.

5. Late in August, a unified National Assembly will be chosen at a plebiscite under a new permanent constitution.

Dick and Ike Say Present Slump To End

WASHINGTON — President Eisenhower and Vice-President Nixon predicted to cheering Republicans Friday that an economic upswing will be underway by election time next fall.

Mr. Eisenhower and Nixon addressed separate sessions of an all-day meeting at which the Republican National Committee also held cabinet members predict the present business decline will be of short duration.

Both the President and Vice-President promised Administration action to bolster the economy if that is needed. But both made it clear they oppose any massive Government spending to counter the current slump.

Speaking at a breakfast session before he took off for a weekend of golf in Augusta, Ga., Mr. Eisenhower urged GOP campaigners in this year's battle for control of Congress not to let "the dismal walls of despair" from Democrats drown out what he called his Administration's "straight story of steady progress."

At a closed luncheon session Nixon told the Republicans that to regain control of Congress their party's going to have to have favorable economic conditions prevailing before the election. He said he was confident an upturn would come before that time.

Mr. Eisenhower said in a prepared speech that the present period of business decline is one of "consolidating the gains of recent years." He said the economy "is catching its breath for a new advance after the fast expansion of recent years."

"The forces of growth may be expected to reassert themselves later in the year, because the American economy remains basically strong and the American people remain basically confident."

Mr. Eisenhower said it is a "good solid Republican conviction that Government should continue taking all proper measures wherever necessary to help promote renewed expansion in output and employment." But he said he rejects the suggestions of "a few political Casandras" that a deep depression is ahead that would require "panicky Government intervention on a massive scale."

Mr. Eisenhower told the Republicans he is giving his "closest personal attention" to modernization of the nation's defense organization.

Fire Disloyal Cabinet Men In Red China

HONG KONG — Mao Tze-tung ruler of Red China Friday fired three non-party Cabinet ministers who took him up on his invitation to criticize the Communist regime.

They are: Chang Po-chun, communications minister who called Mao "the biggest rascal in the history of China;" Chang Nai-chi, food minister; and U.S.-educated Lo Lung-chi, forestry and industry minister. The latter two were accused of plotting a revolt against Red rule.

More punishment probably lies ahead for the outspoken ministers and other intellectuals and government workers who astounded the Peiping regime with the vigor of their criticism last year.

Peiping radio announced the firings. It added somewhat ominously that the Communist party Central Committee and the ruling State Council had passed regulations for the disposition of so-called rightist students and government workers.

The three fallen Cabinet ministers all took back everything they said. But this may not spare them from work gangs in some remote and disagreeable corner of China. They also could be tried for treason.

Peiping radio said Mao issued his order at a meeting of the standing committee of the National Peoples' Congress, Red China's Parliament. The Congress session opens Saturday.

Jupiter-C

New Moon Christened 'Explorer'

AUGUSTA, Ga. (Saturday) — President Eisenhower announced early Saturday America's first satellite is in orbit around the earth.

The President's dramatic announcement was issued at his vacation headquarters a few minutes before 12 midnight (CST) by White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty.

The satellite was launched at Cape Canaveral, Fla., at 9:48 p.m. (CST), Friday night.

The baby moon was rammed into space by an Army Jupiter-C Rocket.

The satellite is officially named Explorer and gives signals at 108 megacycles. The signal is a steady, uninterrupted tone, not like the beep-beep of the Sputniks.

The missile was off to a beautiful launching. It rose slowly at first in a huge splash of flame with a roar that could be heard for miles.

The giant missile, gleaming white in the searchlights, continued to climb upward with terrifically increasing pace into a sky dotted with a few white clouds. The missile soared on upward in the light of a pale moon.

There were many stars in the sky and it was difficult to determine which was the missile and which was a star.

After the missile disappeared from sight, another light was seen high in the sky. It could not be determined whether this was another stage of the missile or whether the vehicle had merely re-appeared through another layer of cloud.

Newsman watching the launching shouted and cheered as though at some exciting sports game.

Even before the missile was launched, its form, therefore secret, could be easily made out in the searchlights playing on it.

It was tall and slender and snow white up to the stubby end of the Redstone first stage rocket. On top of that stage sat a round bucket which, about 11 minutes before the launching, was seen to start spinning.

Above the spinning bucket — containing a number of smaller size rockets — the slender satellite itself protruded for several feet.

The satellite was polished silver in the floodlights, marked with parallel stripes of dark brown color or running barber-pole fashion down the sides. These stripes were layers of zirconium oxide applied to minimize temperature changes.

The Redstone first stage rocket was scheduled to burn out some two minutes after leaving the stand, and shortly thereafter, would fall away. This separation, visible on some previous Jupiter-C launchings, was not discernible on this occasion.

The rocket vehicle itself on taking off demonstrated that it was one of the most powerful rockets ever launched at Cape Canaveral. Its furious red blast extended far beneath it as it pushed its way up into the sky.

The giant missile became fully visible to watchers on the beaches some miles away about an hour before launching, when the crane surrounding it was rolled back.

It stood there minute after minute, with fumes of liquid oxygen drifting out from it like steam from a simmering kettle.

At the moment the rocket engine was started, there was a sharp flash of fire. Almost immediately this expanded to a huge orange bloom of flame accompanied by an earthshaking roar.

It sprang into the air and moved up with a speed almost matching that of much lighter and smaller missiles.

The thunder of the rocket engine was so terrific that observers could only shout at each other and even then could not make themselves understood.

The watchers waved their arms and pounded each other on the back as the missile surged skyward.

The Jupiter-C climbed vertically for what appeared to be an extremely long period, by contrast with ballistic missiles that have been fired here recently.

As the missile struggled away from the launching pad, chunks of frost dropped from its icy shape.

Far up in the sky, minutes after the missile's flame had disappeared, the upper stages of the rocket were expected to reach a course horizontal to the

LAUNCHED—

U.S. Satellite Carries SUI Instruments

Prof. Van Allen

SUI is the only educational institution to be represented in the first Jupiter-C satellite.

Part of the payload of the Army vehicle at Cape Canaveral is cosmic ray apparatus developed by George Ludwig, G. Tiffin under the direction of James Van Allen, professor and head of the SUI Physics Department.

Dr. Van Allen has been chairman for more than a year of the national Working Group on Internal Instrumentation for the earth satellite program sponsored by the National Academy of Sciences for the International Geophysical Year.

Dr. Van Allen was in Washington, D.C. at the time of the launching and Ludwig was at Cape Canaveral, Fla., launching site.

This single Geiger counter for the first time will make possible a comprehensive study of the arrival of primary cosmic radiation, Van Allen said.

The SUI Geiger counter for space research is a metal tube five inches long. A fine wire through its center is insulated from the tube; the wire and the tube serve as electrodes (current terminals) for charged particles (cosmic rays).

Nothing happens to the Geiger counter when it is exposed to low voltages, but when it intercepts particles with the fantastically high voltages of cosmic rays, pulses are set up within the instrument.

For a few-millionths of a second, a low-pressure gas (such as argon) within the tube acts like a neon sign tube. Then alcohol vapor within the tube quenches the flash, creating and off-and-on pulsation, which is sent through an electronic nest of circuits to be reported to earth by means of a radio transmitter within the nose of the satellite.

Since the cosmic-ray count is quite large at satellite altitudes, the SUI equipment will be set to transmit only every 16th or 32nd pulse. It is more efficient, in terms of communication and conservation of power, to space out the pulses and make them of longer duration.

A tiny metallic tape recorder, which can store up two hours of space information to be "read out" on command from observers on Earth was built and tested by Ludwig and is slated to be added to the SUI cosmic ray equipment in the second Jupiter satellite when it is launched.

Send ROTC Recording to Air University

A briefing presented by the SUI Air Force Reserve Officer Training Corps (AFROTC) cadets recently will be used as a model at the Air University, Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala.

The briefing was presented by the senior cadet staff for two Air Force inspectors from Maxwell Air Force Base.

Upon completion of the briefing, the two inspectors asked Col. Charles G. Kirk, professor of air science and tactics at SUI, to send a tape recording of the report to the Air University. It included outlines by the cadets, all seniors, of their respective duties in the SUI AFROTC detachment.

The briefing was presented during the recent annual inspection of the Air Force ROTC detachment at SUI in which a satisfactory rating was received in all departments,

Weather

The sun shone in Iowa City Friday for the first time in more than a week, but considerably cloudy skies are forecast for today, the Weather Bureau reported. The high predicted for today is 25 degrees, with warmer temperatures expected Sunday.

Southwest Iowa reported up to six inches of snow Friday. The snow began falling late Thursday, but was expected to diminish early today. Saturday's outlook for the state calls for partly cloudy skies with highs ranging from 15 to 25 degrees. Warmer temperatures are predicted for Sunday.

G. Colvert, Lincoln filling station attendant last December 1, brought from Colvert's widow, 19, an expectant mother, the statement that Starkweather's name had been given police a few days after her husband was shot on an isolated country road.

Enforcement agencies promptly denied it. Deputy Sheriff William Johnson said Starkweather had never been heard of prior to the first three of the 11 killings of which he is accused.

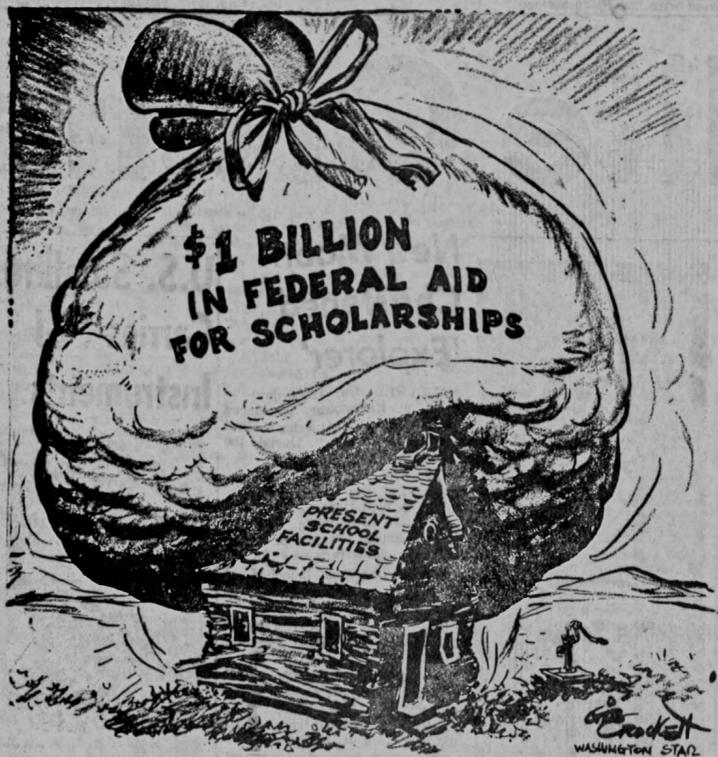

Karnopp quoted Starkweather as saying he forced Colvert into a car, drove to an isolated road, and that it was when Colvert tried to jerk away a handkerchief shielding Starkweather's face that the shooting occurred.

The Best Laid Plans ...!

Can Apartheid Bridge the Gap?

There was a curious juxtaposition of phenomena in Iowa City Thursday. Maurice Wild, an official of Rotary International, Port Elizabeth, South Africa, spoke on "the problems of South Africa, and it was learned that the South African Government has ordered the trial of 95 opponents of the policy of "Apartheid."

Mr. Wild said that he neither condones nor condemns it - he merely wished to make the facts known so that the actions of the South African Government could be understood.

But he went ahead and defended "Apartheid" anyway by such assertions as "the ambitions of the black man will be realized within the bosom of his own people," and that the declaration of human rights would be filled by whites and non-whites, "each in his own way."

Mr. Wild said that unless the culture gap between the whites and non-whites is bridged, it will be essential to maintain social and residential separation of the races.

Yet, how is the gap to be bridged when, by government decree the blacks are to be educated for a subservient role in the country, whites and blacks are forbidden to mix socially, and such things as the two pound limit on non-white individual's income is imposed.

The 95 men on trial, who are branded as communists, subversives and traitors, are for the most part men who have opposed the "Apartheid" policies in an open, peaceful, and democratic fashion.

There are only a few leftists in the group to give surface validity to the "communist" charge.

But it seems apparent that it is a naked attempt to suppress any and all opposition to "Apartheid," whether that opposition is democratically expressed, or violently revolutionary.

The South African Government is probably strong enough to maintain its separation policies for a time - perhaps a long time, but they are only putting off the day of reckoning.

Like our own South, before the civil war, they are striving desperately to maintain their position, their culture - but all they may accomplish is to make peaceful settlement of racial problems impossible and contribute to the vast pool of hatred and antagonism that might not only find their society, but the whole of the white man's culture "Gone with the Wind."

Washington Scene—

Culture? No! Send the Reds Our TV

By GEORGE DIXON King Features Syndicate, Inc.

WASHINGTON — The new compact to exchange people, culture, and entertainment with the Russians is fraught with hope. It has tremendous potentialities for peaceful co-existence. If we could only send them some of our television programs we could clutter up their minds so they couldn't concentrate on weapons of destruction.

Unlimited possibilities lie in our weekend horror shows alone. If we could confer them upon the children of the Soviet Union we could stultify that country's future generations and enable us to catch up. WE COULD RENDER THEM SO LOGY they would be glad to peacefully co-exist so they wouldn't be torn from their television sets. Instead of cramming themselves with dangerous science, all they would want to do is get back to the gory romance of Frankenstein's unblinking little bride.

Their educational horizons would be broadened immeasurably. They would learn that "The Mummy's Hand" is not the one that rocks the cradle.

Every weekend in this more-advanced land we have late, and late late, horror shows that keep the kiddies up later than the bars keep open for adults in the nation's capital. We have "shock," "horror," "the creeper," "the invisible man" and vintage movies that are horrible without even trying. The Russian youngsters would probably be so entranced they wouldn't even stick their heads out the window to look at a third sputnik.

THESE GRISLY PROGRAMS, of course, would be only for Russians of tender age. Many of the older Bolsheviks wouldn't see the characters as anything out of the ordinary.

In the realm of culture we could distract Russians of all ages from warlike thoughts. The National Symphony Orchestra opened its fund-raising drive the other night with a thing in which I interviewed Dr. Howard Mitchell, the conductor. If we could have beamed it to the Russians they wouldn't have been able to think about anything, much less an arms race.

I felt so out-of-place and ill-at-ease I started asking the celebrated musical genius unmusical questions such as "Are you really the head guy of this combo?" and "How did you get into this racket?" Then I heard myself asking, "wouldn't the National Symphony musicians play just as well if they ignored that stick you brandish at them and just read the music?" WITH UNEARTHLY forbearance, Dr. Mitchell replied that the sole duty of a conductor is to confuse the orchestra. Everybody in the hall guffawed intellectually, so I guess he must have been kidding.

If the Russians had heard him, they'd have welcomed a "breakthrough" in only one place — the ice.

The U.S.-U.S.S.R. pact also calls for an exchange of persons, and there we could really triumph. One of the swaps on the agenda is the Philadelphia Symphony for the Bolshoi Ballet. This might not excite universal interest here. Many of my Brooklyn constituents confide they'd prefer a trade of the Los Angeles Dodgers for the Siberian wolfhounds, who finished second in the Midnight Sun League.

Launched to the East—

earth, and to signal that information to the ground.

Waiting at a control station at the cape was Dr. Ernst Stuhlinger, director of research projects for the Army Ballistic Missile Agency. At the proper moment, Stuhlinger pushed the button that was to ignite the upper stages of the rocket and send it to orbital velocity.

Friends said Stuhlinger recently became a father. They said his wife told him, "Okay, I had my little satellite. Now you have yours."

The Jupiter-C was to be launched slightly to the south of east. Thus its satellite nose would follow orbit path over a considerable part of the most heavily populated areas of the earth, a route much the same as was planned for the Navy's Vanguard satellite.

The new satellite, a tube 80 inches long and 6 inches in diameter and weighing 29.7 pounds, was expected to complete a trip around the world every 90 minutes.

The new launching attempt came in the midst of a flurry of reports that the Russians had launched some kind of a large space vehicle.

Soviet Russia launched the world's first man-made moon, the 184-pound Sputnik I, last Oct. 4. On Nov. 3 the Reds put up the 1,200-pound Sputnik II with a live dog aboard.

The Navy has plans to put yeast cells aboard the Vanguard satellite as an experiment on the effect of space flight on living organisms.

The Army said there would be no living matter in the Jupiter-C satellite.

Some two minutes after the launchings the mighty rocketdome engine of the five-ton rocket stage was expected to exhaust the last of its liquid propellants, a combination of liquid oxygen and either alcohol or kerosene. Although the rocket flame would end there, experts said the missile could be seen for about two minutes longer because of the light from its red-hot surface.

After the first-stage burnout, the explosive bolts that linked the Redstone first stage to the upper stages were set to discharge. This would enable the spent Redstone — a metal tube 6 feet in diameter and more than 60 feet long — to fall away.

Even before the Jupiter-C was launched the upper-stage bucket resting on top of the Redstone section was set to spinning rapidly.

Inside the bucket sat the tiers of smaller rockets of the upper stages, for all the world like bottles spinning around in a washer.

As the Jupiter-C climbed and accelerated, the rate of spin of the upper-stage rockets increased.

Once it was free of the dead Redstone, the upper part of the Jupiter-C — if it was functioning properly — would coast on silently toward the stars, its rocket load still spinning like mad.

At an altitude of 200 or more miles the vehicle was "programmed" to arch over to the horizontal.

Then, when a "level" course parallel to the earth's surface had been achieved, the rocket clusters would fire.

"And that is why we have to spin those rockets," an Army officer explained.

"If one or more rockets should fail to fire properly, we would still have a uniform thrust so long as they were spinning.

"If these high-speed rockets were stationary in their bucket, the failure of some of them to perform could throw the satellite far out of its orbit course."

Rocket experts said that any deviation from the horizontal greater than one per cent could prevent the establishment of an orbit.

If the satellite maintained an orbit at 300 miles altitude at 18,000 miles an hour it might last indefinitely.

The Army satellite had two radio transmitters, each weighing about two pounds, aboard. They were:

1. The standard Vanguard transmitter with an output of 60 milliwatts, capable of being received on 102.63 megacycles, by the Vanguard minitack network and by amateur radio operators. It was expected to continue broadcasting for two to three weeks.

2. A long-range, low-powered—10 to 20 milliwatts—microclock transmitter operating on a frequency of 108 megacycles and likely to last for two to three months.

The satellite and final-stage rocket were designed to remain together and circle the earth as one unit," the Air Force said.

"The satellite is not designed to be recovered.

The Army said the satellite in its orbit would have about the brilliance of a fifth to sixth magnitude star, and a star of this brightness could hardly be seen without some magnification.

Letters To The Editors—

Turnabout at the Quad

TO THE EDITOR:

Hats off to Kay F. Kramer, boy vituperator, for his astounding and profound letter of Thursday last concerning the discontinuation of the MEBOC campaign at SUI.

You have convinced us! MEBOC is a fine idea and we are looking forward to the day when Hillcrest can name all their 10 per cent (7 1/2 per cent is closer) to the MEBOC Hall of Fame. (Think Big!)

We would be most happy to vote for Mr. Kramer as MEBOC. However, our mothers told us that boy-type queens aren't nearly as nice as girl-type queens, and we always do just what our mothers say. (Except when our own Mr. Teter (BMOG) tells us different.)

We're sorry, Really! We just thought it time the student body got out of the sand box. But if you really have your heart set on presenting skits, blowing horns, and in general being lovable, our doors are open to you anytime. (Contact us at the B.D.)

Wants Vandals' Names Printed

TO THE EDITOR:

Being both new at the University and an out-of-stater, certain reflections of life in Iowa City impress me more than probably is the case with permanent residents. What has perhaps amazed me the most about this "small quiet town" has been the number of vandals and petty crimes committed by its juveniles. On a per capita basis, it seems that Iowa City has New York, Chicago and other large cities beat by a large margin. This is certainly not something that the Iowa City citizens should be proud of, yet there does not seem to be any decline in the number of misdemeanors committed. Something certainly has to be done if this community is not to get a reputation which might halt both its and the University's growth.

Many other communities faced with the same problem have been able to conquer it successfully by the simple means of publicizing the names of the individuals involved. By this method the vandal's crime does not go unrecognized and the social stigma involved will prevent him from further escapades if not the initial one. This method may seem harsh, but it not only will benefit the community as a whole, but possibly prevent many youths from wrecking their lives before they have even begun.

Goodbye Secretary

Elmer, author of Elmer's Philosophies which makes him the most articulate dog on SUI's campus is losing his secretary George Kroloff, A4, Chicago, who graduates Feb. 3.

Kroloff said Friday that his association with Elmer has been a pleasant one. "Writing the column gave me a new lease on life," he laughed. "But I got so used to writing in lower case that I started talking in lower case."

He said that the column gave him much self-satisfaction. "I enjoyed hearing people on the street talking about Elmer and wondering who he was," he said. "In fact, one girl said that she read the column every day. Since it's only published weekly, she must have been an avid fan."

Kroloff recalled two letters sent to The Daily Iowan which purported to be from Elmer's mother and father. "After some detective work, I found out that Elmer's dad is Bill McCusker, A4, Waterloo, but I never did find out who mom is. I sure wish I knew because her letter really gave me a kick," he said.

Elmer's secretary is growing a beard which he feels makes him look like a shaggy dog. He said that the beard wouldn't last until graduation since his mother, who is coming from Chicago for the event, would register hearty disapproval. "I can just hear her first words after she screams," he laughed. "Either that beard comes off or I won't cook for you."

At a farewell banquet held for Kroloff by Alpha Epsilon Pi Fraternity, he was presented with a cloth dog symbolizing Elmer and his column, and he said that after last week's article on MEBOC the Associated Women Students wanted to make Elmer an honorary member.

Elmer has resided with Mr. and Mrs. Bruce E. Mahan, 303 Melrose Ave., for the last ten years. Mr. Mahan is dean of SUI's Extension Department. Mrs. Mahan said that the dog is the second Elmer which they have had. "He has been completely blind since last fall," she said.

Kroloff is planning to enter the Army after graduation in the hope that he can get into the psychological warfare branch.

Student Fined $300 On 1st OMVI Offense

Fourteen men were arraigned Friday morning before Judge Harold D. Evans in Johnson County District Court.

Nine of the men were sentenced and five were ordered to appear later for continuance of proceedings or sentencing.

An SUI student, Kenneth J. Pierce, A2, Tripoli, was fined $300 and his driver's license was suspended for 60 days after pleading guilty to drunken driving. Judge Evans also suspended his liquor permit for an indefinite time. Pierce was arrested Jan. 1, on a first offense.

Glen Drapper, 33, R.R. 3, Iowa City, and Donald Romaine, 34, Coralville, were each sentenced to one year in Ft. Madison penitentiary on third offense of OMVI. Both men entered a plea of guilty.

Romaine, also sentenced, was convicted on a second offense in 1952.

Lloyd A. Torppa, 39, R.R. 3, Iowa City, was sentenced to $300 fine or five months in jail on second offense, OMVI. Torppa's driver's license was suspended for 90 days.

Harold L. Albright, 40, Hills, was fined $300 and his driver's license suspended for 60 days for OMVI.

Richard E. Smith, 21, Oxford, entered a plea of innocent to drunken driving charges, but changed his plea to guilty later Friday morning. Judge Evans sentenced Smith to $300 fine and suspension of his driver's license for 60 days.

Charles J. Rickman, 33, Des Moines, was sentenced to $300 fine or 30 days in jail, suspension of driver's license for 60 days, and indefinite suspension of his liquor permit.

Ronald P. Rourke, 21, Oxford, pleaded guilty to OMVI. He was fined $300 and his driver's license suspended for 60 days.

Rourke was arrested Jan. 17, the first night after his discharge from the army.

Verle A. Schnoebelen, 19, Ainsworth, also pleaded guilty to OMVI and was sentenced to $300 fine and 60 day driver's license suspension.

Tom L. Moore, 55, changed his plea to guilty on a charge of drunken driving.

Howard Wade Cook, 29, 534 Clark St., pleaded guilty to OMVI Jan. 5.

James J. Mahoney, 48, pleaded innocent to OMVI charges on Dec. 21.

Attorney appearing for Lyle D. Luckey reported to the court his client is a hospital patient suffering from tuberculosis and cannot appear. The attorney entered an innocent plea for Luckey on charges of driving while his license was suspended.

Attorney L. C. Klein entered a plea of not guilty for his client Charles Norman Riley on a charge of false pretenses. Riley was charged with obtaining nearly $2,000 from Maria Harzig, Madison, Wis., on the pretenses of marrying her.

Riley allegedly promised, while on a boat returning from Germany, to marry Mrs. Harzig. According to a suit filed this month, Riley is married and has four children.

School Office At Coralville Burglarized

Coralville School was entered and the office safe door pried off early Friday morning. Principal Gerald Baughman declined to estimate the amount of money taken.

Baughman said the burglar or burglars apparently entered the building by breaking a second-floor window from the fire escape. The office door was opened with a crowbar and then smashed the knobs from the safe, Baughman said.

The money was the only thing taken, the principal said. The burglar did not take a musical instrument or other items which were in the office.

Representatives from the sheriff's office assisting Town Marshall John McGaffrey said the robbery was similar to several others in Coralville and Iowa City this month. It is especially similar to the Capitol Oil Co. robbery earlier this week, they said.

Congregational Church Organ Dedication Set

A new pipe organ will be dedicated at the morning worship service of the First Congregational Church Sunday as part of the church's centennial development program.

Dr. Mario Salvador, choir master and organist at the St. Louis Cathedral, will present a dedicatory concert at 8 p.m. Sunday in the church. The nationally known organist is music director of the Sacred Heart program.

Tickets have been distributed to members and friends of the church. Seating will be available after 7:45 for non-ticket holders in the available space.

The new organ was installed in October and used for the first time Nov. 10. It replaces the original instrument installed in 1904.

This organ is actually three organs in one, with two manuals and the foot positions. The pipes vary in length from 16 feet to the size of a pencil.

Salvador presented his first public concert at the age of 10 at Kimball Hall in Chicago.

He received his degree in 1940 from Loyola University in Chicago and his master of music degree in composition and organ from the American Conservatory of Music in Chicago. He received a doctorate in music from the University of Montreal.

Salvador has appeared as a soloist throughout the United States and South America and has written a text, "A Method of Organ Playing."

Salvador will present works by Bach, Bartmus, Widor, Benoit, Le Maigre, Wod, Van Hulse, Karg-Elert, Mulet, Vieme Sowerby and Dupre at the concert Sunday.

Iowa Seeks Revenge Against OSU

Hawks Need Win To Stay In League Race

By ALAN HOSKINS
Daily Iowan Sports Editor
The Iowa Hawkeyes set out tonight to gain revenge over Ohio State's rebound-minded Buckeyes in an important Big Ten basketball game in the Iowa Fieldhouse. Earlier this season, Ohio State beat the Hawkeyes, 70-64, at Columbus.

Both teams need wins badly to keep in contention for the Big Ten title. A win by the second place Buckeyes could put them into first place, if league leading Michigan should tumble before Purdue. Ohio State is 4-2 in conference play, while the Wolverines are 3-1.

Iowa, 3-3 in league play, is tied with Northwestern and Wisconsin for fourth place. A win over the Buckeyes tonight would move the Hawkeyes into a tie with Ohio State. However, a loss tonight would virtually knock the Hawkeyes out of the Big Ten race.

Iowa faces the task of trying to rebound with the Big Ten's leading rebounders. In their first meeting with Iowa, the Buckeyes grabbed 57 rebounds to only 34 for Iowa. In six league games, Ohio State has picked off 312 rebounds, 42 more than second place Northwestern.

Iowa will be without the services of sparkplug guard Mike Heitman. The 5-8 sophomore suffered a severe ankle sprain in the Minnesota game last Saturday and is listed on the doubtful list.

Heitman has been working out lightly in practice this week and although he moves fairly well, coach Bucky O'Connor does not want to risk chance of further injury to the fiery guard.

Iowa must stop the Buckeyes' all-American forward, Frank Howard. The Ohio State ace was a tower of strength against the Hawkeyes in their first meeting. Howard scored 22 points and picked off 18 rebounds to lead the Buckeyes.

Howard is sixth in scoring in the Big Ten with an 18.5 average for six games. He's second in rebounding, averaging 16 rebounds a game.

Much of Iowa's battle to keep Ohio State's rebounding figure within reason will fall on the shoulders of Hawkeye forwards Nolden Gentry and Dave Gunther. Gentry has averaged about 12 rebounds per conference game — besides blocking numerous shots — while Gunther has grabbed about 11 rebounds per game.

Gunter leads the Hawkeyes in scoring. The junior forward has a 19.2 average, fifth best in the Big Ten. Gunther is hitting at a spectacular .489 clip. The only other Hawkeye in the top 30 scorers is sophomore center Larry Swift, who has an 11-point average.

The guard situation for Iowa is still uncertain. With Heitman out, sophomore Bobby Washington will open with either junior Clarence Wordlaw or sophomore Earl Nau. Wordlaw came up with some clutch shooting against Minnesota last Saturday, hitting 15 points in the last 12 minutes to give the Hawkeyes a 73-71 win.

The Hawkeyes came up with their best shooting performance of the year against the Gophers, hitting at a .516 clip for the contest. As a team, Iowa has a field goal percentage of .371, fifth in the Big Ten.

Iowa's percentage from the free throw line has hurt the Hawkeyes. In six games, Iowa has made 97 of 152 attempts for .638, ninth in the conference.

Tonight's victor will take a one-game lead in the all-time series, which now stands at 24 victories apiece. A crowd of 12,000 is expected if the weather conditions are good. Tickets will be on sale in the Fieldhouse lobby up to game-time at 7:30 p.m.

Single Wing Is Playing Part In ISC Choice

AMES (AP) — Single wing football appeared Friday to be playing an important part in the selection of a new head coach at Iowa State College.

The Iowa State Athletic Council scheduled three more interviews with candidates for the position Friday. Two others appeared before the council Thursday and a sixth coach will be interviewed Saturday.

With an invitation now extended to George Dickerson, 46, No. 1 assistant at UCLA, to appear this morning, an Iowa State spokesman said Friday it seemed unlikely the new coach would be announced before next Monday.

After the council makes its choice the appointment must be approved by the State Board of Regents.

The council, possibly pleased with the success of departed Coach Jim Myers, single wing offense last fall, has interviewed in the past two days primarily single wing coaches.

The only exceptions were George Sauer, 46, Baylor athletic director and former T-formation head coach and Coach Warren Gaer, 45, who specializes in the "T" at Drake.

Sauer, who met with the council for 2½ hours Friday morning, is well acquainted with the single wing as an all-time football great at Nebraska and as coach at New Hampshire before World War II. He coached the "T" at Kansas, Navy and Baylor.

Gaer, meeting with the council Friday night, has said he would switch to a multiple offense — single wing and wing-T — if given the job.

Iowa State players have said they wanted to continue playing under a single wing coach. The Cyclones under Myers, now Texas A&M coach, compiled a 4-5-1 record last fall — the best won-lost mark in six years.

Clay Stapleton, 36, Oregon State's No. 1 assistant and former Tennessee "weak side" guard, met with the council Friday afternoon. He became the leading candidate for the job after LeRoy Pearce withdrew his name from consideration late Friday.

Pearce went to Nebraska earlier this month after serving as an aide to Myers here last year. He was interviewed Thursday along with John D. Bridgers, 36, Baltimore Colts line coach and a single wing mentor at the University of the South from 1947 to 1951.

Stapleton, well versed in the single wing, said he "never made an application for any head coaching job, but I do feel I have the qualifications."

Sauer said he missed coaching. "I really wasn't ready to quit when I did," he added. "Actually, I talked to athletic director Louis Menze about the directorship at Iowa State first — before Myers quit."

1958 College TV Program Formed

CHICAGO (AP) — A 1958 television program for college football, substantially the same as last year, Friday was formulated by the television committee of the National Collegiate Athletic Assn.

The plan, still to be couched in formal language, will be submitted about Feb. 10 to the full NCAA membership for approval or rejection in a mail referendum.

Last year's NCAA program called for nine national and four regional TV showings. No team could appear more than once nationally and regionally or twice regionally. On regional showings, each of the eight NCAA districts was permitted to negotiate for a game to be viewed.

Fencers Open Today Against Nebraska

By DICK LYNES
Daily Iowan Sports Writer

Iowa's fencing team will open its 13-meet schedule today at 1 p.m. in the SUI Fieldhouse North Gym.

A team of five lettermen, including two who placed in the Big Ten Conference meet last year, will face the Nebraska Fencing Club from Lincoln, Neb.

The Nebraska Fencing Club is made up of Nebraska University students but they do not officially represent the University because the sport is not on the Husker intercollegiate program.

The U.S. Air Force Academy team of Denver, Colo., originally scheduled as part of today's meet, will not send a team, David Hartman, Iowa coach has been informed.

Hartman, a graduate student at SUI, has fenced for the Hawkeyes during three seasons as an undergraduate. He replaces Frank Craig who graduated from Law school last year.

Iowa's lineup will include Dave Dittmer, third in the Big Ten last year, Philip Schorr and Dave Ogren in the epee event. Bill Bulgren, a letterman, Tom Brown and Bill Humble will participate in the Sabre. The foil contestants will be Iowa begins Big Ten action next weekend when they travel to Bloomington, Ind., for two meets. On Friday they meet Cincinnati University, a non-conference foe. Next Saturday they face Notre Dame, one of the strongest fencing teams in the midwest, and Indiana, the Hawks first conference opponent.

Wisconsin and Illinois, who seem to trade the Big Ten title year after year, appear to be the biggest threat in Iowa's quest for the Big Ten championship.

However, Hartman said, he expects his team to finish higher than its fifth place standing last year.

"We'll be stronger all the way around," Hartman said, "especially in sabre and epee. My boys have the determination that goes with winning so we definitely should finish higher."

Campanella Said To Be Doing O.K.

GLEN COVE, N.Y. (AP) — Roy Campanella, Dodger catcher injured in an automobile accident last Tuesday, continued to show improvement Friday with feeling in his body extending to the knee on the left side.

A report from the hospital Friday night said he still was on the critical list but gave this encouraging news:

"The patient's general condition has improved over last night. The infection in his lungs is better and his temperature remained less elevated today."

"There is further improvement in his feeling, which is now down to the knee on the left side. The paralysis, however, is unchanged."

The 36-year-old baseball star underwent an operation Thursday night to relieve an infection in his right lung.

Michigan's surprising Wolverines, inactive for 10 days, will try to maintain their Big Ten basketball lead today against Purdue as conference activity quickens after a semester examination lull.

The Purdue at Michigan game, to be televised regionally beginning at 3:30 p.m. CST, will be followed tonight by three more league contests — Northwestern at Michigan State, and Ohio State at Iowa.

Indiana has a non-loop date at DePaul, while Wisconsin is idle.

While Michigan holds a 3-1 record, both Ohio State (4-2) and Michigan State (3-2) could move ahead of the Wolverines if they stumble against Purdue 2-3.

Michigan's last start Jan. 13 produced a 72-63 triumph over Ohio State which, with defending co-champions Michigan State and this season, Hartman said. Dittmer and Schorr, both seniors, were Iowa's No. 1 and 2 scorers last year.

According to Hartman Iowa's sabre team, which in the past years has done poorly in competitions, should be improved this season. Bulgren is a letterman and has improved in his specialty from last year. Harry Northey is expected to add strength at that weapon after he becomes eligible next semester. Northey won a minor letter last year and will possibly fence first or second man in his division.

Quotes And Notes from The Majors

SENATORS TO STAY
WASHINGTON (AP) — Club President Calvin Griffith declared Friday the Washington Senators will not be shifted out of the capitol as long as he lives.

Griffith told club stockholders he has no intention of moving the team. He made the comment after H. Gabriel Murphy, the biggest individual shareholder, said "constant threats" to transfer the franchise have caused the Senators to lose support among fans.

The Griffith interests remained firmly in control of the American League baseball club's affairs through a relatively tranquil stockholders meeting.

Murphy, who has criticized club operations, offered four resolutions — one of them to install a general manager in the front office — but was defeated on each.

TALK OVER THE FENCE
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Catcher Del Crandall of the Milwaukee Braves said Friday the field layout at Memorial Coliseum may hamper the Los Angeles Dodger sluggers rather than help them.

Several players, especially pitchers, had complained that the short 250-foot foul line would result in easy home runs. But Crandall said the ground may work to the disadvantage of the Dodger heavy artillery.

"Even though the Dodgers are a righthanded hitting club they don't pull the ball much," said the lanky captain of the World Champions.

AIR CONDITIONED CAPS
CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Redlegs are going to try out air conditioned caps at spring training. Gabe Paul, general manager, announced Friday.

The air conditioning consists of a water cooled band made of aluminum foil and insulate sponges with a perforated cover inserted in the cap.

Because of the moisture, the caps must be made of a material which is impervious to water, Paul said. One application of water is expected to retain the cooling quality for several hours.
