SUI Faces Finals Dilemma— Punt To Pass or Book It?

Party, Drink, Be Joyous To Get 'C's'

Final Week Advice
From Unknowing—
His Accum Is 2.16

By a "C" STUDENT

Speaking from the gentlemanly "C" stand-point, here are some jolly tips on exam week from a jolly little tipsy.

First of all, if you have about a two-point GPA, it is senseless to assume that you have kept up in all your courses throughout the semester.

Therefore we can immediately dispel the old No. 1 theory that to come through big on finals, one should, of course, have been studying all semester long.

We will then get down to brass tacks, and relate what in one man's opinion is the best way to up the old grade point to the minimum required to keep off the mailing list of the Office of Student Affairs.

You're a guy who didn't come to college just for book learnin'. You are among the enlightened who have come to realize that to derive all the advantages from a college education you just can't spend all your time in the books.

So your spirits are thriving, and you've been having a hell of a good time, but you're flunking Earth Science. Even though you know that the only reason you're flunking it is that it isn't a genuine intellectual challenge. You just have to pass that course because you can't stand another semester of licking every stone in sight to see if it is rock salt.

The first thing you do is put in a good eight hours at the local pub; then put that sort of thing behind you — until after that final.

Then you consider that guy who lives down the hall. Of course you know he's a fink, but he did ace the course last semester.

You consult the clod down the hall, and he agrees to tutor you for a couple of hours (for the house grade point).

You get together with him, and he tells you everything he knows about rock lab. You don't understand a word of it and keep coming up with the same old question: "But what if he asks us to explain erosion and diastrophism?"

Then that terribly clever and stimulating fellow with the 1.6 accum comes up with some truly realistic advice. "Forget it, man. Come and down a few, then go in and punt the thing like any red-blooded American boy," he tells you.

So you take his advice. You go up to the usual booth, and you get fairly happy despite the weight of every rock in the world on your shoulders.

When you get to the test, wend your way through an endless chain of utterly ridiculous questions, turn in your paper, go home and write a letter addressed: Office of the Registrar, Parsons College.

Too Much, Too Late

So you think you've been letting the studies pile-up. This befuddled SUIowan really has his problems now that those days of final reckoning are upon us. Fortified by full coffee pot and a spirit of determination he has just begun to fight. He'll give it the old college try and delve through those forboding looking volumes yet. We're sure that by the time he takes that final (at 8 a.m. today, maybe) he'll know it cold. And the best of luck to you too.

Luck, Instinct, Intuition, Rest Boost Grades

Final Week Advice
From the Knowing
Her Accum Is 3.58

By an "A" STUDENT

Somebody up there likes me. Somehow through the educational throes I have maintained a 3.58 grade point accumulative.

And now they want me to give you advice about final week.

First, you must be naturally lucky. Some intuitive instinct tells you what is the most important, most relevant and most significant material given during the semester.

This "instinct" involves more than just luck, although that will suffice if nothing else is available. An instructor will usually stress certain aspects during lecture and discussion. This is the material to study and review before the final examination.

Secondly — be alert when you go into take the test. "Burning the midnight oil" only defeats its own purpose.

If, by some unhappy circumstance, you have neglected a subject until the fatal "last minute," the best thing to do is to go to bed and forget it.

Thirdly, relaxation is important during final week. Take time out from studies for a few hands of bridge, a cup of coffee, or a walk around the block as often as you feel you need it. Continuous studying only makes you sleepy and more unresponsive to the subject.

Instructors at SUI give different types of examinations. The two most common are the proverbial multiple choice, or "multiple guess" exams and the essay exam.

Preparation for multiple choice tests is more difficult. To do well on this type of examination, you must be able to recognize details, as well as apply them to general trends.

For an essay examination, study more general ideas. Preparation of an outline, tracing trends and developments of the subject (such as Western Civilization), can help you organize your thoughts when the instructor passes out those all-important little booklets.

Details, when included in an essay exam, help. But include only the most significant.

Go through all your notes just prior to the test. If you study best in the morning, then get up early and review. Otherwise, study until midnight and go to bed. Eight hours sleep each night during final week is the best preparation you can make for examinations.

See Possibility Of Kennedy-'K' Meeting In March

WASHINGTON (HTNS) — Although no commitments have been made, Soviet Premier Khrushchev has been given to understand that an informal non-negotiating meeting with President Kennedy is in the cards, it was understood Thursday night.

As to timing, President Kennedy has let it be known that he does not want to be rushed into a meeting. But if Khrushchev should insist on attending the March session of the United Nations, it is possible that the Soviet Premier would be invited to pay a call on the President at that time.

It has not been kept secret from Premier Khrushchev that there is no wild enthusiasm in the United States over his evident desire to head the Soviet delegation during the March disarmament debates.

Europeans Flee Congo

KAMPALA, Uganda — Reports from Uganda's West Nile district and from Congo amateur radio operators say large numbers of Belgian, French and American missionaries are fleeing from a new terror campaign and trying to escape into Uganda.

Blithe Spirit

Elvira, the ghost who brings trouble, appears to her now-remarried husband in Noel Coward's play, "Blithe Spirit." The three-act comedy is being presented by the Iowa City Community Theater through Saturday night. Elvira is played by Mrs. Lee Brown, School of Journalism librarian. The ghost-like effect was obtained by double exposure.

Storm Delays Return Of 2 Released Fliers

WASHINGTON — A snowstorm Thursday forced two Air Force wives to wait at least another day before being reunited with their husbands, just freed by the Russians after nearly seven months in captivity.

Assuming the weather clears enough, Capt. John R. McKone and Freeman B. Olmstead will land some time after noon Friday at Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland, a few miles outside the capital.

President Kennedy — who announced their release by the Soviet Union at his first news conference Wednesday night — will be on hand to extend the nation's welcome home to the two fliers.

Meanwhile, Sen. Styles Bridges (R-N.H.), told the Senate "I hope the President will make clear soon" whether anything was promised to the U.S.S.R. in return for freeing McKone and Olmstead.

At his news conference, Kennedy indicated the Russians did not ask any concessions and that this country made none.

McKone and Olmstead are the only known survivors of a six-man crew aboard an RB47 reconnaissance craft shot down by Soviet planes over the Barents Sea in the far north last July 1. The Russians have held them prisoner ever since.

Mrs. McKone and Mrs. Olmstead, who is in the late stages of pregnancy, were rushed here Thursday from Topeka, Kan., aboard an Air Force plane — only to learn poor flying conditions were keeping their husbands overnight at the base in Goose Bay, Labrador.

The bad weather apparently fouled up Washington-Goose Bay communications and the excited wives were unable to talk to their newly liberated husbands by radio telephone.

Officials managed to establish contact with Goose Bay from Halifax, N.S., and an officer escorting the two captains reported them "just fine — in fine physical shape and, of course, overwhelmingly happy."

An Air Force spokesman in New York said the two men were taken to the Goose Bay post exchange to get new Air Force uniforms and presents for their families and were given routine physical examinations at the base hospital.

FDIC Starts Big Payoff In Sheldon

SHELDON — They lined up in sub-zero weather. Most wore solemn expressions, some admitted to being worried.

All clutched a bank statement as if it was their life's savings. For some it was.

Thus began one of the biggest payoffs in Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. history Thursday.

The money was going to insured depositors of the defunct Sheldon National Bank, whose assistant cashier, Mrs. Bernice Geiger, 58, has admitted embezzling more than $2 million from the bank over the last 30 to 40 years.

In the next two to three weeks, an FDIC official said, an estimated 2,200 depositors will get their savings back — at least to the insured limit of $10,000.

There are about 51 depositors who have more than the $10,000 insured maximum in the 56-year-old bank, said Albert E. Anderson, chief of the division of liquidation of the FDIC.

Their chances of collecting in full depend on how much is left over after the insured deposits are paid. The remaining assets will be pro rated among those depositors.

Meanwhile, the woman who created all the confusion in her hometown remained in jail at Sioux City in lieu of $10,000 bond. U.S. Dist. Atty. F. E. Van Alstine said his office was preparing a bill of particulars but that it was not ready.

He said Mrs. Geiger's attorney, Warren Dunkle, has indicated she will plead guilty. Dunkle, however, would not comment on what the plea will be.

SUIowans Feel Effects Of Bank's Shutdown

The effects of the $2 million embezzlement at the Sheldon National Bank are being felt by several SUIowans.

At least three students from Sheldon have had checks bounce since the bank was closed. Dave Bollman, A1, has had several checks returned that were written a couple weeks before the bank closed. Bill Bruns, A3, wrote a check to a friend at least a week before the check was returned to him.

Portuguese Rebels Ignore Navy Plea To Turn Back

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — The Santa Maria, with Portuguese rebels at the helm, sped on Thursday night, pursued by the U.S. Navy in its biggest peacetime tracking operation.

The Portuguese who seized the sleek gray liner Sunday ignored a U.S. Navy plea to turn back and land the 588 passengers — 38 of them Americans — at a South American port.

Portugal's speedy new frigate the Peru Escobar was steaming to intercept the Santa Maria and the owner of the liner predicted the frigate will soon catch it.

The rebels have declared they will scuttle the liner if interfered with. A rebel spokesman hinted Wednesday the passengers aboard would be used as hostages if necessary.

In a radioed message, rebel Capt. Henrique Malta Galvao said he was sailing for an unnamed neutral port to discharge the passengers.

U.S. Navy authorities in Port of Spain, Trinidad, said the nuclear submarine Seawolf had made contact — presumably by radio — with the Santa Maria. They said her present course indicated the Santa Maria was making for Dakar, Senegal, on the westernmost tip of Africa.

While the foe of Portuguese Premier Antonio de Oliveira Salazar had expressed a willingness to talk with U.S. officials, he sent no reply to an urgent message Wednesday night from the Navy.

"Request you proceed any port northern South America you choose to discharge passengers," messaged Adm. Robert L. Dennison, commander in chief of the U.S. Atlantic Fleet. "Will attempt to arrange conference aboard Santa Maria as you request."

The Navy put four destroyers and 18 planes into a trailing operation. This is primarily to insure the safety of the passengers.

Capt. Edward R. Hunt, assistant chief of staff operations for the Caribbean Sea frontier, said there is no intention of interfering with the liner.

Dixie Storm Fatal to 46

By The Associated Press

A massive storm battered Texas and the southland with sleet and icy rain Thursday, then began dumping heavy snows as it roared up the eastern seaboard.

The death toll mounted quickly. At least 46 persons died in traffic accidents, of exposure and heart attacks or of other causes attributed to the weather.

Ice power lines snapped under the weight, leaving many areas without electric service in a cold wave that gripped the eastern two-thirds of the nation.

The Weather Bureau alerted the middle Atlantic states and southern New England for snows up to 8 inches deep by this morning.

The freezing rain, sleet and snow created highway havoc from Texas to the Northeast.

In the West, a storm lying off the coast ended Southern California's drought as 1.20 inches of rain hit Los Angeles.

New York braced for its third major snowfall in seven weeks.

Chicago was blanketed by an inch of snow earlier in the day.

Plane Disappears With 23 Aboard Off Canada Coast

ARGENTINA, Nfld. — A U.S. Military Air Transport Service plane with 23 aboard vanished Thursday over Canada's frozen Atlantic coastline. At just about the same time a Navy plane reported seeing an explosion in the air.

The transport was carrying 13 passengers and 10 crewmen from Morocco to its home base at Norfolk, Va., via the Azores and Newfoundland. It was due to land at Argentina early in the morning.

An Iowan was listed as one of the crewmen. He is Aviation Machinist Mate D. R. Smith, son of Mrs. Ida Alden, of Dougherty.

The last word to the ground from the four-engine C118 was received by the control center at Gander at 2:30 a.m., local time. The pilot made no mention of trouble and gave his position as 455 miles southeast of Argentina, site of a big military airbase.

That Time Again

Here, made public for the first time, are two sure-fire tips on how to do well in your finals:

-Ray Burdick

Money in the Gutters

H. R. Gross, Iowa's Third District Republican representative whose chief claim to fame is that he's anti-everything, may have a point in his latest objection to the way money flows in the gutters of Washington.

Gross, who has scored all from the U.S. foreign aid program to the amount of toothpaste the President uses in the morning, most recently assailed the hoopla and expense at the Inauguration of President Kennedy.

Gross contends it is doubtful if costs of Kennedy's Inauguration ever will be fully computed and reported. But Gross reported to his district that the inauguration was, in his opinion, "without a doubt the costliest, brassiest inaugural in the history of Washington."

But Gross didn't stop there. He added: "It is to be hoped that some future President-elect will put a stop to 80 per cent or more of the hoopla and expense in connection with his Inauguration. This would seem to make sense - at least until something can be done about retiring the nation's astronomical debt."

Some of Gross's ire comes, no doubt, from the fact that it was a Democrat upon whom this money and hoopla was lavished.

Yet it would seem that there was a superfluous amount spent on the myriad ceremonies surrounding Kennedy's swearing in.

We doubt, though, that even the amount of money spent at the Inauguration would start to retire the debt. But Gross has a point.

This time, at least, we'll have to agree with him.

Liberal Democrats Unhappy With New Administration

By ROWLAND EVANS JR.

HERALD TRIBUNE NEWS SERVICE WASHINGTON - In the era of "Modern Republicanism," which was not so very long ago, a Republican of impeccable orthodoxy put his finger on a political dilemma.

"No, dammit, I hold no brief for any kind of hyphenated Republican party," he said, "but what can I do? It's my party and my President and I have nowhere else to go."

Today the liberal Democrats are singing the same refrain. They have just taken a beating on Rule 22, the Senate's filibuster rule. They're not particularly pleased by Kennedy's Cabinet, which smells to them a bit too middle-of-the-road. Their struggle to get on the best committees left them, if not quite naked, at least out in the cold.

Example: Sen. Clark of Pennsylvania was held off the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and Sen. Dodd of Connecticut was put on, even though Clark has a two-year seniority edge over Dodd; and Sen. Blakely of Texas, as soundly conservative as Fort Knox, was picked for a vacancy on the Judiciary Committee over two Northern Liberals both of whom outranked him - Sen. Young of Ohio and Sen. Burdick of North Dakota.

In the House, the liberal-tinged "Democratic Study Group" promoted an outright purge of Southerners such as Rep. Colmer of Mississippi, who deserted his national ticket in the campaign slate of electors. This was their way to loosen up the Rules Committee. But the "study group" is having to settle for a less-painful solution - the simple addition of enough new members to the Rules Committee to break the conservative stranglehold.

It is understandable that the Democratic liberals are unhappy, much as the conservative Republicans were unhappy a few years back, but the Democrats have no place to go, either. They elected their man President and they're stuck with him, for better or worse.

The decision in the Senate to send the rules controversy to the Senate Rules Committee, where it faces a long delay, does not on the face of it seem significant. After all, the Northerners have been trying to modify the rule for years and they never have succeeded. The only change in the last 10 years was drafted by Lyndon B. Johnson, and it simply reduced by an eyelash the required number of Senators to end debate - from two-thirds of the entire Senate to two-thirds of those present and voting.

The proposal advanced this year by the Northerners asked majority cloture, but no one took that seriously. Debate has been ended only four times by the use of cloture. Had the three-fifths proposal been in force over the years, cloture could presumably have been had on twice that number of occasions - assuming that every one had voted precisely the way they did vote.

In other words, the three-fifths requirement, even though it would only advance the prospect of forcibly ending debate by another eyelash, nevertheless would advance it. And the liberals believe that this advance could be decisive if and when the new President sends a civil rights program to Congress. They fully anticipate a civil rights package from Kennedy, and they believe that toward the middle or end of the session he will be compelled to put his weight behind it.

Thus the close 50-to-46 Senate vote to send the rules controversy to committee is not likely to make a particle of difference to the Kennedy program this year. His minimum wage, depressed areas, health, schools and housing bills will scarcely be affected by the present Rule 22.

Kennedy and his Senate leadership have bought time, two years of it.

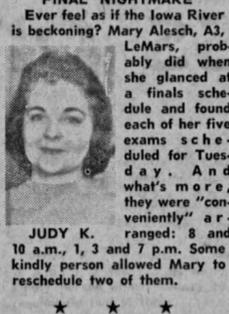

The cost? Plaints that will not be translated into action by liberals who cannot take a political walk, because they have nowhere to go.

The profit? A fast start on the legislative program (minus civil rights) with maximum Southern comfort.

FINAL NIGHTMARE Ever feel as if the Iowa River is beckoning? Mary Alesch, A3, LaMars, probably did when she glanced at a finals schedule and found each of her five exams scheduled for Tuesday. And what's more, they were "conveniently" arranged: 8 and 10 a.m., 1, 3 and 7 p.m. Some kindly person allowed Mary to reschedule two of them.

George Tresnak, A3/A4, Cedar Rapids, says his big final week problem is "To B or not to B?" and hopes his professors will ask themselves the same question when grading his exams.

FINAL FATIGUE? One SUI coed was about to enter the Library's second floor

Attached to 13 red roses delivered to the Pi Beta Phi house recently was a card reading: "To the 'Unlucky 13' from the 'Interested Few.'" The "Unlucky 13" consists of the 13 Pi Phi who are neither pinned, chained or engaged. Since members of Phi Delta Theta fraternity were the only ones who knew about this unique group, the coeds decided to send the "Interested Few" a telegram. It read: "ACTIONS SPEAK LOUDER THAN WORDS!"

An exhibit of the Chicago Book Clinic's award-winning books of 1960 is now on display in the Library, following a delay at the University of Minnesota. Were the Rose Bowl chumps reading when they should have been on the gridiron?

Said Means: "A policeman happened to walk by as I was using a rigid digit to scratch my nose, and I guess he interpreted it as an impudent gesture. Gee, a guy can't even relieve an itch anymore."

"Coalition? What Coalition?"

More Unanswered Questions Following Flyers' Release

By ROSCOE DRUMMOND WASHINGTON - There is every reason to welcome the action of the Soviet Union in freeing the two U.S. flyers whose plane, the RB-47, the Russians shot down over the international waters of the Barents Sea last July.

DRUMMOND

But it would be an egregious mistake to construe this gesture as in itself easing any of the significant tensions of the cold war or as offering evidence that the Soviets want to negotiate productively with President Kennedy.

Kennedy is making it clear that he does not intend to be drawn into premature, unprepared summit talks. To him, this means proof that there is some basis for a meeting of minds.

To free two American flyers who should never have been detained and whose plane should never have been shot down (since it was not over Soviet territory) is no evidence whatsoever that Khrushchev wants to settle anything with Kennedy except on Soviet terms.

It may be evidence that Khrushchev wants to build a little good will before approaching the new Administration on any score. As such it should be accepted for exactly what it is - a rectification of something which was wrong in the first place.

What about the 11 American flyers who had not been heard from since their unarmed U.S. transport plane, which lost its bearing a few miles over the Soviet-Turkish frontier in September, 1958, was shot down by Soviet fighter planes?

At that time Soviets turned over the bodies of six dead U.S. airmen and blandly assured us that they had not seen, had no knowledge of, and had done nothing to the other members of the crew.

The news, which has now come out via East Germany and was reprinted perhaps accidentally by a Soviet magazine, is that the Soviets captured the 11 flyers after they had parachuted to safety and immediately imprisoned them. There is still no word from them or about them; Khrushchev says he doesn't be-

He held up his hands in a grand gesture of puzzlement to Nixon and exclaimed: 'Why should we hide anything? Why are Americans so suspicious of Secretary Dulles he made as about this?'"

Thoroughly Enjoyable - 'Blithe Spirit' - Very Funny Play

By VIRGINIA PETERS Reviewed for the DI In the first place Blithe Spirit is a very funny play, and if the Iowa City Community Theatre doesn't do full justice to it, they certainly make a fine try. The evening was thoroughly enjoyable.

Director Rosemary K. Hartup is to be commended for a fast-paced version of Noel Coward's farce. The play holds up amazingly well even in moments when the production was less than superb.

It was interesting to see how well the complicated technical problems were handled in spite of the central staging employed. I was doubtful that the final scene could be effective in this style, and I was delighted at the skill which which the difficulties were resolved.

The cast as a whole would probably have been better off if they had not attempted British accents. By the second scene the dialects had almost disappeared and the play was the better for it. Occasionally the actors rushed through their lines most immoderately and the sense of some lovely lines was lost.

James Kerr as the ghost-ridden Charles Condomine gave a spirited performance which lost nothing by its occasional tinge of Noel Coward. It was notably in his performance and in several others that the arena staging allowed the audience a much closer look at some excellent comedy reactions. Mr. Kerr also showed a good ensemble spirit, especially in his second-act scene with his second wife.

Patti Mott as the second wife, Ruth, gave a subtle performance which was marred occasionally by a slurred delivery of the lines. The character took a sharp edge in Mrs. Mott's interpretation which seemed to add force and wit to what can be a rather ordinary role.

Bea Gardner had moments as Madame Arcati although she missed a good many opportunities. The part is a difficult one and Mrs. Gardner's performance was adequate if not inspired.

There was considerable grace and charm in Linda Ann Brown's Elvira and nice supporting jobs by Jo McGlone and Dr. William R. Beasley.

The Community Theatre certainly shows that they have the talent and drive to make attending their productions a worthwhile theatrical experience. It is to be hoped that many Iowa Citizens will take advantage of the opportunity and make a trip to the Fairgrounds this weekend.

Movie Review - 'Aparajito' Proves Sincerity No Substitute for Artistry

By DAVID ROUTON DI Movie Reviewer If "Aparajito," the second film in the trilogy, "Father Pan-chali," directed by Indian photographer Satyajit Ray, had only maintained the level of poetic expression of its opening scenes, it would have been the cinematic masterpiece most critics say it is. It did not, and for this reason and with a certain reluctance I am compelled to deliver a minority report in the face of the virtually unanimous critical approval which has greeted this picture, now at the Iowa Theatre.

The opening shots of the river front in an Indian city reveal Ray as potentially a master of the kind of poetic transformation of the documentary technique perfected by the late Robert Flaherty. The camera scans the broad and ponderous Ganges, then observes the daily ritual by dawn light of an old man feeding the birds. He stands stiffly silhouetted against the sky as they rush to him in a flurry of wings. Next it moves along the waterfront watching the public bathers, floating in the waters and standing or sitting on the steps at the brink in communal and comfortable disarray.

But all too soon the plot makes its appearance. It is a sort of Bourgeois Progress - a lengthy and too leisurely account of how, despite near poverty, a bright young lad of India, son of a modest priest-teacher, takes his first steps on the road to success by winning a scholarship to a Calcutta Academy. This Horatio Alger drama is rendered more poignant through the emotional and financial sacrifices to progress Western-style, made by his mother (widowed early in the film), whose health wanes as her son's fortunes wax.

This quasi-tragic element does contribute depth and interest to what would have been a really dull tale. And the actors play their parts with fine restraint, sensitivity and conviction. But none of this is enough to rescue "Aparajito" from triteness and sentimentality.

What could have turned the trick would have been more of the visual evocation of city and country life in India. Ray (who is, I believe, a professional still photographer turned film man) communicates the movement in the narrow streets, the fascinating and uneasy image of squatting holy men chanting and burning tapers in the temples or the funny-solemn spectacle of the sacred tribe of the monkey chattering and climbing unrestrained among the temple bells, with sensitivity and true artistic power.

These elements, which I believe should have been the heart of the film, are only decorative and incidental. They are introduced at intervals to save the sagging story line, and are, too often, too little and too late.

The real value of "Aparajito" lies in the depiction of the 'Old India'. But the film's core is a modern tale with the moral message of, say, "David Copperfield," but without much of its vitality. One has the feeling that despite our hero's industry, single-mindedness and zeal to partake of the European Enlightenment, the best goal he can hope for is a clerk's job with an English export firm or a modest post in a government welfare agency. This is probably an excellent ambition in a country where thousands of people are starving, but in the West we have seen the use of education as a means to social advancement too often converted to its use as a tool for social climbing. Maybe it's because I've never really been hungry or without access to the books I want, but I'm inclined toward cynicism in this matter and to view these issues, as dealt with in "Aparajito", with a degree of disenchantment.

Finally, "Aparajito" appears to me to demonstrate the fact that sincerity and taste cannot substitute for strength of artistry. Ray's film is good enough to raise the issue of Art but falls short of satisfying its demands.

GOOD IDEA (Worcester, Mass., Telegram) In cities where parking bans really work, there is no nonsense about even-numbered or odd-numbered sides, or seasons of the year. Winter or summer, the rule is the same: the public streets may not be used as an overnight garage. And so drivers find off-street places in summer for their cars - and use those places in the winter.

Vikings Pick 'Youth'

Lapham Glad To Be Back Near Big Ten

DES MOINES (AP) — Bill Lapham, former University of Iowa center, said "I'm tickled to death to be back in the Big Ten area" after he was acquired by the Minnesota Vikings of the National Football League Thursday.

Lapham was graduated from Iowa last spring and played in

"Norm is a football genius," Lapham said. "I feel I'll play a lot of football under the Dutchman, who is acquainted with my work."

Minnesota Officials Choose 13 First-Year Men, 6 Vets

NEW YORK (AP) — The Minnesota Vikings grabbed veterans Hugh McElhenny, Don Joyce and Dave Middleton but generally put the accent on youth Thursday as they selected a 36-player roster from 12 other National Football League teams for their 1961 pro league debut.

McElhenny, former All-America halfback at Washington and a nine-year NFL veteran, was picked from the San Francisco 49ers. Joyce, a defensive end and tackle, was taken from Baltimore and Middleton, an end with Detroit, was selected to go with seasoned quarterback George Shaw, obtained earlier in a trade with New York.

But General Manager Bert Rose and Coach Norm Van Brocklin still leaned mostly to youth in formation of the 14th and newest NFL member. They chose 13 first-year men and wound up with only six with more than four years of pro experience from the 96-man list submitted by all the other NFL clubs except Dallas, an NFL neophyte last season.

The Vikings also have the draft rights to 20 of the 1960 college crop.

Bill Lapham, a center at Iowa last season, was acquired from the Philadelphia Eagles by the Vikings.

"We got about what we expected," said Van Brocklin, the star of the World Champion Philadelphia Eagles who is starting a new career as coach. "I would say the strongest point of our club is the offensive line. We didn't get as much help as we wanted in pass defense and pass catchers but everybody is having the same trouble."

The Vikings, who studied the list of 96 available men for 24 hours before they made their selections, did turn to some well known players.

They took Don Joyce, defensive end and tackle from the Baltimore Colts. The Vikings also selected Dave Middleton, a pass-catching end from the Detroit Lions.

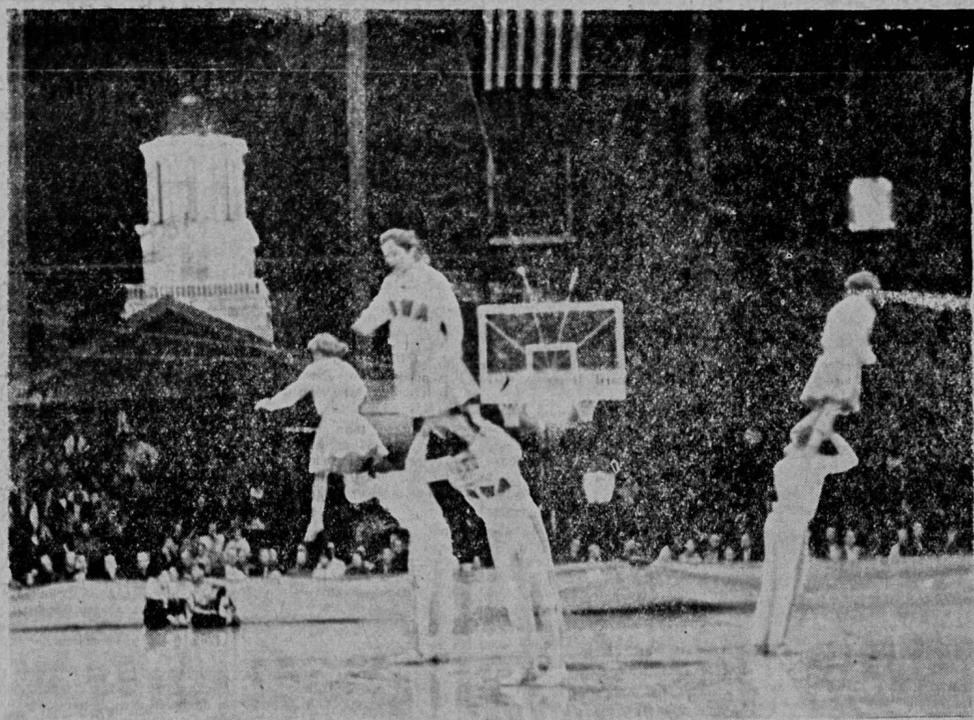

Zeke Smith, former All-America guard at Auburn, also was taken from the Baltimore club as a defensive end or line-backer.

The New York Giants rather surprisingly gave up Frank Youso, a regular offensive tackle, to the Vikings. The Giants also lost Don Boll, veteran tackle. The Vikings grabbed Red Stephens, an offensive guard, from the Washington Redskins and also took halfback Dick Haley, former Pittsburgh ace, from the Steelers.

In addition to Lapham the Eagles gave up Gerry Ith, a starting offensive guard.

Nelson Is 10th in Scoring; Chilton Takes Over Lead

East Tennessee's Tom Chilton has slipped ahead of Gonzaga's Frank Burgess and Tom Stith of St. Bonaventure in a national scoring race that still needs a slide rule to figure out.

Chilton, who moved into the lead with a 34-point burst against Morehead, Ky. Tuesday night, has 435 points in 14 games for a 31.07 average, according to statistics from the National Collegiate Service Bureau Thursday. Burgess, the leader most of the season, has a 31.06 average on 497 points for 16 games with Stith right behind at 30.05 with 457 points in 15 games.

Iowa's Don Nelson is tied for 10th spot with Roger Kaiser of Georgia Tech. Both have a 23.9 average.

The remainder of the top ten in games through Jan. 24 include Billy McGill of Utah 23.7, Terry Dischinger of Purdue 26.8, Jerry Lucas of Ohio State 26.3, Chet Walker of Bradley 26.1, Ken Stanley of Pacific Cal 25.5, Granny Williams of Morehead 24.4.

Chilton's East Tennessee teammate, Les Phillips, has taken over from Lucas as the field goal percentage leader with .646 per cent on 53 of 82 attempts.

Lucas is second with .634 on 116 of 183 shots. Georgia Tech's Kaiser is the free throw percentage leader with .891 on 106 of 119, and Lucas holds his rebounding lead with a .208 percentage of recovery.

Team leaders are: St. Bonaventure in offense with 90.3 points a game and in field goal percentage exactly 50 per cent; Santa Clara in team defense with 47.3, Ohio State in free throw percentage with .794, and Bradley in rebound percentage with .6105 to .6100 for Niagara.

Middleweight Bout in Doubt

WEST JORDAN, Utah (AP) — Gene Fuller's manager said Thursday there is nothing definite in reports the NBA middleweight will meet Paul Pender in New York next June to clear up a snarl of middleweight titles.

Mary Jensen said fight plans announced by Feature Sports Inc. and New Yorker Norm Rothschild are only possibilities.

"We have a very important engagement March 4 with Sugar Ray Robinson down in Las Vegas," Jensen said, "and the outcome is very much in doubt. Gene isn't thinking or talking about any other match but that right now."

College Stars Get Most Out Of Pro Wars

NEW YORK (AP) — The football war among the two American pro football leagues and the Canadian circuits is proving a bonanza for the 1961 college graduates.

"They never had it so good," said Al Dorow, quarterback for the New York Titans of the American Football League. "The National League is paying out cash bonuses to almost everyone for the first time and the Canadian teams are paying plenty for the one or two stars they really want."

Dorow, one-time Michigan State star and an NFL and Canadian player before he hooked up with the Titans, is in a position to know. Part of his all-year job with the Titans is going around the country signing up players for his team.

"Our league is paying plenty to get the top players," he said Thursday. "I've signed my share of them but I've missed a few, too. The bidding is going up."

"I thought I had the inside track on Herb Adderly, the Michigan State halfback, because of my school connections, but we couldn't come anywhere near matching Green Bay's (NFL Packers) bid. They waved a $5,000 bonus check under his nose, then signed him up to a $15,500-a-year contract."

"The Canadian teams are in there pitching along with us and the NFL. Vancouver grabbed Tom Brown (Minnesota's All-America guard) with a $10,000 bonus and a $50,000 contract for three years of play."

Two Iowa Cagers Drop Registration

Two members of Iowa's basketball squads have dropped out of school, it was revealed Thursday.

Varsity squad member Joe Cahalan, 6-2, 180-pound guard, one of the cagers who has left school, had made only brief appearances in two of the Hawk's 14 games this season.

No explanation was given for Cahalan's dropping out or of his future plans.

Cahalan, a sophomore, was chosen all-state guard at Mason City High School in his senior year.

The other Iowa player who left school is freshman Denny Crouch, 6-5 forward from Des Moines Dowling. Crouch reportedly plans to enroll at Grandview Junior College in Des Moines.

Evy Given TD Club Award For Contributions to Football

NEW YORK (AP) — Forest Evashevski, athletic director and former football coach at Iowa, Thursday night received the Touchdown Club of New York award for his contribution to football.

He said, "There should be three men up here with me — H. O. (Fritz) Crisler, athletic director at Michigan; Dave Nelson, football coach at Delaware; and Virgil M. Hancher, president of the State University of Iowa."

Accepting the honor, one of the highest given in football, at the club's 27th annual dinner, Evashevski said:

"Crisler should be here because he is the first man I know of who applied the principles of education and living to the coaching of football. The minor difficulties on the football field can drive you crazy but, if you have a code of principles everything works out all right."

"Nelson should be here because he applied those same principles to the T-formation, and we at Iowa were able to put them into effect.

"Our president, Mr. Hancher, should be here because his only instructions to me when I became coach were that 'We want to excel in athletics but first we want to excel academically.'"

Evashevski, blocking back for All-America Tom Harmon under Crisler at Michigan 20 years ago, stepped down as coach at Iowa after last season, when his Hawk-eyes won eight of nine games, losing only to national champion Minnesota.

Nelson, credited with developing the wing-T which Iowa adopted, was a teammate of Evashevski at Michigan.

In the last five years, Evashevski's teams won two Big Ten championships, tied for another, and played in and won two games in the Rose Bowl."

Among previous winners of the Touchdown Club award were Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Amos Alonzo Stagg, Lou Little, Pop Warner, Earl Blaik, Bob Zuppke, and Grantland Rice.

Flash Card Secret Out

How Caltech Did It

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — When Rose Bowl halftime card stunts flashed "Caltech" instead of "Washington" last Jan. 2, 100,000 spectators and nationwide TV audience were amused but confused.

How did little California Institute of Technology get such a plug?

Well, the secret of how Caltech pranksters substituted University of Washington card stunts for the nationwide practical joke, came out Thursday.

The plan was carried off by a group of Caltech pranksters known as the Fiendish Fourteen.

The pranksters weren't identified but the ingenious scheme was laid bare in the Caltech magazine, Engineering and Science. An article signed by Lance Taylor gave the details.

The Fiendish Fourteen learned that Washington's card section would arrive Dec. 29 and stay in the dormitory at Long Beach State College.

Posing as a reporter, a glib member of the Fiendish Fourteen interviewed the director of the Washington card section and found out how it worked.

The "reporter" learned the card stunt director planned to eat dinner in an hour. While he was picking at his salad, the group picked a lock and stole one of the card stunt instruction sheets.

A printer ran off 2,300 duplicates for $30. Next day the Techmen again picked the lock and swiped the master plans — large sheets of graph paper colored the way the stunts were to appear.

The pranksters next stamped corrections in card stunts 10, 11 and 12.

Back at Long Beach, they replaced the master plans and substituted the altered instruction sheets for the original stack.

The result was flashed brilliantly in the sunshine at the Rose Bowl game.

Instead of spelling out "Washington," card stunt 10 flashed "Caltech."

Card stunt 11 flashed "Huskies" the Washington nickname, all right, but backwards.

The finale, stunt 12, came up with a picture of the Caltech Beaver instead of the Washington Husky.

Bayer, Sifford Blast 65's; Take Lead in 'Frisco Meet

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Power-hitting George Bayer and Negro star Charlie Sifford fired six-under-par 65's Thursday, leading a low scoring assault on Harding Park in the opening round of the $57,000 San Francisco International Open Golf Tournament.

Bayer, a 240-pound former University of Washington football player, scored six birdies. The big belter from South Pasadena, Calif., sank putts ranging from six to 20 feet and also put in a 70-yard chip shot.

Sifford of Los Angeles, the only Negro in the tournament, collected eight birdies but went over par in two holes — once when he was trapped at the eighth and again at the 12th when he topped his drive.

No fewer than six golfers deadlocked at 66 as nearly one-third of the 150-man field eclipsed par for the 36-35-71 municipal course stretching 6,672 yards.

Tied at 66 were Arnold Palmer, the 1960 golfer-of-the-year; John Brodie, the San Francisco 49er quarterback; Bill Casper, Ted Kroll, Doug Ford and Canadian Stan Leonard, the low foreigner in this international field.

Bob Rosberg, winner of the Bing Crosby Tournament last Sunday, fired a 67 for his opening in the quest for the $9,000 first prize here.

Rains that fell Wednesday left the course soft and scores generally were lower than during practice rounds earlier in the week when the course still was hard from Northern California's driest winter since 1897.

Johnstone, Streit Win In Tourney

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — Marlene Streit of Toronto, Ont., and Mrs. Ann Casey Johnstone of Mason City, 1959 champions in the Women's International Four-Ball Golf tournament, advanced to the second round in that event with a 2 and 1 victory over Marge Burns of Greensboro, N. C., and Mrs. Maurice Glick, of Baltimore, but their six over par game for 17 holes was the poorest of the day.

A Pennsylvania housewife and a Florida school teacher teamed up Thursday to score a surprising 1-up victory over Joanne Goodwin and Doris Phillips, defending champions of the Women's International Four-Ball Golf tournament.

Mrs. H. S. Semple of Sewickley, Pa., and Maureen Crum of Plant City, Fla., registered the first round upset.

Mary Ann Downey of Baltimore and Marge Lindsay, of Decatur, Ill., winners of the tournament in 1957 and 1958, were four over par for 15 holes as they defeated Joan Toski Burke and Connie Malia, 4 and 3.

Highlight of Friday's second round will be a match between the Streit-Johnstone and Downey-Lindsay teams.

Curtis Cup star Judy Bell and Alice Dye whizzed through 11 holes in three under par to crush Mrs. Grady McDonald and Nancy Way, 8 and 7.

Lopez Gambles on Rookie

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Martin, a rookie third baseman who has topped the .300 mark only once in five minor league seasons, represents probably the biggest gamble taken by Al Lopez since he became manager of the Chicago White Sox in 1957.

Lopez has installed Martin as the team's regular third baseman for 1961.

near the end of last year, batted .318 at San Diego. Dean Look, former Michigan State football star, is another rookie outfielder. He comes up after hitting .285 at Lincoln in his first year of professional ball.

The most promising of the new pitchers is Gary Peters, a 23-year-old left-hander. He won 12 and lost 9 at San Diego.

Camilo Carreon, a 23-year-old catcher, is counted on to win a job. A .279 hitter at San Diego, he may be converted into a first baseman.

Baseball's Unforgettable Games

For First Time in 14 Years, Lou Gehrig Unable To Play

By JOE REICHLER and BEN OLAN

Sunday, April 30, 1939, the New York Yankees played the Washington Senators in Yankee Stadium. Lou Gehrig came to bat four times with runners on base. He failed to hit the ball out of the infield and the Yankees lost.

Something else happened that day. A Washington player hit a slow dribbler down the first base line. Ordinarily Gehrig would have put it in his hip pocket. That time he barely managed to field the ball in time. Another time, the pitcher fielded a one-hop grounder, ran over toward first, and tossed the ball underhanded to Lou, as pitchers frequently do when there is time. Lou muffed the ball. The sympathetic official scorer, however, did not charge him with an error.

Monday was an off day. Gehrig spent the day at his home in Larchmont, N.Y., all by himself and did a lot of thinking. He had to make the toughest decision of his life. But he had to make it alone.

Tuesday, May 2 the team met in Detroit to open a series against the Tigers. Manager Joe McCarthy flew in from his home in Buffalo. Gehrig met him in the lobby and asked McCarthy to come up to his room. Then he spoke the fateful words:

"Joe, I always said that when I felt I couldn't help the team any more I would take myself out of the lineup. I guess the time has come."

McCarthy asked Gehrig to think it over before making any drastic decisions.

"I've thought it over," said Gehrig quietly. "I've been wrestling with this ever since Sunday. I'm no good to the club, to myself, to the game, to the fans, to you."

McCarthy agreed it was best for Lou to take a rest for a couple of weeks.

Alone in the room, Gehrig wept. Lou Gehrig's incredible endurance streak was at an end. The Iron Horse had played in the last of his 2,130 consecutive games.

No one had especially noticed when Miller Huggins, then manager of the Yankees, had sent his broad-beamed young first baseman, Lou Gehrig, in as a pinch hitter for Peewee Wanniger on June 1, 1925. Yet, it was a notable occasion because it marked the start of the amazing consecutive game streak of the fabled "Lardrappin' Lou."

The next day Wally Pipp, the regular first baseman, reported with a headache.

"Got a headache?" the manager asked Pipp, very solicitously. "Well, take the day off and let this big, awkward kid see what he can do."

Gehrig was astounded when Huggins told him to take over at first base. All excited, he got a double and two singles off George Magriddle of the Senators. Lou was at first base again the following afternoon. In fact, Pipp never got back to the bag.

This was the start of the legend of indestructible Lou. Fourteen years, 2,130 games, and nearly 3,000 appearances at the plate were to pass before Gehrig missed a Yankee game. This endurance mark is one of the few baseball records that are far beyond the reach of ordinary mortals.

On May 2, 1939, Gehrig went to the ball park in Detroit, walked out to home plate to hand the batting order slip to Umpire Basil, then sat down in the corner of the dugout, and watched his teammates hammer the daylight out of the Tigers, 22 to 2.

Lou sat through the game in a daze. The day he had feared so long had come.

On June 2, 1941, exactly 16 years after he began his Iron Man streak, Lou Gehrig died of a form of polio. On July 4, 1939, when all the world already knew that Lou had contracted his fatal disease, there took place the most tragic and touching scene ever enacted on a baseball diamond. It was Lou Gehrig Appreciation Day. It occurred in packed Yankee Stadium, when baseball and the entire world let him know how much they loved him.

It was his worst and greatest moment. As tears rolled unashamedly down his cheeks, an already weary and haggard Gehrig stood uneasily before the vast audience that included his old pals and former teammates, the famous Murderers' Row, the powerful Yankees of 1927, and spoke into the microphone.

"Today I consider myself the luckiest man on the face of the earth."

From Paris

By ART BUCHWALD
More Doubles A la European

We were invited to the opening of a new hotel in London which will be operated by the Hotel Corporation of America, owned by American financier A. M. Sonnabend.

Unlike Conrad Hilton, who always puts his name on any hotel he is associated with, Sonnabend prefers to remain in the background. Instead of calling his 17-story skyscraper the Carlton Sonnabend, he has named it the Carlton Tower, though there is no one named Tower associated with the project.

This may confuse many people, but we must be grateful to American hotelmen like Sonnabend and Hilton for opening hotels abroad, particularly in London, where there is always a bed shortage during the tourist season, which is not caused by the tourists.

What happens is that the British schedule events in the spring and fall to attract tourists to London, and then want to see the events themselves — so they all come up from the provinces and take up the space.

During the off-tourist season, practically nothing is going on in London. So the British stay at home, as do the tourists, and that's when the hotelmen start screaming there are too many hotels in London as it is.

So the only ones who seem to get into the hotel business abroad are Americans, who have no idea what they're getting into.

But those of us who live in Europe the year around are grateful for any accommodations to place our friends from across the sea. During the height of the tourist season, as we have mentioned so many times in the past, we have been hard put to find rooms for our friends. Those of us who are lucky enough not to have guest rooms have had no choice but to send tourists to one of the magnificent European parks with a pup tent.

Nothing could dramatize the hotel shortage more than an experience that happened to us in Paris last spring. A couple we had known for years arrived at the Hotel George V. They had a lovely room and we thought they were happy.

But that's how people can fool you. One day the wife showed up with her luggage at our office and said: "I've left Charles. I couldn't take it anymore."

We didn't want to know what she couldn't take any more, but we said in a horrified voice: "You have another hotel room, I hope."

"No," she said, crying. "I've left him for good."

"But don't you know what you've done? Leaving him at the height of the French racing season? Grown-up people don't do things like that."

"It's no use talking about it. We haven't been getting along for years."

"What's that got to do with leaving your husband in Paris?" we said. "You have so much in common — a double room and a bath, something that any tourist couple in the world would give their lives for."

"It's too late," she said, "I can't go back."

"All right, if you don't want to think of yourselves, think of the children — Thomas Cook and Son? How will they feel? Surely no marriage breakup is worth the price of a double at the George V."

We lectured her some more, but she insisted she was through — through — through. So we started calling other hotels in Paris, and, as we had figured, there wasn't even a broom closet to be had.

Finally we said: "You don't have a choice — you have to go back. What about this idea? Give your marriage a trial — you be big about it. Tell him you're sorry you walked out on him, ask his forgiveness. Fall into his arms. Then as soon as you get back to the United States, talk it over with your travel agent. If you still feel the same way about him, you can always give him the heave-ho, and get a divorce."

Farm Parley Ends--Divided On Methods

WASHINGTON (AP) — A conference of 450 farm leaders, called by the Kennedy Administration to forge a uniform farm policy, ended Thursday just about where it started — divided.

Farm leaders could not agree on what measures should be taken to boost farm income.

Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman and his aides simply learned what they probably already knew — that farm leaders for the most part are not happy with economic conditions in agriculture.

But differences over the part the Government should take — if any — in bolstering farm prices stood out in the presentation of recommendations made by officials of five major national farm organizations and spokesmen for many smaller commodity groups.

No gestures of compromise were made by any of them. The meeting, which adjourned earlier than had been planned because of a snowstorm, had not been expected by most leaders to amount to more than a presentation of viewpoints.

The presentation of conflicting recommendations brought from James G. Patton, president of the National Farmers Union, the comment that farmers have so many organizations speaking for them that "it sounds like a babble of voices."

There was fairly general agreement on the idea that farmers need some method for gaining stronger bargaining power — comparable, the leaders said, to powers possessed by industry and by organized labor.

But as to the way to do this, sharp differences were outlined.

Delay Granted In Musack Trial

A delay was granted Thursday by Judge Clair E. Hamilton in the manslaughter trial of James P. Musack. Judge Hamilton admitted a defense motion for continuance after noting that he had heard rumors charging that he is prejudiced to the defendant.

Musack was charged with manslaughter in connection with an accident in which a 2½-month-old infant died in Musack's car when it hit a tree last Oct. 10.

The trial, which was to begin Monday, will now take place during the next term which starts Feb. 6, and will be presided over by Judge James P. Gaffney of Marengo.

Father Thinks Russia Will Release U2 Pilot

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — The father of U2 pilot Francis Gary Powers said today he was "quite optimistic" that his son "will be released from a Russian prison soon."

"My boy," said Oliver W. Powers, "thinks he'll be released soon. So do I. But I haven't talked to any Russian authorities since last summer in Moscow."

The elder Powers was asked about his imprisoned son in view of the release of two other American fliers, announced by President Kennedy at his news conference.

Hancher Cites Iowa's Needs

DES MOINES (AP) — Iowa can afford — if it will — the cost of higher faculty salaries and improved educational and research programs at its three institutions of higher learning, SUL President Virgil M. Hancher said Thursday night.

Indeed, he said, the state "can ill afford not to afford the best," both in educational and research programs and in new buildings needed on the campuses of SUL, Iowa State University and Iowa State Teachers College.

Hancher addressed a joint meeting of the alumni associations of the three institutions with members of the Iowa Legislature. He devoted his remarks to explaining why substantially increased spending for education is necessary.

"Our institutions are in a highly competitive situation," Hancher said. "Their needs are real and they are pressing. Because of potential increases in enrollment, an anticipated shortage of college teachers and the vast increase in knowledge, the efforts we currently are making are not enough."

He cited a recent study of Iowa's educational institutions by an Indiana University professor, who recommended immediate pay increases of $3,000 a year for professors, $2,000 a year for associate professors and $1,000 annually for other faculty members.

"We do not make the competition," Hancher said. "It has been forced upon us by the enticements of Government and industry in attracting faculty members, as well as by greater opportunities in other institutions of higher learning."

He expressed appreciation for the $16 million the Legislature appropriated for new educational buildings in 1959. But he said large amounts of money still are needed to overcome a "critical lag" in building. Virtually all other states have outstripped Iowa in capital construction, he said.

Iowa's annual income, Hancher said, amounts to more than $7 billion per year, and the state "surely can afford the things it really needs and wants."

"Iowa can afford this investment. It affords good roads. It affords anything it wants. But it may be required to make some hard and wise decisions in order to do so."

Helen Eddy Dies at 84

Helen M. Eddy, 84, associate professor emerita of romance languages at SUL, and the former head of the department of foreign languages at University High School, died Thursday afternoon at Hillcrest Hospital in Des Moines. Death was due to heart failure.

She had been a member of the University staff since 1916, when she became the first principal and head of the foreign language department at University High.

She was made assistant professor of romance languages in 1925, associate professor in 1930, and retired as professor emerita in 1947.

Born in Marengo, Iowa, Miss Eddy received a B.A. from SUL in 1900, an M.A. in 1903, and a Ph.D. in 1925. In 1899 she received the Lowden Latin Prize. She had held two fellowships, one at SUL during the years 1901-1904, and the other at Bryn Mawr College, Bryn Mawr, Pa., in 1904-1905.

Miss Eddy had been an instructor at State Teachers College, Mayville, N.D., and Idaho Technical Institute, Pocatello, Idaho, before joining the SUL staff.

She was the author of "Beginning French Training for Reading" and collaborated in the publication of several basic French textbooks and readers.

Madison Mayor Appointed To Health Department Post

WASHINGTON (HTNS) — President Kennedy has decided against appointing his brother-in-law, R. Sargent Shriver, under-secretary of health, education and welfare, it was disclosed Thursday.

It was learned that Abraham A. Ribicoff, secretary of health, education and welfare, had discussed with Shriver the possibility of his taking the post. Apparently, the decision was reached within the Administration that the political risks were too great. This became apparent Thursday night when the White House announced that Ivan A. Nestingen, mayor of Madison, Wis., had been named to the under-secretary post by President Kennedy.

Like Robert F. Kennedy, Shriver worked as a top campaign aid to the President. In addition, he has considerable experience in the field of health, education and welfare.

Regents Propose ISTC Changes

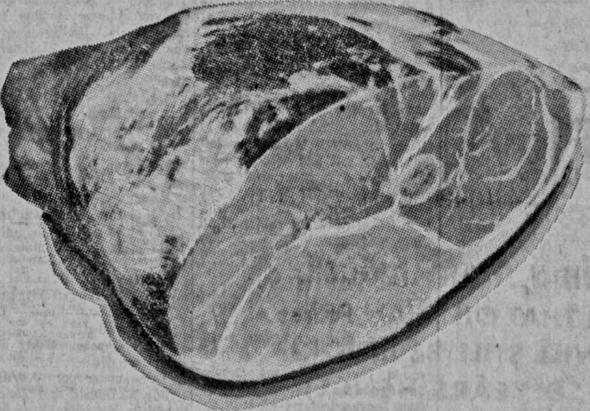

DES MOINES (AP) — Bills to change the name of Iowa State Teachers College and broaden the curriculum at that institution were recommended for passage Thursday by the House Committee on Higher Education.

The Board of Regents proposed to change the name of the college to State College of Iowa and to permit that institution to offer a bachelor of arts degree in liberal arts as well as a bachelor of arts degree in education.

A third measure, calling for appropriation of $150,000 for a firemen's training building at Iowa State University was recommended.

Wednesday Set for Vote On Selection of Judges

DES MOINES (AP) — The question of how Iowa judges should be selected will go before the Senate next Wednesday morning.

The 1959 Legislature approved a proposed constitutional amendment to take judges out of partisan politics.

If the current Legislature approves the proposal in the same form, then it will go to a vote of the people at the 1962 general election.

Under the proposal the existing judges would continue until the end of their terms. They would be re-elected if the voters did not vote to retire them.

If the voters voted to retire a judge, or if a vacancy occurred for other reasons, the governor would appoint a successor from names submitted by a nominating commission.

When Senate Majority Leader J. Kendall Lynes, (R-Plainfield), proposed the special order of business Thursday, Sen. D. C. Nolan, (R-Iowa City), who has opposed the judicial change, warned that amendments may be offered to the resolution.

Nolan said he is asking the attorney general for a ruling on whether some of the sections relating to the six-year terms of the nominating commission members, the terms of the judges and the means of selecting the commission members are valid.

Biology and Medicine Group Plans SUI Meet

Rubin, resident physician, both in ophthalmology; James R. Fouts, associate professor, and R. L. Dixon, graduate student, both in pharmacology, and Drs. Juergen Tonndorf, research associate professor, and James R. Tabor, resident physician, both in otolaryngology.

Patrolman Suggests Hospital for OMVI

In view of the number of third and fourth OMVI offenders, it might be a good idea to use some of Iowa's liquor profits to send them to a hospital for treatment, Captain Leonard Sims of the Iowa Highway Patrol told law enforcement officers attending the Police Traffic School this week at SUU.

The idea of using Iowa liquor profits for a treatment and rehabilitation program for alcoholics has been proposed by Prof. Harold Mulford, head of the SUU division of alcoholism studies. A bill to effect such a program may be introduced at the current session of the Iowa legislature.

Sims also said that, under a new policy of the Iowa Highway Patrol, an Iowan stopped by patrolmen for drunk driving will now lose his driver's license for one year. Previously, the patrol has taken an offender's license for only 60 days.

Continuing the discussion of traffic law, he told the law enforcement officers meeting at SUU that several thousand dollars on deposit with the state treasurer could be claimed by Iowans who have posted the money as bond in auto accident cases.

If no judgment or action is pending in court one year after an accident, the person who posted bond can file for return of his money. However, many people have not asked for the return and their money remains on deposit with the state, he said.

Sims explained that if an Iowan who does not have auto insurance is involved in an accident, he must post bond equal in amount to the damage to the other car involved. For example, if his car and another vehicle collide, the second driver must get an estimate of the damage to his car. The driver who does not have insurance must then send this amount, as bond, to be held by the state treasurer.

Sims called the new Iowa Interstate the safest highway that can be built and said it is the answer to a lot of our traffic problems.

He noted that the number of accidents on the Interstate is much lower than on other Iowa highways, and that only two fatalities have occurred so far on the new divided highway, both one-car mishaps. In Harrison County a driver failed to stop at the barricade where the new highway ended; in Warren County a man who was driving while intoxicated hit a bridge.

The Iowa highway patrolman noted, however, that some confusion exists concerning the speed limit for trucks on the Interstate. He said that all vehicles, including trucks, are limited to 75 miles per hour during the day and 65 at night on the Interstate highway.

He also discussed the confusion which has arisen concerning speed limits on county roads. The Iowa law states that the limit of 40 during the day and 30 at night applies only where speed restriction signs are erected.

However, in the case of a road west of Iowa City, for example, only one sign has been posted—at the west edge of Iowa City and University Heights. It is possible to enter the road at 17 intersections between Iowa City and Williamsburg, he continued, without seeing a speed-limit sign. There is a question whether or not the speed limit could be enforced in this case, the SUU audience was told.

Some 50 Iowa law enforcement officers are attending the Police Traffic School, which is being sponsored by the Bureau of Police Science of the SUU Institute of Public Affairs.

During the weeklong meeting, the officers are discussing such subjects as speed control methods, drinking and driving, reckless driving, turning and right-of-way violations, arrest methods and determining speed from skid marks. One period each day of the school is set aside for those attending to discuss local traffic problems.

British Queen Views Indian Republic Day

NEW DELHI, (HTNS) — Though all eyes were still on Queen Elizabeth, royalty took second place to Indian republicanism as Delhi celebrated the 10th anniversary of the declaration of the republic.

All through the night bullock carts had rumbled in from outlying villages carrying sightseers. People danced in the streets to the whine of punjabi pipes, or drifted about looking at the illuminations.

Delhi's Republic day parade varies little from year to year, but it is always splendid, especially to a newcomer such as the Queen. The saluting stand is in the center of New Delhi's great plaza that is dominated by the mass of Rashtrapati Bhavan (the President's house) — an expanse of grass and fountains that is ended by the fine arch of India gate through which you see a towering statue of King George V.

The Queen arrived at the saluting stand in the President's coach, drawn by six horses and escorted by the President's bodyguard, the red and white pennants on their lances fluttering against a bright blue sky. While the President walked up to his chair alone with the traditional red and gold umbrella of office held above him the Queen went with the Vice President, Dr. Radhakrishnan, and Prime Minister Nehru, and sat below the President to his right.

On the eve of Republic Day the President had issued an urgent message to the nation to put the country first and to avoid the internal divisions that so bedevil India today.

OFFERED $500 TIP
NEW YORK (AP) — Somewhere in the city there's a cabbie who pocketed $2,002 on a $2.50 clogging, and the police are looking for him.

The driver stands to come out all right, anyway, if he shows, for the passenger says he'll fork over a $500 tip.

The passenger, Ernesto Hirsch, a textile man from Buenos Aires, Argentina, said it was dark when he paid the driver and he thought he was handing over four $1 bills. He discovered later, he said, that he gave him two $1,000 bills and two singles.
