FT. CAMPBELL, Ky. (AP) — Five battle-trained paratroopers jumped to their death in a mass air drop on this windswept military base Wednesday. More than 140 of their companions were hospitalized.

The maneuver, covering several days of operations by the streamlined 101st Airborne Division, led up to Wednesday's Exercise Eagle Wing air drop. More than 1,300 men of the famed division participated.

Military spokesmen said gusty and shifting winds near ground level blew the falling paratroopers from the landing zone. Some fell into adjacent woodland, some into a rough and stump-studded terrain.

It was the first mass air drop of this size since the famed World War II outfit was reorganized in 1956 into a pentomic division, equipped for atomic warfare.

The decision to go ahead with Wednesday's planned air drop was made at 4 a.m., when the wind was blowing but not dangerously.

Maj. Gen. W. C. Westmoreland, division commander, jumped with his troops — his 70th without injury. Lt. Gen. Thomas F. Hickey, commander of the 3rd Army, witnessed the air drop.

Men fell onto and near the drop zone, located in a remote area of this sprawling base astride the Kentucky-Tennessee line.

Swiss Editor Asks Flexible U.S. Policies

Urs Schwartz, foreign editor of Neue Zuercher Zeitung (NZZ), Zurich, Switzerland, told his audience that America must realize that a struggle now exists between the world at peace and a country at war with the whole world, not a struggle between two great powers.

He spoke in the Senate Chamber of Old Capitol Wednesday night on the topic, "The Situation of the United States in the World Today: A Swiss View."

Schwartz said that two blocs or elements exist in the free world in relation to America. He said that some Europeans admire America while others are anti-America.

The anti-Americanism is based on error, misunderstanding, and stereotypes, Schwartz explained.

He listed as sources of anti-Americanism the following points: 1. AMERICANS do not always realize the effect abroad of domestic actions.

2. AMERICAN movies give the wrong impression.

3. AMERICAN tourists aren't always carriers of good will.

4. AMERICANS talk too freely and people believe what is said without checking facts.

5. AMERICAN obstacles to foreign trade are harmful to the free world.

"There will always be high and low periods of respect," Schwartz said.

"The highest period of respect toward America was in 1945 when America saved Europe from slavery," he continued.

He said that respect lessened when the United States took a soft attitude toward communism.

Schwartz warned that the United States should not sell its European friends short when neutral nations threaten to turn to communism. He said that many of them have only recently won their freedom and do not want to be dominated by Russia.

Schwartz said that America must have a flexible Government policy. "Flexibility is not weakness," he said.

He said that America must realize that negotiations and power are not separate.

SUI Sends 9 Profs to Convention

Nine professors from the SUI Political Science Department will attend a political science conference at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, this weekend.

Major address of the 3-day conference, which runs from Thursday night until Saturday noon, will be "Emerging Problems of the Profession" given by V. O. Key, Jr., professor of Political Science at Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass.

SUI political science professors attending will be: Kirk H. Porter, professor and head of Political Science; Vernon Van Dyke, professor; Hugh E. Kelso, associate professor; Russell G. Whitesel, associate professor; Russell M. Ross, associate professor; Donald B. Johnson, assistant professor; Edward L. Davis, assistant professor; John R. Schmidhauser, assistant professor; and Robert C. Boynton, assistant professor.

Owens' Home Office To City

The Owens Brush Co. of Toledo, Ohio, will move its entire operation and company headquarters to Iowa City by the end of the year, according to company president Charles G. Dore.

Two hundred twenty-five persons are expected to be employed locally with the exception of 19 supervisors and executives. Anticipated annual payroll for the company is $1 million.

Owens Brush is already making some tooth brushes in Iowa City and now employs 53 persons.

A wholly owned subsidiary of Weco Products Co., the company will occupy a new plant built by Precision, Inc., another Weco subsidiary. The plant is just north of the Proctor and Gamble building southeast of Iowa City. The company is one of the nation's largest producers of tooth brushes. It also makes hair brushes and other brush products.

GOP Caravan Touts Murray

William Murray, Iowa State College professor of economics and a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, headed a group of candidates who visited Iowa City Wednesday to meet the voters.

Murray at a luncheon in Iowa Memorial Union advocated quality and economy as the keys to a good future educational program for Iowa.

"We in Iowa are committed to good education," he said.

The candidates are members of the Republican Caravan which is traveling across the state to gain support for the party in the June primaries.

Candidates seeking nearly every state office were present or represented by someone at the luncheon. Each gave a 3-minute talk on his ideas and qualifications.

Norman Erbe, Iowa Attorney General who is unopposed on the Republican ticket, stressed the need to actively back both opposed and unopposed candidates all the way.

Regents Plan May 8 Talks To MS Group

A half hour meeting has been scheduled for May 8 by the Board of Regents with the married student representatives to discuss the current SUI married housing dispute, the board announced Wednesday.

The meeting is to be held at 1 p.m. in the Hotel Roosevelt in Cedar Rapids. Herschel Lovelless, governor of Iowa, had earlier requested the regents to meet with the students.

Richard C. Clark, G, 204 Finkbine Park, chairman of the Married Student Housing Group committee, said he was gratified the Board of Regents had shown enough interest in the married students' problems to grant a hearing with the student group. He said also he hoped an equitable solution could result.

Clark was asked if he thought the resolution passed Friday by the married students invalidating signed refusals to sign leases to pay $62.50 rent for barracks housing would weaken the position of the married students.

He said, "No, I don't see the refusal to sign leases as a bargaining weapon against the Board of Regents. The only way we can change the regents' minds is by presenting valid arguments."

The married students have been protesting the construction of Hawkeye Apartments and a $10 barracks rent increase to help finance the $2.6 million project.

The Board of Regents passed a recent resolution offering an alternative rent schedule to the married students. They were given the option of signing leases for $62.50 with utilities or $42.50 plus oil, gas, and electricity to be paid out of a $20 credit.

Loveless met Thursday with three married student representatives. He reaffirmed an earlier statement of support for the married students' position and told them he would request a hearing for them with Board of Regents at the next regular board meeting May 8.

Ike Calls Recession 'Minor Emergency'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower Wednesday described the recession as a "minor emergency." He said it is being met and, "I don't think we should get hysterical about any of this business."

Mr. Eisenhower told a news conference it has been evident for two or three weeks that "the rate of decline has been flattening out." He credited his Administration with "a very impressive record" in combatting the slump.

Once again, the President left a tax cut to the indefinite future. With his replies to questions ranging from amiable to acid, Mr. Eisenhower had this to say on other topics:

1. IT IS AS sensible to say that "Congress is suddenly going nuts and completely abolishing the Defense Department" as to say his Pentagon reorganization plan could open the way for one-man control over the military forces.

2. HE DOESN'T know why Republican National Chairman Meade Alcorn should say it isn't in the cards for the GOP to capture the Senate in the November election. He said he himself never has admitted in advance he was going to get licked in a fight — "and I'm not doing it now."

3. SOVIET COMPLAINTS that American bombers are taking off provocatively into the arctic air are based on this situation: If the nation and its military establishment are going to exist in this day of possible surprises, big and expensive planes must be "gotten off" fields that could be targets. Once off, they have to get proper orders.

4. A DEMOCRATIC sponsored bill to expand the unemployment compensation system, Mr. Eisenhower said, would destroy that system and put people "on the dole, and on nothing else." He said, "I just don't believe that is good business." While avoiding a prediction of a veto, Mr. Eisenhower said the bill has grave defects which would require his serious consideration.

People who blithely say, "have a tax cut," Mr. Eisenhower rly marked, don't stop to think that defense is expensive, growing more expensive, and the country must be ready to meet high defense costs for possibly 40 to 50 years.

"We are meeting a minor emergency internally," he said, "but let us not forget the grave international emergency as we are preoccupied with our immediate sources of income to each of us at this moment."

Mr. Eisenhower grew red, hot and irked — and didn't simmer down through a couple of additional questions — when an inquiry about his plan to remodel the Pentagon structure was tossed into the conference.

Sarah McClendon, representing various Texas and other newspapers, said Secretary of Defense McElroy had agreed at a House hearing Tuesday that it would be possible under the President's program to remove all troops from the command of the chiefs of the Army, Navy, and Air Force by putting them under a unified command.

"Now," Miss McClendon asked, "would that not enable one man some day to have a personalized military force if he were of such a turn?"

Grimly, Mr. Eisenhower said. "Well, I've got one question to ask you. Have you read the proposed law?"

"Yes, sir," was the reply. "No, you haven't, I don't think," the President said severely. "Now look, let's get this clear."

"Now look, Miss McClendon," Mr. Eisenhower said, "it might be just as well, sensible for you to say that the Congress is suddenly going nuts and completely abolishing the Defense Department . . ."

Huge New AF Missile Zooms 5,500 Miles

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A massive rocket with a new, highly secret nose cone blasted off Wednesday night with a tremendous flash of yellow flame seen over most of Florida.

The rocket's mission was to hurl the nose cone 5,500 miles out over the southeast Atlantic, to see whether it could withstand the fantastic friction heat of the earth's atmosphere as it plunged back from some 80 miles in space.

The Air Force hoped to recover the cone after it crashed on its ocean target area somewhere near Ascension Island, off the African coast. The flight was to take only 30 minutes.

A hybrid rocket composed of the Air Force Thor and the second stage of the Navy's Vanguard satellite vehicle was used in the dual purpose test flight.

One aim of the spectacular shoot was to try out a nose cone designed to keep the warheads of long-range ballistic missiles from burning up in the atmosphere as they dive to their targets.

The other was to determine how this wedding of Air Force and Navy rockets will work out. It has been reported that the first rocket the United States fires to the moon will be composed of a Thor topped by the two upper stages of the Vanguard.

A few minutes after the rocket was launched at 7:10 p.m. (EST) there were reports that the exhaust and fat vapor trail had been seen far south as Miami, 200 miles away.

Newsman who rushed to the windows of the Miami Herald building after receiving the bulletin on the launching saw a flat, luminous trail of smoke in the northern sky and a twinkling object moving away from it.

It was the first time a missile fired from this test center had been seen in Miami.

Many people in the Tampa-St. Petersburg area on Florida's west coast said they saw the rocket's brilliant fire.

Rev. Wingate To Officiate At Service

Student Fund Donations To Council Office

Funeral services for Frank "Bucky" O'Connor will be held today at 2 p.m. in the First Methodist Church in Iowa City. The Rev. Roy Wingate will officiate.

Mr. O'Connor, who was killed in a car-truck crash three and one-half miles south of Waterloo Tuesday afternoon, will be buried in Memorial Gardens on Highway 6 East. The body is at the Oathout Funeral Home in Iowa City.

Although he was a member and past president of the First English Lutheran Church, funeral services will be in the Methodist Church because of larger seating capacity. The great popularity which O'Connor enjoyed necessitates the larger church.

"Bucky was more than a gentleman, he was a Christian gentleman," said the Rev. Wingate.

The Rev. Wingate said his sermon will be based on a Biblical text.

Rather than sending flowers, Mrs. O'Connor requested that friends would contribute to the Bucky O'Connor Memorial Fund which was established late Tuesday night.

SUI Student Council office in Iowa Memorial Union is being used as a collecting point for donations from students to the memorial fund for the "smiling coach," according to Len Flander, L2, Iowa City, student body president.

Active pallbearers will be Dr. James Berney, Davenport; Roland A. Helliwig, Keosauqua; Paul W. Brechler, SUI athletic director; Milton "Sharm" Scheuerman, assistant basketball coach; Edwin T. Jolliffe, University secretary; and William G. Suter, assistant in charge of athletics.

Honorary pallbearers will be R. F. "Rollie" Williams, assistant director of athletics; Francis "Buzz" Graham, athletic business manager; Francis Cretzmeier, head track coach; George Easton, chairman of the Board in Control of Athletics at SUI; Stuart Cullen, chairman of the division of Anesthesiology; James E. Goodwin, Manchester, and Glen L. Seydel, Davenport.

Only three hundred Varsity Varieties tickets have been sold in the first two days of sales, according to Tom Jolas, L3, Red Oak, chairman of SUI's Old Gold Days.

Tickets will be sold today and Friday at the entrance to Iowa Memorial Union Gold Feather room from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. and 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. Tickets may also be obtained at Whetstone's Drug store and at the Fieldhouse Friday and Saturday nights.

In addition to Varsity Varieties, a water show will be presented at 4:30 p.m. Saturday. Bleachers will not be available, Jolas said, and spectators will stand on the west bank of the north side of the footbridge. A parade of boats followed by a hydroplane and waterskiing demonstrations will highlight the show, Jolas said.

Secretaries Group Presents Awards

The Robert Lucas Chapter of the National Secretaries Association Wednesday, named the local secretary-of-the-week and the recipient of a scholarship in observance of Secretaries Week, April 20-26.

The selections, which were announced at a luncheon in the Hotel Jefferson, were Mildred Hughes Beyer, secretary-of-the-week and Ruth Eckhardt, scholarship winner.

Miss Eckhardt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lyle G. Eckhardt, 1935 E. Court St., is a senior at Iowa City High School and was selected from among nominees of the three Iowa City high schools.

Mrs. Beyer recently retired after 30 years as secretary with the Dorr Hudson Insurance Agency in Iowa City. She is a charter member of the Robert Lucas Chapter of the NSA and former student of SUI.

Registered Yet? Deadline May 3

Iowa Citizens planning to vote in the junior high school bond election May 13 should register with the city clerk before May 3.

Donald Graham, school board member and chairman of the public information campaign for the $1,448,000 bond issue, said that during every election there are people who are not eligible to vote because they have failed to register.

To be a qualified voter for the school bond election, Graham listed the following steps: you must

1. BE A RESIDENT of Iowa City;

2. HAVE LIVED in Iowa for at least six months;

3. HAVE LIVED in Johnson County for 60 days;

4. HAVE LIVED in your precinct 10 days;

5. HAVE REGISTERED with the city clerk at least 10 days before the election.

Weather

Thunderstorms and more cold are expected for today with highs in the 40's.

An end of the rain is expected Friday, the weather bureau said, but cool temperatures and cloudy skies will prevail.

Iowa City received an all-day on and off rain Wednesday as the mercury tumbled from the 70's and 80's of last week to a chilly 53 degrees.

Snow fell in western Nebraska and is expected to move eastward across the state tonight. Northwestern Iowa may receive snow flurries by this morning. Heavy thunderstorms were reported south of Iowa.

Insufficient Fund Checks Plague City

Some Iowa City businesses which now cash students' checks may either stop the practice or cash checks only for the amount of purchases if the plague of bad checks continues to increase, according to several businessmen.

Robert Lyles, proprietor of the Airliner tavern, said Wednesday he is requiring his help to make closer checks on identification than they have in the past. He said most of the checks cashed at his tavern are from regular customers.

Lyles said he has been receiving an increasing number of checks returned for insufficient funds. He had 10 such checks in the cash register drawer Wednesday afternoon.

"I'm going to quit cashing student checks if the bad checks don't stop coming back," Chet Comer, proprietor of Racine's Pipe Shop, said. He said it costs him about $350 yearly to carry out a check cashing operation.

Comer said he did not mind checks coming back marked, "insufficient funds." "What makes me mad is when the student doesn't make up the insufficiency for months," he said.

The Campus Grill has been the victim of several "no account" checks. Mrs. Lester Omann, Campus Grill, said she had a check with a Hillcrest men's dormitory address. She said the bank returned the check because there was no account for the endorser of the check. She said Hillcrest authorities told her there was no person living in the dormitory with that name and there was not even a room number listed for the dormitory matching the one on the check.

Mrs. Omann said she and her husband were quite disturbed at the number of bad checks they have recently received. "We cash the checks in good faith on the person's name," she said.

Ezra Pound—Art And Politics

By JAMES MAGNER Staff Writer

Without any fuss or fanfare the treason charges against Poet Ezra Pound were dropped Friday, leaving Pound free to leave St. Elizabeth's, the Federal institution where he has been confined since 1945.

In December, 1945, before Pound could be brought to stand trial for treason (on 19 counts), his lawyer argued that senility made him unfit for trial and asked that he be placed under psychiatric observation. It was following this plea that Mr. Pound was confined to St. Elizabeth's.

Last Friday Federal Judge Bolitha J. Laws threw out the 1945 indictment against Pound for treason, saying that Pound would probably never be mentally competent to stand trial and that it now would be impossible to prove the allegedly traitorous (pro Fascist) broadcasts from Italy during World War II might have been the result of insanity.

Saturday morning Pound's picture was in most of the papers throughout the country. He appeared old, worn, his fierce red beard had become a white stubble, his eyes were firm but they had lost their old fierceness. He had wrapped a yellow scarf around his neck.

As he posed for this picture his pockets were said to be full of folded envelopes and other scraps of paper. There was talk that now he was free he would return to Italy. There was also talk about new books Pound had written while an inmate at St. Elizabeth's that were to be published this year. Pound had been working on the galley proofs.

This was a quiet ending to a story that began fifty years ago, in 1907, when the brilliant young Ezra Pound came out of Idaho, his hair a flaming red, his eye burning, the flame of poetic genius a fire inside him.

In those years it was said of him that he had one of the world's remarkable egos, and that with this ego, and his talent, he possessed a sense of mission. But no one in the United States would listen to this clever young man ("Americans were too busy rattling bank notes," so young Pound, then 22, left his country for good and went to London.

In London Pound began to publish his "opaque, lapidary, brilliantly polished poems." Londoners listened. Europe's literate began to call him the master verse maker of his generation.

From London Pound went to Paris where with "glittering eye and the positive manner he ranged magnificently from salon to boudoir, flaunting his cape and stick and Byronic collars, spitting critical fire, pinching the ladies, and wagging his fierce red whiskers."

In Paris he became as famous as his neighbors, James Joyce, Gertrude Stein and Ernest Hemingway. By the time he was 40 (1925), Pound had written 31 books. His stream of poetry and prose, French and Chinese translations had swollen to a torrent.

Then, abruptly in the early thirties, Pound stepped out of his field (poetry) and went to Italy where he became involved in politics. In Papello he began sending out ranting political letters dated by the Fascist calendar. To friends he began extolling the order Mussolini had brought, and prophesying wonders for Fascism.

World War II gave Pound the international voice his poetry had failed to give him. On the Rome radio Pound began to hear contemptuously on the Jews, to lecture and vilify his native land, and he kept at it after the United States entered the war. On July 26, 1943, Pound became one of the few U.S. citizens ever to be indicted for treason.

United States forces seized Pound in Italy in May, 1945; in November he was returned to the United States to stand trial for treason, but instead was adjudged insane, unfit for trial, and committed to St. Elizabeth's Hospital. The press in 1945 said: "Pound has lost his positive manner (along with his cape and stick); his eyes have rheumy, his beard wilted."

The press was also upset about Pound's being adjudged unfit for trial. In January, 1946, the month following Pound's confinement to St. Elizabeth's, the Nation said:

"We are torn in our response to the news Ezra Pound has been adjudged insane and unfit to stand trial on charge of treason for having made pro-Fascist broadcasts from Italy.

"Not being blood thirsty, we can't regret that Pound is not to be hanged — after all he really isn't in a class with Goering. On the other hand it seems to us an unwarranted slur on the poet to maintain that he is less responsible for his actions than other men."

Bennett Cerf, an editor at Random House, about this time privately decided that Pound, because of his treason, was no longer worthy to be classified with representative American poets. Conrad Aiken wanted to include 12 of Pound's poems in a new edition he was preparing of "An Anthology of Famous English and American Poetry." Cerf told Aiken that he could not include Pound's poems, though he could insert a notation to the effect that they had been omitted at the insistence of his publisher.

Aiken inserted the note. When Lewis Gannett, literary critic of the New York Herald Tribune, saw the notation, he wrote in his column: "Mr. Cerf is a cultural barbarian. . . He is acting upon a logic akin to that of the Nazis who burned books by democrats. . . neither treason nor insanity can affect Pound's right to a place in anthologies of American poetry."

Henry Commager, Wylan Auden, Max Lerner and Robert Linscott all agreed with Gannett. In reply Cerf said, "I am reluctant to admit, however, that politics and art are quite so divorced as Max Lerner professes to believe. It seems to me that an artist, because of his position in the community, has a double responsibility to the public at large."

While this dispute was raging on Pound's particular mixture of politics and art, Pound was insisting that his broadcasts were not treasonable, that all of his radio activity stemmed from a self appointed mission to save the Constitution.

"I was only trying to tell the people of Europe and America how they could avoid war by learning the facts about money," Pound said.

Man in Space

"I will ask you a question: Do you want to volunteer?"

With that question our President tried to take the seriousness out of a question concerning the possibility of projecting a man into space for 150 miles and bringing him back. He cautioned us not to get a "Sputnik attitude" about everything.

Army missile expert Wernher Von Braun says it can be done within a year if action is taken on the project. The President's Scientific Advisory Committee does not put any "early" emphasis on the project. It is time for the President to face facts. Just because we now have the only satellites in the sky does not return supremacy to the U.S. The Russian put up the first satellite. He put up the largest satellite. Both things struck at the backbone of leadership in any field — To get there first with the most.

If we can get a live man out into space and bring him back in reasonably good condition we should do it. That one feat will overshadow the entire furor caused by the Russian being first and biggest.

The Wright brothers stayed aloft less than one minute on their historic flight in 1903. Nearly everyone remembers them. How many people remember who holds the record for the longest time spent in the air?

If we can project a man into space we not only should but must. If for no other reason we should consider it an honor to be looked to as the nation that is leading the way in the conquest of space. If we can prove it can be done, others will follow, but it is the trail blazer who is remembered, not the ones who wait for the super-highways to be built to make the traveling easier.

Letter to the Editor

Last of Fluoridation

TO THE EDITOR:

In reference to the "evidence is lacking" statement of Frauenglass it is the opinion of this writer, and many other people — some of them well-respected authorities in various fields of medicine and dentistry — that the shoe is on the other foot. To present information from publications such as the National Fluoridation News, a journal widely understood to be dedicated to a smear campaign against fluoridation, is a pure and simple attempt to mislead. Such can be said for several other statements made by Mr. Frauenglass, i.e., "There is no lack of evidence that fluoridation is harmful, only a lack of faith on the part of certain key officials in evaluating it."

In summary, Mr. Frauenglass has without adequate support:

- 1. Claimed that fluorides were toxic in the amounts added to our drinking water supplies.
2. Claimed, against more acceptable evidence to the contrary, that fluorides were not beneficial to man.
3. Claimed that fluorides are harmful to rats, for what that is worth, and
4. Implied that aluminum companies, sugar companies and others are a group of mean, deceitful concerns which suppress information on fluoride toxicity.

This writer showed in his previous letter, or will demonstrate:

- 1. That fluorides as used in public drinking water supplies are not toxic to man.
2. That fluorides are an important factor in decreasing the incidence of caries experience in human teeth (As shown in the Newburgh-Kingston, New York, Grand Rapids-Muskegon, Michigan, Brantford, Ontario, and Evanston, Illinois, studies to list only a few.)

3. That rats, for what it's worth are benefited, by adding fluoride to their diets. An additional study (see McClendon, J.F., Federation Proceedings 3:94) demonstrated that rats fed on a fluoride deficient diet actually died of starvation because caries destroyed the chewing surfaces of their molar teeth, thereby causing the animals to stop eating.

4. That, for the sake of discussion, it may be true aluminum companies and others suppress evidence of toxicity of fluorides. I cannot prove the contrary, but where Mr. Frauenglass gets this information, if they are guilty of such a monstrous conspiracy against public health, is hard to guess. I do not see, however, what reason doctors and dentists interested in the furthering of public welfare would have for suppressing such evidence. One might inquire into Mr. Frauenglass' motives, as was so effectively done by Bud Ellis in another letter to The Daily Iowan (see 18 April edition).

Mr. Frauenglass also questions why we of Iowa City allow such fluoridation to continue. It should be pointed out that the National Institute of Municipal Law Officers studied the problem in 1952. They found that fluoridation by city water treatment plants constituted a permissible exercise of municipal police power, that it was not an unconstitutional invasion of the right of freedom of religion, that such actions did not create a municipal tort liability, and that fluoridation as is now practiced is not in conflict with the Federal Food, Drug and Cosmetics Act. (see Advances in Pediatrics, volume IX, pages 191-231.) . . .

I will be writing no more letters concerning fluoridation at least until finals are completed in June, so I will close my comments with a resolution proposed and passed in 1953 by the American Academy of Pediatrics, again an authoritative and unbiased group. To me, it exemplifies and illustrates the feelings of the well-informed on the subject of fluoridation.

"WHEREAS no harmful effects of water containing one part per million of fluoride have ever been demonstrated, and

"WHEREAS the addition of up to one part per million of fluoride to communal water supplies has reduced dental caries in children from 55 to 65 per cent, and

"WHEREAS the American Medical Association, the American Dental Association, the United States Public Health Service and the National Research Council have all gone on record as recommending the fluoridation of communal water supplies, be it therefore

"RESOLVED that the American Academy of Pediatrics in annual session approve the addition of approximately one part per million of fluoride to communal water supplies in order to reduce dental caries in the children of our nation."

'Needle Talk' by John Sunier

My record collection is divided into four sections: Orchestral, Chamber music, Jazz and Foreign music, and Special. Today I'd like to enumerate some of the oddities in the last category. Now you won't be able to pick these off the shelf in every record shop, but, as with most of the unusual discs I mention, at least one Iowa City record shop will be glad to order them for you at no extra charge. NOW THAT everyone is so outer-space-conscious, some older records pertaining to this subject will attract new interest. On Audio Rarities LPA 2355, you will find "The War of the Worlds." This is an original recording of the famous Orson Welles broadcast of H. G. Wells story, that panicked the nation in October, 1938. Intended as a Halloween prank, it caused mass hysteria throughout New York and New Jersey. Listening to the main portions of this broadcast, taken from very low-fi transcriptions made off the air, you will understand how thousands of people were fooled that evening. "Exploring The Unknown" is the title of an album by The Voices of Walter Schumann on RCA Victor. The music, by Leith Stevens (who composed for all the George Pal space epics, including Destination Moon) is suitably strange and while the spoken words written by Rip Van Ronk get rather corny in spots, the whole thing is quite spine-tingling, especially with the lights out. TWO MORE GOOD albums for a dark night are "Tales of Terror" and "Sleep No More!" featuring story-teller Nelson Olmsted. The first includes six of Edgar Allan Poe's supernatural horror stories, and the second gives you an equal number of ghost stories by such authors as Dickens, Gautier, and Stevenson. Why these records, you may ask? Well, they are definitely not meant for solitary communion with your soul. They make a great party record because there is no entertainment to rival a good tale. Holding hands while listening to them will be helpful, although not necessary. (Vanguard 9007 & 9008).

Hi-fi perfectionist Emory Cook has among his strange catalog of recordings some of the following: "The Compleat in Fidelite," a daffy hodge-podge of noise including 1.) Mexican fire-crackers 2.) baby crying 3.) cylinder phonograph 4.) wind whistling through telephone wires 5.) horsefly making crash landing on top of sensitive condenser mike, and 6.) a two-cycle engine. The latter was allegedly recorded for future generations by unscrewing the spark plug and replacing it with a Telefunken mike.

"Sounds of the Sea" is just that, with departure sounds aboard the Queen Mary and some merchant ships, including foghorns. The flip side of this disc was recorded along thousands of miles of coastline, with various surf sounds ranging from gurgle to roar. "Out of This World" contains on one side "Earthquakes for home use" and on the other "Sounds from the Ionosphere." The first plays back at high speeds tapes recorded on seismometers at a speed of .02 inches per second. Even with the speeding-up, the sounds still go well below 10 cycles on some shocks. Of course, nobody can hear sounds below 15 cycles, but if you watch the tone arm carefully, you will see it shiver. This warning is affixed to the album: "Cook Laboratories will in no way be responsible for damage this record may cause to equipment. For users with wide-range woofers, this disclaimer shall include neighbors as well, dishware and pottery." The outer-space sounds are picked up by attaching a long antenna to a powerful amplifier. They include ionospheric swishes, whistles, tweaks and the enigmatic dawn chorus which sounds like thousands of strange little animals yelping. No scientific explanation has been found for some of the sounds.

THERE ARE NOW two albums of "musique concrete" available. The first, "Panorama of Musique Concrete," is on Decca/Thomson records and presents "classical" music. Space doesn't permit a detailed explanation of the new musical art, but the simplest might be to call it a reorganization of common sounds. Just listen to it, don't try to understand how it's done. The experience will be nerve-racking at first, but repeated listenings might get you to actually hate it after a while. The big work on this disc, recorded at the studios of the French Radio System, is Pierre Schaeffer's "The Veil of Orpheus." "Music Without a Title" claims to "awaken ancestral terrors." It does.

THE POPULAR musique concrete is found on a new disc in the Columbia $4.98 series, "Adventures in Sound," titled "Delirium in Hi-Fi." It is played by Elsa Popping and Her Plexiland Band and was recorded "somewhere in France." Naturally Elsa doesn't exist. The orchestra is conducted by Andre Popp, and then murdered electronically. Trombones come out sounding like a cross between cornet and piccolo; some of the vocals are heard sung backwards; the music is turned inside out with hilarious effect. It's sort of an outer-space Spike Jones thing. Titles include "Beer Barrel Polka," "Jalousie," "Marian Java," "Atomic Bomb Java."

Interpreting the News —

Russia's Move

By J. M. ROBERTS Associated Press News Analyst

There are a good many angles to be considered and developments to be awaited, before Soviet charges against United States strategic air policy can be put down as a fiasco. Marching up the hill and then down again is a time honored Communist tactic.

First, what were some of the results of the sudden charge that American bomber flights threatened the peace? Remember the timing. Foreign Minister Gromyko made the charge at a news conference in Moscow simultaneously with its submission to the United Nations Security Council. He was just beginning meetings with the Allied ambassadors to discuss plans for a summit conference.

The United States has been very cool toward a summit conference. The Russians, too, have shown a few signs of considering it as more than a good forum for propaganda.

Europe is always more hopeful about such things because, considering its position in an atomic war, it must be hopeful about anything else. Europe was already nervous about the possibilities of accidents from bombed-up patrol planes as well as the provocative aspects.

If Europe could be made more nervous and the United States less inclined toward a summit conference, their differences would be widened. That is a cardinal objective of Soviet foreign policy.

The Soviets went into it from the same standpoint that they went into last fall's charges that Turkey, spurred on by the allies, was preparing to attack Syria.

There was nothing to it, and they knew it. But they could plant the seeds of worry and suspicion in neutral minds, and in the minds of the whole Middle East which still remembers Turkish rule, and then drop it after the first profitable propaganda effect.

The Russians did not come to the United Nations with the bomber charge under any false hope that it would find support there. They came expecting to extract a profit from a beating.

They have been pretending since the end of last summer's London disarmament conference that it is useless for them to try to promote peace and disarmament against the anti-Communist lineup in the U.N. Now they hope they have given the innocents another demonstration.

The Soviets have played the game so often there may not be so many innocents any more. The London Daily Telegraph pointed out that the American air policy followed Soviet bragging about what the Russians could do with guided missiles, and said: "These may not be the arguments with which the United States will defend herself before the Security Council, but they are questions which her allies must ask themselves."

O'Connor Fieldhouse?

What can you say when the life of a man you so respected and admired is taken?

I tried to think of something Tuesday, after I heard of the death of Bucky O'Connor. Words failed me then, they still do.

Actually, I don't think anyone could put into words how I felt when I heard the news, or how I feel now.

It just doesn't seem possible that I'll walk in the Fieldhouse and not see and talk to Mr. O'Connor. It'll be a long time before I will be able to go into the Fieldhouse without thinking of him.

MR. O'CONNOR always impressed me, not only as a coach, but even more as a gentleman. I don't think I ever knew him to have a bad word for anyone.

He was always cheerful, and he could always find time to see and talk to you. He had the greatest respect of all the newsmen who could not help but become one of his friends.

After a basketball game, Mr. O'Connor was always the same, whether his team had won or lost. He hated to lose, fidgeted on the bench during a game, sometimes told the referees what he thought of a decision. But he was always the same friendly gentleman after the game.

Whether Iowa had won or lost, he'd answer any and all questions, would almost never criticize, and would always give a fellow the benefit of a doubt.

MR. O'CONNOR's thought in coaching was not in winning a lot of games, but having a team he could be proud of, not only as basketball players but as gentlemen.

I took a basketball class under Mr. O'Connor last semester, and at the time, I was very impressed with his coaching philosophies.

He wanted players who were gentlemen, on and off the floor. He felt if a boy conducted himself as a gentleman, he was more of an asset to a team than a show-off with more talent.

Mr. O'Connor was a religious man and he taught religion. He believed a boy who had faith in God was likely to be more successful, because they could face their problems with hope and encouragement.

He believed in training rules, but felt it was up to the individual player to follow them. His belief was that good observance of training rules must come from within the player.

MR. O'CONNOR had respect everywhere he went. I don't think any coach was any more respected around the Big Ten than he was.

He had the respect of those who were close to him. The silence of the Iowa Fieldhouse Tuesday after the news had been received echoed the respect of the people there.

The Fieldhouse was literally in a state of shock. People there were muttering to themselves. I don't think anyone could actually believe that it was Mr. O'Connor who would not return.

And the same thing was on the lips of everyone. "He was such a great guy, who loved life so much."

MR. O'CONNOR as a coach and a man, will be impossible to replace. Other men may have success as head basketball coach, and there'll be others who will gain a great amount of respect. But Mr. O'Connor will never be replaced in the hearts of those who knew him.

The Bucky O'Connor Memorial Fund which will give scholarships to Iowa high school basketball players is a fine tribute to him. I'm sure he would be proud of it.

I would like to see the University and the Athletic Department pay him another tribute — by changing the name of the Iowa Fieldhouse to O'Connor Fieldhouse.

The Fieldhouse could bear no finer a man's name than Mr. O'Connor's — there was no one finer.

Yanks' Streak Ended, 5-4

Lemon's Hit Allows Nats To Win in 10th

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jim Lemon's single off Ryne Duren with one out in the tenth inning scored Roy Sievers from third base to give Washington a 5-4 victory over the New York Yankees Wednesday night. The loss snapped the Yankee's winning streak at six.

The Yankees had a 4-3 lead with two out in the ninth inning. But shortstop Gil McDougald fumbled Herb Plews' grounder and when Ed Yost singled him to third Bobby Shantz replaced Art Ditmar on the mound.

Pinch-hitter Ed Fitz Gerald got the tying run across with a single to right, but Pedro Ramos, running for Yost, was nailed attempting to take third base on the hit.

Bud Byerly retired the Yankees in order in the tenth. Sievers coaxed a walk from Duren, the loser, to start the last of the tenth. Clint Courtney popped a single to left, Sievers stopping at second — Sievers raced to third after Norm Zauchin fouled to second baseman Bobby Richardson. Lemon then broke up the game with his single to right.

CLEVELAND (AP) — Herb Score proved he is back on the beam Wednesday by pitching a three-hit shutout and striking out 13 Chicago batters as the Cleveland Indians defeated the White Sox, 2-0.

In matching his 2-1 record last season, Score tossed his first shut-out in exactly a year. He walked only three and was in trouble in only two innings.

The Indians scored in the second inning on Carroll Hardy's sacrifice fly after a double by Rocky Colavito and a single by Chico Carrasquel.

They added another run off Billy Pierce in the third inning on Bob Avila's home run over the left field fence, his first of the season.

Little Success For Europeans In Davis Cup

LONDON (AP) — The European zone of the Davis Cup — tattered remains of what once was the center ring of international tennis — opens shop this week with little hope for success.

The caliber of play in Europe improves a little each year. But there are no indications that Australian and American domination of the past 21 years will be disturbed this season.

First-round matches will be played this weekend between 16 teams representing the weaker tennis nations of Europe.

The second round, to be played by May 20, brings into play the principal tennis countries of Europe, including Britain, Sweden, France, Italy and Belgium.

Third-round matches must be completed by June 10 and the European semifinals by July 22. The zone winner will be determined before Aug. 5 with interzone matches in Australia next December just before the challenge round.

Three of the best European zone teams are not European.

They are India, Brazil and Chile who elected to compete in the European zone because their players already were in Europe for tournaments — and because the competition here is not too rough.

Karras, Gibbons Join Tough Alumni

All-American Alex Karras, tackle, and Jim Gibbons, end, members of Iowa's 1956 title team, will join with other prominent former Hawkeye players on the alumni squad with the May 3rd football game with the varsity.

Both men finished their Iowa competition last fall. Gibbons has signed with the Cleveland Browns and Karras is the property of the Detroit Lions.

They are among the dozen present or former professional players who will make the alumni squad a difficult one for the varsity to handle in the first game of its kind held in the Iowa stadium.

Collins (Mike) Hagler, halfback on the title team and Iowa's No. 1 rushing gainer last fall with a 6.8 average, will join the alumni. Next fall Mike will play for the Saskatchewan team of a Canadian league.

The great end on the title team, Frank Gilliam, now a member of the Winnipeg Bombers squad along with Kenny Ploen, is another fine former Hawkeye who will make it tough for the current varsity. Gilliam finished his Iowa competition in 1956.

Ranks of the graduate group also will be increased by such men as Bill Fenton, all-conference end and most valuable player of the 1952 team; "Binkey" Broeder, fullback and 1954 captain; Don Suchy, center and co-captain of the 1956 title eleven; and Bob Hoff, who finished play in 1950 and now coaches football at University High of Iowa City.

The advance ticket sale now is under way at the athletic ticket office in the Iowa Fieldhouse. Reserved seats sell for two dollars.

Cubs Turn Lion-Hearted

LOCAL CUB SCOUTS, in keeping with the national Cub program for April, "Keep America Beautiful," recently cleaned the vacant lot at the corner of Muscatine and 7th avenues. Ricky Gauper, 9, son of Ronald R. Gauper, 1915 Muscatine Ave., added a strong arm to the project as he raked trash into a pile. Ten Cub dens of approximately 75 boys participated. Under the direction of Robert Sutherland, 1016 E. College St., Cub Master, the boys will plant gardens in the lot which has been plowed free of charge by Cedric Wilson, 1131 3rd Ave. The lot is owned by E. F. Whickam, 935 Iowa Ave.
