Snow Snarls City Traffic, Causes Death of I.C. Man

Iowans, beset by the season's worst snow storm, Monday began digging their way out of the new fall, which measured up to nine inches in some areas.

Snarled traffic, the closing of hundreds of schools, the death of an Iowa City man and at least one auto death were left in the wake of the storm.

The weather was blamed for a death and an accident in Iowa City Monday. Melvin Prizler, 50, ambulance driver for SUI Hospitals, died of a heart attack about 3 p.m. while shoveling snow in front of his home at 1613 Court Place.

Lucian Leonard, 2000 Western Ave., suffered a concussion Monday afternoon when he fell off a ladder while changing lights at Burkett-Rhinehart Morto Company. His condition was reported as "good."

Mrs. Delores Crist, 30, Muscatine beauty shop operator, was killed Monday morning in a car-truck collision on Highway 61 south of Muscatine.

Brisk winds caused much blowing and drifting of snow, hampering efforts of crews clearing the state's highways.

The new snow, added to that which fell last week, left 13 inches of cover on the ground at Dubuque, 12 at Council Bluffs, 10 in Des Moines, 9 inches each at Ottumwa and Waterloo, 8 inches at Cedar Rapids and 6 inches at Iowa City.

The weather also played havoc with local drivers as four minor non-injury accidents occurred during the storm Monday.

At 3:46 p.m. cars driven by Donald L. Boyd, A1, Des Moines, and Mrs. Betty Scharf, 1006 N. Summit St., collided at the intersection of Linn and College streets. Mrs. Scharf was charged by police with failure to yield the right of way.

An auto driven by James H. Moore, 225 Fairchild St., collided with one driven by John Graves, 330 Ellis Ave., at the intersection of Linn and Bloomington streets at 10:33 a.m.

The intersection of College and Dodge streets was the scene of a collision between cars driven by Albert C. Hass, M4, Iowa City, and Richard E. Gerlach, 1118 E. College St., at 12:50 p.m.

The fourth collision was at 5:06 p.m. with cars driven by Carroll Louis Schron, Rt. 1, Tiffin, and Donald A. Lillecker, 1921 N. Government St. colliding at Van Buren and Riverside streets.

In District 11, which includes Iowa City, there was some blowing and drifting snow. South central Iowa roads were wet to 100 per cent snow packed; northeast highways were 75 per cent ice and slush covered; and southeast roads were wet and slushy to 100 per cent snow packed.

Skies will be generally clear today, but cold air will grip the state. Highs today will range from 10 to 15 in the northwest and from 15 to 20 in the southeast.

Wednesday's outlook calls for mostly fair skies and continued cold.

Government Lets Contract For New Hydrofoil Ship

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Government awarded a pioneering contract Monday for a five-million-dollar hydrofoil ship designed to carry 100 passengers at speeds up to 90 miles an hour.

The Maritime Administration said the vessel will be able to travel between New York and Bermuda in eight hours. Most cruise liners now take about two days for the trip.

A $1½-million contract for construction of the 80-ton vessel was awarded to Dynamic Developments, Inc., an affiliate of Grumman Aircraft Engineering Corp., Bethpage, N.Y.

A hydrofoil is a type of ship in which wing-like foils lift the hull out of the water to reduce the drag of the waves. Most present hydrofoils are small, but maritime planners said they expect to develop, within the next 10 years, larger vessels which will become common on many liner routes.

The maritime agency said the 104-foot ship may be the world's largest and fastest hydrofoil. However, the Soviet Union has announced plans to build a similar vessel that will carry 300 passengers at 62 miles an hour.

Ike Seeks Tax Increase, $79.8 Billions Budget

WASHINGTON (HTNS) — President Eisenhower Monday sent Congress a $79.8 billion fiscal spending budget that provides for record-breaking tax collections and the biggest surplus in 13 years.

He asked Congress to protect the surplus by rejecting demands for spending increases and tax reductions. He held out the prospect that the next President and the next Congress will be able to put through a tax cut if his budget proposals are adopted.

Eisenhower said his budget will yield a $4.1 billion surplus in the year beginning July 1. He asserted that the "only sound course" is to use the money to retire part of the $285 billion public debt.

The President contended that the public debt has to be reduced in prosperous times or it will grow "even larger" if future national emergencies and future recessions again produce budget deficits.

The predicted $4.1 billion surplus represents the difference between the expected spending total of $79.8 billion and anticipated tax receipts of $84 billion. Eisenhower previously had revealed the three totals in his annual State of the Union message.

Congressional reaction to the budget message followed party lines.

Many Democrats questioned whether the predicted surplus will be achieved and complained that the President does not plan to spend enough on national defense. Republicans praised the budget and promised to defend it against Democratic spending proposals.

Key members of both parties agreed that Congress will not vote a $554 million postal rate increase that Eisenhower requested and included in his surplus estimate. The President recommended increasing the first-class mail rate to five cents and the airmail rate to eight cents.

Eisenhower tied the prospect of future tax reduction to an expectation that continuing prosperity will swell tax receipts — and to a hope that federal spending programs after this year will be marked by "reasonable restraint."

The next administration and the next Congress then will have a surplus they can use for reducing the public debt, lightening the tax burden, or both, the President said.

"Soundly conceived tax revision can then be approached on a comprehensive and orderly basis, rather than by haphazard piecemeal changes, and can be accomplished within a setting of economic and fiscal stability," Eisenhower declared.

Budget Director Maurice H. Stans told reporters that he "personally" believes it will be possible to enact a tax reduction in 1961. But Secretary of the Treasury Robert B. Anderson refused to pinpoint a date for action when reporters told him of Stans' statement.

The surplus that the budget envisages will be the fourth that Eisenhower has posted against as many deficits. The deficits have been substantially bigger than the surpluses and achievement of the $4.1 billion surplus still will leave the public debt $13.9 billion higher than it was when Eisenhower entered office in 1953.

Eisenhower in his budget message asked Congress to extend the present excise taxes and corporate income rates beyond June 30. Reductions are scheduled to take place at that time.

He renewed a request for heavier taxes on cooperatives, asked for steeper aviation gasoline taxes and urged that Congress add one-half cent a gallon to the automobile gasoline tax.

Leading Congressional members of both parties immediately predicted that Congress will not vote the gasoline tax rise. The decision will not affect the 1961 operating budget since the receipts would go into a special Highway Trust Fund rather than into the General Treasury.

Eisenhower put forward two tax relief proposals. Both would benefit business.

One calls for granting a tax credit to business on income from foreign sources. The other provides for administrative liberalizing of depreciation regulations if Congress eliminates a depreciation tax loophole that allows taxpayers to treat the receipt of income from the sale of depreciable personal property as capital gain.

47 Die In Plane Crash

BULLETIN

HOLDCROFT, Va. (AP) — A Capital Airlines Viscount plane en route from Chicago to Norfolk by way of Washington crashed near here Monday night with 48 persons on board. State police reported there were no survivors.

In Washington, Capital Airlines said the jet-prop airplane carried a capacity load of 44 passengers and 3 crew. It was Flight 20.

The crew was identified as Capt. J. B. Fornasero, 1st Officer P. H. Cullom and hostesses D. O'Donnell and B. Jordt.

No further information was immediately available on the crew and passengers.

The plane crashed shortly before 11 p.m. (EST) in rough rural country about 30 miles southeast of Richmond.

State police said one resident of the Holdcroft area telephoned that he had heard a low-flying plane pass over the area, had heard it "gun" its engines, and then had heard a thunderous noise as it crashed.

The crash occurred while most of eastern and central Virginia was cloaked with a fog that severely limited visibility. A number of airports in the eastern part of the state were closed to most airliners. The Norfolk airport, however, was reported open because the fog was not so dense in that area.

The crash was the second major airline disaster in less than two weeks and the second in Virginia in less than three months. A National Airlines DC-6B crashed near Boliva, N.C., Jan. 6, killing 34.

On Oct. 30, a Piedmont Airlines plane en route from Washington to Charlottesville, Va., crashed against a Blue Ridge mountain near Charlottesville and 26 of the 27 aboard perished.

Clouds Produce Pattern From Light Reflections

DES MOINES (AP) — The Weather Bureau Monday night reported a strange light pattern over Des Moines.

The Weather Bureau said the phenomenon apparently was caused by the reflection of city lights off a thin layer of low clouds from which streamers of fine snow were dropping.

Ike Defense Budget: Switch to Missiles

WASHINGTON (HTNS) — President Eisenhower proposed Monday a budget for "strong and versatile" defense hitched to rockets which could do anything from launching spacemen to knocking out machine gun nests.

The $40,995,000,000 defense budget for the fiscal year starting July 1 signaled the beginning of the end of the manned aircraft as a strategic weapon.

Only about $50 million more than this year's spending for defense, it emphasized what the President called "one of the greatest transitions in history" — the switch to missile defense.

But the President cautioned, in his budget message read to Congress, that "for the time being the manned bomber is the major threat." Accordingly, he sought money to buy more B-52 and B-58 long-range bombers and to approach completion of the Nike-Hercules and Bomarc anti-aircraft defense systems.

Eisenhower defended America's space effort as "systematic and technically sound" and said an attempt to put a man in space will be made within the next two years. He estimated space spending in the coming fiscal year at $600 million.

While this comes close to doubling the budget for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), it includes $140 million for the Saturn project formerly carried in the Defense Department budget. Saturn, recently given higher priority by Eisenhower, is designed to be a super-rocket with 1.2 million pounds of thrust.

The President pledged to continue his quest for "safeguarded and verifiable" disarmament. In the meantime, he said, America and its allies "must remain strong (enough) . . . to deter wars, large or small."

For helping the allies, Eisenhower requested a $950 million increase in new appropriations to the foreign aid program. He said the $4,175,000,000 total would go chiefly for Development Loan Fund lending in the economic field and for "advanced weapons and equipment" on the military side.

New money for military aid would account for $2 billion of the total, the other $2,175,000,000 going for economic and technical assistance. Of the $950 million increase, $700 million of it was for military aid.

Actual foreign aid spending for the fiscal year starting July 1 was estimated at $3.45 billion. This is an increase of $10 billion over the current fiscal year. It includes $1.75 billion for military aid.

In the atomic energy field, the President disclosed spending will remain at its current $2.7 billion level but research and development will be stepped up. He said this is possible because the Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) has now acquired virtually all the uranium ore it needs. This permits a cutback in purchases of the costly, once-scarce material in the United States and Canada.

"Development and production of nuclear weapons in 1961 will remain at the high levels of previous years," the President said.

This program, he added, contemplates "the vigorous development" of atomic power plants for aircraft, naval ships, missiles and military land bases.

Tass Hits Budget As Tax Burden On U.S. Workers

MOSCOW (AP) — President Eisenhower's new budget "holds practically nothing good in store for the working people, while it does impose a further heavy burden of taxation on them," Tass said Monday.

In a dispatch from Washington, the official Soviet news agency said: "In spite of the acute shortage of school buildings, the appropriations for school construction are to be cut down from a meager sum of $73 million in the current fiscal year to $71.5 million."

On the other hand, Tass said 57.1 per cent of the total budget was for military purposes.

Back as University President—

Hancher Recalls U.N. Trip

By SANDRA LEHMAN Staff Writer

State University of Iowa president Virgil M. Hancher left the scene of a "splendid adventure" and an "extraordinary experience" for his return to SUI in mid-December.

Throughout his "adventure," he shared his experiences with friends and relatives, in a series of letters which makes up a diary of his experiences as a U.S. delegate to the Fourteenth General Assembly of the United Nations in New York City.

President Hancher will give a summary of his experiences and impressions of his three months as a U.S. delegate in a lecture Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the Main Lounge of Iowa Memorial Union.

Of his experiences with high Government officials, Hancher said in his first letter, "I rarely have contact with high Government officials without being struck by their high ability and great sense of dedication to the service.

"In the highest posts great wealth is an asset, but it is heartening also to see how many men are content with modest salaries and pensions and find their reward in being a part of a great

Of his experiences with the refugee problem, Hancher wrote in a later letter of hearing of a 67-year-old woman in Austria who is learning English by reading her Polish Bible and an English Bible in familiar passages and who is learning to type so that she may help younger refugees prepare their applications for resettlement elsewhere.

In listening to debates, President Hancher found it very interesting to hear the debates presented by the U.S.S.R., Byelorussian U.S.S.R., Ukrainian S.S.R.,

Blizzard in Japan Leaves 100 Dead

TOKYO (AP) — A violent winter blizzard left at least 100 dead or missing in Japan Monday. No casualties were reported among U.S. servicemen.

As the 55-mile gale driving a curtain of snow moved off toward the Kurile Islands, the coast guard expressed fears the casualty count would rise yet higher.

Scores of fishing boats were likely to be caught in the northern waters near the Soviet-occupied Kuriles, the coast guard said. It reported 35 boats already had sought shelter in the Kuriles.

Most of the 100 dead or missing in the storm which hit northern Japan last weekend were fishermen. Six fishing boats were sunk, two others were reported missing, and 12 grounded or otherwise damaged.

MACMILLAN ENDS VISIT

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan, ending an eight-day visit, told Nigerians Monday he will carry away memories of "a generous-hearted people and an unshakable faith in Nigeria's future." Macmillan then went on to Salisbury, capital of the Central African Federation.

EDITORIAL:

A Final Word Concerning
The Central Party Committee

Last week the Iowan carried a series of articles on the Central Party Committee. We asked some basic questions about the group: Is it representative of the student body? Is it controlled by the Administration? Does it need a complete overhaul?

We used some rather outspoken comments in hopes of eliciting some response from the student body, CPC members, or the Administration.

(We regret that Earl E. Harper, director of the Iowa Memorial Union, was not available for comment on some of the statements concerning him which were carried in the series.)

We have received no letters, or other communications, of approval or disapproval concerning the statements made in these articles. We're disappointed.

So, we'd like to say what we have to say about the subject and let it ride until, if ever, someone decides to do something.

Hats off to CPC for not being a representative group of students - for not trying to establish closer ties with the students to make up for their unrepresentative composition - for making CPC an honorary group whose membership is determined on the basis of previous experience in organization, but not on previous experience in entertainment - for "politicking" in order to get on the committee - for filling a recent gap in the ranks with a fraternity brother of the president - and for getting on the committee solely because, big sister was on it last year.

Hats off! to the Administration for saddling us with CPC back in the days when such a group was needed to coordinate student functions, halt duplicity in presentations, and provide a financial base for the financing of presentations - and for failing to realize that CPC in its present capacity is an outmoded, unnecessary campus organization.

Hats off! too to the student body for believing that CPC is not their concern - for failing to apply for a CPC position in order to balance the power between the Greeks and the "independents" - for not really caring about anything enough to stand on their flat feet and demand a change.

Yes, hats off! to everybody concerned, and may we hopefully wait for the day when CPC is a dynamic organization - when the student body is concerned about everything - when the Administration turns away from the Altar of the Mighty Dollar - and when elephants start roosting on rosebushes.

Ike's Budget Weighty, Long

By ARTHUR EDSON

WASHINGTON (AP) - Just to look at President Eisenhower's budget is a sobering experience. It's something like a metropolitan phone book, although not so exhilarating. It weighs four pounds; has 952 pages, plus a 78-page introduction; costs $5.50; and presents statistics scampering everywhere, in tiny print.

Eisenhower sent the budget to Congress Monday and two observations can be made immediately:

1. Any - well, almost any - college-trained economist could understand it.

2. Probably no more formidable book will be published this year.

President Eisenhower is always talking about how these expenses must be cut, cut, cut. Yet here he is admitting that household expenses are going up for him, too. Keeping up the White House and surrounding laws will go from $449,000 to $505,000 a year.

There is also a picture of an expanding future, with everything better or worse, depending on one's point of view.

Crimes will increase. U.S. marshals, who handled 180,853 prisoners in 1958, will have 195,000 by 1961.

To catch these men and make them prisoners, we'll need fingerprint prints. Ah, ha! The FBI is ready. Last year it received 4,987,362 sets of fingerprints, so that 152,594,022 sets are now on file.

This seems like a lot of fingerprint, but J. Edgar Hoover is unsatisfied.

"The volume of fingerprint work," the report says, "is expected to increase."

But so is everything else.

Kennedy Profile

—For U.S. Voters

By MAURICE DOLBIER

Herald Tribune News Service
JOHN KENNEDY: A Political Profile. By James MacGregor Burns. Illustrated. 309 pages. Harcourt, Brace, $4.75.

The announcement by Ohio's Gov. DiSalle that his State's delegation to the Democratic National Convention in July would deliver its 64 votes to Sen. John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts as Presidential nominee increased the possibility that it will be Mr. Kennedy who challenges Richard Nixon at the polls in November.

Democratic national conventions, as no one knows better than John Kennedy, are places where the unexpected can be expected to happen - and Symington, Humphrey, Williams, Brown, Johnson, or the non-running but not unavailable Stevenson might bear the prize away at Los Angeles. Still, a vote-count of over 400 in the early balloting (expected by many Washington observers) is going to be easier for Kennedy forces to add to than for Kennedy rivals to whittle down.

The time, then, is right for a book about this young man, who is called by Mr. Burns "one of the best-known and least-understood of American political leaders," and Harcourt, Brace was right in suggesting to Mr. Burns that he do the job. He is the author of a sympathetic, and yet astutely critical, study of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, which won two awards; he has gained first-hand knowledge of politics by waging (and losing) a campaign for a Massachusetts Congressional seat; and for over a dozen years he has taught political science at Williams College.

For a student of political science, John Fitzgerald Kennedy, of all the candidates for the 1960 Democratic Presidential nomination, is, without doubt, the most challenging, and therefore the most rewarding, subject. His career and character are surrounded by political question marks.

Is he a conservative or a liberal, or is he one or the other depending upon the immediate political circumstances and the possibilities of enhancing his political career? Was he weak and evasive on the McCarthy issue, or was he scrupulous and just? Has he, on the questions of civil rights, shown a profile of courage, or cowardice, or caution? As a political leader, is he detached or committed? What effects will his Catholicism have on the electorate, or upon a possible President Kennedy?

He has made many friends, in all factions of his party and in the ranks of the opposition, but has he made enough enemies to satisfy those who, in the days of F.D.R., announced that they loved Roosevelt for the enemies he had made? What kind of President would he make in what he himself has said is "going to be a hell of a revolutionary time" - this man who approvingly quotes Robert Frost's line, "Don't take down a fence until you know why it was put up"? Is he too independent to suit the political pros, or too political to win the support of the independents? "Where," wonders a Washington observer quoted by Mr. Burns, "is the heart in the man? What makes it tick?"

Mr. Burns' book, while it is neither a campaign biography nor an authorized biography, is not one of an "artificial neutrality" . . . pro-Kennedy conclusions balanced neatly against an equal number of conclusions against him." He has made a diligent study of Kennedy's life, his writings, and his voting record, and what he has found has led him to believe that the Senator "has displayed impressive legislative competence and political judgment as a national leader, that he has far more intellectual depth and steadfastness than many supposed" and that he is "of high Presidential quality and promise."

Others may reach different conclusions, but all conclusions must be based on as full information as can be provided, and that has been Mr. Burns' purpose. He writes of the rise of the Kennedys from the time (about 1850) that Pat Kennedy left starving Ireland and settled as a cooper on Noodle's Island in East Boston; of today's close-knit Kennedy clan, and of family influences (especially those of Joseph P. Kennedy, Sr.) on young John; of the hard-fought Massachusetts political campaigns of the man whom Gov. Dever called "the first Irish Brahmin"; of his books, the Pulitzer Prize winning "Profiles in Courage" and the earlier best-seller, "Why England Slept," that he wrote when he was 23; of his wartime heroism that won him the Navy and Marine Corps Medal; of his marriage, his health, his religion, his career in the House and Senate, his friends, his campaign organization and methods, his reading, his views on the problems that the next President must deal with.

SENATOR KENNEDY
"Best Known, Least Understood"

"John Kennedy" is recommended reading to voters who want the facts about a front-runner, and the opportunity to put their own interpretation on them, and required reading, one imagines, at all Nixon headquarters.

An Interview With Curt Harnack—
Novelist Doesn't Draw
On His Own Experiences

By JOHN GILGUN
Written for the DI

(Editor's Note: Curt Harnack is a lecturer in the SUI Writers' Workshop. His first novel, "The Work of An Ancient Hand," Harcourt-Brace, 309 pages, will appear on March 9.)

CURT HARNACK
" . . . Never been a minister"

A curious thing, I recently found a sheet of notes, which I'd put aside fifteen years ago. And I found the basic idea of the novel on this sheet. So you could say, I suppose, that the novel was conceived fifteen years ago.

Reporter: Was that when you were just beginning to write?

Harnack: Actually I began about 1950. My first novel. Fortunately, it's been put away. I was writing up, in fictional form, my experiences as a butler to a Russian Prince and Princess. It should never have been written as fiction. That's why it wasn't good. You see, I have to be absolutely free to make up everything I write about.

Reporter: You don't then draw on your own experiences, as, say, Thomas Wolfe did . . . ?

Harnack: I think it's a mistaken impression, that the writer has to seek experience. When a writer is really living, really totally involved, he isn't aware that he's collecting material. He's simply open to impressions; he's living.

Reporter: You don't then consciously draw on your own experiences for this novel, then?

Harnack: Well, the main character is a minister. Now I've been a great many things. I've sold books. I've taught school in Persia. I've been a free-lance writer. I've worked for the UN in New York. I've even been in the movies, working for Alexander Films. They make those short advertisements that flash on before the Previews of Coming Attractions. You know, for local business establishments. I'd completed one for Keepsake Diamonds, and was just about to go into on for Purina Chows, when I quit. Well, the point is: I've been all these things. I have never been a minister.

Reporter: It's curious that some writers aren't able to write about anything but their own experiences. And others have to create everything.

Harnack: It seems to work that way. For instance, my second novel, which has also been put aside, was about Harlem. I lived in a house there which had been won by a Puerto Rican lady in a Sweepstakes. Again, it was too close to my own experience, and the novel was unsuccessful.

Reporter: Would you say something now about "The Work of An Ancient Hand"?

Harnack: Well, it's a serious novel, involving both comic and tragic elements. It covers twenty years, from 1930 to 1950.

Reporter: That's quite a time span to cover in 309 pages.

Harnack: Well, it has a unique structure. Difficult to explain. It's not a conventional novel. Not until the last word is the entire theme of the novel clear.

Reporter: Does it have a unique prose style?

Harnack: No, it's straightforward, realistic prose. I'd say it was in the realistic tradition.

Reporter: Realistic. That suggests Howells. Maybe Flaubert. And Zola.

Harnack: I don't think of myself as in any particular school. Or as a particular type of writer. I think it would be a mistake, if I did.

Reporter: Of course. But what writers do you feel have influenced you particularly?

Harnack: You can't ask an author this question. A writer has to read everything, and will read everything, if he's any good.

Reporter: But have you been able to discern any trends in Modern Fiction. That's a bad question, I know. It smacks of Eastern colleges and the seminar room, somehow. But where will the graduate student place your book, when he gets around to chalking up trends?

Harnack: There are no trends in modern fiction. At least none that are discernable now. The most wonderful thing about American fiction is that it's so diverse. It won't be jammed into a trend. Language is fermenting here. For instance, in one short span, you get effete writing, like Purdy's book, "Malcolm." And you get real down-to-earth, gutsy writing, like Algern's. Then there's the witty, sophisticated stuff, really wry stuff, like Cheever's. And there are all the subtle shades and nuances in between. The wonder of it is, they refuse to be categorized.

Reporter: Are you working on another novel now . . . ?

Harnack: Oh, yes.

Reporter: I won't ask you anything about it. I know that no author can talk about work in progress. He runs the risk of talking it all away, as Hemingway says somewhere.

Harnack: That's true. An author can't talk about his work while he's writing. And he's no longer interested in it, after it's done.

Reporter: The indifferent bleak lets Leda drop, so to speak.

Harnack: Once a book is completed, it's someone else's property. The author has to repudiate it. I think it was Mary Roberts Rinehart who picked up her first book, read it, and thought it had been written by someone else.

Reporter: It must be a curious experience. Take someone like Thomas Hardy, for example. Like, imagine him reading his first book, written about 1865, toward the end of his life, in say, 1920. How curious. It's all a curious business.

Harnack: No one's explained it sufficiently yet. It's a curious thing.

The Real 3rd Party

(From the Columbia Missourian)

The two major political parties, the Democrats and Republicans, are in the news almost every day. Quite often a so-called "third party" of some sort comes into the headlines. But the real third party, a major force in this country, isn't mentioned in the news so much. This real third party is women.

It is called the National Woman's Party. It is an outgrowth of the suffrage movement several years ago. Today the party runs no candidates, and has only one objective - to get equal legal rights for women. It wants a constitutional amendment giving women these rights.

Party members have been presenting this proposal to every session of Congress since 1923. This year they feel that there is some hope for action.

Good Listening—
Today On WSUI

A CURIOUS EXPERIENCE is the title of the Mark Twain short story which will be finished at about 9:30 a.m. today. The program is The Bookshelf and selections from the Noidea volume of complete short stories by Twain will continue for the balance of the week and perhaps beyond.

"PHILOSOPHICAL ASPECTS OF EVOLUTION," another lecture in the Duquesne University Symposia on Evolution, will be heard at 8 p.m. The speaker is Dr. Andrew G. van Melsen of the Netherlands. The fourth and final lecture in the series will occur a week hence on the subject: Evolution and Religion.

ANOTHER SALZBURG Festival presentation will be heard at 6 p.m. One of three festival programs heard regularly from WSUI (others are from Vienna and Aldeburgh), the Salzburg programs are the result of cooperation engendered by the Broadcasting Foundation of America among 39 nations of the world.

A FORMER FACULTY MEMBER, Harvey Swados, has written prolifically, of late, for a variety of magazines. One of his most recent efforts was Work as a Public Issue which appeared in the Saturday Review for December 12, 1959. A work of non-fiction is this despite Mr. Swados' identification as a writer of fiction and an instructor in the SUI Writers' Workshop.

THE STORY OF A SOLDIER, the increasingly familiar work by Igor Stravinsky, will be presented in recorded form at about 1:55 p.m., having been preceded at 1 by a cantata by Buxtehude and Twelve Country Dances for Orchestra by Beethoven.

LATER THIS WEEK: Theatre-goers on Thursday, if they have not actually gone to the theatre, can hear a tale of horror well-known to radio listeners for many years: Sorry, Wrong Number. On Friday, the opera will be an American item called The Devil and Daniel Webster.

FM CONTINUES, every Monday through Friday at 7 p.m., to present a three-hour daily music schedule of the best and most recent acquisitions by the WSUI music library. Tonight, for example, there will be several significant selections in addition to Variations on a Theme by Haydn by Brahms.

Ex-Educator Finds Communism 'Works'

DES MOINES (AP) - Willard Johnson, former dean of men at Drake University, said he found "remarkable economic progress" in an auto trip last summer through five Iron Curtain countries.

Johnson, who addressed the regional committee of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, said also: "We'll have to face up to it - the simple fact is that Communism works."

Johnson now lives in Washington, D.C. He is president of the Committee for International Economic Growth, a private organization supported by about 400 American corporations.

Cyprus Independence Postponed Until March

LONDON (HTNS)—The Cyprus Conference ended abruptly Monday without achieving the agreements it had sought.

Negotiations will be continued on a committee basis but because the agreement is still a long way off, the date for the island's Declaration of Independence from Great Britain has been postponed a month, from Feb. 19 to March 19.

The island's elections, to provide it with a Republican government, have also been postponed for an indefinite length of time.

Archbishop Makarios, the president-elect of Cyprus and Dr. Fazil Kutchuk, vice president-elect, will meet with Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd Tuesday morning to map out the work for several groups of negotiators who plan to remain in London thrashing out the details that proved too much for the principals at the meeting.

The two officials will then stay in London for a few days before going home. The Greek foreign minister, Evangelos Averoff, plans to go home Thursday. The Turkish foreign minister, Fatin Rustu Zorlu, will leave Tuesday. Lloyd plans to leave Wednesday for a two-day stay in Strasbourg.

Thus ends a meeting that began Saturday morning with high hopes of a quick settlement of the outstanding questions.

The main lines of Cyprus independence had been laid down a year ago among the five parties to this conference. They set up a London Joint Committee to work out the details.

As the Feb. 19 independence date drew near it became obvious that nothing less than a ministerial conference could clear away the underbrush of detail and arrive at a solution in time for Parliamentary action to be completed on that date.

But the first and biggest snag immediately bogged them down. The British are entitled to two sovereign bases under the London agreements of last year. The British want them to be about 120 square miles in total area. The Cypriots want them to be smaller.

The Cypriots are also worried about the kind of administration that would be set up within the bases — would it be civil or military? Would it control Cypriots or not? Would it import its own supplies? How much water would it control? — and are not to be hurried into an agreement.

The working groups to be formed will be largely composed of the old London Joint Committee and the groups formed over the weekend. If they can reach agreements, there will be no need to reconvene the ministers. If they cannot, but can come up with a concise agenda for another meeting, the ministers have agreed to come back and have another stab at the problem.

The Greek and Turkish officials are understood to have indicated they are leaving all the major decisions to Archbishop Makarios and Kutchuk, respectively the leaders of the Greek and Turkish Cypriot communities.

A foreign office spokesman said, "there is an enormous amount of work to be done. There is also a lot of hard bargaining ahead on all subjects." To which a Turkish observer later added, "It's one of those odd conferences where everyone seems agreed on principle but we just can't get together on the details."

Adventure Film-Lectures To Be Presented Sunday

One of Denmark's most famous producers of documentary and adventure films will present two film-lectures Sunday in Macbride Auditorium.

"Accent on Adventure" and "Ulu-World's End" will be shown by Jorgen Bisch under sponsorship

Sulowan Named 2nd Delegate

John R. Hedges, associate director of the Bureau of Audio-Visual Instruction, has been named as an alternate delegate to the convention of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers to be held in Philadelphia May 22 to 25.

Hedges is director of public welfare of the Iowa Congress of Parents and Teachers and recently returned from the winter meeting of the Iowa Congress Board of Managers in Des Moines.

Ralph H. Ojemann, SUI professor of child welfare, also attended the Des Moines meeting. He is chairman of mental health in the Iowa Congress.

of the Iowa Mountaineers. The film-lectures are open to the public. Admission is by season pass-port or single-admission price of 80 cents for adults and 50 cents for students and children.

At 2:30 p.m. Bisch will show the film "Accent on Adventure," featuring an adventurous trip in South America. At 7:45 p.m. he will show "Ulu-World's End," showing life in Outer Mongolia and Borneo.

The climax of the film-lecture "Accent on Adventure" is Bisch's canoe trip on the Rio Xingu to the very heart of Mato Grosso, which few white explorers have penetrated and from which fewer have returned.

In "Ulu-World's End" Bisch journeys to two of the most remote sections of the globe.

In Outer Mongolia, he found what many people of the country itself had not seen, the life of the primitive nomads — little changed since the hordes of Genghis Khan overran Asia and half of Europe.

Bisch sails a junk, an ancient craft of the Orient, across the China Sea into Bornea — a land penetrated by few Westerners.

Ike Eligible As Vice-President

MIAMI BEACH (HTNS)—President Eisenhower is legally eligible to become a candidate for vice-president.

That is the official — if tongue-in-cheek — opinion of the Nation's No. 1 lawyer, Attorney General William P. Rogers.

Vice-President Nixon revealed it Monday in response to a reporter's question at a press conference.

Noting that Eisenhower had hinted jokingly earlier this week that newsmen might want to speculate on his eligibility for the vice-presidency, a reporter asked Nixon: "Can he run?"

"Well," replied the Vice-President, with a chuckle, "I can only say that the attorney general made a study of the law and informed the President and me that under the law he could run for vice-president."

There was a pause, then Nixon added, grinning: "Of course, if he wants to."

No opinion was offered, however, as to whether Eisenhower now will run for vice-president to succeed Nixon, who is running for president to succeed Eisenhower.

A Mason City attorney who won his Phi Beta Kappa key while he was a student at SUI in 1897 returned to the campus Sunday to greet SUI's newest Phi Beta Kappa initiates and to accept a long overdue certificate of membership in the national scholastic honorary society.

Hugh H. Shepard, senior partner in the law firm of Shepard and Shepard and president of the Shepard Abstract company, still possesses the alert interest in the affairs of SUI today that he had when he graduated with a record of superior scholastic achievement and membership in the second group of Phi Beta Kappa initiates named at SUI.

Speaking before 32 Phi Beta Kappa initiates and their friends during ceremonies Sunday afternoon, Shepard recalled that since he knew nothing of his scholastic standing during his first two years in college — students at that time were not given grades unless they fell below a certain required standard — he was "quite surprised" to find himself chosen a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

Life at SUI in the '90s was considerably different from that of today, the Mason City attorney said. "We were all poor as President Dwight Eisenhower has said, but we did not know it, and we shared our activities with each other without the privilege of enjoying all of the modern inventions that have been given us since that time."

WHY VERN GRAHAM PICKED A FAST GROWING ELECTRICAL COMPANY...

Vernon E. Graham of Fredericktown, Missouri, Class of 1959 at Missouri School of Mines & Metallurgy. Sales Engineer with Federal Pacific Electric Company.

"I figure I made the right move when I joined a fast-growing electrical company like FPE. You get in on the ground floor and you move up fast as the company expands ... you're not submerged and lost in the shuffle. Do a good job and people hear about it. There's no paternalism—your own ability and determination are what count."

WHAT SHOULD THE COMPANY IN YOUR FUTURE BE?
■ An industry leader, professional in every phase of business conduct... with each product ahead of its field.
■ Expansion at a rate even faster than the remarkable growth of the electrical industry with a complete line of electrical distribution and control equipment. ■ A warm organization with room for personal growth and development. Federal Pacific is all this... and more.

Since that opening game disaster at Minnesota, the Hawkeyes have been eliminating their opponents from the conference race — temporarily at least.

Northwestern, Michigan State and Purdue — all were contenders when they came to town and all left a little further off the pace. Saturday the Hawkeyes return to the road (where they won only two of seven games last season) for a chance to eliminate the Spartans from the race.

The boys in green might not be the same docile group that appeared in Iowa City though. Fordy Anderson's boys were disappointed in their showing here and several insisted after the 92-79 loss, "these Hawkeyes won't get us next time."

Maybe not, but you can bet that they'll be in there pitching. Now that Minnesota has replaced Illinois as the closest challenger for Iowa's No. 2 spot, Monday's game with the Gophers takes on added significance.

Not only will the Hawkeyes have a revenge motive for the opening loss at Minnesota, but they will again be in position to knock off one of their most persistent challengers.

Even the natural Iowa-Minnesota rivalry will take a back seat to these motives if the Gophers come to town hot on the heels of the Hawkeyes.

Current tabulations on Iowa sports teams' records show that Hawkeye teams have compiled a 21-10 mark in dual competition with other schools this season.

Top mark of course, has been compiled by the basketball team — new 12-3 on the season. Only the gymnastics squad remains unbeaten as the wrestlers dropped an 18-6 decision to Oklahoma Saturday.

Records for each of the sports: Football (5-4); Cross Country (3-1); Basketball (12-3); Gymnastics (2-0); Wrestling (2-1); Swimming (0-1) and Fencing (0-1).

In conference competition Hawkeye squads have scored 12 wins in 17 contests.

Oklahoma's wrestling squad, if not the best in the country, must at least be the tallest. Only one Sooner — 167-pounder Sid Terry — was shorter than his Iowa opponent Saturday.

Like Oklahoma football players, the Sooners were long, lean and tough. The height differential was most evident in the 177-pound match where Joe Chezum was matched against Oklahoma's Dave Campbell, who measures in at 6-4.

Campbell, had he grown up in Iowa, would have undoubtedly turned his talents to basketball. Basketball coaches in this area just don't let a big boy get away.

Mike Woods is denying those rumors that he's going to take a fling at professional boxing. He's not even interested in the Golden Gloves competition — says he'd rather play basketball.

If Ted Williams plays baseball this year and hits one home run he will be tied for fourth place with the late Lou Gehrig in overall home run production in the major leagues. Gehrig hit 493. Stan Musial is in sixth place with 412. Babe Ruth (714), Jimmy Foxx (534) and Mel Ott (511) hold the top three spots.

It's not too late to hop on the right one—before graduation time.

Return Game Televised Saturday— Michigan State Next for Hawkeye 5

Just twelve days after the first game, Iowa's basketball team now will be the opponent of Michigan State again, the contest to be played Saturday at East Lansing.

It's another TV game for the Hawkeyes, who already have been televised twice out of New York City and once from Iowa City last Saturday. Game time is 3:30 p.m. (CST) and the regional telecast goes to stations in eight states.

Iowa whipped the defending champion Spartans, 92-79, Jan. 11 on the Field House court, using several terrific scoring bursts to pile up margins which reached as high as 28 points.

In defeating Purdue, 63-54, last Saturday, Iowa encountered a zone defense for the first time but solved it by good shots from over the zone. The win enabled Iowa to hold second place in the standings, with 4-1.

Iowa notched its fourth straight Big Ten victory here Saturday afternoon by downing Purdue, 63-54. The Hawkeyes thus solidified their hold on second place in the conference with a 4-1 mark.

Coach Sharm Scheuerman's squad threatened to turn the game into a rout in the early stages as it jumped to a 17-6 advantage with 11:33 remaining in the first half. The Boiler-makers then switched from a man-to-man defense into a zone which they used the rest of the game.

The Hawkeyes, despite the lack of their usual accuracy from the

ANOTHER MASKED GOALIE

CLEVELAND (AP) — Gil Mayer, veteran goaltender for the Cleveland Barons, has brought the face mask into the American Hockey League. When he returned to the nets late in December after a facial injury late in October, Mayer put on the mask. He is the first in the league to wear a mask in a full game.

Jacques Plante of Montreal and Don Simmons of the Boston Bruins have been wearing masks in National Hockey League games this season.

face a better zone defense than that put up by Purdue and that next time such a defense is employed, the Hawkeyes should do even better.

"I was pleased with our defense because we worked it just as we hoped. Purdue was hard to handle because their men kept moving all the time and shot well from outside," Scheuerman declared.

Although Don Nelson is the leading scorer with an average of 17.6 points per game, Iowa's attack is by no means entirely dependent upon him. When opponents start concentrating on Nelson, the four other players can handle the situation by well-balanced scoring, the coach points out.

He expects to get more scoring from Pete Schebler and reserve forward Mike Woods, pointing out that they actually are better shots than their record shows. If they hit their stride, they can make close to 50 per cent of their jump shots but vs. Purdue, made only 4 of 18 attempts.

Nelson will get more work on free throws because he is fouled so much that he must take advantage of his free throw attempts. He has a 636 average now but in the Purdue game made only 5 of 12.

Vastly improved play by Forward Nolden Gentry is boosting the team. Gentry's sharp rebounding often provides key plays and the other players have confidence in his coming through with points in critical spots.

Iowa's team shot percentage for 15 games is .448, to opponents' .400 and on free throws Iowa has .681 to opponents' .731.

Little Mike Heitman, the peppery guard, has the best shot percentage among the starters, .520, followed by Nelson, .484; and Ron Zagar, .446. Gentry has .433.

Sooners Stop Wrestlers

Coach Dave McCuskey's wrestlers dropped their first dual meet of the season here Saturday night as Oklahoma stopped the Hawkeyes 18-6.

The Sooners copped the first three and last three matches as only Del Rossberg and Joe Mullins could pick up wins for Iowa.

The closest matches of the evening were the 130-lb. and heavyweight bouts, both won by the Sooners.

In the 130-lb. match, Oklahoma's Stan Abel, last year's NCAA champion, stopped John Kelly 2-1, the winning margin coming on a stalling penalty called on Kelly.

Dale Lewis, Pan-American Games heavyweight champion, stopped Iowa's Gordon Trapp 6-4.

O'Connell Resigns Drake Grid Post

DES MOINES (AP) — Tommy O'Connell Monday announced his resignation, effective Feb. 1, after one year as head football coach at Drake. He said he plans to return to pro football.

O'Connell set Big Ten passing records at Illinois and then was a quarterback with the Cleveland Browns. O'Connell, 29, said "the new situation opened up by the new league offers opportunities I feel I cannot pass up."

4 Hawkeye Squads Prepare For Weekend Road Contests

Travel plans for sites of sports events from Colorado to Columbus, O. have been made for four University of Iowa teams this week-end, with five events set for Saturday.

Cincy Retains No. 1 Spot; Hawkeyes Advance to 15th

NEW YORK (AP)—Despite its one-point loss Saturday, Cincinnati retained its top ranking in the weekly Associated Press poll of the nation's college basketball teams. Bradley, which handed the Bearcats their first defeat of the season, vaulted from fourth into second place.

California and West Virginia each dropped a notch to third and fourth, respectively. Utah State moved into the top 10 for the first time, displacing Southern California, which dropped from 10th to 14th with a one-point defeat by UCLA. Utah State jumped from 12th to ninth.

Iowa's Hawkeyes, second in the Big Ten and owners of a 12-3 season mark, jumped to the No. 15 spot this week after being unrated last week.

The only other major changes in the rankings, based on the votes of 191 sports writers and sportscasters, involved Villanova and Texas A&M, each beaten for the first time last week.

The Wildcats, defeated 89-81 by West Virginia, moved from ninth to eighth. The Aggies, dropped by end, with five events set for Saturday.

There are no home contests this weekend, but Minnesota's basketball team comes to the Iowa Fieldhouse Monday, Jan. 25 for a return game. The Gophers beat Iowa in the conference opener at Minneapolis. Iowa since has won its four league games to rank second in the standings.

The basketball team appears on television for the second successive Saturday in its game with Michigan State at East Lansing at 3:30 p.m. (CST). Hawkeyes whipped the Spartans, 92-79, Jan. 11 at home.

Ohio State and West Virginia are the opponents of the gymnastics team at Columbus, O. Saturday. Hawkeye acrobats have won their two dual meets to date, beating Minnesota and Southern Illinois.

Minnesota, the 1959 Big Ten champion, will challenge the Iowa wrestling team's perfect conference record of dual victories. Iowa has defeated Illinois and Indiana in the league but lost to potent Oklahoma last Saturday.

Del Rossberg, 147-pounder, is the only unbeaten Iowan but 2-1 records are held by Dave Gates, 123; John Kelly, 130; Joe Mullins, 157; and Gordon Trapp, heavyweight.

The fencing team, which lost its only meet to Detroit, will match weapons with Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs Saturday.

THE INDOOR RECORD HOLDER AT 15'9 1/2", DON IS EXPECTED TO BE ON HAND WHEN CALIFORNIA INVADES THE BIG-TIME INDOOR TRACK SEASON WITH A MEET IN LOS ANGELES ON JAN. 22.

Barber Wins Yorba Linda Golf Tournament on 278

YORBA LINDA, Calif. (AP)—Plucky Jerry Barber of Los Angeles shook off the pressure of an eagle-3 fired at him by Billy Maxwell on the final hole Monday and won the $20,000 Yorba Linda Open Golf Tournament.

Barber settled for a par 72 and a 72-hole score of 278 and $2,800 top money, but had to sink a 13-foot putt for a birdie to escape a tie with Maxwell in a thrill-packed windup before a crowd of thousands around the 18th green.

Maxwell, of Odessa, Tex., had a

69 for 279 and $1,900 second money, while Harry Weetman of England, a member of five British Ryder Cup teams, had a 72 for 281 and a tie with Tom Nieport of Bronxville, N.Y.

Nieport, virtually unnoticed in the climactic finish, had a 67, low score of the day.

Barber, 43, went into the final round with a lead of three strokes over Weetman and four over Maxwell.

At the end of the first nine holes Weetman had whittled the lead down by one stroke, and after 14 holes he and Barber were even and Maxwell still was in contention.

Westman finished in a three-some just ahead of Barber, Maxwell and Julius Boros.

Maxwell belted his approach shot 50 yards toward the green and a tremendous shout came up. It was an eagle three.

Barber, perennial second place finisher but seldom a winner, came to the green and was confronted with a long putt and the need of sinking it for a birdie.

He got it.

Ray Works Out In Store Window

BOSTON (AP)—Sugar Ray Robinson worked out in a downtown department store window Monday to aid the March of Dimes and, of course, the gate for his Friday night Boston Garden fight with local boy Paul Pender.

Police estimated at least 1,000 persons crowded Washington Street for a glimpse of the agile veteran performer.

A corps of volunteer workers collected donations for the anti-polio drive.

Robinson banged the big bag a bit, rolled a rhythm with the small bag, did some calisthenics, went two fast rounds with Clarence Hinant, a light heavyweight, then moved around a bit more to cool off.

Cyclones Lose 68-66 At K-State

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP)—Kansas State weathered a rash of personal fouls to outlast the Iowa State Cyclones 68-66 Monday night in a Big Eight basketball game.

The Wildcats had a comfortable 68-62 lead with 35 seconds left, only to have the scrambling Cyclones close the gap on free throws. John Ptacek hit a jump shot for Iowa State's last points with one second left.

Iowa State managed ties at 2-2 and 12-12 early in the first half, but never got ahead. At one time K-State held a 32-22 lead, then the Cyclones cut it to 34-30 at the half.

The victory enhanced K-State's chances to repeat as champion. It now has a 5-0 league record. Iowa State stands 3-2.

Mickey Heinz played a big part in the triumph by holding Iowa State's ace, Vinnie Brewer to 17 points, high for the game.

Kansas State's scoring was well balanced, with Wally Frank hitting 12, Vinnie Brewer to 17 points, high for the game.

McKenzie and Steve Douglas took up the slack in the second half, particularly after Frank and Heinz fouled out.

Kansas State hit 24 of 59 field shots for 40.7 per cent and Iowa State got 25 of 65 for 38.5 per cent.

Minn. 77, Illinois 70

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—Long, bony Ray Cronk whipped Minnesota into a second half fury Monday night and the Gophers surprised Illinois 77-70 to climb into third place in the Big Ten basketball race.

Cronk, 6-foot-7 sophomore, frail looking but strong and fast enough to steer the Gopher fast break, pumped in nine field goals in 14 attempts and added seven free throws for 25 points.

None Injured in Iowa Mishap—Lakers' Plane Forced Down

CARROLL, Iowa (AP)—The Minneapolis Lakers professional basketball team rode an airplane with an ailing electrical system to a dark landing in a cornfield during a heavy snowstorm near here early Monday.

The plane, without lights, radio or flight dials to guide the crew, sat down in about a foot of snow without injury to any of the 23 persons aboard or damage to the aircraft.

The wind-whipped snow in the air was so thick that Pilot Vernon Ullman of Brookings, S. D., and copilot Harold Gifford, Minneapolis, had to stick their heads out the windows to scan the cornfield.

They avoided a water tower and power lines in circling Carroll at low altitude. And Laker guard Frank Selvy said the plane "almost hit an automobile" in going in for the landing.

The Lakers, long accustomed to the plaudits of sports fans, left no doubt that as far as they are concerned, pilot Ullman was the biggest star of all.

"Wonderful," "just terrific," "magnificent," "beautiful." These were a few of the adjectives they used to describe Ullman's landing.

The Lakers headed back to Minneapolis by bus Monday. The trip over snow-packed roads was expected to take about six hours.

The team played the St. Louis Hawks in St. Louis Sunday, losing 135-119. The plane, owned by the Lakers but flown for them by the Gopher Aviation Co. of Rochester, Minn., was taking squad members, Lakers officials, and guests back to Minneapolis after the game.

The crew saw the lights of a town through the swirling snow, and although it was unidentifiable, sought a landing place because the plane was running low on fuel.

"With a couple of squeaks," Ullman came down in a foot of snow — a wonderful landing," Ryan said.

A Lakers official said either a runway will be bulldozed so that the DC-3 plane may be flown from the cornfield, or the aircraft will be dismantled and moved.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—"I thought we were dead. I could see houses and other buildings flashing past us. The players were praying and got ready for the crash."

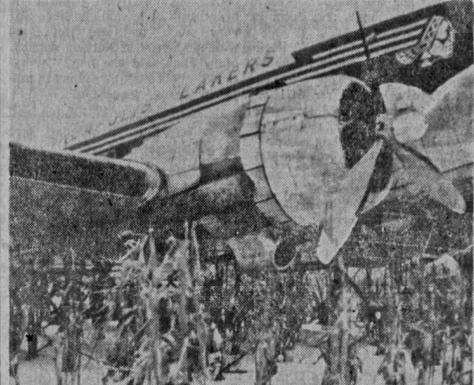

But the crash never came. Hot Rod Hundley, once the clown prince of college basketball, spoke soberly as he told Monday night how the Minneapolis Lakers' basketball team was spared a disaster in a forced landing on a snow-covered Iowa cornfield.

"We had a feeling we were in trouble when Frank Ryan (the Lakers' secretary) came back from the cabin and told us, 'boys, it's all clear over Minneapolis.'"

"But we weren't over Minneapolis. We were in a snowstorm and we couldn't see anything but mist and snow. Then we came down to nearly ground level. I could see houses and buildings going by. The plane jerked violently as the pilot maneuvered for a plan to land. Players had their hands together, praying."

The pilot, Vernon Ullman of Brookings, S. D., brought the Lakers' DC-3 in so skillfully despite the tremendous mental pressure that Laker star Elgin Baylor commented afterwards:

"I didn't even know when we came down. It was the best landing we made all year. We came down on the snow and it was the smoothest thing you ever felt."

This airplane, which was carrying the professional basketball Minneapolis Lakers from St. Louis to Minneapolis early Monday, rests safely in the stubble of a cornfield near Carroll, Iowa, today after being forced down because of electrical trouble. None of the 23 passengers was injured.

The Lakers arrived here shortly after 7 p.m. aboard a chartered bus after a seven-hour trip from Carroll, Iowa, where the plane came down.

Wives hugged and kissed their husbands. There were smiles, an occasional tear, but mostly signs of relief.

"I don't know how Ullman brought us in," said Laker veteran Larry Foust. "I know one thing, though. I never saw a more welcome sight in my life than that cornfield. Idlewild in New York never looked better than that."

Laker owner Bob Short, said the team would continue flying to its road games, probably using the same craft. "It's the only way we can make connections," he said, "and besides, there is nothing really wrong with the plane."

Gunsel Has Inside Track For NFL Post

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Attorney Marshall Leahy virtually eliminated himself from the race for National Football League commissioner Monday when he said flatly he would not move from his native San Francisco.

Leahy's decision appeared to have cleared the road for election this week of Acting Commissioner Austin H. Gunsel. Gunsel, 50, who took over last October upon death of Commissioner Bert Bell, was the only other solid candidate.

"I will not move either to the Midwest or to the East," Leahy said just before NFL owners opened a meeting to hear representatives of Dallas, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Miami, and St. Louis present membership applications.

"My family ties are much too strong to leave the West Coast," Leahy said. "I have five teenage daughters and I would not upset their lives for anything."

"I will listen to talk of my being commissioner if they will let me establish headquarters in San Francisco."

However, even enthusiastic backers of the 50-year-old lawyer had conditioned their support on his moving to the Midwest or East.

Old Gold Singers Perform for TV

Old Gold Days Leaders Term Event Success

The anticipation of the 1960 Old Gold Days is gone now, yet the excitement remains with those who were a part of making it a successful weekend.

Donald Rhoades, associate director of admissions and University chairman of Old Gold Days, said, "The Careers Conference held Saturday morning was larger and much better attended than was expected. Arrangements for larger rooms had to be made. The groups attending were exceptionally good. The conferences ran the full time with lots of questions from the students."

"There is no doubt as to the success of the Varsity Varieties show. They had to turn people away."

Fred Glassman, A3, Iowa City, Old Gold Days student chairman, said, "Old Gold Days 1960, with the new purpose of promoting higher education, was very successful from both the standpoint of the visiting high school students, and from the standpoint of the SUI students who acted as hosts."

Glassman said, "Speaking for the student committee, we appreciate the cooperation and participation of the SUI students."

Mary Long, A4, Cedar Rapids, registrations chairman, reported that the official attendance was 741. Miss Long said, "I don't feel the bad weather kept too many away. I've worked on the Old Gold Days student board for three years, and each year the high school student participation increases."

X-Rays Scheduled For Next Week

About 25 business and industrial units will take part in the Johnson County Tuberculosis case finding survey next week.

More than 1600 X-rays will be taken of employees during that week. All findings will be confidential between the employee and his family or industrial physician within the limits of the public health laws of Iowa.

The mobile unit will be in downtown Iowa City Jan. 29. The Tuberculosis Association has issued a special invitation to professional baby-sitters who may wish to take advantage of the free X-rays.

This service is provided by Christmas Seal campaign money. Plans are underway to complete a county school survey later in the year.

Iowa Jaycee President To Speak at IC Dinner

Dean Arbuckle of Jefferson, president of the Iowa State Junior Chamber of Commerce, will be guest speaker at the annual awards dinner of the Iowa City Junior Chamber tonight. The event will be held in conjunction with the observance of National JayCee Week.

Following a dinner at 6:30 p.m. at the Mayflower Inn, certificates of merit and appreciation will be presented to members and various agencies who have contributed toward the organization's projects during the past year.

Ted Rittenmeyer, Iowa City JayCee Week co-chairman, will be master of ceremonies. General chairman of the JayCee week project is William Maas.

Called "Big, Intriguing"—

SUI Impresses Visitors

By JUDY KLEMESRUD Assistant City Editor

"It's big!" ... "An intriguing atmosphere" ... "Can anyone join ROTC?" ... These were just a few of the comments about SUI heard from Iowa high school juniors and seniors during Old Gold Days over the weekend.

And the 741 students who visited the University Friday and Saturday were not lacking for things to do. Departmental and college displays in the Main Lounge of the Iowa Memorial Union captured most of them for a part of their stay, as did the many other activities planned for them — the Careers Conference, panel discussions, College Problems Forum, departmental and college tours, Leadership Training School — and for entertainment — "Union Showcase" and "Varsity Varieties."

The high school students all had varying opinions about the University, which many of them had never seen before. Herb Hoffman, 17, Chicago, described SUI as "nice." He plans to enroll as a freshman next fall and major in business administration, with hopes of becoming a certified public accountant. Herb said he would like to go out for basketball and tennis if he can find the time.

Kathy Andersen, 17, Jewell, said she was impressed by the size of the Iowa Memorial Union and the campus. "The exhibits were lovely," she added.

"It's big!" said Kay Satzizahn, 17, Clinton. Kay, who was visiting SUI for the first time, said she plans to enroll here next fall and

Stock Market Takes Sharp Sale Loss

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market took another sharp loss Monday but — an encouraging sign for the bulls — volume fell off to the lowest this year.

Turnover slipped to 3,020,000 shares from Friday's 3,400,000 and was the smallest since Dec. 23 when 2,830,000 shares changed hands.

A decline in volume when prices are weak is regarded in Wall Street as a sign that interest in the "sell" side of the market is lacking and is bullish if on the next upturn volume increases.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 5.82 to 653.80.

become an elementary teacher. She said she was very impressed with the furnishings and decor of the Union.

Robert Carney, 17, 519 W. Park Rd., Iowa City, won't graduate until 1961. But when he does, he wants to attend either SUI or Michigan with plans of becoming a scientist or doctor, which figures, because his father is a professor of dermatology in the SUI College of Medicine. Robert said he was very interested in the displays, especially that of the Physics and Astronomy Department.

Sharon Runge, 18, of De Witt, said she plans to major in English and foreign languages when she comes to SUI next fall. "The people are so informal," she noted.

Sue Nottingham, 17, Fort Madison, plans to major in languages or political science at SUI next year. "The size and the friendliness of SUI are the most impressive, and I especially like Burge Hall."

SUIwans got into the act, too. James Wilcockson, A3, Stigourney, cadet on duty at the Air Force ROTC booth, noted that most high school boys are ignorant of the fact that ROTC is required. Wilcockson said he found it amusing when one student asked him, "Can anyone join ROTC?" The Air Force booth proved to be a popular gathering place for those interested in pictures and models of planes and missiles.

At the College of Pharmacy booth, John Murphy, P4, Ida Grove, said the students all seemed very interested, especially in the science displays. "Old Gold Days is a good deal," he continued, "but needs more publicity, especially in the Iowa high schools."

The whole atmosphere is intriguing," said Lorie Carlson, 17, of Moline, Ill. Lorie plans on majoring in art or journalism at SUI next fall.

Avis Heine, 17, Waverly, and Mary Jane Sanders, 17, Waterloo, both concluded that "Burge is beautiful!" Avis said she likes SUI very much, and was impressed with the School of Nursing display. Mary Jane said she liked "everything" about SUI. She plans to major in journalism next fall.

Barbara Carlson, 17, Clinton, will be a freshman in nursing here next fall. "Old Gold Days are wonderful," she said, "mainly because the students are so friendly."

James Dort, 19, 830 Clark St., Iowa City, said he was very impressed with the college and departmental exhibits in the Union. He plans to take pre-medical courses next fall.

"Everything is very impressive," said Dargy Hamilton, 18, Cedar Falls. Dargy is coming to SUI next fall and plans to major in psychology.

Although most of the students interviewed said they definitely planned on coming to SUI next fall, Dennis Walton, 17, of Union-Whitton, was a little more reluctant. "I like the size," he said, "but the water tastes terrible!"

Delta Upsilon Wins Trophy At Varieties

"The Terrible Fit" presented by Delta Upsilon took the first place trophy in the large group division of the Varsity Varieties show Saturday. T.V.'s heroes-Paladin, the Rifleman, Maverick, Gunsmoke's famous Matt Dillon, were all victims of Shane's gun in the drama.

The second place winner in the large groups was "Duck Lake Ballet" presented by Alpha Delta Pi and Sigma Phi Epsilon. This skit dramatized the age old story of the ugly duckling, adding a new twist. The ugly duckling doesn't turn into a beautiful swan, but learns to be content with himself aided by his true love.

The top trophy winner in the small group division was "The Second Movement from Scheherazade", an interpretative dance presented by Sonny Davis, A4, Des Moines and Carole Reed, Cedar Rapids, a former SUI student. Placing second in the small group division were Dave Little, A2, Cedar Rapids, and Mike Lamberti, A1, Des Moines, with their comedy act, "Olympic Goofs."

Doug Stone, A2, Sioux City, was master of ceremonies for the show. Judges for the evening were Roberta Sheets, Iowa City; Eloise Burke, Cedar Rapids, and F. M. Broders, Coralville.

Mrs. Vierbuchen, who lives in Vienna, Indiana suburb, and her daughters, Ann and Terri are married. All Vierbuchen has children. She is a native Illinois and has worked for the FTC since 1937.

Case for Head Shrinkers?

By DAVID WISE
Herald Tribune News Service
WASHINGTON — What would be the effect on the human personality of having to sit alone in a dark room watching television commercials eight hours a day, five days a week for three months?

Psychologists, advertising men and motivational research experts could have a field day with a jolly grey-haired grandmother, a southern gentleman, and an Ivy League law student who have had to do just that. The three are TV monitors for the Federal Trade Commission, and among them, they have watched 7,500 commercials since Nov. 2, when their task began.

The three are probably the only persons in the world who have to watch TV commercials for a living. And their reactions are surprisingly varied.

The grandmother, Mrs. Olive Vierbuchen, loves television, and likes commercials almost as much as the programs on which they appear.

Robert Karl Peterson, a native of Alexandria, Va., and a 30 year veteran with the Commission, maintains commercial-watching is simply a job which has had no effect on him. (But he has no TV set at home.)

For Frank Ittel, 24 year old law student, monitoring commercials is roughly equivalent to the Chinese water torture.

FTC Chairman Earl W. Kintner ordered a crackdown on misleading TV commercials Nov. 2. Since then, the trio has been watching commercials in separate rooms at the agency's Washington headquarters. They log the product and time of each commercial and recommend suspicious ones for further investigation.

Mrs. Vierbuchen is a housewife who lives in Vienna, Va., a Washington suburb, with her three daughters. Another son and daughter are married. Altogether, Mrs. Vierbuchen has eight grandchildren. She is a native of southern Illinois and has worked for the FTC since 1937.

"I like TV very much," she said.

in an interview held between commercials on a daytime variety show which happened to be on at the time. "I think TV has a definite place, especially for shut-ins."

Mrs. Vierbuchen said she has a set at home, and "I have a number of favorite programs at night." She said the fact that she watches commercials all day long has not reduced her night-time viewing at all.

"I think my work is interesting and I like it very much," she said. She added that she is "very much interested" in commercials and finds that "some are irritating, some are interesting and some are humorous."

As if to prove the point, a cartoon character who appeared in a commercial on her set at that moment brought a broad smile from Mrs. Vierbuchen. "He's a funny little man, isn't he?" she asked.

Mrs. Vierbuchen said that "sometimes" she will go out and buy a product because a commercial has interested her in it. But the job, she said, has made her "more cautious," and "I sometimes avoid products I feel are misleading advertising."

Commercial watching she said, has had little physical effect on her except that "my ears get a little tired." But, she said, "It doesn't bother my eyes." Did she find commercials louder than the rest of the program? Definitely not.

Mrs. Vierbuchen said she did not get lonely watching commercials all day, partly because the soap operas held her interest. "Some actors appear on more than one soap opera," she said. "Sometimes it gets confusing, but it's like seeing an old friend."

Only one facet of her work strikes her as hard: "Fighting all that traffic twice a day — to come in and watch television."

Peterson, a graduate of Cornell Law School, has a vastly different outlook. "If it weren't my job, I wouldn't be watching," he said. Peterson's hobby is genealogy and he spends much of his spare time tracing his southern ancestors. (He recently turned up a granduncle who was a Confederate officer.) Peterson has never owned a TV set.

"There are so many things more interesting in this world than to sit and look at television," he said. "I wouldn't object if something really worthwhile was on, Shakespeare, or the President making a speech." Peterson said he was "amazed at people who leave the set on when you visit them. It's rude. Half the time they aren't listening. But you have to talk in competition with TV or radio."

However, Peterson said watching commercials for a living does not bother him. His attitude was one of detachment. It would be wrong, he said, to allow commercials to irritate him.

He said his job had not affected his buying habits "in the least." As to physical effects, "Sometimes my eyes are tired at night, but I usually snap back the next day." No, he said, commercials were not louder than the rest of the program.

For Ittel, a graduate of Princeton now studying law at Georgetown University, monitoring is a part time job in which there is little joy. "I find it rather depressing," he said, "being glued to a 23-inch screen all day and watching soap operas. I suppose there is some satisfaction in thinking you are doing some good."

"It's just miserable on my eyes and nerves to keep listening to the thing all day. The first thing I do when I come in in the morning," he added painfully, "is to turn on the set." (The three monitors take turns watching different channels each day.)

"By the time I get home at night my eyes ache," he said. "It gets under your skin. I'd always thought of a TV set as an instrument of leisure. Not any more. At home I find myself viewing less and enjoying it less."

"I'm over-exposed," Ittel went on.

He said he used to watch TV quite a bit for his amusement, but now only watches an occasional football game on his own time. He said he does not rush out to buy products advertised, but sometimes avoids products that have "irritating commercials." Some commercials are "more irritating than others," he said. He did not find commercials louder than other matter.

Ittel, when asked if he had developed the ability to turn commercials off mentally when watching TV at home, revealed what may be the most disastrous effect of all.

"No," he said. "I'm watching them more closely than ever. I can't help it."

Southerners Split on Proposal To Insure Vote for Negroes

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Texas member of the Civil Rights Commission argued Monday for federal registrars to insure Negro voting rights, but a North Carolina senator disputed him all the way.

Their views provided a controversial start on hearings by the Senate Rules Committee, considering legislation to create the federal registrars as recommended by the Rights Commission last year.

The commission member was Robert G. Storey, a Dallas lawyer.

"Present denials of the right to vote on grounds of racial discrimination are an evil which promptly can be cured by forthright and direct action" by Congress, he said.

He ran into objections from Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr. (D-N.C.) who said pending bills to set up federal voting registrars would violate rights given to states by the constitution and would deny rights given state and local officials under constitutional guarantees of the due process of law.

Ervin said every qualified citizen should be allowed to vote but, he continued, all the pending registrar bills would go so far as to be destructive.

Storey said he hadn't read any of the bills but declared the constitutional right of Congress to pass a law to set up federal voting registrars is clear. President Eisenhower said last Wednesday he does not know whether such a law would be constitutional.

Without committing himself to any one bill, Storey endorsed their general aim of authorizing the President to appoint temporary federal officials to register voters in areas where it is decided that state or local officials have denied them the right to register.

The bills aim at practices in various Southern areas where Negroes allegedly are deprived of their right to vote.

Ervin said he was afraid federally appointed registrars might be "carpetbag registrars" — a reference to Northern adventurers who come South during the Reconstruction era that followed the Civil War.

Camera Club To Meet Tonight, Choose Slides

The University Camera Club will meet in 307 Chemistry Building tonight at 7:30.

Contest slides for the February competition of the Photographers' Society of America (P.S.A.) inter-club color contest will be chosen at this meeting. All members wanting to enter slides for consideration should bring them tonight.

The black and white section of the meeting will be devoted to the discussion of artificial lighting problems and their solutions.

Fort Dodge Girl Dies, Burned While Playing

FORT DODGE (AP) — Theresa Lee Pickett, 6, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Pickett of Fort Dodge, died at a hospital here Sunday night a few hours after she was burned while playing at a neighbor's home.

Authorities said the girl was playing with a lighted candle, which ignited her clothing. She suffered burns over more than 80 per cent of her body.

As if to prove the point, a cartoon character who appeared in a commercial on her set at that moment brought a broad smile from Mrs. Vierbuchen. "He's a funny little man, isn't he?" she asked.

Snowcapped Mailboxes

The snow which fell in Iowa City in recent days gave a frosty appearance to the entire campus scene. These mailboxes standing on a corner in downtown Iowa City even appeared to be wearing tall, white, fur hats. Closer inspection reveals that the hats are really caps of the newly fallen snow.

Mali Confers With France On Freedom

PARIS (HTNS) — The Federation of Mali, comprising the West African states of Senegal and Sudan, Monday opened negotiations with France for its full independence within the French community.

Mali's move for independence in association with France is expected to be successful and to set the pattern for an evolution of the community into a looser association somewhat like the British Commonwealth.

At first President De Gaulle was cool toward the formation of Mali and its desire for independence. Recently he decided it would be useless and short-sighted to oppose the trend of African nationalism.

In a historic turning point of France's colonial policy he solemnly declared in Dakar, Mali's capital, Dec. 13 that Mali would accede to independence "with the support, the approval, and the assistance of France."

Empire-minded French rightists have bitterly accused De Gaulle of giving away historic possessions. A constitutional change will be needed to permit an independent state to stay in the community. Since Parliament is not scheduled to meet before late April, the formal proclamation of Malian independence will have to wait until about mid-year.

As community members, Senegal and Sudan have almost complete home rule. Their foreign, defense financial, and higher educational affairs are entrusted to the community, which means, in practice, that France has the major voice.

At the same time as their independence is recognized, the two states — as Mali — are willing to sign agreements with France giving it specific responsibilities in Mali's diplomatic, military, economic, and educational activities.

Russia Challenges U.S. To Cut Armed Forces

Herald Tribune News Service
By MARGUERITE HIGGINS

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union Monday formally called on the United States to follow the "example" set by Russia in its recent promise to cut its military manpower by one third over the next two years.

But after giving a hearing to Soviet Ambassador Mikhail A. Menshikov, Secretary of State Christian A. Herter politely but distinctly drew attention to the fact that it was the United States that had taken the lead in unilateral reduction of military personnel and that in fact this country was already at a substantially reduced level — 2,500,000 men under arms

10,700 Migrate Yearly from Iowa

An estimated 10,700 persons migrate from Iowa each year under pressure to find employment in other states, Clifford M. Baumback, research associate at SUI, reports in the December issue of the Iowa Business Digest.

Copies of the issue, which discusses changes in the Iowa economy, are available free for use in Iowa classrooms upon request to the SUI Bureau of Business and Economic Research.

to which the Russians only now were proposing to descend.

The exchange took place at the Department of State late Monday afternoon when Ambassador Menshikov formally presented a copy of the appeal passed by the Supreme Soviet (Russia's parliament) which last week called on all the nations of the world to follow Russia's example.

Last week, the State Department noted that the promised 1,200,000 cut in manpower was unaccompanied by any suggestions as to how the outside world might verify it. At the same time, the United States called on Russia to agree to a system of inspection and control that would make reciprocal disarmament meaningful and capable of verification.

Secretary Herter repeated this appeal Monday, it is reliably reported, and also made the point that by Mr. Khrushchev's own account the Soviet move is more a reorganization than a reduction of fighting power. Ambassador Menshikov met reporters after his 20 minute session with Mr. Herter and presented them with a copy of the arms cut resolution adopted by the Supreme Soviet and described it as "one of supreme importance to all nations and to the world."

Wife of ISU Student Named Iowa's 1960 Polio Mother

Assistant City Editor

A 22-year-old woman who gave birth to a son last Oct. 4 and was diagnosed as having paralytic polio the same day she delivered her child was selected as Iowa's Polio Mother of the Year Monday.

Mrs. Richard Marshall, wife of an Iowa State University veterinary medicine junior, described her selection as "quite an honor."

Mrs. Marshall was flown to Iowa City from Des Moines in a National Guard airplane last Oct. 5, a day after she had given birth to her son, Richard Allen. Since then she has been confined to the Rehabilitation Center of the SUI Children's Hospital with the services of an iron lung.

The Marshalls also have a daughter, Lee Ann, 2, who is with Mrs. Marshall's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Ferrell of Washington. Their 3½-month-old son is with Mr. Marshall's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Marshall, of Lewis.

The Marshalls have been married for four years. Mrs. Marshall said that she sees her husband and children approximately once a week.

Making the presentation were Dean Frein, 1031 Ginter St., Johnson County polio chairman, and Roger Hanson, Cedar Rapids, Eastern Iowa polio representative.

Hanson said that Mrs. Marshall is one of the few people contracting polio after having Salk polio vaccine. She had the three shots.

The main purpose of the selection of the Iowa Polio Mother, Hanson said, is to remind people that the polio virus is still very much alive, even though the Salk vaccine has proved to be 80 to 90 per cent effective.

"Nevertheless there was an 85 per cent increase in the number of paralytic polio cases last year," Hanson said. Not enough people have had the Salk vaccine to make it really effective, he added.

Hospital officials made no predictions on how long Mrs. Marshall will have to remain in the hospital. A nurse on duty said Mrs. Marshall's condition has shown a "very definite improvement" since Oct. 5.

School Bus Crashes into Train, 4 Die

FACKLER, Ala. (AP) — A freight train knifed through a rural school bus Monday, spilling screaming children alongside the track and killing four of them. Eight others and the bus driver were seriously injured.

"The brakes gave out," said the driver, Charlie Beavers, 50, at a hospital. "I never saw the train but it wouldn't have made any difference if I had."

The train, traveling about 55 m.p.h. on a straight track in clear weather, hit the bus at the mid-section, cut it in two, and dragged the rear part of the wreckage three-quarters of a mile beyond the dirt road crossing.

All of the 12 children and the driver were in the smashed front half of the bus. Some of the children who tumbled out landed in a water-filled ditch.

"I must have been knocked unconscious but I remember hearing the kids holler and I remember getting out of the bus. I started pulling them out of the water," Beavers said.

Beavers, who has been making this school bus run for farm children the past three years, said the brakes on the 1951 bus failed him several times recently.

E. G. Thomas Sr., superintendent of Jack County schools, said the bus was last checked about 10 days ago and "was in good condition when it left the shop."

Two of the dead — Leonard Beavers, 12, and his brother, Foster Beavers, 16 — were the driver's nephews. Another nephew and a niece — Gordon Beavers, 14, and Sheila Beavers, 7 — were among the injured.

Others killed were Frances Corbett, 10, and her sister, Mary Grace Corbett, 8.

Free Career Booklet Available for SUIowans

Male SUI seniors and graduate students may sign for a free booklet, "Career for the College Man," in the lobby of the SUI Library, the first floor of University Hall and in the Engineering Building from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. today and Wednesday.

Members of the SUI chapter of Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity for scout trained men, is sponsoring the event as a campus service project.

The booklet is published by Careers, Incorporated, and is advertised as "the annual guide to business opportunities."

Hancher—

Poland, Albania and the other countries of the Soviet bloc.

President Hancher also appreciated a "very different tempo in the U.N. from that in the city just beyond its limits on the other side of the street."

"The Latin-Americans, the south Europeans and the Asians, particularly the first and last of these groups, bring an unbridled ease and sense of timelessness to the proceedings that is very un-American."

"Many of those countries are in a hurry to industrialize, and almost inevitably this will change the tempo of their lives. But this can hardly happen in less than 10 years, and it may take much, much longer."

"In the meantime, the very qualities of push and drive and decisiveness that make Americans good businessmen and industrialists, are a handicap at the U.N. and in diplomacy in Latin America, Asia and to a degree in Africa."

"That is why it is important that some of our men be content to spend hours in the Delegates Lounge where much of the business of the U.N. is decided and agreed) to visiting with delegates who love to talk and express their views on everything from politics to art and literature." President Hancher wrote.

In Wednesday's lecture, sponsored by the Committee of University Lectures and the Iowa City Chapter of the American Association for the United Nations, President Hancher will detail many more of his experiences and observations as a member of the U.S. delegation to the U.N.

Excerpts from President Hancher's letters of his New York Diary were used with the permission of Phil E. Connel, Assistant to the President.
