U.S. Navy To Meet with Santa Maria Off Brazil Today

Will Parley Aboard Liner For Captives

RECIFE, Brazil (HTNS) — The United States Navy, harried by confusion and bad communication, arranged a rendezvous at dawn today with the hijacked cruise ship Santa Maria 35 miles off this bustling Brazilian port.

Rear Adm. Allen Smith Jr., commander of the Caribbean Sea Frontier, announced before he even knew what he was supposed to do that he will board the destroyer Gearing for a parley at sea with Captain Henrique Galvao, rebel skipper of the Portuguese liner.

"Purpose of the meeting will be to confer with Captain Galvao and attempt to reach an agreement with him on disembarkment of passengers," Adm. Smith announced Monday.

Three American destroyers — the Vogelsgang, the Wilson and the Damato — and two Navy oilers — the Canisteo and the Mispillion — will arrive in the area "some time soon."

The destroyer Gearing streaked for Recife with sealed orders after Adm. Smith lost touch with just about everything Sunday.

Navy spokesmen said Adm. Smith would go aboard the cruise ship, commandeered off Curacao eight days ago by Capt. Galvao in what he called insurgency against the strongarm regime of Portugal's Dictator Antonio De Oliveira Salaza but until the Gearing's arrival shortly before he was to steam for his rendezvous with the Santa Maria, Adm. Smith had no idea what his orders were.

"The Admiral emphasized that at the moment he doesn't know what his instructions will be," the announcement said.

This is typical of the snafu in the Navy's redfaced efforts to unload the 588 passengers including 42 Americans, held aboard the Santa Maria since Capt. Galvao took over at gunpoint. Capt. Galvao agreed by radio to take Adm. Smith aboard for a conference but Capt. Galvao is reported holding out for docking at a Brazilian port rather than transferring the passengers to U.S. vessels at sea.

Capt. Galvao is presumably pointing for Wednesday's inauguration of Brazil's new president, Janos Quadros. Capt. Galvao is hoping President-elect Quadros will rescind the order of his predecessor, President Juscelino Kubitschek to seize the Santa Maria and return it to its owners while giving asylum to insurgents.

Teams at Work On Defense Plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — High-ranking teams of Pentagon military and civilian officials already are at work, it was learned Monday, on the reappraisal of defense strategy which President Kennedy announced in his State of the Union message.

Kennedy told Congress he had instructed Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara to have a preliminary assessment ready by the end of February. In the past, said Kennedy, there has been "lack of a consistent, coherent military strategy."

In addition to studies within the Pentagon, there have been high-level talks with the White House, State Department, National Security Council, and other agencies as the teams probe into the adequacy of existing strategy and the defense program generally.

Speed Up Defense Program, Kennedy Warns Congress

Nation Faces Trial Abroad, at Home

WASHINGTON (HTNS) — President Kennedy told the American people flatly Monday that the economy "is in trouble" and that a staggering array of trials of "harsh enormity" face them abroad.

In the starkest State of the Union message since Korean War days, Kennedy announced that he had ordered prompt action to "accelerate our entire missile program," including the Polaris submarines, and "to increase our airlift capacity."

These measures, he intimated, are merely interim steps pending a reappraisal "of our entire defense strategy," which he has ordered Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara to make between now and Feb. 28.

The 43-year-old President, who took office only 10 days ago, went before a televised joint session of Congress and declared candidly that "we should prepare ourselves now for the worst."

"Our problems," he said, "are critical. The tide is unfavorable. The news will be worse before it is better. Life in 1961 will not be easy. There will be further setbacks before the tide is turned. But turn it we must."

Along with the preliminary steps he proposed for meeting troubles abroad, the President also listed a number of measures he soon will recommend to Congress for coping with the problems of recession and the gold outflow.

Among them are larger compensation benefits for the unemployed, stimulation of housing construction, aid to distressed areas, higher minimum wages and tax incentives for construction of new plants.

As for the gold outflow, the President pledged not to "distort the value of the dollar in any fashion." The Defense Department also is studying ways of cutting down expenditures abroad so as to make it unnecessary to bring home many families of service men overseas, as ordered by former President Eisenhower.

While Kennedy's theme was severe, his message was neither panicky nor despairing. What he was saying, in sum, was that events in Cuba, the Congo and Laos and above all the unabated drive of the Soviet Union and Red China to dominate the world has brought an "hour of peril" to the United States.

In a very dramatic passage the President said: "No man entering upon this office, regardless of his party, regardless of his previous service in Washington, could fail to be staggered upon learning — even in this brief 10-day period — the harsh enormity of the trials through which we must pass in the next few years."

"Each day the crises multiply. Each day their solution grows more difficult. Each day we draw nearer the hour of maximum danger, as weapons spread and hostile forces grow stronger I feel I must inform the Congress that our analyses over the last 10 days makes it clear that in each of these principal areas of crisis the tide of events has been running out, and time has not been our friend."

Furthermore, as the United States moves into "a period of uncertain risk," its economy is beset by "disturbing weaknesses. Bankruptcies 'have reached their highest level since the Great Depression.' Some 5,500,000 persons are out of work. The rate of economic growth has been diminishing and farm income has been falling. Yet in spite of all, prices are rising 'so that now too many Americans have less to spend for items that cost them more to buy.'"

Having sketched all these troubles, the President declared that his Administration "does not intend to stand helplessly by." If the country is facing an hour of peril, it is also challenged by an hour of "national opportunity."

There was one aspect of Kennedy's first State of the Union message, however, which caused a good deal of questioning afterward.

In discussing the economic predicament of the free world, he said that the problems "are towering and unprecedented." Hence, he asserted, "the response must be towering and unprecedented as well, much as Lend-Lease and the Marshall Plan were in earlier years."

Still, in picturing the towering nature of the problems at hand, he did not directly or indirectly give any glimpse of any towering proposals he had in mind to meet them.

Most of the proposals he mentioned have been aired at great length and are rather moderate. And with the "hour of maximum danger" approaching, he said that, barring a military emergency or a worse drop in the economy, the new Administration did not intend to take any steps that would of themselves unbalance the tentatively balanced budget for the next fiscal year submitted by Eisenhower before he left office.

Ivan Eckhart of Correctionville, a member of the Board of Supervisors said Monday night that Woodbury County Auditor George M. Carlin, 41, has admitted shortages of county funds in his office.

Each day their solution grows more difficult. Each day we draw nearer the hour of maximum danger, as weapons spread and hostile forces grow stronger I feel I must inform the Congress that our an-

His First State of the Union Message

Court Grants Time In Union Lawsuit

The Polk County District Court has granted the contending parties in the lawsuit to block construction of the $4.6 million addition to the Iowa Memorial Union additional time to file briefs in the trial.

Arthur Leff, attorney for the state, said briefs are concerned with the law involved in the case. He said it is customary to file them in a case as important as this so the court can study the various points of law before making a decision.

The lawsuit was filed last August by three Iowa hotel-motel and restaurant associations and private parties. They contend that the $1.4 million hotel portion of the addition would put the University in competition with private business.

Leff said the court allowed the plaintiffs, the Restaurant associations, until Feb. 11 to file their briefs, and the defense until March 1 to file theirs. The plaintiffs will then have until March 6 to file a reply.

After the briefs have been filed, the court will hear the opposing arguments and reach a decision. The lawsuit contends that a 1959 state law permitting the Board of Regents to construct self-liquidating facilities (such as the Union addition) is unconstitutional.

The proposed addition was authorized by the Board of Regents in December, 1959, and approved by the legislative interim committee in January, 1960.

The lawsuit contends that the Union belongs to the University and therefore to the state. Unless the specific project is authorized by a single law, the suit continues, the state is prohibited by the Iowa Constitution from incurring indebtedness of more than $250,000.

Under the Constitution such a proposed debt of more than $250,000 must be submitted to an election and be approved by a majority of the state's voters, the suit contends. Sufficient tax must be levied to retire the debt in 20 years.

In 1959, however, the Iowa Legislature passed a law authorizing the Regents to construct self-liquidating buildings at any state college or university for "the welfare of students and suitable for the purposes for which the university was established."

The Board of Regents claims that construction of the addition is authorized by the 1959 law.

Iowa Banking Loss Shown After Suicide

MALVERN (AP) — A shortage in the accounts of John E. Willard, vice-president and cashier of the Malvern Trust and Savings Bank, was disclosed Monday after he committed suicide.

E. W. Burdic, bank president, said an audit is being made by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

However, Burdic said "an employee's fidelity bond of $120,000 will more than cover the Willard shortage."

Burdic said the bank will continue normal operations. Willard, 40, was found dead in his home of gunshot wounds which Dr. Ward DeYoung, Mills County medical examiner said were self-inflicted.

Willard joined the bank 14 years ago as an assistant cashier. "The whole town is shook up about the deal," Burdic said. "Everybody is broken up, but I don't think anyone is worried about the bank."

"I own a controlling interest, and the examiners tell me that the shortage will be substantially less than the $120,000 fidelity bond."

"I don't think we will even have to touch any of the FDIC insurance."

Europe Hails Kennedy Talk

LONDON (AP) — Western Europe Monday applauded the blunt, tough tone of President Kennedy's State of the Union message, hailing its realism as an inspiration both to the United States and its Allies.

The address also was given prominence by newspapers and radio stations behind the Iron Curtain.

Moscow Radio noted with apparent approval Kennedy's intention to promote cooperation with the Soviet Union in the area of "science for peace."

Long reports of the President's speech were splashed across the front pages of Europe's newspapers under big, bold headlines.

Most Western observers saw the message as a stirring call to action designed to shock the United States from a mood of complacency and lethargy.

Student Book Store Opens

By BARB HAARDT Staff Writer

If you can restrain yourself from rushing to the nearest bookstore with your copy of "Factual Prose" or your other wellused texts the moment exams are over, you might be richer by dollars as second semester starts.

The Student Council Book Exchange is being run only to save students money — in both selling old books and buying new, according to Ron Brockman, A3, Westgate, commissioner of student affairs.

The procedure is simple. Take any currently-used books you want to sell to the exchange (located in the study hall of Shafer Hall) Thursday, Friday, Monday or Tuesday. You will fill out a one-page form listing the books and the prices you want. The exchange recommends you sell at 75 percent of your cost, whether your book is first or eighth-hand. The pricing will work to your advantage, says Brockman, since bookstores usually require you to part with your texts for about 50 percent of the cost.

To buy books, go to the exchange Wednesday through Saturday, Feb. 8-11, equipped only with the names of your courses and cash or a blank check. The exchange will have its books filled and will do all the searching for you.

You will have an opportunity to select from books of varying conditions and prices. This is a benefit not offered by bookstores, Brockman points out, because they rarely depreciate books after the first re-selling. You may call for your cash or pick up books that have not been sold Tuesday through Friday, Feb. 14-17.

The exchange will charge 10 percent of the money received on the sale of books for its expenses.

The exchange will be open from 8:45 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 4:45 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 10 a.m. to noon and 12:30 to 2 p.m. Saturday.

It will be run by volunteer student labor, except for the manager, Kendall Baker, A4, Iowa City, and a non-University cashier. So far, most help has been offered by Alpha Phi Omega, Scouting Fraternity, and the Socialist Discussion Club. Chairman of the exchange is Anne Slemmons, A2, Nevada.

The Daily Iowan is written and edited by students and is governed by a board of five student trustees elected by the student body and four trustees appointed by the president of the University.

New Judicial Approach

A new approach to handling cases of rule infractions was adopted by the Westlawn Judiciary Board last week, after being unanimously approved by dormitory units.

The new plan provides three alternative methods for camping residents who have violated the dormitory's rules. Which of the three methods will be used is to be based on circumstances of each individual case.

Although the study room method has been retained, it is to be used "only in extreme cases and for repeated violations."

Credit should be given to the Westlawn Board for the method in which they formulated this new system. Credit should also be given to the type of system itself.

After holding meetings of all residents to hear suggestions for new methods, the board submitted the plan to individual units for their approval. Now, they have a plan okayed by their constituents, so to speak.

Perhaps the outstanding feature of the plan is that the board will base its punitive action on the merits of each case in the future instead of imposing one lump punishment for all types of violations.

This, in effect, resembles the U.S. judicial system where aspects of individual cases are considered. Also, the provision for stepped degrees of punitive action in relation to severity or repetition of violations parallels statutes and court procedures.

The new plan imposes responsibilities upon the board, however. For the plan to be effective, the board must follow the spirit of the system in adjudging cases.

Only if a case warrants severe action, should the third step be applied. Then it will measure with the maturity of the violators.

Questions Value of Nuclear Ban Without Any Inspection

By ROSCOE DRUMMOND

WASHINGTON — A Kennedy disarmament task force recommended a course of action — which the President has approved — dealing with half of the problem of negotiating a nuclear test ban with Russia.

The report deals prudently with the easier part of the problem by recommending a delay up to six months before resuming the Geneva talks. It does not answer the harder and equally urgent question: if delay in re-opening negotiations is desirable, is the continued moratorium on underground testing (from which there is no radioactive fall-out) desirable?

Perhaps the task force gave to Kennedy privately its views on this question, leaving it to the President to make a public announcement at a time he deems best. In any event, many people will, I believe, be anxiously concerned about the decision Kennedy reaches.

This aspect of national security came into the campaign. Nixon spoke out explicitly while Kennedy held back. Nixon said that if he were elected he would press the Soviets for a prompt agreement with inspection and that if agreement was not forthcoming, he would soon authorize the resumption of underground testing.

There are honest arguments both ways. But before we assume that it is desirable simultaneously to delay negotiations and retain the voluntary ban on testing, we ought to recognize that we are extending into a longer and longer period the very condition which the United States was determined to avoid: A test ban without inspection.

That's what we have now. That's what we have had since Oct. 31, 1958. If the Administration now seeks a six-month delay before resuming the Geneva talks, we will have abandoned testing without inspection for nearly three years — and without any assurance that the Soviet Union has done the same thing.

The voluntary abandonment of testing without inspection, as accepted by President Eisenhower, was based on the premise that it would contribute to a "good atmosphere" for the negotiations. The U.S. hoped to show how eager we were to go the extra mile to get a beginning step toward disarmament. We hoped, by giving up tests without an agreement on inspection, that we would then be in the best position to induce the Soviets to accept a test ban agreement with inspection.

The premise has been proven unsound. The Soviets have continuously resisted an agreement on inspection and last spring, when some headway was apparently being made at Geneva, they broke off negotiations entirely.

Did they break off negotiations because we were so far apart as to make negotiation useless? I wonder. I wonder if the Soviets did not break off the talks because they were reaching a point where they would either have to say yes or admit to the world that they did not want and would not accept an inspectable agreement.

Now that President Kennedy is being urged to delay the resumption of the talks in order to take a fresh look at our own negotiating position, isn't this a good time to take a fresh look at whether the abandonment of underground testing without inspection is in any way a good means of getting the Soviets to accept inspection?

As long as the Soviets can get the U.S. to refrain from testing without any inspection at all — which is what they have done for more than two years — wherein have they any incentive to enter into an agreement which embraces inspection?

Wherein is there any incentive for the Soviets to sign a test ban agreement giving up their secrecy when they are getting exactly what they want without giving up any secrecy?

A friend of mine has an eight-year-old son, a hopelessly normal lad, with the usual healthy preoccupations of our youth, (comic books, Jerry Lewis, and the Three Stooges). The other day, inadvertently, he became a hero. Found a bomb in Central Park, left by one of our mad bombers, who are becoming one of the normal hazards of big city living, and dismantled it.

The first his mother knew about it was when the "Daily News" called to ask a few questions about the boy. Within the hour, several other newspapers and a radio station had called. By nightfall, the lad was all over the evening papers, he had posed for pictures, newsreels, television, been interviewed by everyone — cops, newspapermen, broadcasters.

The mother arrived home ahead of her son, read the afternoon newspapers, and worried. What effect would notoriety have on her son? Would he be unbearable? How about delayed reaction? Would he toss and turn all night? After all, the darned thing might have gone off and, when this thought struck him . . .

Presently, the boy arrived, put down his bookbag and picked up his favorite comic book, "Superboy" ("Featuring Superbaby in the Thought Monster of Krypton"). Not even a hello out of him.

After about 20 minutes of this, the mother ventured: "Did you have a good day at school?"

"Uh huh." His nose was about two inches from "Superboy."

"What did you do today?"

"Nothin'."

His mother glanced at the comic book. Superbaby was being eaten by Krypton, the thought monster. At any rate, Krypton had superbaby in his mouth. She rather suspected Superbaby got out of that mess all right because Superbaby usually handled these things pretty well.

"Well-uh — did anything special happen today?"

"Nope."

By this time she was beginning to wonder whether all this hadn't happened to somebody else's son with the same name.

"What I mean is — didn't anything special happen to you in the park today?"

"What?" the boy looked up, clearly irritated by all this yata yata.

"When you were taking your nature walk, didn't something —"

"Yeah."

"What happened?"

"Found a bomb." And he returned to "Superboy."

"Really?" said his mother.

"Under a tree. In a wet paper box. It said Merry Christmas on top."

"Goodness," said his mother. "How did you know it was a bomb?"

"What?"

"How did you know it was a bomb?"

"Oh, you know." He waved a hand at her laudably.

"No, I don't know," declared his mother sharply. "I've never seen a bomb. And neither have you. How did you know it was a bomb?"

"Everyone knows what a bomb looks like. I turned a page of the comic book. 'I just knew.'"

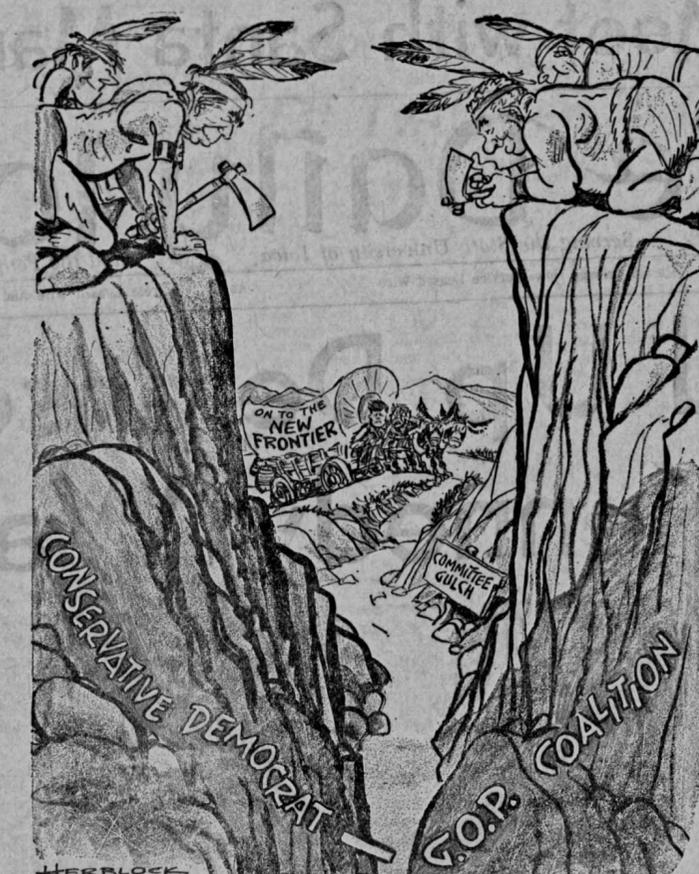

The boy's older sister, who had stayed out of things until this point, spoke up. "You're lying," she said thinly. "I happen to know for a fact you haven't any idea what a bomb looks like."

That did it. The eight-year-old put down "Superboy" and glared balefully at his sister. "I've seen thousands of bombs! Millions of bombs! Trillions!"

"Where?" asked the sister with that withering disdain only older sisters can summon up.

"In comic books," said the lad triumphantly.

Political Science Profs Express Views on Kennedy

By BRUNO TORRES Staff Writer (First of Three Articles)

New Frontiersman John Fitzgerald Kennedy has been sworn in as the 35th President of the United States and the "new generation" has taken over to lead the nation forward with "vigor."

But a big question is how rough will the journey to the new frontier be?

SUI political science professors already have some opinions about the problems Kennedy will encounter.

Five of the seven see foreign affairs and U.S.-Russian relations as the biggest problems with which Kennedy will have to deal.

Congress will be Kennedy's big headache in the opinion of the other two.

Lane Davis and Hugh Kelso, associate professors of political science, and Robert Boynton, Gerald Maryanov, James Murray, John Schmidhouser, and Deil Wright, assistant professors of political science, are sure the President will have trouble getting his legislative proposals passed because of the strong conservative coalition in Congress.

But Schmidhouser pointed out that Kennedy holds a unique position, through his inside knowledge of Congress and his sense of executive leadership and party responsibility, to focus public attention on the conservative's voting behavior and thereby bring them into line.

Opinions on the Kennedy Cabinet appointments varied from "beyond expectations" to "I am not sold." All seven thought the Cabinet members were on the conservative side of the political spectrum.

Davis commented, "Kennedy's first and biggest problem will be U.S. relations with Russia. That was evident from his inaugural address."

"Kennedy will have to make a deal with the Southern and conservative Senators if he's going to get his legislation passed. If he doesn't he'll have a hell of a fight on his hands."

Letters to the Editor — Says 'Aparajito' a Good Picture of Everyday World

To the Editor:

The kindest thing one can say of the review of the film, "Aparajito" in last Friday's Daily Iowan, is that the reviewer must have either just taken a tough final exam — or was about to take one. Obviously he was in no mood to be interrupted or disturbed in his pursuit of "education as a means to social advancement."

The real value in the film to me, one of these "we, of the West" to whom Mr. Routon referred, was not in the depiction of "Old India," but in that very "modern tale with a moral message" of which he spoke so contemptuously. It was simply the story of a father, a mother and a son. There was no PLOT. It was the story of life.

It was the story that unfolds every day, everywhere in the world.

The father goes to his work in the outside world. The mother provides the food, she sweeps and cleans and keeps the home. The child plays and watches and grows and learns. The day comes when he leaves his parents and enters the larger world. If he is bright he goes to school to learn to be something more than his father has been.

The father is proud. The mother is sometimes amused and sometimes grieved by the change she sees in her child. The child is thoughtless and selfish and absorbed in his new world.

The parents die — but life goes on.

Is this an "Horatio Alger drama"?

Is it a "Bourgeois Progress"?

Is this "quasi-tragic"?

Is this "sentimental and trite"?

It is none of these things. It is truth.

Presented with the simplicity and sensitivity of an artist and a poet, the film "Aparajito" (The Unvanquished) was a moving, tender human story. That it was laid in India was only incidental. In this mother, I saw my mother (with a vacuum sweeper, it is true) but with the same love and same selflessness. In his father, there was my father, with his pride in me and his hopes. In this son, was my son, with his books and his eager face and deep eyes.

That it was laid in India may have led our reviewer astray. Perhaps he prefers a travelogue, a "culture" film depicting exotic places in outlandish ways. Here the temples, the monkeys, the Ganges, the water faucets, the old, worn books were too much a part of real life to be exotic or strange. After two hours, my son, age 14, said, "It was like being in India — but as though I were an Indian."

The reviewer has been unperceptive and insensitive but his grossest error lay in his use of terms like "Western-Style," "Old India," "European Enlightenment," "West". And finally in his smug, "I've never been really hungry or without access to books I want."

This young man has much to learn of life and it will be a very painful process.

Vitamins and a well balanced diet and libraries full of books are not what make a whole and educated man — least of all a well educated writer or journalist.

Cooperatives and Socialists

To the Editor:

There is a lesson to be learned from the recent enthusiasm shown by the Regents for cooperative dormitories. The issue of cooperatives was raised by Jerry Barrett, a staunch Socialist, at the beginning of the semester in an article in the Daily Iowan. (Actually, two articles, the expurgated and unexpurgated version and a leaflet.) Then followed by a series of attacks regarding the feasibility of such cooperatives and the usual statement that nobody really wanted them. Now cooperatives seem highly respectable with a good chance of success.

Today a group on campus is working quietly and doggedly to introduce several types of cooperatives in order to substantially reduce costs to the student of modest means. It goes without saying that much of the backbone support comes from the Socialists.

Socialists have stood for every

Mutiny on the ... ; Couldn't Happen

It was just two weeks ago but it seems like yesterday. We walked into Darryl Zanuck's office in Paris.

"Mr. Zanuck, I have an idea for a movie and I thought you might want to buy it."

"Good, good. What's it about?"

"Well, now don't laugh at me, but there's this ship, 20,000 tons and it's on a cruise of South America with 600 tourists and 300 crewmen."

"Yeah, I follow you," Zanuck said.

"Now the ship stops at this port and picks up 70 passengers — but they're not really passengers. They aim to take the ship over."

"It sounds a little far-fetched to me," Zanuck said.

"Wait, you haven't heard the rest of it. There's this man — he's a political exile and he figures if he can take over the ship he can cause a revolution in his homeland and cause the Government to fall."

Zanuck started ruffling through some papers. "Look, I'm very busy and I don't have time for fairy tales. If you've got a plot for a picture that's one thing, but make it believable."

"Please hear me out," we pleaded.

"Now this guy takes over the ship with his 60 mutineers and locks up the captain and the other officers. He doesn't bother the tourists because he says he's not a pirate but a revolutionary."

"Lister, when I want a science fiction picture," Zanuck said, "I'll hire Aldous Huxley."

We kept talking fast. "Now the British and American Navies have been called in to capture the ship but they can't find it. They sail all over the Caribbean looking for it. There's a great chase scene when a British destroyer almost catches up with it, but just when it's about to, it runs out of fuel."

"What kind of fools do you take the public for?" Zanuck said angrily. "We have radar, sonar, airplanes. No one could lose a 20,000 ton liner. We're in a new age. We have to make realistic pictures. It's time you writers started writing about the world we live in."

"All right," we said. "Maybe it's a little far-fetched, but it is a fresh situation and it's never been done before."

"An airplane I can believe," Zanuck said. "I can even see someone taking over a train, but boy, this is the twentieth century. No one can take over a luxury liner in 1961. There are laws against it."

"But can't we take license?" we asked.

"I'm a busy man," Zanuck said. "If you've got any other ideas I'll be happy to listen to them, but don't waste my time with this nonsense."

We left Zanuck's office rather discouraged, but we heard Sam Speigal who made "The Bridge on the River Kwai," was at the Hotel George V, and we called him.

"Speigal, you said if I ever had an idea for a movie I should call you and I had this thought about an ocean liner that gets captured at sea by these pirates."

Speigal started laughing on the phone. "You're drunk," he said. "It's the first time I've ever heard you drunk."

"But Mr. Speigal . . ."

We heard Mr. Speigal's raucous laughter as he quietly hung up the phone.

Richard Diamond Faces Peter Gunn

SILOUX CITY (AP) — A young man introduced himself to Stanley Greig, dean of men at Morning-side College, here Monday as Richard Diamond.

"And I'm Peter Gunn," the dean replied.

However, he wasn't too surprised to learn that the man's name was the same as that of the television detective, because the new mid-year class at the college also includes a Lyndon Johnson and a Steve Allen.

New Africa Common Market May Be Result of Meeting

PARIS (HTNS) — The economic ministers of new African nations Monday opened a meeting at Dakar, Senegal, to try to lay the foundations for economic cooperation between peoples from the southern fringes of the Sahara Desert to the Congo Basin and from the Nile to the Atlantic.

Their aim, it is understood in Paris, is to form an organization inspired by the Organization for European Economic Cooperation. It may be called the Organization for African Economic Cooperation (OAEK).

The goal of such a grouping would be to stabilize prices and markets for the raw materials they produce for Europe.

To create, if not an African common market, at least an area in which goods will move freely and nations will work together for common economic purposes.

To set up a fund for the stabilization of export prices.

To coordinate their relations with the European Common Market, especially in the fields of investments and financial aid.

The nations meeting in Dakar are all former French African territories. Under the Treaty of Rome, which established the Common Market in Europe, they were given preference association with the Common Market.

Under Article 136 of the Treaty they were also directed, as colonial territories, to apply the provisions of the Common Market among themselves.

With the coming of independence, the application of these provisions has been in abeyance. But at a meeting last week in Rome before parliamentary representatives of the African nations and members of the Common Market Assembly, 16 nations expressed their wish to maintain their association with the European Economic Community.

This meeting was to lay the groundwork for a formal inter-parliamentary meeting to take place in Strasbourg, France this June.

From the European point of view, the formation of an OAEK, or something like it, would make it easier to deal with the area in economic and financial matters. It would also, as the United States foresaw in coordinating Marshall Plan aid through the OEEC, simplify the distribution of aid funds.

It is expected that the first African organization will be confined to the former French territories. President Joseph Kasavubu of the Belgian Congo Republic which, as a former African territory of an EEC member, was also included in the Rome treaty, has signified his intention to remain associated economically with the six.

Eventually, however, other nations in the area, such as Ghana, Nigeria and Guinea (which opted out of association with France but did not renounce its EEC association) will have to be included, for their weight as exporters of tropical products would break down any attempts at market or price stabilization if they were not members.

The inclusion of former British territories, however, brings up a host of complicated political and economic questions — what to do, for instance, about trade benefits under imperial preference.

Robert Lemaignon, the common market commissioner charged with relations with Africa, has said that if Britain were willing to drop imperial preference, the EEC would be ready to associate with British Commonwealth states.

He pointed out that the treaty provisions are nullified by independence and that new conventions, probably of standard form, would have to be signed and ratified.

The EEC Council of Ministers last October declared itself ready to go ahead with such an operation.

Kasavubu May Seek Aid Militarily Outside the U.N.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — A threat by President Joseph Kasavubu to seek military aid outside the United Nations added new complications Monday to the Congo crisis.

Kasavubu told Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold his Government would be compelled to seek such assistance unless U.N. troops quickly put down what he called terrorism by pro-Lumumba forces in northern Congo.

The pro-Western Congo leader said he would take such steps despite the risk of setting off an international conflict.

Hammarskjold replied that he would put the request before the Security Council when it takes up the Congo crisis again Wednesday.

But the secretary-general made clear to Kasavubu that the Security Council would have to authorize any U.N. moves to disarm forces sympathetic to deposed Premier Patrice Lumumba — a prisoner of the Kasavubu regime.

Kasavubu charged in a letter to Hammarskjold that Antoine Gizenga, pro-Communist deputy of Lumumba, and his associates, have imposed a reign of terror, devastation and death on Oriental and Kivu Provinces.

The president said his government was astonished that its appeals to the United Nations to help wipe out "this reign of terror" had been met with legalistic arguments.

Listening to music is 'sophisticated'

Listening to music for its own sake is a sophisticated occupation, said Eldon Obrecht, associate professor of music.

"For many people, a play or a lecture has meaning, but a concert is only a series of sounds, often pleasing or exciting, but sounds that do not make sense in the way that words do," he continued.

"Actually, music has its own meanings, which listeners may come to follow as they follow the sense of speech," Obrecht said, "and the discovery of these meanings is a sophisticated, but by no means forbidding, activity."

Banker Pleads 'I Am Guilty' On 35 Counts

SILOUX CITY (AP) — Softly repeating "I am guilty" 35 times, Mrs. Burnice Iverson Geiger entered her plea Monday to a U.S. attorney's information in a $2 million bank embezzlement.

Mrs. Geiger, 58, who had said she wanted to get the matter over quickly, was in court just long enough to have the 35 counts of the information read and to say "I am guilty" to each.

Her court appearance came two weeks to the day after federal bank examiners uncovered the record embezzlement at the Sheldon National Bank. She was assistant cashier and a director of the bank.

The first three counts of the information accused her of embezzlement. The other 32 counts charged her with misapplication of funds.

Each count carries a maximum of five years in prison, a $5,000 fine or both. She could be sentenced to 175 years in prison and fined $175,000.

U.S. District Judge Henry N. Graven deferred sentence until a pre-sentencing investigation by federal probation officers is completed. Bond of $10,000 was continued.

Mrs. Geiger returned to the seclusion of the Woodbury County jail here which she has preferred since her arrest Jan. 16.

During her brief court appearance Mrs. Geiger appeared entirely composed while standing before a packed courtroom. Her husband, Wallace, 58, Sheldon merchant, was there, too.

The 35 counts totaled embezzlements of $122,393.54 during the period of Nov. 5, 1957 and Jan. 13, 1961.

The information listed 14 counts of checks written by Northern Biochemical Corp. of Sheldon and totaling $88,117.77. It showed that 155 checks were written between last July 9 and Jan. 13 and were honored by Mrs. Geiger but were not charged to the company's account.

Valerian A. Zorin, Soviet deputy foreign minister, charged in a letter to the Security Council president that Belgium is organizing a foreign legion to battle the pro-Lumumba forces.

Adlai E. Stevenson, chief U.S. delegate, will be at the council table. Thus far he has expressed regret over the troop withdrawals and opposition to outside interference in Congo affairs. But he has not divulged any concrete proposals the United States may have for dealing with the Congo situation.

President Gets Applause From First Lady of Land

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jacqueline Kennedy, occasionally applauding and smiling, watched from the House gallery Monday as her husband delivered his first State of the Union message.

She arrived about 10 minutes before the President and received an ovation.

With a little bow, the new First Lady acknowledged the greeting. For her first appearance at a formal session of Congress since her husband became president, Mrs. Kennedy wore a plum colored wool suit with black buttons, and a small black pillbox hat.

She occupied a front-row aisle seat in the center gallery to the left of the rostrum. It was the gallery where Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower had sat so often in past years.

The gallery was filled with Kennedy relatives, Cabinet and top officials' wives. Mrs. Kennedy sat in a row with several members of the family.

During the 44-minute speech, marked by frequent applause, Mrs. Kennedy exchanged whispers with her mother, Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, who sat next to her. Her stepfather, sister-in-law, Mrs. Robert Kennedy, and a Kennedy friend, Le Moyne Billings, New York advertising executive, occupied the gallery's first row.

Though the President went to a private luncheon given at the Capitol by Sen. and Mrs. J. William Fulbright (D-Ark.), Mrs. Kennedy went straight back to the White House after the address.

It was explained that, under orders of White House physician, Dr. Janet Travell, the First Lady is continuing to keep her activities at a minimum to hasten her convalescence from the birth of her son, John Jr., last Nov. 25.

Loren Gergens briefs two of his salesmen on new telephone services for business customers.

"I DIDN'T WANT TO BE STOCKPILED"

When Loren Gergens was working for his B.S. degree in Business Administration at the University of Denver, he had definite ideas about the kind of job he wanted to land. He was determined to profit from the experience of several of his friends who had accepted promising jobs only to find themselves in "manpower pools" — waiting to be pulled into a responsible position. "I didn't want to be stockpiled," Loren says. "That's no way to start."

As a senior, Loren talked to twelve companies and joined The Mountain States Telephone & Telegraph Company, an associated company of the Bell Telephone System.

From his first day challenges were thrown at him thick and fast. First, he supervised a group of service representatives who handle the communications needs of telephone customers. Then he served as manager of several telephone business offices. In these jobs Loren had to prove himself on the firing line, make right decisions and carry them through. He knew his next jump depended on only one man — Loren Gergens.

In July, 1960, he was made Sales Manager in Boulder, Colorado.

"I'm on the ground floor of a newly created telephone marketing organization. And I can tell you things are going to move fast!" Loren says. "It's rough at times, but hard work is fun when you know you're going somewhere — in a business where there's somewhere to go."

If you're interested in a job in which you can be your own prime mover — a job in which you're given a chance to show what you can do, right from the start — you'll want to visit your Placement Office for literature and additional information.

Our number one aim is to have in all management jobs the most vital, intelligent, positive and imaginative men we can possibly find.

No Change in Poll; Ohio 1st, Iowa 6th

By The Associated Press
Ohio State continues to be a unanimous choice as the No. 1 college basketball team in the country, but a brisk battle has developed between St. Bonaventure and Bradley for the runnerup spot in the Associated Press poll.

The cross-country panel gave the unbeaten Buckeyes all its 36 votes Monday for the seventh straight week.

There was greater indecision on the No. 2 spot, with the Bonnies barely edging Bradley. The two teams clash Thursday at New York's Madison Square Garden.

The Bonnies received 22 votes for second place and nine for third. Bradley collected 11 seconds and 22 thirds.

On the basis of ten for a first place vote, nine for second, etc., St. Bonaventure held the runnerup position with 305 points to 281 for Bradley. Ohio State, of course, had 360, the maximum.

Duke, which crushed Clemson last week 79-59, jumped into fourth place followed in order by North Carolina, Iowa, Louisville, Southern California, St. John's and Kansas State.

Ohio State's 92-62 triumph in the widely publicized game with Purdue was the team's 14th straight of the campaign.

Iowa, idle last week, held firm to the No. 6 slot behind North Carolina, also idle. Louisville, 82-66 winner over Kentucky Wesleyan, leaped a notch from eighth place, which was taken over by Southern California, winner over Air Force and Denver.

St. John's managed to remain in the select circle despite a three-point loss, 60-57, to St. Louis. The

New York team was seventh a week ago.

St. Bonaventure and Bradley had identical 14-1 records through last week's games. The Bonnies were idle. Bradley beat Marquette 84-68.

The top ten, with won-lost records through Saturday and first place votes in parentheses points based on 10-9-8, etc. count:

Many Reasons Behind Iowa's Climb to Top 10

By Staff Writer

Few of the so-called "experts" in the pre-season basketball ratings gave Iowa credit for much more than a luke-warm season, but as SU's first semester ended, the Hawkeyes were ranked sixth in the Associated Press poll with a 12-2 record and are third in the still young Big Ten race with four wins and one loss.

What lies behind this brilliant surge to the top by a team with only one senior in its starting lineup?

Looking back over Iowa's first fourteen games, Coach Sharm Scheurman said that at the beginning of the season he felt the Hawkeyes had to overcome three weak points if they were to have a successful year. "First," said Scheurman, "we had to find a starting forward. Second, we had to find a way to keep opponents from taking advantage of our small guards. And third, we had to cut down on the number of times we lost the ball without a shot."

"We found our starting forward in Harris, backed up by Runge and Shaw, and we improved our defense to the extent that teams have not bothered us with taller guards," said Scheurman.

"We still need improvement in ball control though," he added. In addition to Scheurman's explanation for Iowa's success, the Hawkeyes have a well-balanced scoring attack, with Don Nelson, Frank Allen, and Ron Zagar all scoring in double figures.

The rebounding of Allen, Nelson, and Harris has rated the Hawks as one of the nation's best teams in that department.

Yankees' Maris Signs for $33,000

NEW YORK (AP)—Roger Maris joined Mickey Mantle among the eight signed New York Yankees Monday, receiving a "very substantial increase" for an estimated $33,000 salary.

With his one-two home run punch in line, General Manager Roy Hamey said he didn't see any serious difficulties ahead in signing the rest of the club.

"If anybody asks me how much I'm going to get, they won't find out," said Maris at a news conference in the Yankee office.

Ohio State In Easy Win

MADISON, Wis. (AP)—Ohio State, the nation's top-ranked college basketball team, coasted to a 100-68 Big Ten victory over Wisconsin Monday night. It was the Buckeyes' 20th straight triumph in a string spanning two seasons.

All-American Jerry Lucas paced Ohio State scorers with 19 points, with Capt. Larry Siegfried and John Havlicek right behind with 18 and 16, respectively. The best Wisconsin had to offer was Tom Hughs with 16 points.

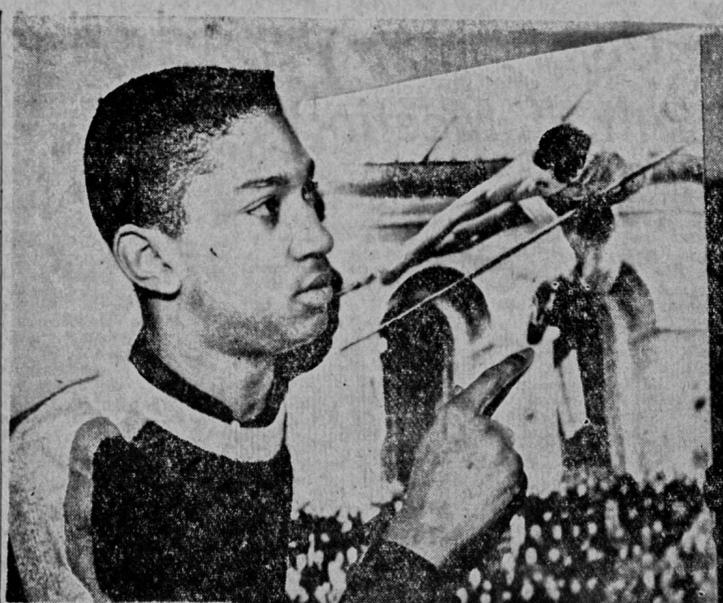

Lucas, who also played a key role as a playmaker, had his constant free throw conversion streak stopped at 27, two short of the Big Ten record, when he missed from the foul line early in the second half.

Ohio State jumped into an early lead on baskets by Havlicek and Lucas. However, the Badgers came back and trailed only 7-6 with three minutes gone. That was as close as Wisconsin came.

'We Might Take It All,' Says Orioles' Richards

By PAUL RICHARDS

WAXAHACHIE, Tex. (AP)—The Orioles will be contenders right from opening day this season.

Last year, I wasn't so sure how fast some of our rookies and other young players would develop. As it turned out, they helped carry us to second place, and with a couple of breaks we could have given the Yankees trouble right down to the final day.

The way it looks now, our biggest improvement will be in the catching department. That's because Gus Triandos is healthy again and when he's right he gives us the long ball we need. Gus was out for two months last year following an operation on his hand and he wasn't the same good hitter when he returned. In fact, he had only 12 home runs compared with 25 the year before.

I think we helped ourselves in the outfield by getting Russ Snyder and Whitey Herzog from Kansas City and Earl Robinson from the Dodgers. Snyder has real good potential and is a strong lefty hitter, something we lacked after losing Gene Woodling to Washington this winter.

Our infield is strong with Jim Gentile at first, Marv Breeding at second, Ron Hansen at short and Brooks Robinson at third.

All except Robinson were rookies in 1960. Hansen slumped in the second half of last year, but I expect him to keep up a steady hitting pace all season in 1961. Also, we have a couple of good infielders from the minors, Ray Barker and Jerry Adair. Adair could make a fine utility man.

I have no pitching worries either. Chuck Estrada, Steve Barber, Milt Pappas and Jack Fisher, who almost took us all the way in 1960, will be back, and with another year's experience under their belts should do even better.

Ingo Rests; Spar Mates Too Bruised

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Ingemar Johansson contented himself Monday with punching the bag instead of his sparring partners who complained they were too bruised to box.

The weather conspired against the Swedish heavyweight too. Rain washed out his scheduled road work. Instead, Johansson trained with weights and announced he would rest Tuesday.

Pirates Selected 'Team of the Year'

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.

Associated Press Sports Writer
For team of the year of 1960 it's the Pittsburgh Pirates, 2 to 1—and more.

The underdog team that won the National League pennant and then conquered the power-hitting Yankees in as thrilling a World Series as you'll see in a good many years was the overwhelming choice of the sports writers and broadcasters taking part in the annual Associated Press poll.

The world baseball champions outscored the Philadelphia Eagles, who won the National Football League championship, by more than 2-1 in the point scoring on the ballots of 134 writers and broadcasters.

In the first place votes, they polled nearly five times as many as the Eagles and nearly four times as many as the U.S. Olympic hockey team, second in that respect.

The tally was made on the basis of three points for each first place vote, two for second and one for third. The Pirates, scored 67-36-16 for a total of 289 points. The Eagles had only 14 first place votes but a strong vote for second gave them the runnerup spot with 130 points.

The hockey Olympians, surprising winners over Russia and Canada at Squaw Valley, Calif., last winter, edged out Ohio State's national collegiate basketball champions 91-85 for third place. The Olympic team had 18 votes for first place and Ohio State 13.

The Pirates worked hard enough and waited long enough for the honor. It had been 35 years since their last previous world championship when Bill Mazouza hoisted a towering home run in the ninth inning of the seventh game to give Pittsburgh a 10-9 victory and the series by a 4-3 margin.

The Runges Listen to Hi-Fi

Meet the Hawkeyes—

'Getting Fitted' Tough for Runge

By JIM TUCKER
Assistant Sports Editor

Dennis Runge, Iowa's 6-8 senior forward, has found his size to be a valuable asset on the basketball court, but it has also given him trouble at times—especially when it comes to buying clothes.

"Being 6-8 has given me tremendous advantages I wouldn't have had otherwise," he said. "It has given me a college education."

But he went on to say that he often has considerable difficulty finding clothes that fit properly. Shirts, for example, seldom have sleeves long enough for him, he explained. His sleeve size is 37, and very few shirts his size have a sleeve that long.

Shoes present even a greater problem to Runge. Wearing a size 15, he has found it impossible to be fitted in an ordinary shoe store.

He finally solved his clothing problems by finding a store in Sioux City that carries a full line of extra-large sizes. He orders his shoes from a company in New York that specializes in shoes for big men.

Runge, the tallest member of the Iowa team, has had his ups and downs since coming to Iowa. He played little as a sophomore, appearing in nine of 24 games.

Last season, he started several games but was not consistent in his scoring. He opened this season as a starter but again returned to reserve status early in the campaign. Since then, however, he has emerged as one of Coach Sharm Scheurman's top reserves.

Scheurman summed up Runge's value to the Hawkeyes when he said, "Denny has proven to be just as valuable to our success this year as any starter. He has given us a much needed lift each time he has entered a game, and without him I doubt very much if our record would be what it is."

A lot of his difficulty in adjusting to college basketball has been due to the increased aggressiveness of the college game, he said. "Lack of aggressiveness was a weak point for me even in high school, and in college you not only have to be more aggressive but stronger, too," Runge commented.

"Another adjustment I had to make in college ball was getting used to playing positions farther out on the court," he said.

He was a center in high school and in his first two years of college, but he has recently been used more at the forward position. This change required development of a shot from farther out.

He said he has sometimes had difficulty trying to meet the requirements of his studies and basketball. "It's like trying to hold down two full-time jobs at once," he said. "You're often too fatigued to study effectively after a rough practice session."

"Big Ten ball takes a great deal of mental concentration to be at top playing capacity," he continued.

Runge, who wants to be a coach, said, "Basketball takes a lot of time from studies, but you get a lot of valuable experience in meeting people, traveling, and learning about the game."

Runge averaged 24 points a game as a prep cager at Calumet. A 1957 graduate, he led his team to the runner-up spot in the state tournament that year, finishing second to Iowa City St. Mary's.

He had several scholarship offers but came to Iowa because he wanted to play Big Ten basketball. "I had fair success in high school, and I wanted to play in what I considered the best conference. I didn't want to look back afterwards thinking I could have made it somewhere else had I gone to a smaller school," he said.

Runge worked in a cement tile factory last summer to build himself up for basketball. He also lifts weights in the off season.

He was married last summer, and he and his wife, Joan, live at 620 South Riverside Drive.

Looking back over his four years at Iowa, Runge said he considers it all as time well spent. "There have been times when I was real discouraged," he said, "but all in all it has been very beneficial and enjoyable."

Opening lead: Jack of ♠

The successful player must not only see to it that his own choice of bids and plays is always proper, but must at times save his partner from indiscretions committed in the defense of a hand. An interesting case in point is recorded today.

Against the four heart contract, West made the normal opening of the jack of spades, which turned out to be unfortunate. The less attractive appearing lead of a club would have settled the issue then and there. The jack of spades was covered by the queen, king, and ace. Declarer drew two rounds of trumps and then played a spade to the nine. This was taken with the ten and the shift was to the three of clubs, taken by the ace in dummy.

A heart was led to the closed hand and a club was discarded on the eight of spades. Declarer exited with a club. This was taken with the jack and the king of clubs continued, to force dummy into the lead.

Declarer then decided to lead the jack of diamonds. Had East elected to win with the ace and exit with a low diamond, declarer would have been obliged to lose another trick in the suit.

But East actually played the queen, for some reason or other, and declarer won with the king. Had West retained his ten of diamonds, the contract would have been fulfilled, since he would have been obliged to win the next trick in that suit with no safe exit.

The lead of either a club or a spade would provide declarer with a ruff and a discard. On the king of diamonds, however, the ten was jettisoned by West and East was able to win the next two tricks with the ace and the eight.

Tucker, Short Get 3rds In Canadian Track Meet

Junior distance runner Jim Tucker and freshman sprinter George Short each placed in the International Meet of Champions invitational indoor track meet Saturday at Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada.

Tucker placed third in the mile run with a time of 4:16. He was defeated by Bruce Kidd, Canada's sensational high school star, who set a meet record of 4:12.1. Running second was Jim Irons, of Toronto, Canada.

Kidd came close to setting a world record in the two-mile run two weeks ago in Boston when he ran the distance in 8:49.

Short placed third in the 60-yard dash, with a time of 6.5. Winner of this event was Ed Washington of Emporia State Teachers College, and second was a South Dakota State freshman, Stan Johnson.

Over 300 contestants from Canada, the United States, England, and New Zealand participated in the meet.

Pantomimes Feature White Face, Drama, Just Plain Fun

Daily Iowan Photofeature By Ralph Speas

An unusual and creative art form known as pantomime was presented by the SUI Department of Speech and Dramatic Arts in December. Directed by Prof. James Gousseff, the pantomimes featured 23 students in white faces, smocks and caps. The students cavorted and emoted through three acts and 17 scenes — all without uttering a word.

Presented here are a few of those scenes, taken during the actual performance.

Big, Big Bubble

Spring Herman, A1, Belleville, Ill., in "Street Scene" portrays a "mean widdle kid" about to blow a giant-size bubble from a large wad of gum which causes all sorts of trouble in front of a store with a revolving door.

It Might Bite

"Aha," thinks Cassandra Brugman, A1, Morton, Ill., as she slyly figures how she is to get her pet dog into a store which doesn't allow the little dears. Worn around the neck, it becomes a fur piece!

A Hat for Her

"Hats Make the Woman" and Bonnie McBeath, A2, Des Moines, is about to make this discovery. Once she places the badge of authority on her pretty head, (a large floppy hat) roles reverse themselves.

Will You Paint My Picture?

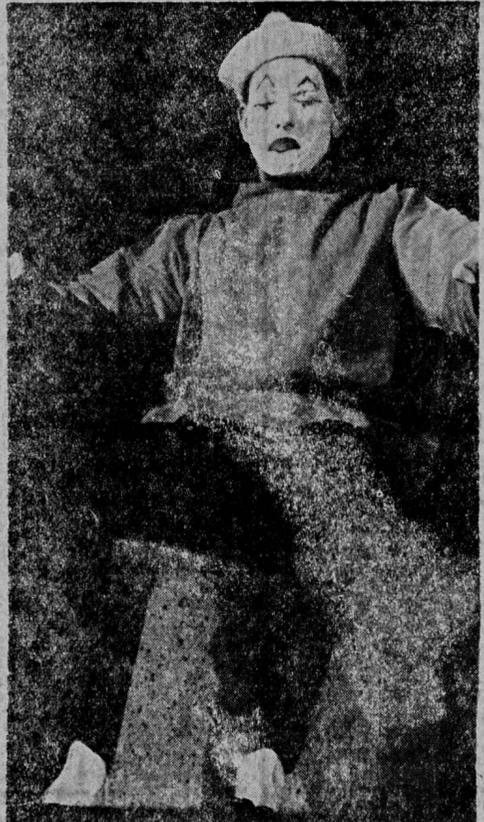

In "Exhibitions at a Picture," Barbara Peeters, A1, Tipton, is caught annoying a would-be-artist, Ed Bruce, G, Iowa City, who is attempting to copy a painting in an art gallery.

Broadway, Here I Come

"The Late, Late Show" shows how the evil producer sweet talks the innocent little flower girl into going with him so he can "put her name in lights." Mark Harpole, L1, Spirit Lake, also unfortunately proves to Miss Peeters that show biz is not all milk and honey.

Heading for Mars

Steve Strauss, A3, Iowa City, as "The Astronaut," (No, it's not misspelled) is all set to blast off for brave new worlds, but nothing happens. Guess what? He forgot to turn the key!

Changing Channels

In the climactic moment of "Anniversary Faults," Jo Lofton, G, Memphis, Tenn., and Ron Rogers, A4, Iowa City, show what very often happens in typical American households today where the old demon TV holds sway. Anniversary gifts of automatic channel-changers result in a duel reminiscent of the old West.

Chip Off the Old Block

In a tender and moving moment of "Cycle," a newborn child is handed to its father, Bill Rappel, G, Manitowoc, Wis., by the mother, Miss Brugman. The scene depicts the life cycle of a couple living for each other.

That's All There Is

Here is the whole group who presented three sell-out audiences with evenings of truly humorous and dramatic entertainment. And, the actors had just as much fun as the audience.

Events Are Scheduled For February

A composers' symposium and a musical comedy are among programs scheduled for February at SUU.

The Student Composers Symposium will be held Feb. 11 at 8 p.m. in North Rehearsal Hall of the SUU Music Building. The symposium, one of two held every year, will present compositions written by SUU music students. The best of these compositions will be played at the Midwestern Composers Symposium to be held at Northwestern University in the spring.

"The Boy Friend," a musical comedy by Sandy Wilson, will be presented Feb. 23-25 and March 1-4 in University Theatre. The Dramatic Arts and Music Departments are cooperating in the presentation. Philip Cooper, assistant professor of speech, will direct the production, which is based on the extravaganzas of the "Roaring Twenties." Performance times will be 8 p.m.

Other events on the February calendar include a concert and two recitals, four lectures, and two exhibits. The SUU Symphony Orchestra will present its third concert of the season Feb. 15 at 8 p.m. in Iowa Memorial Union. Paul Olesky is the group's conductor.

Tenor David Lloyd, associate professor of music at SUU, will give a recital Feb. 8 at 8 p.m. in Macbride Auditorium. February 10 the Iowa String Quartet will be heard at 8 p.m. in Macbride Auditorium.

The first lecture of the month will be given Feb. 8 by Rabbi A. J. Heschel, newly appointed faculty member in the SUU School of Religion. He will discuss "Prophecy of Israel" at 8 p.m. in Shambaugh Auditorium. The lecture is sponsored by the School of Religion.

Professor Emaeline H. Richardson of the Archaeological Institute of America will speak on "Geometric Sculpture in Italy and the Problem of the Etruscans" Feb. 14 at 8 p.m. in the Senate Chamber of Old Capitol.

A Humanities Society lecture will be presented Feb. 20 by E. W. F. Tomlin, visiting British lecturer at the University of Chicago. His topic will be "The Organic and the Psychic." The lecturer will begin at 8 p.m. in the Senate Chamber.

The SUU Classics Department will sponsor a lecturer by Eric Turner of the University of London on Feb. 27. He will speak on "Menander's Dyscolus and Roman Comedy" at 8 p.m. in the Senate Chamber.

Science Research Grants Awarded to 3 SUU Profs

Three SUU professors have received basic research grants totaling $46,800 from the National Science Foundation, Washington, D.C.

Ronald T. Pfau, associate professor of chemistry, received a three-year, $18,700 grant for an investigation of substituted oximes as analytical reagents. Coordination compounds made up of organic and inorganic components are extremely important in modern analytical chemistry, Pfau explained. Certain organic oximes form coordination compounds with metal ions and can be used in methods of analysis for particular metals.

Substitution of secondary reactive groups into the organic molecules often results in reagents of increased selectivity and sensitivity in these methods. A systematic investigation of such compounds will be undertaken in order to provide a better basis for the selection of a reagent.

Robert M. Muir, associate professor of botany, will study the chemical-physical properties of kinetin under his two-year, $20,300 grant. Kinetin is an organic compound which promotes cell wall formation following nuclear division. It is particularly effective in promoting expansion of leaf tissues, whereas other growth regulators are without effect, Muir explained.

The chemical and physical properties of kinetin and nearly 100 of its analogs will be investigated to determine similarities or dissimilarities to other growth regulators. Dr. Susumu Kuraishi of the University of Tokyo, now with the department of biochemistry at the University of Wisconsin, will be a research associate in the project.

Mrs. Grace S. Brush, assistant professor of botany, received a

$7,800, two-year grant for a project titled "Classification of Fossils Coniferous Pollen and its Bearing on the Evolution of the Coniferales." The purpose of this research is to study the pollen grains of the conifers (cone-bearing plants) from sediments deposited during the Triassic and Jurassic geologic periods some 135 million years ago, in an effort to outline the evolutionary history of this group of plants.

Prof Leaves For Bristol

Margaret S. Hall, assistant professor of dramatic art, left Iowa City Monday for Bristol, England, where she will teach two classes at the University of Bristol.

Miss Hall will be exchanging positions with Iris Brooke, lecturer in costume and stagecraft at the University of Bristol. As a visiting lecturer at SUU, Miss Brooke will supervise costuming for all theatre productions and will teach classes in costuming.

Miss Hall will teach a seminar in history of dress from the 16th century and in construction of masks and headresses.

While in Bristol, Miss Hall will design costumes for the University of Bristol's production of "Murder in the Cathedral." In April she will accompany the University of Bristol theatre group when it presents a production in Italy.

Following the University Theatre's presentation in Italy, Miss Hall will travel to Spain for the remainder of April. There she will conduct research preparatory to the designing of costumes for Bristol's Old Vic production of an original play in June at the Royal Theatre.

During the summer Miss Hall will also design costumes for a classic play to be produced by the University of Bristol. Miss Hall will return to SUU by the beginning of the fall semester. She earned a B.A. degree from Smith College and received a M.F.A. degree from SUU in 1951.

Nursing School Conference Held

Forty-eight nursing school administrators from 10 states have registered for the self-appraisal conference being held at SUU through Friday.

The five-day long sessions at the Iowa Center for Continuation Study are planned to give administrators of schools of professional nursing an opportunity to examine in sequence the facilities and resources necessary to administering a basic professional nursing program.

Delta Sigma Pi To Hold Meeting

Epsilon Chapter of Delta Sigma Pi, professional commerce and business administration fraternity at SUU, will hold an alumni reunion, Feb. 11 at 6 p.m. at the Ox Yoke Inn in Amama.

'France Today' To Be Topic Of Film-Talk

A colored film titled "France Today" will attempt to answer the question "Will France stay permanent out of the Communist bloc?" in a program Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in Macbride Auditorium.

Kenneth Richter, narrator and photographer, will explain political actions of the French during the film-lecture, one of the 1960-61 Iowa Mountaineers series. By presenting French families — one on a farm, the other in the city — Richter will show a strongly individualistic and conservative people with close family loyalties.

The effects of two great wars on France's soil and the dislocations of an increasingly complex life upon people who pride themselves as being intensely civilized have produced social problems that perhaps exceed those of any other developed country, says Richter.

He will offer evidence of France's periods of greatness, including cathedrals and castles expressing the surge of religion and age of chivalry, the arts and architecture of the Renaissance, and the burgeoning French empire of Napoleon.

Covering a large portion of France geographically, Richter has filmed French farming, fishing, tourism and industries ranging from wine-making to jet-airplane production.

A graduate of Harvard University, Richter is a native of Massachusetts. He partially worked his way through college by making adventure pictures and giving lectures to accompany them. He has worked for major film studios in Hollywood, Encyclopedia Britannica Films and Coronet. Richter has filmed 52 countries.

Families May Get To Stay Overseas

WASHINGTON, (HTNS) — The Kennedy Administration will cancel the order of former President Eisenhower to bring military dependents home from overseas, if off-setting savings can be made in other defense expenditures abroad.

This was learned Monday after President Kennedy, in his State of the Union message, pledged that ways would be found "to ease our dollar outlays abroad without placing the full burden on the families of men whom we have asked to serve our flag overseas."

Robert S. McNamara, secretary of defense, has ordered a study of overseas expenditures to be completed as quickly as possible. He believes the order to send dependents home has an adverse effect on military morale. The Defense Department, therefore, is looking for ways to save about $300 million on overseas expenses — the same amount President Eisenhower sought to save by sending some dependents home.

A spokesman said the Defense Department regards the question of dependents as "very important" and is studying the situation "with a sense of urgency." The order on dependents was part of a concerted effort by the Eisenhower Administration to cut down dollar expenditures abroad in an effort to conserve the Nation's gold reserves. However, the order was unpopular, even with officials of the last Administration.

In his State of the Union message Monday President Kennedy outlined other plans for easing the Nation's balance of payments deficit and spoke out strongly to shore up world confidence in the dollar.

The president gave few details of his new programs, but the Administration is considering a variety of proposals to cut down expenditures abroad and halt the outflow of gold. These include curbs on the amount of goods U.S. tourists can bring into the United States duty-free, an official Government travel bureau to promote foreign tourists here, and certain tax reform measures.

Webb Named NASA Head

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy Monday chose James Webb, who served as a key official in the Truman administration, to be chief of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Webb, 54, a Democrat, was former President Harry S. Truman's budget director from 1946 to 1949. He served as Undersecretary of state in the same administration from 1949 to 1952.

Kennedy also announced that Dr. Hugh Dryden will be retained as deputy administrator of NASA. Dryden now is acting chief of the agency and will continue in that capacity pending Senate action on Webb's forthcoming formal nomination.

Kennedy announced selection of Webb after a conference with Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson, who has been tapped by the President to be chairman of the Space Advisory Council in the new regime.

As NASA chief, Webb will succeed Dr. T. Keith Glennan, who has resigned.

Israeli Govt. Secures Vote Of Confidence

JERUSALEM, Israeli Sector (HTNS) — Prime Minister Ben-Gurion's Government Monday defeated a vote of non-confidence with the reluctant support of minority parties in the coalition cabinet.

The Knesset (parliament) rejected, 77 to 26, an opposition non-confidence move based on the claim that the repercussions of the complex and emotion-laden Lavon Affair had made the Government unfit to continue in office.

The debate centered on two issues: 1. Ben-Gurion's sharp criticisms of the work of a cabinet committee which exonerated Pinhas Lavon, secretary general of the Histadruth Trade Union Federation, of responsibility for "security mishap" which occurred in 1954 while he was defense minister.

2. The continuing struggle within Ben-Gurion's Mapi (labor) party, which dominates the Government and the Histadruth, concerning Lavon. Ben-Gurion, who has termed Lavon a liar and has charged that the latter's unscrupulous methods in his fight for vindication, has been accused of seeking to oust Lavon as the Histadruth's top official by using the threat that otherwise he will not return to the prime minister'ship after his current vacation.

Iowa Citizens at Inauguration Report Anticipation, Chaos

Take four inches of snow, a huge crowd, an air of anticipation and combine with two Iowa Citizens; the results — impressions of a chaotic but moving Presidential inauguration.

Defies Order To Vacate

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A nervous landlady Monday ordered the father of the boy who broke the white boycott at an integrated school to vacate his apartment by next week.

But John N. Thompson, 33, father of six, ignored the order and said he doesn't intend to move out by Feb. 7 to comply with the order.

Thompson's son Gregory, 9, went to McDonogh No. 19 Monday in the company of two U.S. marshals.

A crowd of about 35 yelling women and men shouted when the boy arrived at the school where three Negro girls are in the first grade: "Nigger lover. Go home. Go home."

Thompson, who makes $70 per week as a drug store clerk, defied Margaret Lezina's order to move. Thompson claimed his $70 per month rent is paid until Feb. 9.

"It took me two months to find this place," he said. "What will I do — go out in the street?"

Mrs. Lezina said she is nervous and doesn't want any disturbance in the neighborhood.

Police backed the demonstrating group off the neutral ground along St. Claude Avenue to the opposite side of the street.

The three Negro girls showed up a bit later. One woman yelled: "Now you've got a little boy to play with."

Thompson had said earlier he would send a second son — Michael, 8 — to McDonogh if the boy recovered from an asthma condition. However, the boy did not attend McDonogh classes Monday.

7th Ave., have just returned from Washington, D.C., where they attended the Inaugural ceremony and other Inaugural festivities.

"The four inches of snow which fell on Washington the day before the Inauguration threatened to make a farce of the whole affair," reported Full, an announcer for KXIC radio station.

"What to us was just typical Iowa winter weather completely bewildered the Southerners," he said. "They didn't know how to drive in the stuff — cars were stalled for hours, and the scene in Washington was one of complete chaos."

The Inaugural Concert, held the eve of the inauguration, was performed in a nearly deserted hall. "Only about 15 per cent of the seats were filled," said Full. The soloist did not appear, and the Howard University Chorus, scheduled to sing that evening, could not even make it across the city.

However, by Inauguration day, the city was on the move again and a crowd, described by natives of Washington D.C., as the "largest in history," turned out to witness the ceremony.

"Actually," said Full, "if you viewed the ceremony on television you probably saw more of it than we did. But we did get that tremendous feeling of excitement and anticipation in the crowd."

"Although I imagine the crowd was 99 per cent Democrat, the attentive and elated reception given the young President certainly impressed us."

Mrs. Full also commented on the impact of the brief and simple ceremony, but added, "perhaps it was just because it was so bitterly cold, but whenever a lengthy prayer was launched, there was an audible groan from the crowd."

The Fulls also attended a reception for Ted Sorenson, one of Kennedy's top advisors, but Mrs. Full commented, "you didn't get to talk with anyone. You felt like one of the mob, swept up in the whirl of activity."

However, on a previous visit to Washington, D.C., Mrs. Full had talked with Jacqueline Kennedy and found her "singularly lovely and extremely gracious."

She reported that while she and her husband were riding on the bus in Washington, D.C., two college men having just met the First Lady, jumped on the bus, cameras swinging from their necks, and began to extol the virtues of Mrs. Kennedy to all the passengers.

"In fact," said Mrs. Full, "we had the feeling that all of Washington was excited and 'taken' with the prospect of a young couple in the White House."

Missilemen Want Chimp Champion

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Missilemen pronounced a Redstone rocket ready to hurl a chimpanzee into space Tuesday and hoped they wouldn't be plagued by troubles which forced postponement of the first Minuteman launch Monday.

The Minuteman launch crew came within four seconds of firing the second generation intercontinental range rocket but called off the shot in the final seconds because of technical problems.

The Redstone, carrying a chimp in a project Mercury man-in-space capsule, is scheduled to blast off Tuesday morning on a rehearsal.

Castro Holds Back Verdict

HAVANA (AP) — A defense attorney for six Americans accused of conspiring against Prime Minister Fidel Castro's regime said Monday night he was informed a verdict will not be announced until sometime today at the earliest.

The lawyer said the information came from military authorities at La Cabana Fortress, where the prosecution demanded the death sentence in a 2½-hour trial Saturday.

Unofficial reports said the verdict was in Castro's hands. The reports heightened speculation the fate of the Americans might depend on political considerations paralleling the case of two U.S. pilots released by Russia last week as a goodwill gesture toward the Kennedy Administration.

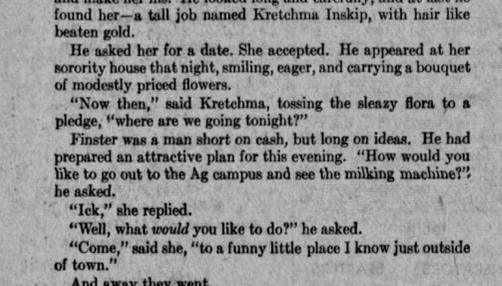

The prosecution charged that the six defendants attempted to bring arms to rebel guerrillas fighting Castro.

The Americans said they had come to Havana in a stolen boat to help defend the Castro revolution.

"A GUIDE FOR THE DATELESS"
 With the cost of dating rising higher and higher it is no wonder that so many of us men are turning to discuss throwing. Naturally, we would prefer nuzzling warm coeds to flinging cold discs, but who's got that kind of money? Prices being what they are, the average man today has a simple choice: dating or eating.
 Unless the average man happens to be Finster Sigafos.
 Finster came to college with the normal ambition of any average man: he wanted to find the prettiest coed on campus and make her his. He looked long and carefully, and at last he found her—a tall job named Kretchma Inskip, with hair like beaten gold.
 He asked her for a date. She accepted. He appeared at her sorority house that night, smiling, eager, and carrying a bouquet of modestly priced flowers.
 "Now then," said Kretchma, tossing the sleazy flora to a pledge, "where are we going tonight?"
 Finster was a man short on cash, but long on ideas. He had prepared an attractive plan for this evening. "How would you like to go out to the Ag campus and see the milking machine?" he asked.
 "Ick," she replied.
 "Well, what would you like to do?" he asked.
 "Come," said she, "to a funny little place I know just outside of town."
 And away they went.

The place was Millionaires Roost, a simple country inn made of solid ivory. It was filled with beautiful ladies in backless gowns, handsome men in diceys. Original Rembrandts adorned the walls. Marlboro trays adorned the cigarette girls. Chained to each table was a gypsy violinist.
 Finster and Kretchma were seated. "I," said Kretchma to the waiter, "will start with shrimps remoulade. Then I will have lobster and capon in maderia sauce with asparagus spears. For dessert I will have melon stuffed with money."
 "And you, Sir?" said the waiter to Finster.
 "Just bring me a pack of Marlboros," replied Finster, "for if ever a man needed to settle back and enjoy the mild beneficence of choice tobacco and easy-drawing filtration, it is the shattered hulk you see before you now."
 So, smoking the best of all possible cigarettes, Finster watched Kretchma ingest her meal and calculated that every time her fetching young Adam's apple rose and fell, he was out another 97¢. Then he took her home.
 It was while saying goodnight that Finster got his brilliant idea. "Listen!" he cried excitedly. "I just had a wonderful notion. Next time we go out, let's go Dutch treat!"
 By way of reply, Kretchma slashed him across the face with her housemother and stormed into the house.
 "Well, the heck with her," said Finster to himself. "She is just a gold digger and I am well rid of her. I am sure there are many girls just as beautiful as Kretchma who will understand the justice of my position. For after all, girls get as much money from home as men, so what could be more fair than sharing expenses on a date?"
 With good heart and high hopes, Finster began a search for a girl who would appreciate the equity of Dutch treat, and you will be pleased to hear that he soon found one—Mary Alice Hematoma, a lovely three-legged girl with sideburns.
