WASHINGTON — President Eisenhower denounced a proposed $2.5 billion federal program to develop a world-wide, non-military space effort.

The program, called an "American Space System," would be financed largely with federal dollars.

President Eisenhower said that the program could lead to an "arms race in space" and warned that it would "set the stage for a world conflict in space".

The president also reiterated his belief that a "military" space program would be "more expensive" than a "non-military" one.

The Author Says Yes And No —

Do We Need Speed Limits?

By HAROLD E. SULLIVAN
Traffic Engineering Department

Hwy.

Traffic engineers today are in the forefront of the battle to end a form of highway murder which has taken many lives and contributed to thousands of accidents. The answer is a definite yes. Speed limits are needed.

Highway traffic today is an interesting contradiction. It can be argued that 95 percent of all motorists drive within the speed limit. However, the other 5 percent cause 95 percent of all accidents.

The roads are filled with drivers who are not just speeding, but doing things which are causing an even greater hazard. This is the danger which is not so easily measured.

The problem is not just one of speed, but it is a combination of three factors: speed, distraction and bad judgment.

Speed limits are needed to reduce the number of accidents caused by increased public awareness which has led to people driving too fast. The problem is a national one, and it can be solved only by a national effort.

This is not to say that all motorists are at fault. Many are, but some are not. Those who are driving too fast are a danger to themselves and to others.

The solution is not to be found in a single answer, but in a combination of factors. The solution is not to be found in a single answer, but in a combination of factors.
Washington — President Eisenhower said Wednesday that workers who have rejected the Taft-Hartley act as a "right-to-work" measure will have the right to vote on the issue through referenda under which "Anticommons areaxes, under which workers must reject overwhelming majorities in union-wrecking drives."

"There will be no hold changes in administration policy as a result of this vote," said Mr. Eisenhower, "but there may be an increasing realization that it is possible to do without the right to work measure, if it is put to a vote... The right to work movement's only major complaint is that it is a "likely vote" in a "right-to-work" initiative, and now, with the majority of voters expressing such a desire, the issue is being brought before the public...."
MacPhail, New Baltimore GM, Aims For First Division Berth

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Lee MacPhail, new general manager of the Baltimore Orioles, said that the Orioles' chances of playing in the big leagues are "better than ever" this season.

MacPhail, a fluid mix of sports and business, has been hired by the Orioles to transform the team into a major league powerhouse. He said the team's future success is dependent on several factors:

1. Improved pitching: The Orioles need to strengthen their starting rotation to compete with other teams.
2. Strong defense: The team must focus on improving its defense to prevent runners from advancing.

Several Shifts Possible In Minor Loops

By JOE RIEHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

In a number of games played last Saturday, shifting of the starting line-up would alter first-rate structures, and whether or not the player would be used as an offensive or defensive back would depend on how he played in practice.

Demo Victory Sends Stocks To New High

By ED MURPH

AP Business, Desk New York

A broad market move to a new high and a corresponding increase in volume Wednesday in the wake of the victory in the elections of Democratic candidates for governor in the three largest states, Illinois, Indiana and Massachusetts, indicated the mood of Wall Street was anticipate.

The rise of a Democratic hold on the governorships of these three states and the victory of a Democratic majority in the Massachusetts legislature, Wall Street had anticipated, was expected to maintain the strong demand for stocks.

Key stocks rose from Friday's already strong gains and New York, Chicago, St. Louis, and Boston were the chief centers of activity.
