Johnson's Plane Delayed; Will Confer With Kennedy

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. (AP) — Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson was delayed by weather Friday on a flight to Cape Cod to confer on campaign strategy with Sen. John F. Kennedy, the Democratic presidential nominee. Johnson, the vice-presidential candidate, originally was slated to land at Hyannis Airport at 6:35 p.m. But shortly before that time, police here said his chartered plane had stopped at Cleveland and would fly into Otis Air Force base near Falmouth, Mass., about 20 miles from here, around 7:45 p.m. CDT.

The Air Force base has instrument landing facilities but none is available at Hyannis, where there was an overcast.

The meeting between Kennedy and Johnson was their first since they were nominated at Los Angeles two weeks ago.

Johnson had stopped off at Kansas City en route from Texas to visit former President Harry S. Truman.

Prior to his arrival, Johnson was given accolades by both Kennedy and Frank D. Reeves, a Negro, who is Democratic national committee chairman from Washington, D. C.

To a news conference question whether Johnson would hurt the Democratic ticket in Negro areas of the North, Reeves said: "Johnson won't hurt the ticket; he will strengthen it."

He said it was under Johnson's leadership that Congress had adopted two civil rights bills for the first time in 80 years.

Kennedy said Nixon had been "showering Johnson with all kinds of compliments" until Johnson became the Democratic vice-presidential nominee.

He said Nixon had praised Johnson for such things as helping to lead a united front against Communism and for supporting Eisenhower Administration legislative measures.

"Now suddenly, Johnson is not as constructive to the Republicans as he was two weeks ago," Kennedy said.

Drop Suit Against Hwy. Commission

AMES (AP) — The Iowa Highway Commission said Friday that District Judge Ed J. Kelley of Ames has granted a commission motion to dismiss a suit brought by Dewey E. Goode of Bloomfield over farm-to-market road funds.

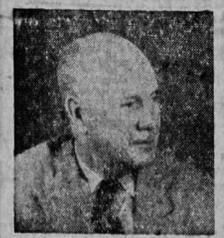

Goode, a former legislator, brought suit last October in an effort to get Davis county additional funds. He asked that a commission farm-to-market equalization ruling denying funds to the county be ruled illegal.

Commission officials said that Davis county had declared its farm-to-market road system completed in 1956, but later added another 102 miles to the system. The commission, however, refused the county funds since it had declared its system completed.

Goode contended the commission owed the county $93,804 for 1957 and $67,642 for 1958.

Sheehan Talks Here Tuesday

Vincent Sheehan, author and newspaper correspondent, will present the final lecture in the SU's summer lecture series Tuesday at 8 p.m., Central Daylight Time, in Macbride Auditorium. Reflecting his already expressed conviction that the destiny of the world lies in the East, Sheehan will discuss "The Struggle for Supremacy in Asia."

His latest book, "Nehru: The Years in Power," is an outgrowth of his extensive travels in India and his friendship with Nehru. In 1948 Sheehan was standing some 10 feet away from Gandhi when an assassin's bullet killed the Indian leader.

During the past five years Sheehan made extensive trips to Italy which resulted in his writing two books revealing his interest in the arts. In "First and Last Love" he wrote of his appreciation of music. "Orpheus at Eighty" is a biography of the life of Giuseppe Verdi.

Sheehan was an eyewitness to many historic events during World Wars I and II. In 1949 he covered the Paris meetings of the Foreign Ministers Council.

Atlas Fails Test To Launch Capsule

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — America's astronauts suffered a jolting setback in the man-in-space race with the Soviet Union Friday when a giant Atlas missile exploded 65 seconds after blastoff during a crucial heat reentry test of the Project Mercury capsule.

The seven astronauts, watching from an underground bunker near the launching pad, saw the 90-foot Atlas take off in a driving rainstorm and head down the Atlantic missile range in what seemed like a successful lift-off.

Little more than a minute later, radio contact with the huge rocket was lost. Almost simultaneously, residents a few miles south of the cape heard a great roar in the skies as the missile disintegrated. The explosion, which occurred at an altitude of about 25 miles, was obscured from the ground by low-hanging clouds.

Navy search ships immediately began scouring the fog-cloaked waters over an area 4 to 12 miles south of the launching pad in the hope of recovering remnants of the multimillion-dollar Atlas booster and possibly the capsule.

Officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said they believed the capsule itself was still intact when it plunged into the sea, although the Atlas booster was blown to bits. About 3 1/2 minutes of signals were received back from the space cabin, indicating it floated for a brief period before sinking.

The cause of the mishap, which may delay the Mercury program for weeks, was unknown hours after the launching.

The shot, using the first production-line Mercury capsule, was designed to subject the man-in-space vehicle to severe heating conditions, more intense than would occur in an actual return from orbiting the earth.

If the test had been successful, and the one-ton capsule had been recovered unscathed after passing through the heat barrier, it would have moved the astronaut's D-day considerably ahead. As it is, the test will have to be repeated and further extensive shots are scheduled before one of the astronauts — yet to be chosen — rides a rocket down the Atlantic range.

Council in Special Meeting

City Approves Sewage Plan

A preliminary step that could lead to the eventual solving of Iowa City's sewer problems was taken by the City Council at a special meeting Friday afternoon.

The council approved plans and specifications for the installation of a sanitary sewer along a portion of Jefferson Street. The date set for the public hearing and the receiving of bids for that project was August 16 at 7:30 p.m. CDT.

City Manager Peter Roan explained that if this section of sanitary sewer were installed it would not immediately relieve the overload problem in that area, but would make possible extensions later on which would greatly help the situation.

Roan said that since this section of Jefferson Street would soon be torn up for paving, as part of the 1960 paving program, it would be an opportune time to install the sewer.

The sewer would cost about $13,303, he said, and he recommended that it be financed through sewer rental fees. He recommended that the extensions and the whole sewer improvement project, which would cost between $38,000 and $40,000, be financed by assessment in the area served.

In his report on the Iowa City sewer problem made to the council on June 26, after residents of east Iowa City complained about sewers backing up in their homes, Roan said that the most serious long-range sewer problem was the inadequacy of the sewer line along Jefferson Street. At that time he recommended that any first major efforts toward a solution of the problem be made here.

In other scheduled action the council approved an amendment to the resolution ordering the 1960 paving program. The change was a minor one made so the resolution would comply with a certain aspect of state law.

Also in connection with the paving program, the council passed into law an ordinance establishing centerline grade on the streets included in the program.

After the scheduled business was over, Mayor Ray Thornberry mentioned that he received four phone calls requesting that the safety fence for the Highway 6 Bypass be installed as originally planned.

At the last regular meeting on July 21, the council heard a petition asking that the fences not be erected. The residents phoning Thornberry requested that the council take no action until they, (other residents of the area), can get a petition in favor of the fences.

Thornberry assured them the council was still considering the fences, which would be erected to prevent small children from running out on the busy highway.

Kids Hidden by Mother 11 Years See Outside World for First Time

TECUMSEH, Ont. (AP) — Three children kept hidden by their mother for 11 years got their first good look at the outside world Friday and liked what they saw.

Their sole complaint at a hospital where they were taken was that they would miss their mother. Their strange story came to light Thursday when Gordon Dickerson, 15, walked to a neighbor's home while his mother, Shirley Leach, 38, was at a dentist's office. The boy told the neighbor, Forest Richards, that he and two sisters were being kept inside their house and allowed out only briefly some nights because their mother wanted to keep landlords and friends from learning she had such a large family.

Richards telephoned police, who took the children to a hospital. Doctors said Gordon and his sisters, Connie, 16, and Glenda, 13, appeared normal except for their size. The boy stands only 3 feet 11, and the girls also appear undersize for their ages.

Police who first saw the children reported they suspected they were undersized because of malnutrition, but doctors who examined the three said there was no evidence of malnutrition and all are healthy.

Three other children, Donna, 22, Carrol, 20, and Donny Veronica, 12, all led normal lives with outside contacts. They never disclosed the family secret. All the children are Mrs. Leach's by a previous marriage.

The three children Mrs. Leach kept hidden were allowed the run of their two-story frame house that they shared with 15 cats. They slept in a single bed on a top-floor landing. An older sister, now married and away from home, taught them arithmetic, reading and spelling.

Constable Gus Newby said the children broke out in smiles when they saw him.

"They were just glad to see someone different," he said. "They all wanted to talk. The only thing that was lacking was good ventilation. It was pretty stuffy up there. It was 90 degrees outside. The rooms were clean, just mess the way children would mess them."

Newby said the children were clean and well-dressed. They had plenty of clothes, toys, a TV set, and books. There was plenty of food in the house, he said.

Police said Mrs. Leach and her husband, Donald, an interior decorator and painter, appeared relieved the case was discovered. The mother said she had been bothered about the situation for some time but did not know what to do about it.

Child welfare officials said there has been no decision on what action will be taken.

Plane Crash Kills IC Man

Pat Furst, 35, Was Flying Rented Craft

Plunges into Field 2 Miles from Here Doing Maneuvers

Charles (Pat) Furst, 35, an Iowa City insurance agent, was killed Friday afternoon when his rented airplane crashed in a bean field about two miles southeast of here.

No passengers were with Furst on his fatal flight.

The plane crashed on the Robert Berry farm at approximately 3:30 p.m. County Coroner George Callahan arrived at the scene at 4:30 and declared Furst dead.

Farmers working in an adjacent field said they saw the 1956 Champion plane making sharp banking maneuvers at a low altitude, then suddenly plunge straight down into the field. A cloud of dust rose as the light craft crumpled like a piece of paper.

The demolished plane trapped Furst inside. A tractor was used to pull the wreckage apart and free the body.

An official of the Iowa City Flying Service, owner of the plane, said the engine was apparently still working when the plane crashed, but cause of the crash was unknown. Patrolmen were ready with a fire extinguisher, but the wreckage did not catch fire.

The plane was left in the field until Civil Aeronautics Association officials could investigate the crash.

Furst's body was taken to Beckman Funeral Home, where funeral arrangements are pending the arrival of his mother from Largo, Florida.

Furst was district agent for the Central Life Assurance Society. He lived at Forest View Trailer Court and was unmarried.

Nixon Against Tax Boosts; Won't Take Religion Issue

CHICAGO (AP) — Richard M. Nixon threw into his presidential campaign Friday a declaration of a firm tax position, hedged by a formal pronouncement that national security "must and will come first."

Nixon tossed in a strictly unqualified statement on religion as an issue in a campaign in which he is prepared to play the underdog role to the hilt.

"I shall never talk about it," he said, "and I shall start right now."

At his first news conference in the role of the Republican presidential nominee, Nixon said religion will be brought into the campaign only to the extent the candidate brings it in. Thus he was saying in effect that if this issue is injected, it will be done by his Democratic rival, Sen. John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts.

Nixon is a Quaker. Kennedy is a Roman Catholic.

Standing before seven massed American flags in a hotel ballroom, before several hundred newsmen, Nixon was asked what sacrifices might be required of American people, as he suggested in his speech accepting the nomination.

"I do not see at this time," Nixon replied, "any programs that would make it necessary to raise taxes."

But he went on to say that if the Soviet Union raises increased threats or world circumstances change substantially, the next President might have to ask for higher spending and higher taxes. Again he repeated that he sees no need for such increases at the moment.

"But I want to make it clear," he said, "that national security considerations must and will come first in the next Administration if I have anything to do with it."

The vice president is saying over and over that he is going to put on the hardest campaign the country ever has seen, carrying it into every state.

This is the schedule immediately ahead:

An all-day conference here today with party leaders of farm states. Nixon said: "In the farm belt we have suffered great erosion."

The GOP, he said, has "a fighting chance" to recapture control of the House—not the Senate—but we will have to make gains in farm states. Today's session will be largely for listening purposes. There will be a major farm speech later on.

Sunday he will be in Washington. Monday there will be an all-day campaign planning session with his vice presidential running mate, Henry Cabot Lodge, and members of their staffs. This will deal largely with schedules. As Ambassador to the United Nations, Lodge next month will go through with presenting the United States position on disarmament at the U. N. and "engage in no public political activities" during that period.

Lodge was seated beside Nixon during the news conference.

Tuesday, Nixon and his wife, Pat, will fly to Reno, Nev., for a home-state welcome for her, then to California for a similar welcome for him at Whittier.

Wednesday, they will be off to Hawaii, the newest state, for two days of campaigning. This will jump the gun on Kennedy, who has announced that his campaign will open in Hawaii around Sept. 1. Friday there is a flight to Seattle for political meetings still in the planning stage.

Friday or Saturday, he returns to Washington in advance of the short session of Congress starting Aug. 8.

Weekend political expeditions to various parts of the country while Congress is holding the August session are planned.

Voters may assume, Nixon said, that sometime this fall they will be able to watch a face-to-face television debate between himself and Kennedy. He said it ought to be strictly ad lib, with no speech texts or even notes. Kennedy al-

Red Korean Ship Sunk

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The South Korean navy reported one of its destroyer escorts shelled and sank a Communist North Korean patrol ship Saturday in a running gun battle.

The announcement said the action occurred in South Korean waters.

Three North Korean survivors were picked up off the east coast of Korea four miles from Kojin and 12 miles south of the truce zone dividing North and South Korea, the navy announcement said.

Four South Korean navy men were reported wounded.

The action lasted five minutes and was carried out at 5,000-yard range, the navy added.

It was the first reported sinking of a Communist Korean navy craft by South Korea since the 1953 armistice ending the Korean War.

The Last Look At GOP Parley

By RON WEBER

(Editor's Note: Daily Iowan News Editor Ron Weber has returned to Iowa City after covering the Republican National Convention in Chicago.)

For what it's worth, many of the newsmen covering the Republican gathering in Chicago agreed with Vice President Nixon that the November election will be one of the closest in our history. But they felt that the balance of power between Nixon and Senator Kennedy was a very delicate one, susceptible to being tipped sharply either way in the course of coming events.

Few newsmen thought Nixon had an edge at this time. Some thought Kennedy did.

Many newsmen also agreed that the Grand Old Party had nearly equalled the Democrats in nominating the best (vote-getting) Presidential team available. While the Kennedy-Johnson ticket was clearly the top attraction the Democrats could put in the field, they felt that the Nixon-Lodge ticket was only a slight cut below an ideal Nixon-Rockefeller arrangement.

Newsmen were expressing private appreciation Thursday night for the convention antics of Gov. Rockefeller and Sen. Goldwater. Rockefeller's dissatisfaction with some of the platform proposals and Goldwater's frank espousal of the conservative cause gave the convention a vitality it would have otherwise sorely lacked.

Goldwater, incidentally, probably would have captured any press vote for the convention's most intriguing personality. The candor with which he expressed his views, what the Los Angeles Times termed his "intellectual honesty," and his eloquent plea Wednesday night for conservative support of Nixon combined to make a favorable impression on many newsmen.

Goldwater's role at the convention also served as a reminder that the conservatism is far from dead within Republican ranks. In the TV-less privacy of Hilton bistros and restaurants, many delegates expressed deep suspicion of Nixon's partial capitulation to the liberal (and Democratic) philosophy of Gov. Rockefeller. Should Nixon lose decisively in November, they were predicting that Goldwater and his "constitutional conservatism" — which the Chicago Tribune calls the "traditional party doctrine" — would be in the driver's seat come 1964.

"Liberal" and "conservative" were surely two of the most overworked words at the convention. However academically unsound, the working distinction between them seemed something like this: A conservative is one who believes in fiscal responsibility. A liberal is one (presumably a wealthy one — Kennedy, Johnson, Bowles, Stevenson, etc.) who believes in condescension to the poor at the expense of the middle class.

The speaker's platform at the International Amphitheatre did not have a monopoly on VIP's. The press row also had its leading lights. For example, James Reston of the New York Times was the target of innumerable introductions from aspiring (presumably) Timesmen now laboring in the hinterlands.

Chicago gossip columnists reported that many Windy City entrepreneurs felt the Republicans carried their tight money policy too far. The GOP, it seems, spent less on food, beverages and entertainment than expected. Far less, in fact. A disgruntled Hilton Hotel official noted that while any normal business convention will spend up to $14,000 a night on room services alone, the Republicans were averaging only a miserly $1,200.

Winnipeg Downs Vancouver, 13-7

CEGAR RAPIDS (W) — Winnipeg, professional football champions of Canada, had to halt Vancouver in the final five minutes here Friday night to win an exhibition game 13-7.

A crowd of 12,583 watched the first Canadian game ever played in this part of the Midwest. The fact that there were four former members of the SUI Big Ten championship teams on each club, served as an attraction.

Behind 13-0 when the fourth quarter started Vancouver rallied to score its only touchdown on a 2-yard end run by Willie Fleming.

former Iowa star, with 13 minutes left. Gar Warren, Winnipeg linebacker, knocked down Jim Walden's pass to halt the next Vancouver threat on the 10.

Quarterback Kenny Ploen and halfback Ray Jauch, also former Iowa standouts, were instrumental in Winnipeg's two touchdowns in the first six and a half minutes. After Leo Lewis scampered 63 yards to the 4 yard line Jauch squirmed left end for the opening score.

A Ploen to Jauch pass later covered 19 yards and gave Winnipeg its scoring chance from the 15. Charlie Shepard plowed to the nine and later burrowed through the middle for the final yard.

Vic Kristopatis failed after both touchdowns but the Blue Bombers picked up a final point on a rouge in the third quarter. Shepard's punt into the end zone bounced out of bounds for an automatic point under Canadian rules.

Vancouver quarterback Randy Duncan, another Iowa star, played the first half on offense despite a painful left shoulder. He completed only one of 10 passes for 13 yards.

Ploen hit three of 10 aerials for 62 yards. Lewis was the leading ground gainer with 80 yards in three rushes.

CINCINNATI (W) — The great youth movement in the National League this season brightens baseball's future, President Warren C. Giles said.

"I can't recall a time when we had as many good young players performing in the league as we now have," Giles said. "It is generally conceded that clubs which can come up with two good youngsters a year, are on solid footing."

"Here we are in the heat of a tough pennant race, going into August, with 47 first-year players on our rosters. Most of them are regulars, playing key roles."

NEW YORK (W) — Ray Herbert handcuffed New York with six hits Friday night and became the first Kansas City pitcher to win at Yankee Stadium in more than a year as the Athletics defeated the Yankees 5-2.

The Athletics managed only five hits against four Yankee pitchers but they included home runs by catcher Danny Kravitz and first baseman Marv Throneberry.

Kravitz' blow came with two on in the fourth inning to climax a four-run outburst that shackled Eli Grba with his first defeat of the season. Throneberry's drive was hit off Duke Maas in the eighth.

Van Allen Describes U.S. Space Projects for '60-61

"We already have a bulging file of plans and preliminary designs for experiments in the vicinity of Venus and Mars during 1962-63 and for a station planted on the surface of the moon in 1963," James Van Allen, head of the Physics Department, said Friday night in describing U. S. space projects in which SUI is taking part.

ready has agreed to debate Nixon on TV.

Thursday night the GOP convention nominated Lodge, heard and cheered the acceptance speeches of the Nixon-Lodge team, then adjourned.

Delegates streamed out of town Friday. The Republican National Committee stayed behind for mopping-up operations.

It is a committee with some new faces that will do party house-keeping for the next four years. But the national chairman is the same—Sen. Thurston B. Morton of Kentucky. Nixon persuaded him to stay on, at least through the campaign.

Six Music Recitals Scheduled Next Week

Six recitals have been scheduled for the coming week by the SUI Department of Music.

Gerrit Laning, G. Iowa City, will present a baritone recital Sunday at 2 p.m. in North Music Hall.

He will be accompanied by Terence Shook, G. Greene, piano. Franz Schubert's works will comprise the program, which is being presented by Laning in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the Master of Arts degree.

Wallace Ruskin, G. Iowa City, will present a cello recital Monday at 3:30 p.m. in Macbride Auditorium.

Businessmen Seminar Will Open Sunday

An Estate Planning and Business Insurance Seminar sponsored by the SUI Center for Continuation Study in cooperation with the Iowa General Agents and Managers Association will be held at SUI from Sunday afternoon through Tuesday morning.

Seminar registrants will include some 45 life insurance underwriters, mainly from Iowa. Seminar "teachers" will be Samuel Fahr, professor in the SUI College of Law; Richard Carey, trust officer in the Iowa-Des Moines National Bank; and Leo Burger, accountant with McGladry, Hansen & Dunn, Cedar Rapids.

According to Fahr, the method of handling the seminar will be similar to that used frequently in the College of Law. A typical case will be studied in advance by the students. Then the instructors will go over the case with the students, and from there on leave it to the students to analyze facts, spot problems and suggest solutions.

The idea is to get the seminar students to work out the approaches and answers to the issues involved with only slight guidance from the instructors, Fahr explained. The seminar faculty members think this approach to a concrete problem is better than lectures as a way of teaching.

The case to be used will involve a fictitious partnership in which the older man wants to retire and the younger one wants to buy the company but has no capital. It will require finding a suitable "installment plan" backed by adequate insurance should one of the men die. Solving the case will involve the seminar participants in corporation law, partnership law, tax law, insurance law and varied business techniques.

Two talks will be given Tuesday in addition to discussion of the case: Richard G. Bowers of the New York Life Insurance Company, Keokuk and Davenport, will talk on "Corporate Dollars and Life Insurance," and Jack Rawles, Fort Wayne, Ind., Agency vice-president of the Lincoln National Life Insurance Company, will talk on "Business Permanency — How To Create It."

construction at SUI, continued Van Allen.

The head of the SUI Department of Physics and Astronomy spoke at the opening of the first annual SUI Alumni Institute.

Within a few weeks SUI will have in full operation an automatic system of satellite data reduction which will enable us to catch up with the data output sent to SUI for interpretation from nine observing stations around the world. Some twenty students are now at work every day at SUI reading and plotting the data.

Van Allen predicted that within a year there will likely be held under the sponsorship of the United Nations a major international conference on the peaceful uses of outer space. "And one may look forward to international treaties in this field — in the pattern of the one on Antarctica which was hammered out during President Hancher's tenure in the United Nations last fall," the SUI professor said.

It is not too much to hope that outer space may become a region of international cooperation, he said. Van Allen attended a conference on cosmic radiation in Moscow two years ago. "This conference might be likened to a joint

This program is being presented by Taggart in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the Doctor of Philosophy degree in Music Literature and Performance.

Rocky Unsure About Future Political Plans

CHICAGO — His own political future is uncertain, Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller said Friday, but he would not rule out the possibility he might run for re-election as governor of New York.

Neither would he foreclose the possibility he might accept a Cabinet post if Vice President Richard M. Nixon is elected President in November.

Asked about the Cabinet job, Rockefeller said only that he did not believe a presidential candidate should run "encumbered by political deals."

Rockefeller said his most immediate concern is carrying New York for the Republican party in the November elections.

The governor, looking tired, commented at a convention-review news conference before heading back to New York.

When asked about his own political plans, Rockefeller said "I don't like to cross bridges before I come to them." His present term expires in December 1962.

The governor looked back today on his role in the GOP convention, which ended Thursday night.

Rockefeller had a strong voice in shaping the party platform. He provided suspense by withholding an endorsement of Nixon until the day before the balloting.

These were among his comments Friday:

Nixon's acceptance speech — The vice president showed "penetrating understanding of domestic and international problems."

Lodge — He will definitely strengthen the ticket in New York. The strategy in keeping his 96-vote New York delegation neutral — "The threat that something might happen" helped win the type of platform he wanted. He wouldn't say what that "something" might have been.

What about reports he doesn't like Nixon personally? "Absolutely untrue. He has been a personal friend of mine for a long time. We worked together."

What caused the slip in which he introduced Nixon as "Richard E. Nixon instead of Richard M. — "It was one of those inspirational things." He had been hearing the name Thomas E. Dewey frequently and the middle initial sort of stuck.

Frosh Today Better Than Their Dads

Seventy-five per cent of the freshmen entering college today score today on entrance tests than the average freshman did in "dad's day," Iowa school administrators were told at a SUI summer seminar which closed Friday.

Nor could 25 per cent of the college graduates a generation ago meet the higher requirements for a college degree today, continued Forrest Conner, St. Paul, Minn., president of the American Association of School Administrators.

Conner, former principal at University High School, Iowa City, also compared the college student in the United States with the college student in foreign countries. Because a much smaller percentage of secondary school graduates are admitted to higher education in Europe, it is more accurate to compare foreign students with members of our national honor societies — that is, the top 10 per cent of U.S. students.

Making this comparison, you will find that the foreign student comes out second best, Conner told Iowans.

The U.S. is the only country where a Communist would be laughed off the political ticket, he said. Schools can take the credit for this.

He also pointed out that new countries such as Iran, Iraq and the Congo want to pattern their educational systems after that in the U.S., not after the European system, because our educational system has made the individual important.

Five major problems in education which Conner said face every community today are finances, man power, school district reorganization, curriculum and buildings. The major problems which we face in the future are finances and competent teachers.

School finances are saddled to an antiquated property tax, and we are thus sentencing our children to a second-rate education, he said. Property-tax income is shrinking when considered in proportion to the number of children to be educated, he said. The population explosion is burdening our schools with 11,000 new babies per day.

Conner concluded that the major problem in supplying competent teachers is time.

Gov. Loveless Tells Foreign Aid Plan

MARENGO — Gov. Herschel Loveless said Friday he is convinced that the nation's foreign relations today "would be much happier" if more overseas assistance of recent years consisted of food and fiber.

"It is high time," he told an American Legion celebration, "that the United States stepped up the use of its farm abundance to promote world peace and prosperity."

Loveless commended the platform writers of both the Democratic and Republican parties for including pledges to further the "food-for-peace" program.

He said that this similarity in aim accurately reflected the traditional nationwide willingness to lend a helping hand.

But, he added, "the Democratic members of Congress have always been in the forefront with legislation to effect greater utilization of farm commodities both at home and abroad."

Loveless, the Democratic nominee for U.S. Senator, pledged that if he is elected he would give full support to such legislation.

Play Sets Express Grim Theme — Props Stress Simplicity

By JUDY HOLSCHLAG Staff Writer

The stark, contemporary theme of "The Burnt Flower Bed" is being carried out in costumes and setting as well as in the actual production.

Jim Ryan, G. Dubuque, who is designing both set and costumes, says that one of the chief attributes of his set is its simplicity. All non-essentials have been stripped away in order to keep the character of the set in conformity with the rest of the play.

Only one scene is used for the entire play—the living room of a reconverted customs-house, now the home of the deposed political leader Giovanni. A "homey" atmosphere was deliberately avoided by excluding lamps, figurines, draperies, and other decorative objects. The set is basic, with the essential furniture and no distractions.

Changes in the appearance of the set are achieved through effective lighting, however, since the play's action runs from late afternoon, through the night, to the following morning.

Another prominent feature of "The Burnt Flower Bed" is that it can portray no actual place. In writing his play, Betti simply set it in contemporary times — he did not pin-point the country's location, or even hint at the general area covered. The customs-house is situated near the border of an unnamed country; its furniture and decor give no clue to national origin.

The costumes for the play also reflect the contemporary setting and indefinite location. According to Ryan, they were "assembled," rather than "made," since they are the types of clothing worn today. A few of the play's characters wear some items of their own clothing, particularly shoes and accessories. The costumes are also simple, to coordinate with the mood of the production. Any details which might indicate a definite American button-down collar nite location for the play, such as have been avoided in the costumeing.

"The Burnt Flower Bed" will be presented in the air-conditioned University Theatre August 4, 5, and 6 at 8 p.m. Tickets are now on sale at the East Lobby Desk of the Iowa Memorial Union. Students can obtain free tickets by presenting their I. D. cards. General admission is $1.25.

It came in reply to a question at Nixon's news conference. "What have you planned to do about getting rest in this campaign?" he was asked.

"Nothing," Nixon said. "There just isn't any time between now and November for a vacation."

Well, we should have guessed it. Nixon himself had hinted earlier what to look forward to. Or rather what not to look forward to.

He had said that right off there will be a mess of conferences. And when he came to what might have been a plum, he dashed hopes completely.

Nixon said he's going to Hawaii — and just so that no one would get ideas about grass skirts and lolling about on the beach, he emphasized: "To campaign."

As Congress comes back to work, he will be dashing about spreading the GOP word each weekend.

Since Sen. John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts, the Democratic nominee, has said he will put on an equally hard, not-a-moment-to-be-lost campaign, this looks like an exhausting late summer and autumn.

Traditionally, newsmen don't discuss the perils of their trade. They say how hard the candidates work, how they think nothing of making five or six speeches a day — and flying all over the landscape to do it.

But trying to keep up with these converts to perpetual motion can be exhausting, too. And anyone who travels with a candidate for just a few days is likely to reach the point where he has to look at his schedule to remember what town he's in.

Surprisingly, Nixon thought of his plight.

"I just hope you haven't lost any more sleep than I have," he said as he began his news conference. "If you have, you're practically dead."

Well, Nixon looked tired, but far from dead.

As he fielded the questions, there was time to look over two members of his official family who were sitting on the platform.

The vice presidential choice, Henry Cabot Lodge, stared into space, not like a man lost in thought but like a man too worn out to do anything but sit.

Herbert G. Klein, Nixon's press secretary, tried manfully to smother a yawn—it's not good politics to yawn when the boss is talking—but he couldn't make it.

A check with newsmen nearby disclosed very few likely candidates for a good 100-yard dash.

For the moment, they looked as if they had it.

Mr. Nixon, Mr. Kennedy, laugh on you and your drives that will take you into all 50 states.

What this country—meaning me—needs right now is a good, old-fashioned front porch campaign.

And quit shoving. Remember, I saw that rocking chair first.

Sheehan To Give Lecture Tonight

Vincent Sheehan, author of paper correspondent, was the final lecture in SUI's lecture series tonight at Macbride Auditorium.

Sheehan was an eye man many historic events during Wars I and II. In 1949, the Foreign Ministers at its Paris Meetings.

His latest book, "N Years in Power," is an account of his extensive travels and his friendship with 1948 Sheehan was standing 10 feet from Ghandi when leader was slain by a bullet.

Because of his belief East held the key to the world, Sheehan wrote "The Struggle for Super Asia."

MIAMI, Fla. — A big, wet storm born in the Gulf of Mexico attained tropical storm status and a name — Brenda — Friday at sea off Charleston, S. C.

Forecasters at the Miami, Fla., U.S. Weather Bureau said an "eye" was detected in the storm about 40 miles south of Myrtle Beach, S. C. Top winds were estimated at 55 miles per hour.

Brenda was moving northeastward and forecasters said the storm, this season's second, was expected to move offshore along the coast and pass east of Cape Hatteras, N. C., about midnight Friday night.

Quantities of rain continued to mark the path of Brenda, which drenched the Florida Gulf coast, north Florida, and Georgia.

The season's first tropical storm was Abby, which developed in the far West Indies and barreled almost due westward into British Honduras early this month.

The Tampa area was hardest hit by torrential rains. The Tampa total stood at 13.9 inches and it still was coming down.

Several Tampa residential areas were flooded and many persons were evacuated from homes where water was waist deep. Power was off in many homes and 6,000 to 7,500 telephones were knocked out when lines were downed by the wind and 50 underground cables were flooded.

Bomb Proved Cause Of Plane Explosion

WASHINGTON — Final proof that a bomb blasted heavily injured Julian A. Frank and 33 fellow airline passengers to death was reported Friday by the Civil Aeronautics Board.

But the mystery of the explosion in the sky remained unsolved — with nearly a million dollars at stake.

The CAB's summation of its six-month inquiry into the Jan. 6 crash of a National Airlines plane near Bolivia, N. C., made no attempt to fix responsibility for the explosion.

And the FBI, which has been handed the job of trying to find out who triggered the dynamite bomb that knocked the DC6 airliner from the skies refused to say how its investigation is going.

Four of the insurance companies with whom Frank, 32, took out policies totaling $907,500 have contended the New York attorney committed suicide—at the price of 33 other lives. They've asked the courts to rule that they don't have to pay the insurance.

But Frank's young widow blonde model Janet Wagner Frank, 28, says she's positive her wealthy husband was either the innocent victim of the explosion or the target of a monstrous, mysterious murder plot.

There is a "real" possibility" Frank was murdered, he said.

An intensive investigation of Frank's background after the crash disclosed he was caught in a web of questionable financial deals. Left unanswered by the investigation was the source of his sudden rise in income from about $10,000 a year to an estimated $140,000 a year.

One-Third of SUI Grads Employed in Hometowns

Thirty-six per cent of the graduates of three Iowa colleges involved in a recent SUI study returned to their hometowns following graduation.

Of the 452 graduates studied, 163 returned to their hometowns and 289 went to other places following graduation, reports John Prehn, G. Manchester, in a thesis submitted this month for a M.A. degree in sociology at SUI.

The study involved women who were graduated from Clarke College, Dubuque; Marycrest College, Davenport; and Briar Cliff College, Sioux City, between 1954 and 1958.

The SUI study also showed that graduates from the larger urban areas were more apt to return to their hometown than were graduates from smaller communities.

Fifty-three per cent of the graduates from standard metropolitan areas migrated to other towns or cities. Seventy-two per cent from smaller communities migrated to other areas.

The SUI study also found that graduates qualified to teach were just as apt to return to their hometowns as graduates in other fields. The per cent of graduates qualified to teach not returning to their hometowns was 62.2 per cent, while 65.8 per cent of the graduates not qualified to teach went elsewhere.

By mapor field of study, those who did not return to their hometowns after graduation were 65 per cent of the science majors, 46 per cent of the social science majors, 71 per cent of the humanities majors, 60 per cent of the education majors, 33 per cent of the business majors, 64 per cent of the medical home economics majors, arts majors, and 76 per cent of the SUI study also tested several other possible factors which might affect a graduate's returning to the hometown. However, these were not found to be significantly related to their migration. Among the factors considered were father's occupation, social mobility, marriage status and academic achievement.

Concerning academic achievement, the SUI study states that 29 per cent of those graduating with honors returned to their hometowns, and approximately 32 per cent graduating without honors returned to their hometowns.

In the fall of 1958 a survey of higher education and social mobility in Iowa was undertaken by Prof. Harold W. Saunders of the SUI Department of Sociology and Anthropology. During the past academic year analysis of the data was begun at the Iowa Urban Community Research Center under the direction of Prof. Stanley Lieberman, instructor in sociology.

Prehn's thesis reports a portion of the findings of the preliminary analysis of the data. Funds for the survey were provided by grants from the Old Gold Development Fund, which is supported by SUI alumni and friends.

Prehn points out that because this report is based on a preliminary analysis and on only a portion of the findings, it cannot be used to generalize beyond the 452 graduates considered.

FCC Vetoes Proposals For Radio, TV Controls

WASHINGTON — The Federal Communications Commission Friday rejected proposals that it set up specific controls over radio and TV programs.

But it issued a reminder to broadcasters that they must make an affirmative effort to determine the pace, needs and desires of the communities they serve. The commission said it will make periodic checks to find out if this is being done.

The statement followed lengthy public hearings in late 1959 and early this year reviewing FCC powers in the broadcast field.

The hearings were prompted by the fixed quiz show scandal and disclosure of payola practices in some segments of the industry.

NASA Plan: Men To Orbit Earth by 1966

WASHINGTON — The space agency disclosed plans Friday to launch three-man Project Apollo space crews by 1966 into earth-orbit journeys lasting from two weeks to two months.

Even more ambitiously, a lighter-weight version of the same Apollo spacecraft somewhat later may be sent on a week-long assignment around the moon and back.

But there's no plan for a man-on-the-moon project before 1970. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) also plans to land a truck-mounted robot laboratory gently on the face of the moon, and move it by remote control about a 50-mile-radius lunar circle, taking moon samples. It will be aptly named Project Prospector.

All this will be done before an American attempts to set foot on the moon, NASA officials told 1,500 contractors attending a two-day series of lectures on the space agency's plans.

Many of the contractors will bid for a share in the space programs on which NASA said it may, in 10 years, spend from 12 to 15 billion dollars — at a rate of more than 1½ billion dollars a year.

This program involves 260 major launchings, including 41 relating to manned space flight.

Dick Will Sleep At Completion Of Campaign

By ARTHUR EDSON

CHICAGO — Vice President Richard M. Nixon said one word Friday—and it was the most foreboding word any candidate ever hurled at a group of weary newsmen.

The word looks simple enough, but when Nixon said, "Nothing," a convulsive shudder went through at least one newsmen. Meaning me.

It came in reply to a question at Nixon's news conference. "What have you planned to do about getting rest in this campaign?" he was asked.

"Nothing," Nixon said. "There just isn't any time between now and November for a vacation."

Well, we should have guessed it. Nixon himself had hinted earlier what to look forward to. Or rather what not to look forward to.

He had said that right off there will be a mess of conferences. And when he came to what might have been a plum, he dashed hopes completely.

Nixon said he's going to Hawaii — and just so that no one would get ideas about grass skirts and lolling about on the beach, he emphasized: "To campaign."

As Congress comes back to work, he will be dashing about spreading the GOP word each weekend.

Since Sen. John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts, the Democratic nominee, has said he will put on an equally hard, not-a-moment-to-be-lost campaign, this looks like an exhausting late summer and autumn.

Traditionally, newsmen don't discuss the perils of their trade. They say how hard the candidates work, how they think nothing of making five or six speeches a day — and flying all over the landscape to do it.

But trying to keep up with these converts to perpetual motion can be exhausting, too. And anyone who travels with a candidate for just a few days is likely to reach the point where he has to look at his schedule to remember what town he's in.

Surprisingly, Nixon thought of his plight.

"I just hope you haven't lost any more sleep than I have," he said as he began his news conference. "If you have, you're practically dead."

Well, Nixon looked tired, but far from dead.

As he fielded the questions, there was time to look over two members of his official family who were sitting on the platform.

The vice presidential choice, Henry Cabot Lodge, stared into space, not like a man lost in thought but like a man too worn out to do anything but sit.

Herbert G. Klein, Nixon's press secretary, tried manfully to smother a yawn—it's not good politics to yawn when the boss is talking—but he couldn't make it.

A check with newsmen nearby disclosed very few likely candidates for a good 100-yard dash.

For the moment, they looked as if they had it.

Mr. Nixon, Mr. Kennedy, laugh on you and your drives that will take you into all 50 states.

What this country—meaning me—needs right now is a good, old-fashioned front porch campaign.

And quit shoving. Remember, I saw that rocking chair first.
