WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department announced early today that an undisclosed number of Air Force transports have been ordered to the European area. The destination of the planes was not made known.

This disclosure came as the department confirmed a report that the Donaldson Air Force Base near Greenville, S.C., has been placed on an operational alert. Earlier, it had denied the report.

An operational exercise is the same condition that prevailed in May when 30 large Globemaster C124's flew to the NATO area, presumably to stand by if needed in the Lebanese crisis.

Revolutionists Establish Pro-Nasser Regime

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Revolutionists backing the Nasser movement proclaimed a republic in Iraq Monday, hanged the crown prince, wrecked the British Embassy and split open the Baghdad Pact.

The army leaders directing the coup declared military forces over the country had rallied to their side and "the situation has finally been stabilized."

The fate of young King Faisal and his strong man Premier Nuri Said remained a mystery. A cryptic Baghdad broadcast heard in Damascus called for public support for "bullets and shells pouring on the royal palace and the palace of Nuri Said."

The revolutionists declared Crown Prince Abdul Ilah, Faisal's uncle, had been hanged in the heart of Baghdad.

The British ambassador and his staff were reported safe after the embassy was ransacked and burned.

Contact Stopped
Virtually all direct communication with Baghdad was cut off and Iraq's borders were ordered closed.

Most of the information on the sudden, shattering events came from the Baghdad radio.

It declared a republic had been established following the "liberated Arab" policies of Gamal Abdel Nasser, president of the United Arab Republic of Egypt and Syria.

The coup, if successfully carried through, smashes the central arch of the anti-Communist Baghdad Pact and the new Arab Federation of Jordan and Iraq.

King Hussein of Jordan quickly proclaimed himself chief of state of the Iraq-Jordan Federation in succession to Faisal, his cousin. But many observers believed Hussein's days also are numbered unless he receives substantial support from the West.

A slowdown throughout the Middle East appeared at hand.

Radio Baghdad declared Iraq was under firm martial law with Brig. Gen. Abdel Karim Kassem, a fervent nationalist, at the head of a new Cabinet.

Fighting Continues
It denied other broadcasts that reported fighting was still going on and repudiated a report that Abdul Ilah, a power in the monarchy of King Faisal, was still

Hail Spoils Wheat Crop

Monday's wind, rain and hail spoiled what might have been a record oats crop in Johnson County.

Storms flattened both oats and corn in the county, east and west of Iowa City. As the storm hit, some farmers were ready to harvest their oats crops. H. J. Montgomery, county extension director said Monday.

Dark, ugly tornado funnels teased residents of parts of Iowa late Monday before finally ripping up rural areas in the southwest section of the state.

Extensive damage was done to at least 10 farms in parts of Adams and Taylor counties. No injuries were reported.

The heaviest rain fell between 6 and 7 a.m. Monday.

In Iowa City, Riverside Drive was flooded Monday morning near the SUI Art Building. Ralston Creek's swollen waters overflowed slightly by the Woodlawn Apartments at the east end of Iowa Avenue.

The city reported a total of 3.33 inches of rain Monday.

Eleven miles east of the city, on the Lyle Sheeley farm, seven inches of rain was reported.

The rainfall is expected to cause reservoir behind the Coralville a four to five foot rise in the Dam, but no flooding is expected.

Almost every home in Downey had windows broken by the strong winds. Mrs. William Secrest, a farm wife living about a quarter of a mile west of Downey suffered head cuts when wind pushed out a window she was attempting to close.

Two Directors Of TVA Named By Committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate committee broke the logjam on a pair of presidential nominations Monday, approving two new directors for the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Republicans hoped for action soon on about 40 other major appointments made by President Eisenhower. All require confirmation by the Democratic-controlled Senate. More than 900 postmaster nominations also are pending.

The Senate Public Works Committee gave unanimous approval to Arnold R. Jones and R. Frank J. Welch, the new TVA directors. The nominations now go to the Senate.

Jones, a Manhattan, Kan., educator and financial management expert, was nominated to his $20,000-a-year post early last year but Congress adjourned without action on the appointment. Jones had run into opposition from TVA area senators and representatives because of his previous service as deputy director of the Budget Bureau.

They argued he couldn't be expected to divorce himself completely from Budget Bureau policies. Those policies, they said, made the bureau an enemy of TVA.

Served on TVA Board
Welch is a former dean of agriculture at the University of Kentucky. Both he and Jones have been serving on the 3-member TVA board under recess appointments made last fall.

Another Eisenhower appointee, John McCone, was sworn in as chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission at a White House ceremony Monday.

McCone is a Los Angeles industrialist who served as undersecretary of the Air Force during the Truman Administration. He succeeds Lewis L. Strauss, who retired.

No Decisions Made During Emergency White House Meet

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower decided late Monday to take the Middle East crisis to the United Nations.

The White House said he made the decision after an emergency conference with Republican and Democratic congressional leaders, military and civilian officials.

The conference gave rise to reports, emanating from some of those attending, that the United States might send a military force to the Middle East.

Various possibilities of action were discussed, it was learned, but a leading senator and an official high in the Administration both told newsmen that no decisions were made at the conference.

Another senator said one possibility brought up in the meeting was the sending of 3,600 U.S. Marines to Lebanon, hard-pressed neighbor Iraq. The pro-West Government of Iraq was reported overthrown Monday, and Lebanon, also friendly to the West, has been the scene of turmoil.

No Decisions Made
The Administration official who reported no decisions were made was most emphatic.

He said the conference discussed — and only discussed — alternative courses of action.

Then senator who reported the talk of sending Marines to Lebanon, from the U.S. 6th Fleet, said the Administration appeared to be leaning toward this idea.

He said it was not announced as a final decision, "but it was discussed."

Sen. H. Alexander Smith (R-N.J.), was emphatic in saying that Mr. Eisenhower had made no decision on the use of U.S. troops.

The U.S. 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean area, 70 ships strong and accompanied by two heavily armed and reinforced Marine landing force battalions, was reported ready to move if it got orders.

The Middle East Force, which regularly operates in the Persian Gulf area, now consists of the seaplane tender Greenich Bay and two destroyers on loan from the 6th Fleet. No landing unit is attached to the Middle East Force.

Dulles Briefs Group
Secretary of State Dulles, who briefed the meeting of 22 congressional leaders and others, had an unscheduled caller Monday night in Foreign Minister Charles Malik of Lebanon.

Malik went into Dulles' office about 30 minutes after French Ambassador Herve Alphand met with the secretary. Alphand declined to say anything to newsmen except that he discussed the Middle East during his 15-minute talk with Dulles.

Malik came from New York earlier in the day to discuss the crisis. It seemed likely that U.N. action would be asked by Eisenhower with the United States participating heavily in whatever the U.N. proposed to do.

One of the Congressmen attending the White House session told a reporter after the 2-hour meeting that Lebanon, a neighbor of Iraq, had asked for U.S. military assistance and that American forces "will be sent there."

Nasser Interested
Recently elements favorable to Nasser have been trying to take over in Lebanon.

In both Congress and the executive branch of the Government deep American concern was evident. However, there appeared to be no disposition to send any forces to Iraq itself.

Sen. Mike Mansfield (D-Mont.), said after the White House announcement that it was his understanding the Security Council would be asked to expand its police force in order to stabilize conditions in Lebanon.

Mansfield said it also was his understanding that if the Soviet Union should block action in the Security Council, the United States would ask for a speedy meeting of the U.N. General Assembly to act in the crisis.

Gen. Nathan F. Twining, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, was said to have told the conference that U.S. troops in the area are ready to move at any time.

There were conflicting reports about Nuri Said, a longtime power in Iraqi politics. Early broadcasts reported his death, but later conflicting accounts heard in Jerusalem said he was still alive.

Fighting was reported around Faisal's palace, and some Communist bloc broadcasts, which hailed the coup as a triumph, said Faisal had been arrested.

British Embassy Attacked
Advices reaching London by way of the Italian Government said mobs had ransacked and set fire to the British Embassy in Baghdad. Foreign Office spokesmen in London said they had been out of touch with the embassy since 9 a.m.

Prime Minister Macmillan summoned an emergency meeting of his Cabinet to take up the situation in Iraq.

Weather

The weather forecast for today calls for cooler temperatures and scattered showers and thunderstorms in the Iowa City area. The highs today are expected to be in the 70s.

Wednesday's outlook is for clearing skies and cooler temperatures.

Author of 'The Unfinished Luisa' Says—

Play Unfinished Till Opening

Joseph Rosenberg
"The Unfinished Luisa" Author

by KAY WILCOX
Staff Writer
For the average theater-goer a play has reached its final form long before it is produced, but Joseph Rosenberg, author of "The Unfinished Luisa," feels quite differently on this point.

"A play is not written until opening night," he said, smiling quietly. The opening night for "The Unfinished Luisa," a comedy, is Thursday at the SUI Theater. The play will run through July 19.

In talking about his play, Rosenberg said people have to make adjustments to life. Many people do make intellectual adjustments but they do not make emotional adjustments. This creates comic situations, he said.

Many things can be said in comedy, Rosenberg believes. With comedy, people can laugh and learn at the same time, he said. From the financial standpoint, comedies many times have more appeals at the box-office, Rosenberg added.

"The Unfinished Luisa" is Rosenberg's first venture into comedy. He wrote the play last winter in Mexico. A few revisions were made during rehearsal, he said.

"I have experimented with different types of plays, and with different writing techniques," he explained.

It is hard to say if writing comedy is easier than writing a drama, it all depends on the playwright and the way he works, Rosenberg said.

The author explained that he could get to work on a play when the people in his play began to "add up" for him.

He is close to the final draft of a new play, "Siege at Canudos." The play will be a serious drama, a war play based on Brazilian history. Rosenberg went to Brazil in the winter of 1956 to get material for the play.

Another play, "Saturday Stranger," is being produced by a repertory company in Mainz, Germany.

Rosenberg wrote the play for his masters thesis at North Carolina University. He was at North Carolina before coming to SUI in 1955, where he did graduate work in playwrighting.

Rosenberg returned to SUI this summer to work toward his doctorate degree in playwrighting. He wrote "The Unfinished Luisa," to fulfill a requirement for his degree.

Rosenberg is now on the faculty of Goddard College, Plainfield, Vt., where he teaches drama and creative writing.

Tickets are still available for the second University play of the summer season, "The Unfinished Luisa." The play, written by former SUI student, Joseph Rosenberg, will be presented Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. in the University Theater.

Tickets may be obtained in the East lobby of the Iowa Memorial Union between 9 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and Saturday from 9 a.m. until noon.

SUI students must present their summer I.D. card and student number to receive free tickets. General admission for staff, faculty, and the public is $1.25.

Emergency Talks On Baghdad Pact

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Leaders of Iran, Pakistan and Turkey flew to Ankara Monday and began Iraq and the fate of the Baghdad emergency talks on the revolt in Iraq.

Shocked by the reported overthrow of the pro-Western regime in Baghdad, the three other Moslem members of the pact swiftly cancelled plans for a regional meeting in Istanbul and switched the locale to Turkey's capital.

The atmosphere was one of stunned confusion. Turkish officials and diplomats waited at Istanbul's airport for hours, for a plane from Baghdad that never came—the plane they hoped would carry young King Faisal, Crown Prince Abdul Ilah and Premier Nuri Said.

Other chiefs of state arrived. President Iskander Mirza and Foreign Minister M. S. A. Baig of Pakistan, Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi and Premier Manouchehr Eghbal of Iran, were greeted by Premier Adnan Menderes and other Turkish leaders.

Exactly what these leaders intended to discuss in Ankara was not known. Nor was it known what steps they might consider in the face of the reported overthrow of the regime which had kept Iraq in the Baghdad Pact.

Wylde said the association wanted the extension in order to negotiate further with Wilbert Frantz in hopes of reaching a compromise on the property question.

Wylde reported that during the past month there have been no negotiations and things are at a standstill.

Monday the Council also tabled any further action on the 1959 city

A discussion concerning the re-zoning of Plum Grove Acres from Class A residential to industrial came before the Iowa City City Council again Monday when the Council gave a second reading to ordinance providing for the change.

D. S. Wylde, 1405 Plum St., vice-chairman of the Plum Grove Acres Association, the group which has been fighting the change, came to ask the Council to defer its reading of the ordinance until a later date but didn't get recognized until the clerk had finished the reading.

Wylde said the association wanted the extension in order to negotiate further with Wilbert Frantz in hopes of reaching a compromise on the property question.

Four Portraits in Neutrality

Tito: Communist Equality

By BORIS BOSKOVIC

BELGRADE (AP) — President Tito recently celebrated his 66th birthday amid growing signs that his balancing act between East and West has once again put him in hot water with the Kremlin.

Just as he did 10 years ago, Tito appears on the world stage as a defender of his country's independence against Kremlin domination, a role imposed upon him by Moscow.

His present struggle is in line with his character and past record. After World War II, old Communist Tito wanted badly to cooperate with the Soviet Union. For a while Yugoslavia appeared to be a Soviet satellite. Then disappointment set in.

Tito's ideas on communism were based on cooperation among equal and independent Communist nations. Stalin wanted subordination and he got it from others who had the Red Army to thank for their jobs.

Had Own Army

Tito was different. He had fought with his partisans. He had an organized army, police and political apparatus of his own which liberated the country. He was a leader in his own right.

This was the secret which made it possible for Tito to stand successfully against Stalin. This was why Soviet challenge could not remove him.

After being expelled from the Communist world, Tito got Western aid and that aid, without political strings, helped him survive the Soviet economic blockade which brought Yugoslavia to the edge of bankruptcy.

But Tito remained a Communist and has never denied it.

After Stalin died, the new Soviet boss, Nikita Khrushchev, came to Tito to apologize for the break. It was a triumph for the Yugoslav leader that the world's strongest Communist country should come to him for reconciliation.

The new Kremlin leaders admitted Stalin's blunders and asked for Tito's friendship. They asked Tito's support in crushing the Stalinists. Tito agreed.

He thought that by helping Khrushchev, the last remnants of Stalinism would be eliminated. He believed that the new Soviet boss might bring peace and cooperation to the Communist family.

But he never believed 100 per cent in Khrushchev. Cautiously he kept his Western ties and, in the ensuing years, he succeeded in re-remaining on good terms with both East and West.

More Stalinism

As soon as Khrushchev was safely in full power, he launched the present anti-Tito campaign — a small cold war every bit as frigid as Stalin's.

The fact that the Kremlin has decided to snub him will not drive Tito into the Western camp.

His position between East and West is much different than those of two other notable fence-straddlers, Nasser and Nehru. Tito is a Communist. They are not.

While the Kremlin would tolerate Western ties by Nasser and Nehru, it could not permit Tito to seek the same alliances.

The fact that Tito could permit himself the hazardous luxury of coming to grips with the Soviet indicates that he feels secure in his job. It appears he has reason.

In a country where independence is a magic word, he has the almost undivided support of his people — Communists and non-Communists — when he is defending the prime issue: Independence!

Nehru: Negative Third Position

By WATSON SIMS

NEW DELHI (AP) — Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru recently was asked by a newsman to explain his "third position" between East and West in the Cold War.

His reply may have been as close as he has ever come to answering a question which has vexed Washington, London and Moscow. "The 'third position' is a negative one," he said. "It represents abstaining from a positive movement."

Over the years, Nehru has irritated both sides by remaining in the middle and accentuating the negative.

The Prime Minister has, Indians quickly point out, many positive policies. He is first and foremost for India and anything that will help his impoverished and underdeveloped country. He is for peace, believing that no nation, including India, could avoid the consequences of war.

But it is largely through the negative that Nehru has gained his international reputation. In a period of history when East and West are verbally, if not militarily, at each other's throats, Nehru has emerged as the leading "no" man of his time.

He is against military pacts. He is against foreign bases. He is against hydrogen bomb tests. He is against repression of lesser Communist states, either by military or ideological methods. He is against the Cold War and all its manifestations and criticizes both sides for waging it.

At one time or another, this has

THE WIDE Cold War gulf between East and West is occupied chiefly by four men whose very names have become synonymous with the nations they lead. Each has steered a tricky, sometimes zigzag course between the two gulf shores, taking aid and abuse from both sides in the name of neutrality and nationalism. Here's an up-to-the-minute appraisal by veteran Associated Press correspondents of Tito of Yugoslavia, Nasser of Egypt, Nehru of India and Sukarno of Indonesia.

Nasser: Leaning Eastward

By WILTON WYNN

Nasser

CAIRO (AP) — Egypt's Gamal Abdel Nasser sometimes is called a "Tito in reverse."

Tito shifted from the Soviet bloc to the neutralist camp. Nasser arrived among the neutrals from the Western side.

When Nasser seized power from King Farouk in 1952, he considered himself pro-Western, and so did the West. The embassies of great influence in his country were the American and the British. He was regarded as a bulwark against extremist and leftist elements.

Favors East

Six years later, Nasser says he is following a policy of "positive neutrality." Yet there is little doubt that his relations with the Communist bloc are far better than those with the West.

He is receiving enormous military and economic help from the Soviet bloc. And his propaganda machine rarely has an unkind word for the Communist world, while it turns out a daily grist of invective against the West.

Nasser insists, however, that his policy is one of non-alignment. The imbalance in propaganda attacks on the West he would explain this way: "Being neutral does not mean that we treat both sides exactly alike. It means that we are free to criticize those who attack us and praise those who befriend us."

"The Soviet Union has been our friend in critical moments, and so we say good things about them. When they become hostile to us, we will criticize them."

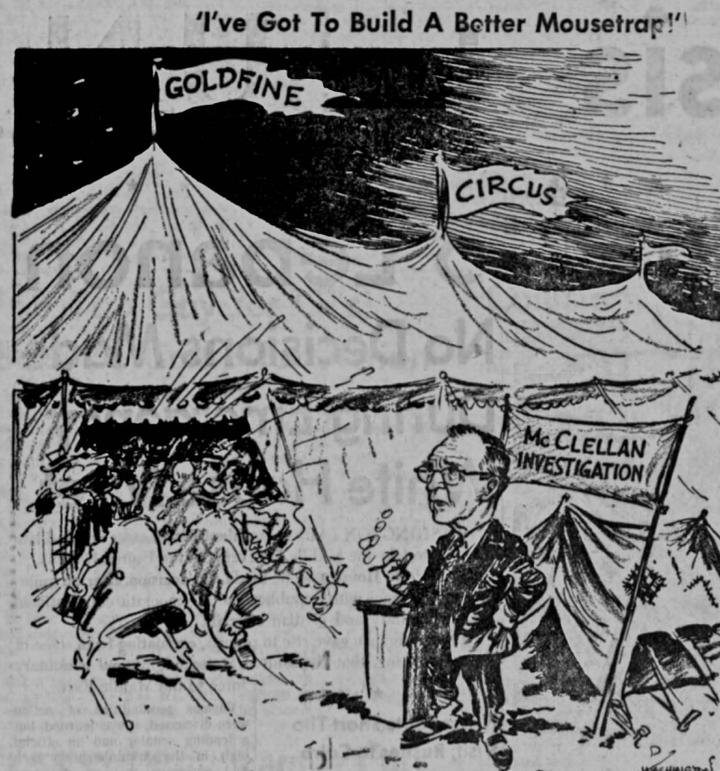

Nasser has tried to play one power off against another, and thus maintain a semblance of genuine neutrality in his policy. When he shocked the West by buying arms from the Soviets in 1955, he turned to the West for financing of his high dam, and so on.

Power Pacted Man

Even more important is Nasser's "Samsonian" complex. He is ready to pull down the pillars on himself as well as his enemies if he is pressed too hard. If he gets sufficiently annoyed at the West, he is capable of spitefully going straight into the Communist camp. Western leaders pretend they don't believe he really would do it, but they are not sure enough to risk it.

Nasser seized power in a military coup and has retained his position by controlling the machinery of power in the country — the police, army, and propaganda organs. He has never been intensely popular in Egypt, but his foreign policy seems to be supported by a majority of Egyptians.

Some argue that Nasser exercises a brake on Egypt's swing to the left. The Soviet Union has gained such wide popularity by supporting the Arabs internationally that a more liberal government might be forced by popular pressure to move farther to the left than Nasser. There is almost no possibility that a change of government would make Egypt more pro-Western.

These Meters Aren't Cricket

Something which has always grated on our sense of fair play is the type of parking meter in use in the City lot near the Capitol theater. Thoes bandits don't even give the motorist a sporting chance.

As everyone who lives near Iowa City is aware, most meters have glass windows so you at least can see how much time is left on the meter.

Once in a while, a motorist may even be fortunate enough to get to use the remainder of time left on the meter by a previous parker. The City still gets its toll for the space, and the lucky motorist has a bright spot in his day.

Not so, however, with the meters on the lot under discussion. Those money-grabbers are enclosed in such a way that it's impossible to tell the amount of time left on the meter.

Thus if a driver puts 3 hours worth of money in the meter and only uses up 5 minutes time in the space, there still are 2 hours and 55 minutes left of paid up rent. But who's to know?

Since you can't see the needle, you still have to put more money into the meter and are unable to benefit from the prepaid space.

If it's not illegal, a friend of ours is going to carry little gummed labels with him and every time he leaves one of those meters before his time is up, he's going to paste a sign on the meter telling what time he left and how much rent remained on the meter. It might work, if, as we say, it's not illegal.

If it works, we're for it. We like at least to be able to hope we may hit the jackpot sometime and find a parking space with a couple hours of prepaid rent. It seems obvious that this hidden-hour type of meter system just isn't cricket. It's not so much the principle of the thing; it's the money.

Cop Is Ticket Happy

We're beginning to wonder just what motivates that Chicago traffic cop who's made a name for himself in the ticket-writing department. His main claim to fame, which earns him space in the newspapers and probably a case of writer's cramp, is the ability to hand out some 400 traffic tickets a week.

This man doesn't confine his ticket-writing to working hours. Off-duty or not, the moving hand writes and having writ, moves on. Not too long ago he was cruising around on his night off and saw Illinois Governor William Stratton's Caddie parked illegally in front of a hotel.

Admitting later he knew whose car it was, policeman Jack Muller hunted around for a parking space for his own car, then walked back and slapped a summons on the Governor's car on two counts.

This same cop has ticketed other official cars, among them the sheriff's car (which was parked in front of his office in Chicago).

Somehow, it appears that this policeman's zeal is a little excessive. Technically he probably was correct in assessing violations. However, if an officer of the law wants to write out a ticket, there's almost certain to be some law to peg it on.

For instance, if our memory serves us correctly, it wasn't too long ago that it was still illegal to drive an auto uptown in Des Moines without first notifying the mayor so he could issue a warning to all the horse owners on the street that a chug-chuggin' horseless carriage was about to invade the area.

On the other hand, perhaps policeman Jack Muller isn't resorting to laws such as this. Perhaps his efforts are actually reducing the relative number of traffic violators in Chicago. Perhaps the citizens and officials and fellow policemen think twice now before they violate some minor traffic restriction. Perhaps, perhaps not.

Sukarno: 'Guided Democracy'

By JOHN RODERICK

JAKARTA (AP) — Rebellious army officers trained their cannon on Merdeka Palace where President Sukarno, a lonely figure, sat quietly awaiting the next tense move.

"Meet our demands or we will blast you out," the officers told him in effect.

Sukarno's reply was a request for a conference. The talk lasted two hours. When the rebels left the palace, tears were streaming down their cheeks.

Sukarno not only had won but he had convinced the rebels their actions had endangered the young nation.

That was in 1952. Today Sukarno is handling a new revolt. Testimony of his powers of persuasion is the fact that his right-hand man is Abdul Harris Nasution, one of the leaders of the '52 uprising.

What kind of man is Sukarno? How has he been able to stay on top throughout crisis after crisis? Is he a dictator? Is he a Communist?

No Conclusive Answers

These are questions which both friend and foe, have asked for many months, without being able to reach a conclusive answer.

One thing is certain. He is not a Communist. But he has com-earned Nehru the anger of both East and West.

Nehru

By and large, however, Nehru has managed to dodge the brickbats from both sides; to press ahead for India and add to his own stature by standing in the middle. To the envy and anger of some states which have taken sides, India continues to draw economic aid from both.

The reasons go far deeper than the techniques and attitudes of any one person.

Th sprawling subcontinent of India, with its population of 400 million, is perhaps the biggest single target in the ideological war.

Although Russia and the West recognize that under Nehru India will join neither camp, each is willing to stake large bets on the way it will go in the future.

Thus America has poured more than a billion dollars into India and since independence, Russia is building a 125 million dollar steel plant for India's second five-year plan and has authorized a similar amount for purchasing industrial equipment.

Against this background, there has been controversy as to where Nehru's sympathies really lie.

Even Nehru's Indian admirers concede that the international level he appears quicker to criticize the West than Russia. An explanation heard here is that the British-educated Premier expects the best of the West and only hopes the best from Russia — and uses his criticism accordingly.

But if the policies he applies at home can be a criterion, the Prime Minister would have to be classified as anti-Communist.

In a recent private speech to his Congress party, Nehru said he wants India to have a kind of socialism in which every individual has equal opportunity.

"I do not at all prefer state controlling everything because I attach a value to individual freedom," he said. "I do not want state socialism of that extreme kind in which the state is all powerful."

If Nehru can establish such a system in India, the West will consider its aid dollars well spent. But there is wide belief that it must be accomplished within the 68-year-old Prime Minister's lifetime. Many doubt that anyone else will be able to steer his middle course through the strong currents of the Cold War.

thority at a time when the nation would have welcomed it.

At 57, Sukarno has risen through a lifetime of revolution to become head of the richest nation in Southeast Asia, one whose population of 83 million makes it sixth most populous on earth.

No ascetic, like Ngo Dinh Diem of South Vietnam, or China's Mao Tse-Tung, he most closely resembles Nehru among Asia's top men.

Like Nehru, he lives passionately for the masses without wholly being part of them. Like him, he firmly believes his country can survive only if it keeps aloof from the quarrels besetting East and West.

For defending this policy, he has been all but abandoned by the United States, ardently wooed by Soviet Russia and Red China and looked upon with distrust by his anti-Communist Asian neighbors.

Sukarno has come under the bitter attack in the West and among many of his own countrymen for his principle of guided democracy. He advanced it, he said, after becoming disillusioned with the political parties which in the years of independence had failed to confront their duties, waxed fat and rich on corruption and graft.

His original idea was to abolish the parties, but this ran into such a storm of opposition he abandoned it. Then, he proposed guided democracy which would provide for a cabinet formed proportionately from all parties.

Criticism of the guided democracy plan has centered around the fact that it would permit Communists to enter the cabinet. So far, however, since the original plan had to be modified, they have not done so.

Throughout the present political turmoil, the picture emerges of Sukarno as a very human individual, with normal weaknesses and vanities, but nonetheless deeply concerned with the future of the young republic he helped to create.

Still the people's idol, he seems destined to continue playing an important role in this island nation for years to come.

Red Sox, Cubs Win in Extra-Innings Ball Games

BOSTON (AP) — Pinch-hitter Ted Lepcio drew a bases-loaded walk from southpaw Don Mossi for Boston's 4-3, 10-inning victory over Cleveland Monday with Jackie Jensen ambuling home for the run that made the difference.

Mossi, the Indians' veteran lefty replaced Jim (Mudcat) Grant with one out and two men aboard in the 10th but issued a pair of passes which brought matters to a rapid conclusion.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Bob Boyd ruined Herb Moford's initial starting pitching assignment for the Detroit Tigers Monday with an eighth-inning home run and a 2-1 Baltimore Orioles victory.

Moford, 29-year-old right-hander brought up from Charleston of the American Association where he had a 6-0 record, had previously pitched 19 innings in eight relief appearances and lost one decision.

Ford, 29, a stubby southpaw who won only 11 all last season because of arm trouble, struck out two and didn't walk a man, retiring all but one of the last 20 men he faced. He also drove in a run with a single.

Cubs 11, Phillies 10

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Cubs won their first extra inning game of the season Monday after five straight overtime losses by edging Philadelphia 11-10 in 11 innings.

Moore Moryn doubled across the tying and winning runs with one out in the second extra inning after the Cubs made three errors in the top half to give the Phillies an unearned marker for a 10-9 bulge.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Dodgers compensated for a bungling defense with a burst of home runs Monday and took their fourth straight decision from Cincinnati, winning 8-5 before 8,465 at the Coliseum.

Shortstop Don Zimmer, out of the Dodger lineup since July 6 with an injured knee and sore toe, returned to slam two homers and drive in four runs.

Covington singled across two runs in the first inning then blasted a solo home run over the 380-foot sign in rightfield in the third, before leaving for a pinch runner in the eighth, the 205-pound outfielder added two more singles and a walk.

Judge Rules LA-Dodger Contract Invalid; Future Again Questionable

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Walter O'Malley's plans for a 12-million dollar Chavez Ravine ball park for his Los Angeles Dodgers were clouded Monday by billows of legal smoke.

Superior Judge Arnold Praeger, ruling on a taxpayer suit, held invalid the contract under which the city would give the ball club land for a fancy stadium.

And he issued a permanent injunction prohibiting the city from carrying out terms of an ordinance covering the contract.

Future Questionable

Thus the Dodgers' future again is a question mark. The decision is the latest in a series of hurdles the club has faced in its path toward a permanent park in its new Los Angeles home.

The voters approved the controversial contract last June, and it seemed O'Malley's problems were over. Then came the taxpayer suit, a trial, and Monday the decision.

It now seems certain there will be a lengthy period of legalities before O'Malley will know for certain whether he is in or out of the choice Chavez Ravine site, only a mile from Civic Center.

Officials favoring the Dodgers said there will be an appeal. Legal experts said the injunction means that the city can not let O'Malley start to build until the final higher court decision.

"Not Licked Yet"

"We're not licked yet," declared Mayor Norris Poulson, strong advocate of major league baseball and the Dodgers. "Naturally, I expect the city attorney to appeal. I am not an attorney but as I understand the ruling of the court it was largely based on technicalities.

"I am sure we'll keep the Dodgers here because the people of Los Angeles love them and they want major league baseball here."

The principal legal bone of contention was the Chavez Ravine acreage that the city, under the contract, proposed to give the Dodgers in exchange for Dodger-owned Wrigley Field and other considerations.

The city obtained part of the land from the City Housing Authority, which placed in the deed a restriction saying it must be used for public purposes. Additional parts of the 315 acres involved were to be acquired by the city from private owners to turn over to the Dodgers.

Not Proper

Judge Praeger held the city might be able to get a deed-restriction change from the housing authority on the "public purposes" issue but that buying other property, even at a reasonable price, to turn over to the Dodgers, a private organization, is not legally proper.

"If the city can use public funds to acquire property for the purpose of conveying it to a ball club for a ball park to be operated as a private enterprise for private profit, then it may use public funds to acquire property for the purpose of selling it for use as a private bowling alley, a private golf course or steel mill or hotel or any other private purpose."

The taxpayer suits were brought by Mrs. Therese Steffey and Lou is Kirshbaum.

O'Malley had hoped to get started on the Chavez Ravine Stadium this month. Meantime, the Dodgers are playing their home games this year and next in the 100,000-seat Los Angeles Coliseum.

U.S. Track Coach Confident as Team Prepares for Trip to Meet Russians

NEW YORK (AP) — The head coach of the United States team predicted Monday — with no strings attached — that his squad would whip Russia when the world's two premier track and field powers clash in a showdown meeting July 27-28 in Moscow.

"It probably will be close," said George Eastment, a professor of business law at Manhattan College when he isn't coaching the Jaspers' track team. But we definitely will win. We have a fine team.

"We know we have a lot of work in store for us, and the rest of the week my boys are going to go through two workouts a day to get in tip-top shape. Two weeks from today, we will leave Russia the winners."

Eastment took his team to the U.S. Military Academy at West Point after the Amateur Athletic Union gave the team and coaches a luncheon here. At West Point, he will confer with his assistants, Larry Snyder of Ohio State and Paddy Jordan of Stanford, to decide a final lineup.

"One of the factors that hurts us," continued Eastment, "is that we don't know much about the Russian team. I understand they held their national championships last weekend, but we haven't heard a thing.

"Usually, countries trade the performances of their athletes, but we haven't been able to find out a thing about the Russians. The performance of every member of our team is there for them to see.

"In fact, our AAU officials have written the Russians asking information as to the makeup of their team, but the letters have not been answered. We don't even have an order of events."

Eastment pointed out that despite the fact that Olympic 400-meter champion Charlie Jenkins, Olympic sprint titlist Bobby Morrow, top pole vaulter Bob Gutowski and broad jumper Greg Bell can't make the trip, the team still is the strongest the U.S. ever has sent abroad outside the Olympics.

Iowa's Deacon Jones will make the trip. He will participate in the steeplechase.

Iowan Advances In Clay Courts Tennis Tourney

CHICAGO (AP) — Bill Ball of Waterloo won his second round match by default in the National Clay Court tennis tournament Monday.

Two Iowans were eliminated in first round singles matches. Ball is a former Iowa tennis player.

Ball defeated Raoul Karman of Havana by default.

Eugene Nadig of Ames lost 6-4, 6-0 to Frank Moore of River Forest, Ill.

Bob Potthast, SUI tennis player from Waukesha, Wis., also was eliminated in the first round. He lost 6-2, 4-6, 6-4 to John Cranston, Pasadena, Calif.

H.S. Workshop Presents 3 Plays

By GRETA LEINBACH
Staff Writer

It's a grand season for theatre enthusiasts. Besides the University play this weekend, three other plays are being presented Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday by 31 young actresses and actors who are participating in the 27th Annual Workshop for High School Students.

Since June 23, high school students in the dramatic arts division (there is a speech section also) have been devoting themselves to not only memorizing lines, but constructing and painting scenery, learning make-up techniques, and attending morning sessions on the fundamentals of acting.

Results of their concentrated study and plain hard work will come Wednesday when theatre-goers can see, free-of-charge, "Lo and Behold," a 3-act farce comedy; Thursday, "The Women Have Their Way," a light character comedy; and Friday, "Twelve Angry Women," a full-length drama.

Each of the 31 students will appear in at least one of the plays, and serve on stage crews for the others, to acquaint them not only with acting but with the behind-the-scenes techniques as well.

Curtain rises at 8 p.m. on Wednesday and Thursday and at 3 p.m. for the play on Friday. Each play will be presented in the University High School Auditorium.

"Lo and Behold" involves a Nobel Prize winner who has lived for many years on a meager diet to favor an ailing heart. After signing a will that leaves a third of his estate to his young doctor, a third to perpetuate his house as a sanctuary for his spirit and the final third to the Harvard Law School to insure that the terms of his odd testament will be carried out, he eats a sumptuous meal and dies happily.

Instead of the solitude he had expected to find, he is beset by the spirits of an Indian girl pushed off a cliff by her lover, a Southern belle with a disturbing drawl and a phony liberal attitude, and a frustrated composer.

"The Women Have Their Way" takes place in the home of the priest of Andalusia, Spain, where the people of the town thrive on gossip. In this particular play, the town gossips try to arrange a romance.

In "Twelve Angry Women," which is an adaptation of the television play and movie, "Twelve Angry Men," the story brings together a jury of 12 women, from different backgrounds, upbringings, and prejudices, and weaves a suspenseful tale of their often violent deliberations over the fate of a 19-year-old boy accused of murdering his father. This play will have theatre-in-the-round staging, where the audience will sit on three sides of the stage.

Students, attending the workshop, range from 14 to 18 in age. In addition, there are approximately 12 high school teachers attending the workshop, gaining experience in play production by assisting the SUI directors.

Besides the plays, the 31 students have prepared final readings—cuttings from other plays—which will be presented Wednesday and Thursday in Shambaugh Auditorium from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. and Friday from 1 p.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Willard Welsh, assistant professor in the Department of Dramatic Arts, is in charge of the dramatic arts division of the workshop. Over-all director is Hugh F. Seabury, professor in the SUI Department of Speech.

Two years ago, one workshop member was going through paces similar to the current crop. She was Jean Seberg, then an "unknown" who appeared in "Yellow Jacket." Since then, after being handpicked by producer and director Otto Preminger, she has starred in the movies, "St. Joan" and "Bonjour Tristesse."

Perhaps this success story is in the minds of the young people as they get set for that all-important opening curtain.

1870 Version Of TV Seen In Library

In the 1860's youngsters couldn't watch "The Lone Ranger" on television, but they could gather in the parlor to see "A Caution to Bad Boys" on the family zoetrope, an ancestor of the motion picture.

The zoetrope, and other early types of motion picture machines, are now on exhibit at the SUI Library.

The equipment and books and magazines which trace the development of the motion picture are from the archives of the department of audio-visual instruction of the National Educational Association. The archives have been housed at SUI for several years.

Resembles Pan
The zoetrope resembles a large round pan resting on a spindle with slits on the side. A strip of paper with drawings, differing slightly in each "frame" is placed on the inside of the pan. An illusion of action is created by revolving the wheel and looking through the slits at the drawings.

One of the first steps in the development of motion pictures was the 22 millimeter motion picture projector built by the Edison Company. A model of this machine, believed to have been manufactured in 1910, is included in the display.

Also on exhibit are two 28mm projectors, one hand-cranked and the other motor-driven, which were used during World War I days.

Early Educational Films
Educational films were produced at SUI with one of the earliest 16mm motion picture cameras ever developed. The camera, now in the SUI archives, was manufactured by the Eastman Kodak Co. in the 1920's.

Panama Students Carry Signs Telling Ike's Brother 'Go Home'

PANAMA (AP) Students demonstrated outside the U.S. Embassy Monday in an effort to catch the eye of Dr. Milton Eisenhower, President Eisenhower's emissary to Central America. He was not in the embassy during the demonstration of almost an hour.

The 65 students carried signs saying: "Eisenhower go to the United States." "We want justice." "The canal is ours."

The students left without incident after being told that Eisenhower and U.S. Ambassador Julian F. Harrington were not in the building.

while sales have been holding steady.

Cyprus Riots Continue Despite Severe British Crackdown

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Bitter strife between Greek and Turkish Cypriots continued Monday despite the hardest British crackdown in three years on this Mediterranean island.

One Greek Cypriot was shot dead and five injured.

Ancient Indian Vessel Excavated by SUI Group

A pottery vessel estimated to be 1400 years old was found by SUI archaeology students near Lake Odessa, Sunday.

The vessel, of middle Woodland type, was found in a road cut while the students were surface collecting artifacts (man-made relics).

The vessel is one of the few found with all of the broken pieces in one place, Raymond J. Ruppe, director of the archaeological excavations, said. Its complete significance will not be known until it has been washed and examined, he explained.

The size of the vessel should be 15 inches in diameter when restored, Ruppe, assistant professor of sociology anthropology said. The black-muddy colored vessel, cord-marked with small holes, has thin body walls.

The archeology find was made in connection with work being conducted by the SUI Department of Sociology and Anthropology at Tadesboro, Iowa. Fifteen University students are helping with the excavation of the Indian village site on the Iowa River bluff.

The site is adjacent to several large burial mounds where extensive archaeological exploration was carried out by the Davenport Academy of Sciences in the 1870's.

Pits five feet square are being used in the excavation of the site. The soil is being removed with trovels by inch levels.

Stone tools, arrow heads, pottery, and bone have been found by the students, during the first few weeks of work.

This is the fourth year that such an excavation program has been conducted by Ruppe and SUI archaeology students.

The field work is supported in part by a grant from the Old Gold Development Fund, a voluntary program of financial support carried out by SUI alumni.

Plans are now being made to excavate the site where the pottery vessel was found, Ruppe said.

Failure of the rebels to produce any of their hostages brought angry rumblings among Navy headquarters personnel. Mystery heightened over the exact whereabouts of the kidnapped servicemen and grave fears were expressed for their safety.

Goldfine, Smiles Galore, Returns For Questions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bernard Goldfine returned to Washington Monday with smiles for everybody. But there was no sign he won't be in a fight with House investigators again Tuesday.

Chairman Oren Harris (D-Ark.), slated Goldfine for a sixth day of testimony under oath in a House subcommittee inquiry which, Harris says, shows Goldfine got federal favors in part through friendship with presidential aide Sherman Adams.

And several subcommittee members made plain they have a lot more questions to ask. Rep. Peter F. Mack (D-Ill.), figured the Boston textile and real estate millionaire would be kept on the stand another two days.

Goldfine risked a subcommittee vote to cite him for contempt when he refused last Friday to answer 23 specially-drawn questions about his financial affairs.

Then he blasted the congressmen for "smear, pry and spy" into what he said is private business unrelated to the subcommittee's stated aim of checking how federal regulatory agencies carry out the law.

It was a different Goldfine who stepped off the plane from Boston here at mid-afternoon after "a very nice weekend at home."

"Are you mad at anybody?" a newsman shouted over the roar of propellers.

"Nobody at all," beamed the 67-year-old industrialist.

But Goldfine wasn't talking about specifics. He said "I'll tell what my lawyers advise me" about items like $777,000 in long uncashed checks and large money withdrawals from his East Boston Co. about which the subcommittee has found out little so far.

Goldfine said he would huddle with his lawyers too about a plan to appeal to the Harris subcommittee's parent group, the full Commerce Committee.

A Goldfine aide said the lawyers want Goldfine to seek a ruling from the full committee — which Harris also heads — on whether the subcommittee overstepped the bounds of its inquiry. Harris has already made plain that such an appeal, if made, won't get very far.

Rep. John Bell Williams (D-Miss.), turned his sights on the Adams-Goldfine relationship which both men have sworn is longstanding friendship — not Adams pulling strings for Goldfine in Washington in return for expensive favors.

Williams termed it very significant that Goldfine so far has not recalled paying hotel bills for Adams before the former New Hampshire governor came to Washington in 1953 as Eisenhower's staff chief. Since 1953, the investigators have found, Goldfine picked up the tab on more than $3,000 worth of Adams' hotel bills.

This raises, Williams declared, "some question as to whether this is the personal friendship that Mr. Goldfine has made this out to be."

Marine Transport Forced Down By Cuban Planes

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A seven-man U.S. Marine Corps air transport crew, forced down Sunday by Cuban army fighter planes, landed here Monday in their Flying Boxcar and expressed belief it was all a mistake on the part of the Cubans.

The plane left Guantanamo Bay Naval Base in Cuba Sunday on a flight to the Opa-Locka Marine Base in Miami. It was forced down at Santiago, the capital of Cuba's Oriente Province, but the men were released in a few hours after a U.S. consul intervened.

Maj. Kevin Cochrane, 35, Cherry Point, N.C., told newsmen the Cuban pilots apparently were not expert navigators.

"We flew from Guantanamo Bay along the south coast of Cuba toward the southwest tip, planning to turn north there and head toward Miami," Cochrane said.

"We were actually flying over water, not over the coast itself. We were intercepted by one of three P47 fighter planes. The pilot flew alongside, wiggled his wings and told us by radio to fly to Santiago and land."

"I asked him for what reason. He told me in good English that he thought we were flying over a Cuban restricted area. I said I believed we were not."

"He then asked if we were going to land at Santiago to straighten it out. He made no threats and no passes which could be construed as such."
