Kennedy To Change White House Staffing

PALM BEACH, (HTNS) — President-elect Kennedy contemplates a drastic change in White House operations that is certain to make him a very different type of President from President Eisenhower.

Not only will Kennedy greatly cut down the present number of White House assistants, but — and this is the crux of it — he will abolish the staff system, which was installed by President Eisenhower and which reached its peak under Presidential assistant Sherman Adams.

What this means is that the new President will be directly involved with members of his staff and his Cabinet in the daily and often even hourly affairs of the Government.

His present intention, it was disclosed Monday after his conference with Clark Clifford, who is his liaison with the Eisenhower Administration, is not even to fill the position of "the assistant to the President," which was occupied by Adams and is now in the hands of his successor, Maj. Gen. Wilton B. Persons.

Kennedy's decision means that in the White House he will be more in the thick of the battle than President Eisenhower has been. Under the staff system, which Eisenhower imported from the Army, recommendations on policies and programs were generally drawn up by the staff under Adams and later under Gen. Persons, and then submitted to the President for approval or disapproval.

The regular conferences of the White House staff were held not in the President's office, as under Presidents Roosevelt and Truman, but in Adams' and, since his departure, in Gen. Persons' office.

In varying degrees, therefore, Adams and Gen. Persons stood between the President and the other members of the White House staff and even, in Adams' case, between the President and other officials, including Cabinet members. Adams in particular wielded immense power because President Eisenhower permitted him to make a wide variety of important decisions on his own responsibility.

By abolishing the staff system Kennedy will be reverting more to the Roosevelt and Truman way of doing things.

Clifford at a press conference after his talk with Sen. Kennedy explained that the President-elect was ignoring the post of "the assistant to the President" because he does not "contemplate setting up a man who would act between him and his staff."

"The one comment he made," Clifford said, "was he wanted to be in close personal contact with each member of his staff rather than setting up a man between him and the other members of his staff. . . he does not want a very large staff there."

Clifford added: "I know only that Sen. Kennedy intends to bring his own men into policy-making jobs. He intends to obtain complete and full control of the Executive branch through the appointment of those policy positions."

The pros and cons of the staff system were these:

Those who favored it held it provided a more orderly way of administering the Presidency. Its greatest virtue in their view was that it freed the President from the hour-to-hour give-and-take of the Government and let him concentrate on the great problems.

Those who opposed the staff system argued that the President should be bothered with details. They condemned the system because they felt it tended to isolate the President and to lessen the impact of his mind and character on a succession of daily decisions, which, when accumulated, added up to an important range of policies.

Adams resigned in 1958 because of the criticism of his acceptance of gifts and favors from industrialist Bernard Goldfine, who was later imprisoned for contempt of court for his refusal to produce certain business records.

Legal Aspects Dim Hopes Of Renaissance II Reopening

(Editor's note: The following article was written by Jerry A. Minnich, a member of the Board of Directors of Renaissance II, Inc.)

At present, Renaissance II is in the peculiar position of being all dressed up with no place to go. Because of legal problems of various natures, Renaissance II is unable to lease either of two locations which had been under consideration for the past several months, even though the needed funds for re-opening had been secured several weeks ago.

Until such time as a satisfactory location is found and leased, no stock will be issued.

After the closing of the old Renaissance II, at 130½ S. Clinton St. last summer, a small group of interested church leaders worked with proprietor John Beardsley, to re-open as soon as was feasible. Other members of the University community joined the group in early fall.

Sale of a large number of small-denomination stock certificates was discussed, but it was decided that a small number of relatively heavy investors would present fewer problems in operating the new Renaissance II. In October, David Vetter, an SUJ graduate living in Cedar Rapids, seemingly solved the re-opening problems by offering to purchase the business. For reasons undisclosed, however, he decided against the venture shortly before final papers were to be signed.

Regrouping efforts, the group held another series of meetings, during which a corporation was formed. Early in November a new possible location was presented as an alternate to the former premises. The prospective location, across the street from the old building, was approximately three times as large, and had the additional advantage of being located on the first floor.

Elaborate plans were drawn up for the new Renaissance II, and the necessary capital — raised to $5,000 because of the anticipated additional expenses of operating on a larger scale — was raised in a short time, largely by virtue of a large sum pledged by an Iowa City area man who was not connected with the University.

Shortly before the lease was to be signed (on a sub-lease contract) it was noticed by the attorney employed by Renaissance II that a clause in the original lease would not guarantee the property owner's consent to the sub-lease agreement, and that any occupation of the property by Renaissance II would be of a very tenuous nature, subject to the approval of the building owner. The owner, at that time, was visiting Greece, and has not yet returned to Iowa City.

After discussing the larger location, it was decided to make an effort to return to the old second-floor location. Gus Pusateri, property manager of the old location, had always been very receptive and encouraging to the group, and it appeared that plans at that time would go through.

The first snag of that phase of operation came soon after. In order to reopen in the old location, a fire exit would have had to be constructed. Both the state and city fire marshals had previously approved a plan whereby a trap-door in the rear of the second floor would have led by stairs to the rear of the Paper Place, located on the first floor of the same building — a plan of moderate cost. The owners of The Paper Place refused to consent to this plan.

The corporation then considered an outside fire escape at an estimated cost of $1,200. It was finally decided to build the outside escape, when the city sanitary engineer informed the group that in order to open, two public rest rooms would have to be constructed, complete with vestibules, of substantial material, and that the floor would have to be resurfaced. (The present flooring is of asphalt tile.)

The cost of building both the $1,300 fire escape and an extra rest room, at a cost of several hundred dollars, was deemed prohibitive by the board of directors, and precluded further thoughts of re-occupying the old premises.

Even though there is still a very remote chance of opening up in the first-floor location, the board is not considering it in its plans. All investors have been notified of the present impasse, and all have indicated that should a suitable location be found in the near future, their pledges would stand. Renaissance II is still on the state books as a legal corporation of Iowa, and will remain so while the board searches for a new location.

Residents Say Templin Fence Satisfactory

Gate Latches Broken; Individual Cost $5.20 After Contributions
By DICK BUDD
Staff Writer

The controversial Templin Park fence project has been completed for over six weeks, and residents express a general satisfaction with the results.

Arthur Dolliver, G. Des Moines said, "We certainly feel better with the fence here. At least no children have gotten out." Dolliver said that residents of the park had been very cooperative in keeping the gates closed.

"Incidentally," said Dolliver, who was co-author of the 50-50 expense plan established with the University for construction of the fence, "the individual cost for those who agreed to share expenses for building the fence was $5.20."

Dolliver said $130 had been contributed from various city groups to aid with the project. Twenty-one of thirty Templin Park residents contributed to expenses.

Working with Dolliver on the expense plan, agreed to by the University, was Richard Cloyd, G. Burlington.

"As far as we can tell, the fence has been working out quite well. It's hard to tell how valuable it is right now because the children haven't been out as much in this weather," he said. "I think we'll see the project's worth next spring," he concluded.

Joneal C. Richardson, A4, Iowa City, was an outspoken critic of student sponsorship of the plan when it was announced. "I'm all for the fence, but I don't think it was the student's responsibility to put it up," he said.

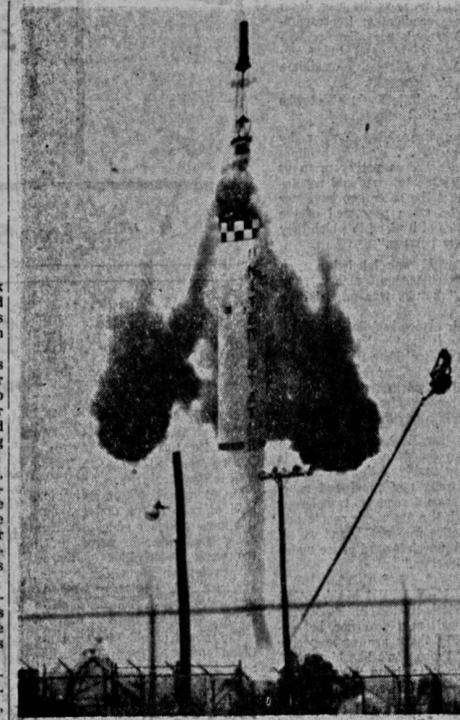

"The latches on the gates are already broken," Richardson said. "I don't know who will fix them. I presume the students will, since they had to put the fence up," Richardson said he didn't contribute to paying for the fence.

Gene Beenk, G. Davenport said, "The fence is really a matter of insurance. We'll really never know if it will do any good or not, but it's certainly better that it's there."

The Templin Park fence was completed Oct. 9. Residents of the park agreed to share the cost of the project with the University. The school provided the tools and the students the labor.

Ghana Diplomat Defended by UN

LEOPOLDVILLE, The Congo (AP) — The Congo army of Col. Joseph Mobutu attacked the U.N.-defended Ghana Embassy residence with machine guns and armored cars Monday night in an effort to seize a top diplomat accused of conspiracy against the Congo regime.

There were uncounted casualties, including Mobutu's chief aide, who was reported killed by the U.N. side.

In the midst of the three-hour Monday night battle the U.N. command yielded and agreed to hand over the diplomat, Nathaniel Welbeck, for expulsion from the Congo. But first efforts to remove him, the U.N. command said, were met with Congolese gunfire and the shooting resumed early Tuesday.

The whole battle area was blacked out and the U.N. said another effort would be made to get the diplomat out in daylight later Tuesday.

The U.N. command accused the Congolese army of violating an earlier truce agreement and said the Congo soldiers continued firing past midnight at the U.N. defending troops.

The U.N. officials said the Congolese soldiers were out of control and refused to obey a cease-fire arranged with Mobutu, the Congo's strong man.

Gunfire rattled in a wide area around Welbeck's besieged residence. It was defended by 150 Tunisian infantrymen and a squad of Ghana riot police.

Indian Brig. Gen. Indarjit Rikhye, acting chief of the U.N. mission, was turned back once by a burst of Congolese gunfire when he tried to pass through the ring of Congolese soldiers to get Welbeck out.

The U.N. command said Maj. Gen. Henry T. Alexander, British chief of staff of the Ghana army, arrived in Leopoldville two hours before the shooting began, with a Russian Mi-4 helicopter to take Welbeck out of the Congo. Welbeck kept insisting he had no intention of leaving, Congolese sources said.

Weary U.N. officials openly feared the shooting might spread to other parts of the Congo capital and bring a major conflict between the Congolese troops and U.N. peace-keeping forces.

The battle at the Ghana residence was the first between the blue-helmeted U.N. troops and the Congolese army.

In any case, the battle widened the rift between the U.N. command and Mobutu.

The exact number of casualties in the three-hour battle could not be determined immediately. Estimates varied from 7 killed and 7 wounded to 3 killed and 4 wounded. U.N. officials said 2 Congolese were killed.

The U.N. command finally announced it is bowing to Mobutu's demand for expulsion of Ghana Charge d'Affaires Nathaniel Welbeck. He is accused by Mobutu of plotting to reinstate deposed Premier Patrice Lumumba.

Welbeck had defied the expulsion order, and the U.N. Command — trying to remain neutral in a bilateral scrap between Ghana and Mobutu's Congo regime — had previously refused to help Mobutu oust Welbeck.

Initial efforts by U.N. officials to escort Welbeck from his residence were met with a burst of gunfire from Congolese troops who apparently were unaware of the U.N. decision.

At the outset, the Congolese army — frequently described by some U.N. officials as a disorganized rabble — threw a ring of steel around Welbeck's residence and opened fire when Tunisian infantrymen had dug in with rifles loaded and at the ready.

Forty-five minutes later, Tunisian reinforcements moved into the area as tracer bullets flashed through the palm trees.

The firing lost most of its intensity after the first hour, but sporadic shooting continued through the evening.

The lower floors of the U.N. headquarters building, less than a mile from the Ghana residence, were blacked out.

Little Chance of Revival Now—

Co-op Dorms Cut Depression Prices

By PHIL CURRIE
Staff Writer

Back in the days of the depression, SUJ officials instituted a system of co-operative housing units to provide cheaper housing rates for those students who otherwise could not attend college.

Despite the present additional increase in dorm rates, with prices of rooms up $40 to $70 a year, there is little chance of a system of this type being rejuvenated, according to Virgal S. Copeland, Associate Director of the Dormitory and Dining Services.

Under the old co-op system, a cheaper rate was made possible because there was no hired help to run the housing units. The students did all the work themselves, including the preparing of their own meals.

"There is no demand for housing of this type now," Copeland said.

He explained that the demand for co-op housing went out after the war, mainly due to a change in pay rate.

"Students found they could take the same time and earn more elsewhere."

"They were able to earn enough to pay the difference in rates between the co-ops and the dorms. Consequently, they found it easier to live in the dorms than in the co-ops."

The co-operative housing system first organized in 1932 with the establishment of the Kellogg House for men. Robert E. Riconow, Dean of Men at the time, began the system when he realized there were not enough jobs available for students who needed them in order to earn their room and board. The co-operative dorm system seemed to be the answer to students' financial problems.

Men who resided in the co-operative dorms paid the University $1 per week for their room. In addition, each paid a pro-rated share of the living expenses which included food, supplies, telephone and room and board for the student manager. This fee (in 1955) amounted to $2 per week.

To make up for the cheaper rates, the men worked one and a half to two hours a day. They did their own house work and cooking.

Students were admitted on a basis of individual need for help and scholarship qualifications.

The co-op system reached a peak in 1943 when 13 houses — 11 for men and two for women — were in operation. However, by 1946 the co-ops dwindled in number.

Harold L. Franklin, 1946 adviser to the co-operative Dormitory Association, explained that there were nine men's and three women's co-ops before the war. But as the men were called into the service all their units were closed.

"After the war, the men lived in the co-ops because it was so crowded that they had to live somewhere," Copeland said. "In general, however, they were never happy in them during the post-war period. It just wasn't the kind of living they were interested in."

While the men's interest disappeared, the women's houses continued, perhaps because of their natural ability to deal with house work and cooking.

In 1946 an attempt was made to introduce co-op living to married students. Two houses were begun with a rate set at $24 per month. The cost included access to a dining room, two living rooms, one kitchen, laundry facilities and a bed room.

The women did the cooking, with each preparing a particular part of the meal. They also divided the cleaning and other housework among themselves.

This system was short-lived too, however, for as soon as other housing was made available elsewhere, the students abandoned the co-op units.

Three women's dorms still existed in 1949. The cost, covering both room and board, was $250 compared to $472.50 at Currier. Each girl worked one hour a day to provide for the reduced rate.

The co-operative dorm system continued to grow smaller among the women's units. Only one unit, housing 20 girls, remained in 1953. At the end of the 1955-56 school year, it was closed.

Stern's Foundations Of Society Questioned

By RICHARD S. WELLS
Graduate Assistant
Political Science

I should like first to congratulate Sol Stern on a fine article — "Foundations of Society Questioned" — which appeared in The Daily Iowan of November 17. It is one of the more stimulating pieces of writing to appear upon the editorial page of the paper this year. However, in spite of my general agreement with his conclusion, I cannot extend my agreement to the method by which he arrives at it.

For his argument to have clarity a distinct tension must be established between the "contented" and the "concerned"; there must exist a recognizable difference between an ideologically satisfied Lippmann, Reston, and Stevenson, and an ideologically dissatisfied Mills. I am not sure that Mr. Stern has presented a validly distinct ideological dichotomy. It is largely with his choice of the "End of Ideology" theme that I take exception, at least insofar as it is a medium by which he can present the "contented" viewpoint.

The End of Ideology is a theme which is rather clearly presented in at least two sources: Daniel Bell's The End of Ideology, or Seymour Lipset's Political Man (the last chapter). It is based upon the supposition that the major problems of Western political society (Mr. Stern's article seems to have been concerned with the domestic American scene) have been resolved. In American society, for example, the capital-labor dispute does not hinge upon an essentially ideological problem; both sides seem committed to a common set of assumptions.

Again, the problem of the Nature of the Union has been solved, it is generally conceded that the extreme Southern position in this regard is in protest over a nearly accomplished fact. In short, "right" and "left" are decreasingly useful in describing the present political alignment. It must be pointed out that Mr. Stern has not misstated the theme; he has merely misused it in formulating his argument.

For one thing, it is rather idle to talk of the "end" of ideology when its "beginning" is debatable, at least in regard to American political theory. The current academic temper which seems to rage over the mention of Daniel Boorstin's thesis — faith in the existence of an American political theory has tended to replace the vacuum left by its absence — is a case in point. As a local professor has recently and informally commented, there may be a confusion between American political theory and American political thought. My assumption is that Mr. Stern connects ideology with theory, hence my comment. If his comments had been directed to Western society in general, they might have had more application, but his concern with American society may preclude the use of the "end of ideology" theme.

Still further, Mr. Stern comments that "the End of Ideology signifies the scrapping of all the grand and monistic theories of society — of the right and of the left." I am rather inclined to think that use of the term "scrapping" conveys a meaning not harmonious to the theme he uses. There is really nothing to scrap; this is the whole point of the "End of Ideology."

Regardless of the means of its disposal, Mr. Stern contends that the end of ideology has seemingly forced the intellectual frontiers of the professors to be "marginal" — "marginal" simply means "insignificant" in this context; professors are shunted into studies of Roman doorknobs, so to speak. I do not feel that Mr. Stern has established any reasonable connection between the end of ideology and the plight of the professor. The concern with marginal studies may merely be with a shift in methodology; there is now a concern with the behavior of things rather than with the things themselves.

Seemingly in support of his marginal idea, however, Mr. Stern adds that the end of ideology makes the intellectual a "party activist"; but his activism is limited to non-ideological factors such as the personality of leadership and superficial party differences. A study by Lipset of intellectuals in America seems to indicate that the political intellectual will seek out ideological controversy and, not finding it, will turn to areas which do furnish conflict sufficiently stimulating to his intellectual needs. Again, there may not be as strong a relationship between the end of ideology and the political activism of the intellectual as Mr. Stern might indicate.

Mr. Stern refers to a society "whose political economy is believed to be capable of solving all problems." Yet, American (and Western) intellectuals seem preoccupied with a feeling of pessimism, at least according to reports of the 1955 meeting of the Congress for Cultural Freedom. The contrast is striking, especially in light of the fact that the theme of "the end of ideology" is closely connected with the same intellectuals who were so pessimistic in sunny Italy. Mr. Stern may well have taken the theme in its least damaging context.

Considering the apparently general note of pessimism among Western intellectuals, Mr. Stern's phrase, "a dwindling handful of scholars and intellectuals," may not be quite appropriate in its reference to the "concerned." My point in mentioning this is simply that the original contrast between the contented and the concerned is not well drawn by Mr. Stern's use of the "end of ideology" theme. In summary, I feel that a dichotomy has been presented which has as one of its ideas a specious, but nonetheless heuristic, argument.

WHO WILL PRESIDENT-ELECT JOHN F. KENNEDY CHOOSE for the United States' next Secretary of State?

None of the experts seem to know who the President-elect will appoint, but at least the staff of one college daily (Daily Tar Heel, University of North Carolina) knows who they want.

In a Nov. 12th editorial, the Tar Heel narrows the race down to three candidates: Representative Chester Bowles, Senator William Fulbright, and twice defeated presidential candidate Adlai E. Stevenson.

There is little doubt about who the Tar Heel supports. They disqualified Bowles by saying: "... while a brilliant man, (he) does not seem to us to have the international reputation that the other two have nor does he seem possessed of the qualities of leadership which they so fully possess."

Fulbright was labeled a man of "tremendous ability and drive," but he was passed over too.

Their choice is Adlai Stevenson — he is the "best of the crop." The Tar Heel likes Stevenson because "of the brilliance of his mind" and the "warmth of his heart" have made him a symbol of peace in many foreign lands.

The Tar Heel concludes: "We believe the man for this job is unquestionably Adlai Stevenson. His strength of mind and character would soon be transferred to both the American people and the entire free world, and we all would march toward peace under his direction."

NORMAN ERBE MAY HAVE GOTTEN HIMSELF ELECTED as Iowa's next governor, but apparently there are some people around who don't like him.

Erbe was hung in effigy at Iowa State University last week. The dummy was built on a wooden frame, dressed in blue jeans, brown canvas jacket, and 10-inch lace boots. The 5 foot 9 inch dummy was strung up on a 10 ft. 2x4 that was found dangling over 450 ft. above the ground on the WOI-TV tower.

Erbe's name was inked across the back. A University safety engineer called the dummy "about the best I've ever seen."

UCLA STILL HAS THE SAME OLD MATH PROBLEM: 3,000 cars just won't fit in 2,400 parking places.

Even though the Campus Parking Service has just added parking lot No. 12 — the smallest of UCLA's dozen parking lots the 440 new spaces will barely make a dent in the avalanche of cars that hits the Los Angeles campus every day.

The parking service often issues as many as 30 per cent more permits than spaces because all the people are never on the campus at the same time. But even this does not help a great deal.

University Appeal—'The Dollar Diploma'—And Very Reasonable

By ED HUGHES

THE DOLLAR DIPLOMA; By Georg Mann. 204 pp. $3.95. The Macmillan Company.

Mr. Mann has written an ironic kind of poor man's dialogue on the state of higher education. He takes knowledgeable potshots at the weak underbellies of those who profess or administer in universities. (He has twice been a university public relations officer.)

The novel unfolds in conventional style. Its central figures are two public-relations men of sorts, depicted in a running kind of teacher-pupil dialogue, who discuss, between scenes, the operational difficulties of a great mid-Western university called Fox University. From its early denominational beginnings, Fox U. has advanced with academic honor to the point where it has something called Individualized Education and no football team (attributes which have their origins in Mann's alma mater, University of Chicago.)

Along with these attributes, the story develops a change of administration at Fox which bids to throw students back to mandatory class attendance. Not only that but since the faculty harbors several faded Socialists and erstwhile Communists, Fox is threatened with a senatorial investigation. On top of this, the administration decides to put on a fund-raising campaign to get fifty million desperately needed dollars.

Despite these crises — or maybe because of them — the novel is still pedestrian, relieved by two things: a warmly real concern for educating people to be human, and a witty irony on the foibles of academe that often hit the mark.

VERSATILITY Theodore Roosevelt was perhaps the most versatile man who has ever been president of the United States, in the estimation of the Encyclopedia Britannica. He was eminent as a naturalist, soldier, orator, and historian, and was one of the most widely-read men of his time.

WSUI Today

BASKETBALL Unbelievable as it may seem, the cage season is upon us; and anyone who tunes to WSUI tonight at 8 expecting to hear an erudite discussion of a contemporaneous dilemma is bound to be disappointed — unless he's a basketball fan. In THAT case, he may well appreciate the fact that there is planned a sort of pre-season look at basketball prospects at SUJ. The annual Varsity - Freshman encounter will be in progress when WSUI drops in at 8 p.m.; so there will be some play-by-play mixed with interviews and sideline comment. Frank Snyder and a crew of good sports will be on hand for this extravaganza, LIVE from the Field House.

PEOPLE HAVE ASKED for more information about the author of "Can We End the Cold War?" — the provocative book currently being read on The Bookshelf, daily, Monday through Friday, at 9:30 a.m. To the degree that anything at all is known about him, he appears to be a private citizen having his say about U.S. foreign policy. The Macmillan Company thought well enough of his work to publish it despite the fact that he has no recognized credentials as a political scientist or journalist.

Letters to the Editor—

This Is Our SUJ

To the Editor: I can't tell you how much I envy you. You are in Iowa City and I'm not. You are there on that island of education in a sea of commerce. You are the one who's having hot chocolate, when the machine is working, at the Union at 10-15. You are the one who's getting shoved and pushed down the stairs of Schaeffer Hall. You are the one who's breaking your neck to get from East Hall to the Theatre Building in just ten minutes. You are the one who tries to lose his sorrow in 3.2 beer at Kenny's.

You are the one who gets to live in Currier and eat uncooked lima beans. You are the one who gets to stand in your paperback book stores memorizing titles so that you can be an accomplished "book name dropper" at the coffee house. You are the one who gets to go see an actor downstage everyone else at all the University Theatre Productions. You are the one who gets to go see Dr. Dunnington sort of "preach" at the late Sunday Service.

You are the one who gets to gag and cough on the smoke in the lounge on the second floor of the library. You are the one who gets the benefits of the early morning snarling of all those (young?) starring Ph.D. candidates you are the one who tries to ignore that rather potent smell of grease while you are gulping coffee at the local eateries.

You are the one who smiles grimly when you overhear a conversation in the dime store about how "Iowa City would be one h-- of a lot better off without that d-- college here." Who beams proudly when seeing Dr. Van Allen's name in a U.S. News and World Report. Who even gets stage fright when going before the camera at WSUI-TV.

Who gets to see one of the greatest football teams every Saturday. Who smiles politely at all the Dolphin Queens and all the

Criticizes Testing Methods

To the Editor: "You've got thirty minutes left!" — "Only twenty minutes left!" — "Ten minutes left to finish up!" These words were hollered during the algebra and trig departmental Nov. 10. It was bad enough having a fifty-five minute time limit disregarding the boisterous intermittent interruptions. When one's grade in a course is determined by just a few tests, it is obviously important that the student must do his best on all of these tests. He has nothing to fall back on in case of one "goof." You would think that the administrators of such tests would have the sympathy (for I assume they either are or were students themselves) to allow the student to achieve maximum performance on departmentals.

This sympathy should include a test-taking atmosphere that would benefit the student's concentration.

Another aspect of these departmentals I would like to question. Why the short time limit? I realize that the test administrators cannot be expected to spend an excessive amount of time (over two hours) for a pre-scheduled one-hour exam, but I feel that an element of human variation is not considered when short time limits are set.

I noticed a considerable amount of "verbal distaste" following the previously mentioned algebra and trig test, so I am defending this letter by saying that it reflects the opinion of the majority.

Health Department Gives Research Grant to Simon

J. Richard Simon, assistant professor of psychology at SUI, has received two grants from the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare for research in the area of patient activity patterns as related to nursing research.

The grants will provide for analysis of data collected during an earlier project when hospital patients were observed as to how they spend their time and how they react to hospitalization.

A $2,294 grant from the National Institutes of Mental Health will enable Simon to examine the data to relate behavior in the hospital to such factors as age of the patient, his general condition and the length of his hospital stay.

A $6,345 grant from the Division of Nursing Resources of the Public Health Service is aimed at examining the data to develop indices of patient welfare which can be used as criterion measures in future nursing research projects.

Simon is one of six researchers to receive grants since July 1 for projects of importance to nursing. The six new studies deal with nursing practice and nursing education, with patient activity patterns, and with the status of nursing as a profession.

Another SUI psychology professor, Charles Van Buskirk, is director of a project at Presbyterian-St. Luke's Hospital in Chicago, which is supported by one of the six grants. Much of this project was completed last summer, although Van Buskirk is still consulting with the Chicago researchers.

The $27,000 grant supported work aimed at evaluating graduates of a newly-revised curriculum of the hospital's school of nursing as to nursing knowledge and competence.

New Dialing For SUI Telephones

A new dialing system for SUI telephones will go into operation Wednesday.

The change was originally planned for December 4, when a new city-wide system of numbers is scheduled to go into effect. However, the date for the change in University telephones was moved ahead to lessen confusion in the use of both new systems. City telephone numbers will be changed on the date previously planned.

The primary change in the University system is the addition of a private branch exchange for University Psychopathic Hospital. The other private exchanges are General University and University Hospital. To make a call from one private exchange to another, the caller must use the new prefix code numbers assigned to each private branch, followed by the desired extension number.

The code numbers are as follows: General University, 71; University Hospital, 72; and Psychopathic Hospital, 73. To make a call within a private exchange (for example, one General University number to another) the caller must omit the prefix code number. Complete instructions for using the new system are included in the 1960-61 Faculty and Staff Telephone Directory.

Supreme Court Enters Vote Fight

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Supreme Court, in what could be a historic step, Monday entered the fight by metropolitan areas to cut down the disproportionate voting power of rural voters.

Specifically, the court agreed to look into the refusal of the Tennessee Legislature to reapportion seats in the state legislature since 1901.

If the court later decides, after hearing arguments on both sides, to rule on the controversy it could have nationwide repercussions. Similar situations of disparity in relative voting power between rural and metropolitan areas exist in many states.

The Tennessee constitution requires reapportionment of the General Assembly every 10 years by counties or districts according to the number of qualified voters.

The litigation was brought by a group of voters living in metropolitan areas in Tennessee, including Nashville, Chattanooga and Knoxville.

SUIowans Attend Press Conference

Three SUIowans are attending the annual conference of the Associated Collegiate Press this week in Chicago.

Attending the session are Ray Burdick, A4, Sioux City, editor of The Daily Iowan; Gary Gerlach, A2, St. Ansgar, assistant managing editor of the Iowan; and Arthur M. Sanderson, faculty advisor to the Iowan.

Doctor to Speak On Drug Addiction

"Addiction to Narcotic Analgesics" will be the lecture topic at a meeting of the local chapter of the national society of Sigma Xi today at 7:30 p.m. in Lecture Room 3, Medical Laboratories Building.

The speaker will be Dr. L. A. Woods, professor and Head of the Department of Pharmacology in the SUI College of Medicine. Dr. Woods holds a Ph.D. degree in organic chemistry from Iowa State University and an M.D. degree from the University of Michigan.

Educator's Conference On Science

Science education, teacher utilization, and school integration will be the major topics of discussion at the 45th Annual Conference on School Administration and Supervision at SUI Nov. 29-30.

Because of the increased importance of science and science education in this "space age," almost the entire program during the first day has been aimed in this direction, according to S. J. Knevezich, SUI professor of education and chairman of the conference planning committee.

Included on the agenda for the first day are sessions dealing with new directions for science programs in secondary schools and the influence of recent science developments on elementary school science programs, and a talk on "Science As A Human Enterprise," by James A. Van Allen, head of the SUI physics and astronomy department and internationally-known space scientist.

Also, many of the teaching demonstrations during the morning will be in fields of science.

Teacher utilization will be discussed from two points of view during the first session Nov. 30. A high school teacher and a school administrator will each give their views on how the time of teachers can best be spent.

During the final conference session, Terrell E. Powell, Little Rock, Ark., superintendent of schools, will discuss "The Impact of the 1954 Supreme Court Decision on Integration on School Administrators in Southern States."

Some 600 school administrators and supervisors are expected for the two-day conference. It is sponsored by the SUI College of Education and the extension division, and the Extension Division.

The Union will be open 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday. Food service will be discontinued for the weekend in the Union cafeteria after the noon meal Wednesday.

day and in the Gold Feather Room after 4 p.m. The University Library will be open from 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday, Friday and Saturday. The building will be closed all day Thursday, and will be open from 1:30 p.m. to 2 a.m. Sunday. Library desks will be open all day Wednesday and Friday, from 8 a.m. to noon Saturday and from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. The reserve desk will open again from 7 to 10 p.m. Sunday.

The public cafeteria in Quadrangle dormitory will be closed Thursday, but will operate on its regular schedule the rest of the weekend.

Megaphones Available For Basketball Games

Hand-sized megaphones will be available for students in the SUI cheering section during basketball games this winter, according to Jack Burge, B3, Cedar Rapids, president of the Pep Club Council. The megaphones are to be made of cardboard and will probably be black and gold, said Burge. Students will be able to obtain them at one of the season's early home games.

And indoors—are there plenty of lights in your basement? Does every bedroom have a lamp near the bed? Every child's room have a low-wattage night light? Is there a light near the bathroom medicine cabinet? Be sure your home "lights up" for safety. Light costs so little, yet it protects you so well.

Evashevski Lauds Successor as Man With Bright Football Mind

Burns, Iowa's New Coach, Plans No Changes

Jerry Burns, Iowa's baby-faced new head football coach, promised Monday he would do his best to follow the successful steps of retiring coach Forest Evashevski and lead the Hawks to a winning season in 1961.

Burns revealed he has no major changes in mind for the Hawkeyes next season, but he did indicate hopes that several freshmen from a squad the coaches called "average" will be able to round out a ball club which will be rich in returning lettermen at key positions. "I am hopeful that we can continue to give Iowa football fans the type of winning football that Evy has made them accustomed to in his nine years as coach," Burns said.

"Again, I want to thank University President (Virgil) Hancher and the Board in Control of Athletics for this opportunity.

"I might add that the entire coaching staff will stay on in their present jobs and at this time I have no plans for personnel changes or additions.

"It is only my personal opinion, but I believe the Iowa staff is the finest in the country."

The appointment of Burns Saturday night to succeed Evashevski, who will become fulltime athletic director, was a popular choice here and among fans throughout the state.

Burns, who was appointed by the Board in Control of Athletics, with approval of University President Hancher and the State Board of Regents, was Evashevski's personal choice.

"I am happy we have a man of Jerry's caliber to lead our football program," the athletic director — no longer coach — said.

"I think he will be one of the great coaches in the nation in a short time. The entire staff favored Burns. He has a great football mind," Evashevski said.

The Iowa athletic director then said:

"I would like to caution Iowa football fans about 1961. Some of our people think next year may be Iowa's greatest season.

"But we had a lot of breaks this year and we had a lot of good bounces. We didn't get to use our sophomores as much as we had hoped because of the close games.

"If things don't go right, I hope Iowa fans will give Jerry the same loyalty they have given me over the past nine years.

"I want to wish Jerry all the good luck in the world.

"I'm sure no choice could have been more popular with the people and fans of the state."

The appointment was, indeed, popular with the players who will perform under Burns next year.

There seemed little doubt among the players that Burns would be named. Said one: "Burns seemed to be the only assistant who wanted the job."

Punter and reserve quarterback John Calhoun was "real happy" Burns got the job. "At least we know the offense (Winged-T) will stay the same," Calhoun said.

"The players respect him," Bill DiCindio, guard, said.

Team captain Jerry Mauren probably summed up the thoughts of the team best when he said: "I think the choice is a very good one. I think Burns has real smart football sense and I'm sure the players will work hard for him and will be happy playing under him."

The head collegiate coaching job is the first for Burns since 1952, when he coached Whittier College of California to an 8-2 record.

Before that he was assistant under Archie Kodros at the University of Hawaii during the 1951 season. In 1953, Burns was named coach of the year in the Detroit area when he coached at St. Mary's of Redford High School.

Burns received a three-year appointment. He was granted an increase in salary from the $10,000 he was making as an assistant. No salary figures were announced, though.

The appointment is effective Dec. 1, or as soon thereafter as a smooth transition can be made.

Minnesota 1st But Hawkeyes In No. 2 Spot

By The Associated Press
Minnesota's once-beaten Gophers regained first place Monday in the Associated Press' weekly football poll in a close battle with Iowa and Mississippi.

fell all the way to fifth place following its first loss, to Kansas.

The balloting was so close that the national championship which will be based on next week's final vote remained in doubt.

Minnesota received 424½ points, Iowa 417½, and Mississippi 398.

While Minnesota and Iowa have finished their regular season as co-champs of the Big Ten, Mississippi has a final game with Mississippi State Saturday after an open date last week.

Iowa received the most first place votes, 17½, with Minnesota getting 13½. One of the 48 selectors couldn't pick between the two, giving each half a first place vote.

Minnesota accounted for 13 first place ballots.

The difference was in second and third place votes, where Minnesota held a slight edge over Iowa.

During the regular season, Iowa lost only to Minnesota, 27-10. Minnesota was beaten only by Purdue, 23-14. Iowa was No. 2 and Minnesota No. 4 last week. Then Minnesota ended its season by beating Wisconsin 27-7, and Iowa blanked Notre Dame, 28-0.

The University of Washington, the Big Five Conference champion and host team in the Rose Bowl Jan. 2, moved up from fifth to fourth place. Washington had a scare Saturday before edging Washington State, 8-7.

Missouri's skid followed its 23-7 defeat by Kansas Saturday. The Kansas victory moved the Jayhawks into the No. 10 spot. Duke No. 6 a week ago, dropped out of the top 10 after dropping a 7-6 decision to North Carolina. The Blue Devils meet UCLA Dec. 3.

Arkansas, which ended its regular season by trimming Texas Tech 34-6, advanced from No. 7 to sixth place. Navy, idle and awaiting its big service clash Saturday with Army, jumped a notch from eighth to seventh.

Auburn, ninth a week ago, whipped Florida State 57-21, and took over eighth. Auburn meets Alabama Saturday. Ohio State, 10th a week ago, beat Michigan 7-0 and took over ninth.

Notre Dame Fans Frustrated Souls

By RAY BURDICK
Editor

Pity the poor Notre Dame fan. He's a lost soul, a frustrated creature, his imagination and enthusiasm fired by the memory of the golden days of Knute

Rockne, the Four Horsemen, and Frank Leahy, but brought rudely to earth by the reality of this year's team.

This was the impression one got from the Fighting Irish partisans as they watched the Hawks roll up a 28-0 victory Saturday and the eighth straight loss for Notre Dame — a record of ineptitude unmatched in the school's history.

The old Notre Dame spirit was still there. The crowd cheered louder than any crowd anywhere would cheer for a losing team, but there were some important differences from the old days.

At one point the game was delayed for several minutes because the quarterback could not call signals over the din of the crowd, but . . . it was the Iowa quarterback who was having the trouble, when the Hawks were on the Notre Dame goal line.

The object of the cheering being, that anything, even the unheard signal, might give the Irish a little break.

The nature of the cheering has changed too. Instead of the old "Give 'em the axel" or "Run the score!" cries, several Notre Dame fans could be heard shouting in somewhat pleading tones, "Come on, give us one touchdown. Just one!"

So what's wrong with Notre Dame? Some speculate the trouble is that Catholic high school football stars no longer automatically head for South Bend. The dampening effect of a few mediocre seasons and good offers from other schools with bright reputations are cutting into the Irish talent supply.

Another reason might have been supplied by a Notre Dame cheerleader, who, after Ferguson broke loose for a long run, turned to Daily Iowan photographer, Jerry Dickinson, and remarked casually, "We're in the process of de-emphasizing athletics here."

But that's the story that's being spread at Notre Dame. After the game, an impromptu squad of lads offered this cheer to the disgruntled fans leaving the stadium: "Ac-a-dem-ic Ex-cell-ence! Ac-a-dem-ic Ex-cell-ence! Joe Smith, 3.2 grade point! Hurrah! Hurrah!"

Hawks Win Game — But Lose Coach

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — It was hard to describe the atmosphere of the Hawkeye dressing room here Saturday.

Certainly the squad had just finished a most successful season with an 8-1 record. And assuredly, the 28-0 win over Notre Dame was convincing, if not startling.

Yet there was little of the jubilation that usually marks the end of a hard-fought battle when the Hawks come out on top.

The players were overrun with spectators in the crowded quarters beneath the now-empty seats of the stadium. Outside, the sky was taking an ashen hue unto itself, so typical before the late autumn nightfall.

There seemed to be a bit of that gloom present in the dressing room, too. It was understandable. The Hawks were losing their coach.

Yes, Forest Evashevski had coached his last game. He was ready to go into the ranks of the retired, voluntarily kicked upstairs to the somewhat less ulcric job of director of Iowa athletics.

In the background, attempting to avoid reporters and the curious, walked Jerry Burns, who, in less than an hour, would be named coach.

The players didn't know who their boss next season was going to be. But they were hard pressed for words to describe the loss of Evy — the man many regarded as a father.

The players were pleased about the game, yes — but jubilant, no. Even though they dominated the statistics, there was little talk about the Notre Dame game.

All the chatter was directed at wishing Evashevski well in his new role and hoping that his successor would get the breaks he may need in the coming season.

The players didn't have to be sorry for their performance on the field in their final. They struck hard on the ground — and occasionally through the air — to effectively outmaneuver the Irish and record win No. 3.

But despite the 8-1 season, and despite the 28-0 win over always-dangerous Notre Dame, the squad was not happy.

For they were losing their coach. And for the Hawks, nothing could have been worse.

Sports Spectrum

By MIKE PAULY
Sports Editor

It's a long step upstairs for the young man who at the age of 33 inherits the title of Iowa's football Old Man.

For Jerry Burns, the road ahead may be rocky. Or it may be smooth. A lot depends on the attitude of the sometimes-fickle Iowa football fans who are in a position to encourage or to crucify this young man who will succeed Forest Evashevski Dec. 1.

It won't be easy for Burns to follow the Old Man's footsteps if he doesn't win. Already some unthinking fans are predicting that Iowa will have the nation's top-ranking collegiate squad next year.

That puts a lot of pressure on the new coach. In the first place, a great deal of Iowa's success this season has come because of a lucky bounce or a fortunate turn of events.

Secondly, despite the fact that there will be an abundance of talent returning next season, there are obvious holes to be patched.

No one disputes the talent Burns possesses. This, too, will make it rough for him if he doesn't win big in the coming seasons.

If the bounces go against Iowa — as they sometimes will — it will be the true fans who can stick it out with the new coach.

Probably no new mentor has ever walked into a tougher situation.

Following the man many regard as the nation's top strategist would be problem enough. But when some fans are already looking ahead to an undefeated season next year — well, that makes the job especially tough.

There were several people who remarked about the supposed lack of polish Burns displayed on a television show Sunday, when he appeared with Evy and sportscaster Ron Shoop.

It was back in 1958, Evashevski revealed, that he was convinced that Burns possessed the qualities necessary to move into the top Iowa coaching job.

The entire staff agrees with the selection and all the assistants have voiced support for the new coach. Burns, in turn, has called his staff "the best in the country."

But Burns will need more than just the backing of his assistants. He will need the support of all Iowa fans.

For when the bad bounces come — as they are wont to do — Burns will need support.

Without it he will suffer. True Iowa fans will back him all the way.

See Navy in Rose Bowl

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — If Navy beats Army Saturday the Middies apparently will be invited to play in the Rose Bowl.

Iowa and Minnesota, co-champions of the Big Ten, were still in the running for the berth in the New Year's Day classic today, but their chances apparently hinged on an Army victory over Navy.

The Big Five Conference — host team in the Rose Bowl — announced Sunday that it would be represented by Washington and said the opponent would not be named until after the Army-Navy game.

Navy has long been eyed by the Big Five as a possible Rose Bowl opponent. The Middies beat Washington 15-14 earlier in the season for the Huskies' only loss in 10 games.

Navy has lost only to Duke this fall but was not ranked as high as Iowa or Minnesota in last week's Associated Press poll.

Scheffing Named New Pilot of Detroit Tigers

DETROIT (AP) — Bob Scheffing, an ex-catcher with a reputation for handling young players, Monday was hired to manage the Detroit Tigers and restore vigor to the ailing club.

The 45-year-old former pilot of the Chicago Cubs got a two-year contract at an estimated yearly salary of $35,000. The veteran National League pitcher received the job after a seven-week search by the Tigers for a successor to Joe Gordon, who quit Oct. 3, one day after the end of the 1960 season.

"We hired Bob for two reasons," said John Fetzer, Tiger president. "He came about as highly recommended as any manager could be. Everyone we spoke to has a high regard for him."

"And he's considered a fine developer of young talent. I'm sure he's the man who can get the job done for us."

Scheffing, the Tigers' choice after Casey Stengel turned down the job, commented cautiously: "I don't feel I'm qualified to talk about the Tigers' problems right now," he said. "All I know is that they have them."

Scheffing, a St. Louis native, flew here Sunday night from the Scottsdale, Ariz., home for the news conference announcement of his signing.

The new manager faces an uphill chore in returning the Tigers to prominence in the American League. The club hasn't had a contender since 1950 and has finished as high as fourth only twice in the last 10 seasons. Detroit hasn't won a pennant since 1945.

Iowa Rated Second; Hawk Fans Unhappy

By BORIS YARO
Staff Writer

Iowa Second!

An almost universal reaction was one of stunned disbelief, SU-Iowans hoping for the No. 1 ranking and mythical national title, as well as a possible invitation to the Rose Bowl were shattered by the news that The Associated Press had placed Minnesota as the nation's top team.

As soon as the news was brought into The Daily Iowan newsroom via the AP wire that Minnesota was in first place, a Daily Iowan reporter took pencil and paper and sought student reaction.

The first person encountered was Matt Szykowny, Iowa's passing quarterback.

Reporter: Matt, Minnesota took first place in the AP poll.

Szykowny: "(censored) — I think we should be No. 1. We lost one game and they lost one game and we played the rougher schedule."

Next person encountered was Al Goldberg, A2, Rock Island. Upon hearing that Minnesota was first, Goldberg countered with "Are they really? I think Iowa should be No. 1. Minnesota didn't play as rough teams as Iowa did and the team that beat them (Purdue), we beat."

A Minnesota resident was the next person encountered, John Day, A3, Minneapolis. His reaction when told that Minnesota was first:

"I don't see how Minnesota should be first. Look how Iowa beat Ohio State and look at the record of Purdue — they beat Minnesota."

One Iowa fan, Wilson Lede, A4, Lake Charles, La., had this to say when told Iowa was second:

"I thought we'd be first. I thought wrong, a lot of people thought wrong. Heck, Iowa played a rougher schedule."

Wally Hilgenberg, A1, Wilton Junction had this to say: "Iowa should be No. 1 in the nation. They played the roughest schedule in the country. They played more teams in the top 20 than any other team in the country."

Bob Carpenter, A4, Louisville, Ky., commented: "I think it (the poll) is wrong. If Iowa isn't first, it's wrong. The competition Iowa had was the roughest in the country."

Bob Downer, A4, Newton said: "I'm a little surprised. Also, I'm a little disappointed. I think Iowa should be first. I base this on the schedule we played. Any team that had such a schedule and came out as well deserves the No. 1 spot."

Alex Korzeniewski, A2, Hamtramck, Mich., said: "Iowa should be first, and they should go to the Rose Bowl. If we don't go, I hope Navy does."

One more poll (UPI) remains to be heard from and loyal Iowans are hoping that their team will top these ratings. Whether first or second, Rose Bowl or not, this Iowa team is No. 1 in the hearts of Iowa fans.

Varsity, Freshmen Cagers To Tangle In Annual Exhibition Game Tonight

By JACK SKALICKY

Iowa's varsity basketball team will clash with its freshman counterpart tonight at the Iowa Field House in a contest which will pit the experience of varsity coach Sharm Scheuerman's team against the potential of coach Dick Schultz' freshman crew.

Game time is 7:30 p.m. There is no admission charge.

According to Scheuerman, the purpose of this annual event is "to give the varsity players a chance to get rid of first game jitters before the regular season starts." For the freshman, it will be their first and only public appearance of the year, and, with the help of game films, will give them a chance to analyze their basic moves.

The varsity season will begin officially Dec. 1, the first Thursday after Thanksgiving, when Iowa will host South Dakota State.

The lineups for both teams will probably be juggled right up to game time because of two doubtful starters on each squad. Varsity members Mike Woods and Tom Harris and freshman cagers Jerry Messick and Denny Couch are all hoping to be ready for tonight's action. Woods is nursing a bad cold, while Harris, a sophomore whom Scheuerman considers "one of our most rapidly improving players who will see quite a bit of action," has a sprained thumb.

Messick, a 6-8 center, is a doubtful starter because of a bad back, while Couch has a sprained ankle. If one of these, or both, isn't ready, then Coach Schultz will be forced to manipulate his lineup by shifting positions and introducing Gus Schroeder, 6-3, and 6-7 Doug Melhaus.

In either condition, the freshman squad figures to be taller than the upperclassmen by as much as two inches on the average. Frank Allen will operate at the forward position on defense, but on offense, will drop back with Don Nelson to form a double pivot underneath. This is quite an innovation from Scheuerman's single post offense of last year. Nelson, a 6-5 junior from Rock Island, was Iowa's top scorer last year.

Hansen Top AL Rookie

FT. KNOX, Ky. (AP) — Pvt. Ron Hansen tripped and almost fell on the parade ground Monday after learning he had been named American League rookie of the year for 1960.

"I can't believe it... unbelievable," said the 22-year-old shortstop for the Baltimore Orioles, dropping out of the close order drill formation.

Hansen, whose bat and glove work helped catapult the Orioles from sixth place to second in one year, collected 22 of 24 votes from a special committee of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

The other two were split between his teammates, first baseman Jim Gentile and pitcher Chuck Estrada.

"I'm so surprised at this, there is nothing to say. This is something every ball player dreams of but never believes will happen." Hansen won't be released from the Army until April 15, 1961. When he goes into the reserves.

Tucker Leads Hawkeyes To 8th in NCAA Meet

Jim Tucker, Iowa's All-American runner, Monday led the Hawkeyes to an eighth place finish in the NCAA Cross Country meet at East Lansing, Mich.

Iowa's team total was 182 points. The Hawks finished third last year.

Tucker matched his 1959 showing by placing ninth in a field of over 200 runners. Thus, the Hampton junior will retain his All-American title. That honor is given to the top 15 finishers in the NCAA race.

Houston's Al Lawrence spurred his team to victory by winning the individual title in a record time. The Houston junior won his straight title by rounding the four-mile course in 19:28.2.

His first place finish, coupled with other top showings by the Houston outfit, gave Houston the team title with a low total of 54 points.

Iowa's eighth place showing capped off one of the best Hawkeye harrier seasons in recent years.

Physicist and Writer Find Similar Ideas in Own Fields

By JIM CAREY
Staff Writer

James A. Van Allen, head of the SUI Physics Department, and Donald Justice, Poetry Workshop professor, found their two very different teaching fields are the same in at least one way — both writing and physics depend on "idle notions."

The SUians participated in a colloquium on teaching Saturday. They agreed that activated idle notions are common to the writing and physics disciplines. However, Justice said while scientists use activated notions as a means to an end, writers often just build around the notion.

VAN ALLEN hard they break and if they don't hit hard enough they bounce — that's nuclear physics, its as simple as that. Going from science to creative

Labor Unions Pressing Kennedy For Cabinet Man

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labor union leaders are pressing President-elect John F. Kennedy to put a union man in the Cabinet.

They feel the time has come for unions again to have representation at the top government level. This, they suggest, could be accomplished by putting one of their number in as secretary of labor or in some other Cabinet post.

What the unions chiefs really want — and feel they deserve on the basis of organized labor support for the Democrats — is a major voice in the new administration.

Van Allen said, "The job of a teacher is to take a room full of live wires and get them well grounded."

He went on to list several popular misconceptions about science.

- 1) Physics is all worked out — all a person has to do is follow formulas.
  - 2) Science is exact.
  - 3) One must be an oddball to be in science.
  - 4) Science is objective — there is no room for opinion.
  - 5) Science is merely applied mathematics.
- The noted physicist added that the essence of science is the investigative spirit.
- "Science is a thoroughly human enterprise," he said "and one must class investigative spirit as human nature."
- Van Allen went on to say science frontiers are subjective, intuitive and often wrong.

SUI Students Given Grant In Physics

Two physics students recommended by James A. Van Allen, head of the SUI Physics Department, have received Van Allen Scholarships for the 1960-61 academic year.

The $250 scholarships have been awarded to Curtis Laughlin, G. Sanborn, and William A. Whelpley, A3, Cedar Rapids. The scholarships were awarded from a $1,400 fund established in honor of Dr. Van Allen in the spring of 1958.

Whelpley, who is a member of the Explorer satellite.

The Van Allen Scholarship Fund was begun by Paul Franzenburg Jr., Conrad businessman, with the Old Gold Development Fund named as the official agency to receive contributions and transfer funds to scholarship winners through Dr. Van Allen.

An exhibition of chant manuscripts and books is on display in the Music Library. The manuscripts, including an example of Byzantine chant, date from the 13th to the 20th century.

The exhibit was planned by students in the musicology seminar. Most of the manuscripts are loaned by the Special Collections Department of the University Library, but some are loaned by faculty members in the Department of Music.

The Music Library is located in the basement of Eastlawn. The exhibition will last through Dec. 1.

Maralynn Torode, A2, Des Moines, is the new editor of the Panhellenic handbook for 1961, the Panhellenic Council announced Monday.

The new editor was chosen by the council after they screened applications from interested girls. Miss Torode will hold a meeting of all chapter page editors Dec. 6.

The handbook is sent to all freshman and transfer girls who indicate on their application for admission that they are interested in rushing. It contains a story about each sorority's activities of the past year.

The book also includes schedules of fall rushing parties, hints on proper dress for the parties, and rules of rushing etiquette.

writing, Justice said, "Idle notions are certainly something writers have in common with the scientists." But, he added, "Creativity is too tricky and private to set forth a list of rules to follow."

"We have to refer to examples and models, but the students in the poetry and writing workshops have to produce their own subject matter," he said.

"We try to produce a situation in which talented apprentices can work with one another — exchanging ideas and 'idle notions.'"

Pleads Guilty To 2 Counts

Jess Hall, 42, Cedar Rapids, pleaded guilty in District Court here Tuesday of charges of OMVI and leaving the scene of an accident.

Hall was sentenced to a fine of $300 or 90 days in county jail and his driver's license was suspended for 90 days on the charge of drunken driving. He was given a one year suspended sentence on the charge of leaving the scene of a personal injury accident. He was paroled to his attorney, William R. Bernau, on the condition he maintain good behavior.

The charges resulted from an accident Aug. 6 involving a car driven by Hall and a motorcycle ridden by James R. Edmunds on Highway 218 north of Iowa City.

The car driven by Hall struck Edmunds' motorcycle from the rear, throwing it into a ditch alongside the road. Hall was arrested a short time later near the scene of the accident.

I entered the TVarium at the Union in the middle of the show (which is always a good idea because one thereby attains a degree of suspense which the plot would otherwise lack) and said to myself:

"Aha, this is one of those stupid 1920 gangster movies." Which turned out to be true, of course, the chief difference being that we have better photography now and the actors don't walk like they had ants in their pants. # Automatic Safety Control

Automatic control of highway traffic may be the answer to the problem of an increasing accident rate, according to John O'Mara, associate professor of civil engineering at SUI. O'Mara spoke to engineers attending the annual meeting of the Iowa Section of the American Society of Civil Engineers in Des Moines Thursday afternoon.

The SUI professor described experimental demonstrations of automatic traffic controls which have been held at Princeton, N.J. When a car equipped to respond to special controls is driven on an oval track, the controls automatically direct the car around the course. When the driver of the car tries deliberately to steer the car off the automatic path, the brakes apply automatically, according to O'Mara.

The SUI professor also described experiments involving a car with automatic controls and one with no special equipment. As the conventional auto slows down or speeds up, the automatically controlled car, which is following, reacts in the same way maintaining a safe interval all the while. The reason for this experimentation is concern for safety, according to O'Mara. "The largest number of fatalities on highways now occur in single car accidents—the car simply runs off the road and the driver or passenger is killed. If we are to avoid this type of accident, we must try to make this occurrence impossible," he said.

The automatic control as demonstrated is an advance for safety, but more research must be undertaken, O'Mara told the engineers.

"Practically all the development work so far has been done by private companies. Many of these say that their experiments will stop unless public organizations sponsor additional work especially in the very costly field development and testing which is the next necessary step," he said.

O'Mara deplored the fact that public highway organizations spend only about one fifth of one per cent of their income on research of all kinds, while industrial and governmental research funds average about two per cent of income.

Pleads Guilty To 2 Counts

SUI Pharmacy College Participates in Survey

The SUI College of Pharmacy is participating in a survey of pharmacy colleges of state universities in the Middle West, Dean Louis Zopf of the SUI College of Pharmacy has announced. The survey is being made by the Committee on Institutional Cooperation of the Big Ten Universities and the University of Chicago.

The chief objectives of this survey are to learn the ways in which the colleges of pharmacy can be helpful to each other through such devices as the sharing of expensive equipment, sharing of outstanding teachers and research workers, avoiding undesirable duplication in highly specialized areas.

Dr. Melvin W. Green, director of educational relations for the American Council on Pharmaceutical Education which is assisting in the study, will visit each participating institution during the survey. Zopf expects Dr. Green to visit SUI in January.

At that time conferences will be arranged for Dr. Green with all pharmacy personnel as well as those persons from other colleges in the University who have a part in the curriculum of pharmacy students.

In addition to SUI, universities included in the survey are University of Illinois, Ohio State University, Purdue University, University of Michigan, University of Minnesota and University of Wisconsin.

Studies of the Committee on Institutional Cooperation are being financed by the Carnegie Corporation. Chief objective of the committee is to collect and analyze information concerning cooperative efforts of the eleven universities within the Council of Ten and the University of Chicago. This information is used to indicate areas where further cooperation can increase the effectiveness of the institutions.

Activity Award To SUI Coed

Mrs. C. Joneal Richardson, A4, Iowa City, has been awarded an activity scholarship for the 1960-61 academic year.

The award was made by the University Scholarship Award Committee on the recommendation of Himmie Voxman, professor and head of the SUI Music Department, in recognition of Mrs. Richardson's "academic record and her outstanding achievements in band and music activities."

Mrs. Richardson will receive $120 each semester to cover SUI tuition and fees and $30 each semester for private instrumental instruction. She plays the viola in the SUI Symphony Orchestra and with the SUI chamber music group.

Iowans Pay Half Million In Tax Deficiencies

DES MOINES (AP) — Iowans pay half a million dollars in tax deficiencies every year because they do not follow the rules in claiming exemptions for dependents in their Federal income tax returns, a Federal tax man said Monday.

C. E. Hollebrands, a supervisor for the Internal Revenue Service Auditing Division in Des Moines, was one of the speakers at the Iowa Bankers Association tax school.

Hollebrands said that many of the difficulties arise when divorced persons fail to carry out agreements they have made as to which of them shall claim a child as an exemption.

Tea Honors Knipschild

A tea in honor of Robert Knipschild, SUI visiting instructor in drawing and painting, was held Sunday at Coe College, Cedar Rapids.

Paintings and drawings by Knipschild are being exhibited at Coe College from Nov. 4-27, and the tea was a special feature of the exhibit.

Knipschild's work has been exhibited at the Whitney Museum, Museum of Modern Art, Metropolitan Museum, and other galleries.

Currently on leave from the University of Wisconsin, he has been an instructor at the Baltimore Museum, University of Connecticut, and the American University. He received a B.A. degree from the University of Wisconsin and an M.S.A. from Cranbrook Academy of Art.

Parliament Row Over Ford Sale

LONDON (HTNS) — Chancellor of the Exchequer Selwyn Lloyd told the House of Commons Monday that he has approved the Ford Motor Co. of America bid to buy up all the outstanding shares of the British Ford Motor Co.

His decision led to a debate in which Labor Party members, with the sympathy of some Conservative members, roasted the Government for selling out an entire industry to American control.

It also led to after-hours trading in Ford shares that brought their Eleven graduate students at Iowa have been awarded the newly established Iowa Industries Fellowships in Writing. These fellowships begin a unique relationship between the arts and business.

Paul Engle, director of the SUI Writers Workshop, said the fellows are proof of the concern for development of a native culture by the part of businessmen and industry. It is also hoped that they will enhance the position of SUI as a congenial center for the creative arts, he said.

Fifteen Iowa industries contributed over $5,000 to establish the fellowships in creative writing.

The recipients of the Iowa Industries Fellowships in Writing for the 1960-61 academic year are: Lawson Inada, Fresno, Calif.; Tod Perry, New York City; Christopher Wiseman, Hingham, Mass.; Eun-Kook Kim, Philadelphia, Pa.; Anne Basalyga, Pennsylvania; James Francis, Dry Creek, Mo.; Susan Diamond, Boston, Mass.; Art Plimk, White Plains, N.Y.; Alfred M. Lee, Louisville, Ky.; and Stephen Kitt Oberbe, St. Louis, Mo.

SUI President Virgil M. M... cher, a member of the board of the SUI Foundation which is administering the fellowship program, presented the students with fellowship checks.

"The SUI program in creative writing has brought national prominence to the state, and the notion of the name Iowa in a unified way in many useful places," said Howard Hall, president of Iowa Manufacturing Co., Cedar Rapids.

The close-range look at Iowa will make the creative writing students from other countries more understanding of the United States when they return to their own countries, continued Loren Hickerson, executive director of the SUI Foundation, pointed out that there is a great deal of literary talent in the United States but SUI was the first academic institution to set up a special program to train it.

"The response has been great, and the success so equalled, that the resources of the University are no longer large enough to handle the many applications which come from parts of the country and from Europe, the Orient and the Near East," commented Hickerson on the establishment of the industries fellowships.

In 1961 Random House will publish a large anthology of poetry and fiction by the best writing students from the Iowa writing program. "This will be solid and substantial evidence that the work done at SUI in the past two years, as the writing program has been developed, is unsurpassed anywhere," stated Engle.
