

Evy Denies Offer of Peace Corps Position

By JERRY PARKER
Staff Writer
Speculations as to SUI Athletic Director Forest Evashevski's role in the Kennedy Administration's new Peace Corps were modified considerably Thursday by both Evashevski and by a Peace Corps spokesman.

He said he would confer with SUI President Virgil M. Hancher before assuming any duties with the Corps. He added, "I do not intend to leave the State University of Iowa."
And in a telephone interview from Washington, Edwin Bayley, public affairs consultant for the program, termed the reports "a little premature."
Evashevski and Bayley, however, confirmed the report that Evashevski had recently been in Washington to confer with the director of Peace Corps, Sargent Shriver, President Kennedy's brother-in-law.

Evashevski said "I talked with Mr. Shriver in general terms about the Peace Corps about two weeks ago. The program at that time was still in its formative stages."
It apparently still is, for according to Bayley, "We really are not in a state of organization to offer jobs as yet."
Temporary headquarters for planning and organizing the program were set up in the International Cooperation Administration building only three weeks ago.

Kennedy announced on Wednesday the establishment of the Corps, which would send skilled Americans to underdeveloped countries to help meet their need for trained manpower.
The New York Times and the Des Moines Register have reported Evashevski might have a top role in the new program.

The Register story said Evashevski was being considered for physical fitness director of the new program on a "consultant or part time basis which would enable him to retain his Iowa post."
But the story which appeared in the Wednesday afternoon Times said Evashevski would soon take a job at the Peace Corps headquarters in Washington.
Evashevski said Thursday: "I wholeheartedly endorse it (the Peace Corps program) and I would be willing to help as best I could."

Evashevski said he first heard of the reported job offer when newsman phoned him early Thursday morning. Efforts to reach him Wednesday night failed because telephones at the University of Illinois' Allerton Park guest house were out of order.
Evashevski is in Champaign, Ill., for the Big Ten track meet today and Saturday.

"I have been enthusiastic about the Peace Corps program since I first heard of it, during Kennedy's campaign," he said.
He declined to say just how the meeting between he and Shriver came about. According to Evashevski's wife, Ruth, the two had not met before their conference of two weeks ago.
At the Corps headquarters Bayley said full organization and implementation of the Peace Corps program must await Congressional approval.

Bayley said applications for participation in the Corps will be distributed largely through the universities. He said it would be "about a month" before applications can be made available.
He said the method of selection of Corps members is one of the major subjects of discussion and planning at the present.

Glesne's Hat Now in Ring For Elections

Runs for Council President; Says CPC Problem 'Solved'

A third candidate, John G. Glesne, E3, Elkader, has placed his bid for Student Council president.

Glesne, a member of Sigma Nu fraternity, has served on Student Council sub-committees, and Union Board, and is a member of the IFC executive committee. He is a member of Omicron Delta Kappa, senior men's honorary leadership fraternity, Phi Eta Sigma, freshman men's honorary fraternity, and the Young Republicans. He has a 3.2 grade average.

Glesne outlined the following points in a written statement of his platform:
1. "I believe the problem of the so-called CPC monopoly has been solved by Student Council Resolution No. 30. The policies concerning regulations of student groups bringing entertainment to this campus should be formulated jointly by the Office of Student Affairs, the Business Office, and the Student Council.
2. "Since no action has been taken by the administration on the issue of compulsory ROTC, I propose that we formulate a compromise whereby one year of ROTC training is required and all other training optional.
3. "As far as the issue of the Committee on Student Life, I believe that this committee should be divided equally between faculty and student members.
4. "I am in favor of a 'Day of Mercy' whereby students would be given a free day before finals begin.
5. "I definitely think the possibilities of a co-op book store should be investigated.
6. "Women's hours should be extended both week-days and week-ends.
7. "The administration should be forced to take action on a student health insurance program. The status of this program has been indefinite for three and a half years and should be acted upon at an early date.
8. "Through fact-finding committees, there should be an investigation of possibilities for lower costs for married students and dormitory housing.
9. "There should be more cooperation between students and faculty in order to solve mutual problems.
10. "Single students 21 or over should be given the privilege of living in apartments."

2 Injured in Smash-Up

An SUI student and one other person were injured early Thursday when a car hit two parked autos on Highway 6 near Iowa City's west city limits. Injured were Ronald Oathout, D4, Coralville, and Leslie B. Hayworth, 27, Anthon. Hayworth, driver of the car, was charged by Iowa City police with driving while intoxicated. Oathout suffered a broken ankle and minor head and chest injuries. Hayworth suffered head abrasions. Police said the accident occurred when Hayworth's car struck the rear of a car belonging to Thomas B. Weidemann, D4, Waterloo, which, in turn, struck the rear of the Oathout car, which was parked. Police said Oathout was standing in front of his car preparing to pour gas into his foreign car.

Prison Inmate Fled From U. Hospital With Nurse's Aide

After a short period of freedom, the prison inmate who walked away from University Hospital Sunday night is back in jail.

The escapee, Larry Lee Jordan, 20, and a nurses' aide who accompanied him, Mrs. Carolyn Jean Schott, 19, Route 5, were captured Wednesday at Ashtabula, Ohio and jailed at Jefferson, Ohio.

The pair were arrested by the Ohio Highway Patrol when Patrolman J. D. Junkins attempted to make a routine check of Mrs. Schott's car, which Jordan was driving. During the check Jordan started to drive away and was captured after a short chase.

Authorities said that Mrs. Schott, wife of Louis H. Schott, A3, Bennett, accompanied Jordan willingly in his escape. A warrant charging her with child desertion was issued Monday in police court here. The warrant was obtained by her father, Cedar County Deputy Sheriff Richard Barden, Tipton.
Barden left early Thursday by plane to return his daughter to Iowa City. Jordan will probably be returned to the Anamosa Men's Reformatory, according to authorities here.
Jordan was serving a 10-year sentence for car theft after being convicted in Des Moines in 1958. He had been a patient at University Hospital for two days before his escape.
Apparently growing out of the escape was a ban by Iowa's state penal director on sending prison inmates to University Hospital for treatment, except in emergency cases.
Benjamin Baer, the penal director, questioned the practice of leaving an inmate in the hospital overnight without a guard, although "the state board of control is very appreciative of the medical care for inmates provided by the hospital."
Hospital officials said Thursday that approximately 125 inmates from the Anamosa and Fort Madison institutions are treated as in-patients each year, and many more are treated as out-patients.
According to hospital officials, the number of escapes is very small. Records show that fewer than five escapes occurred last year.
The hospital has no security ward, but the penal institution decides if the inmate being treated needs a guard. If he does, the guard is provided by the institution.
Inmates are treated at University Hospital when their condition is too serious to be treated in the medical facilities at the institutions.

The News In Brief

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Leading Roman Catholic prelates Thursday opposed President Kennedy's school aid program unless it is widened to include loans for parochial schools.
Differing with Kennedy, they said such aid would be constitutional.

DES MOINES — Lie detector tests of Des Moines policemen conducted by the Keeler Institute of Chicago have been concluded, the Iowa attorney general's office said Thursday.

The lie detector tests are part of an inquiry into alleged illegal acts by police officers. Former Police Officer Martin Brightman Jr., now serving a 10-year sentence for two larceny convictions, gave officers a statement naming 25 other policemen.

WATERLOO — A witness for the prosecution testified Thursday that in his opinion, Victor Harry Feguer, 25, on trial for the kidnap-slaying of a Dubuque physician, is not "a normal person."

The statement came from James Shelton, 34, of Milwaukee, Wis., former employer of Feguer. The ex-convict from St. John's, Mich., is accused of luring Dr. Edward Bartels, 34, from his home on pretext of answering a sick call, and shooting him to death.

TUNIS, Tunisia — The Algerian rebel command said Thursday night it expects France soon will make a spectacular goodwill gesture aimed at speeding direct negotiations to end the Algerian rebellion.

WASHINGTON — Republicans raised a cry of "courthouse politics" Thursday as Democratic leaders pressed for Senate passage of a bill to create 71 new federal judgeships.

Sen. Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois, the GOP floor leader, waged what looked like a losing fight to delay action.
"We want the judges," Dirksen said, "but we believe we are entitled to something more than one hour of hearings."

Hearing for Loveless
Former Iowa Gov. Herschel Loveless told The Daily Iowan by phone from Washington Thursday night that he will appear before a Senate committee Thursday in a confirmation hearing for a position with the Federal Reconciliation Board.

Van Allen Names It; SUIowan-Built

By MIKE PAULY

"Hawkeye," a piggy-back satellite now under construction at SUI, may be hurtling through space this spring — a tribute to the University and the state of Iowa.

The satellite, first ever to be named for a University and a state, "is coming along fine," said Dr. James A. Van Allen, head of the SUI physics department. Van Allen named the space vehicle.

"About 20 people — most of them students — are working on it now," Van Allen told The Daily Iowan Thursday night. He said the satellite would be launched as part of a Transit piggy-back space probe this spring.
Purpose of "Hawkeye" is to study the radiation trapped in the Van Allen radiation belts, named for the SUI physicist. The satellite will also study the physical origin of the Northern Lights, Van Allen revealed.
Earlier Thursday, The Cedar Rapids Gazette, in a copyrighted story, said "Hawkeye" was named to honor Dr. Van Allen for his space research. The Gazette attributed its information to former Iowa Gov. Herschel C. Loveless, now in Washington.

Thursday night, however, Van Allen said, "That isn't true. I gave it the code name 'Hawkeye' and it was not named in honor of any person. That is a bunch of nonsense."

Van Allen revealed that he named the satellite "Hawkeye" to identify it with SUI and the state of Iowa. "There was a second reason, though," he said.
"Hawkeye" will be studying the Aurora and from up there the satellite will be like a hawk looking down on a mouse."

Van Allen explained that "Hawkeye" is a self-contained satellite that will be hurtled into space on top of another unit, a Transit.
"After about 10 minutes," Van Allen explained, "the 'Hawkeye' will break off and go into its own orbit."

Van Allen also pointed out that "Hawkeye" is being constructed at SUI. "I'm sure there are about 20 people working 20 hours a day who wouldn't be happy to learn that it was being constructed at Johns Hopkins," he said.
His reference was to the story in The Gazette which said "Hawkeye" was being built at Johns Hopkins University under Navy contract.

"Dr. Brian J. O'Brien, assistant professor of physics, and William Whipple, A4, Cedar Rapids, have been instrumental in the design and construction of 'Hawkeye,'" Van Allen noted. "But there are 20 or more who have worked long and hard on it."

The Daily Iowan contacted Loveless in Washington after the story appeared in The Gazette Thursday afternoon. Loveless told The Daily Iowan he got his information "indirectly, but it was not classified."

"It is a distinct honor for our state," the former governor said. "It was Van Allen's research that led to the theory of the Van Allen radiation belts which encircle the earth."
Van Allen, head of the SUI Physics department since 1951, was named one of 15 "men of the year" by Time magazine recently.

New Violence in the Congo; 44 Civilians Massacred

LEOPOLDVILLE, the Congo (AP) — Vengeance-crazed Congolese soldiers slaughtered 44 civilians at Luluabourg in the bloodiest orgy since the tribal massacres in the Congo's early days of independence, the United Nations said Thursday.

About 1,000 civilians fled in terror to U.N. headquarters in that capital of Kasai Province and were given sanctuary.

The Congolese soldiers, owing allegiance to the central Government of President Joseph Kasavubu, went berserk after three of their comrades were killed and three wounded by a Lumumbist mob. Shooting began Tuesday night and went on most of Wednesday.

Details of the bitter fighting that raged through the streets of Luluabourg were given by a grim-faced U.N. spokesman at a news conference.
Rumors reaching Leopoldville that the number of dead was much higher were not confirmed.

Luluabourg, about 400 miles east of here, exploded into violence in the wake of the city's sudden takeover last week by Lumumbist soldiers from the leftist rebel capital of Stanleyville.

The rebel soldiers later withdrew, leaving Luluabourg in a ferment of confusion and divided loyalties. Most of the populace still is loyal to the memory of the ex-Premier Patrice Lumumba.

The U.N. spokesman said the reign of terror began Tuesday night when about 2,000 pro-Lumumba demonstrators marched on local government headquarters demanding the release of a police colonel.

The officer had been arrested by his own police for showing pro-Lumumba sympathies while rebel soldiers held the city.
Suddenly the yelling mob turned savage. Three Congol soldiers were shot dead.

For 24 hours, Luluabourg rang with the crack of rifle fire and the screams of the dying. Then the slaughter apparently ended almost as suddenly as it began. Thursday morning the town was reported quiet.

Political maneuvering began in earnest Thursday night as leaders of the Socialist Discussion Club and Young Democrats sought to agree on a platform and form a coalition.

A meeting with John Niemeier, candidate for Student Council president, was scheduled for 12:30 a.m., after The Daily Iowan's press deadline. Niemeier was reported out of town earlier in the evening and could not be reached.

At a Young Democrats meeting, Chuck Wolfe, president, said that he hoped a coalition could be worked out with the SDC. "We are in complete agreement on most of the points of the platform," he said.
Wolfe said that the Young Democrats had hoped to support Niemeier for the presidency if he accepted the SDC platform. (Wednesday night, the SDC passed a resolution stating that no coalition would be accepted which supported Niemeier for president.) The SDC nominated Alfred Lee as a "tentative" presidential candidate.
Wolfe mentioned as one of the points that the two groups agree on is that the monopoly of CPC should be destroyed. However, Wolfe supported Niemeier's resolution which was favorable to CPC in Student Council last Wednesday, while the SDC violently opposed it.

Jim Rogers, a present Student Council member and one of the authors of the SDC platform, said "I will not support any coalition influenced by either John Niemeier or Chuck Wolfe."
Rogers announced that he will confer with students and attempt to draw up his own slate of candidates for town and married Student Council positions. Rogers is a candidate for re-election and has received the support of the SDC.
Thursday night he said he will have nothing to do with the Young Republicans, Young Democrats, or the SDC. "I'm strictly an independent," he added.
Rogers was the chief opponent of the Niemeier CPC resolution. Brice Oakley, president of the Young Republicans, said that he had not been contacted about supporting the proposed coalition.

Accused Indicted On Murder Count

NEW YORK — Fred J. Thompson, an alcoholic vagabond, was indicted Thursday on a first-degree murder charge in the sex-slaying of 4-year-old Edith (Googie) Kiecorius. The charge carries a mandatory death penalty upon conviction.

As the Manhattan grand jury completed the indictment, the little girl was laid to rest in a Long Island cemetery.

Watchers To Prevent Election Irregularities

New policies designed to prevent election irregularities in this year's all-campus elections have been formed by the elections committee.

The major change is the selection of poll watchers.

Poll supervisors will be selected by the elections committee and will be required to attend a training session. "This is an attempt to get only the most qualified students to man the polling places," Mike Gilles, A3, Mason City, elections chairman said.

There will be three supervisors on duty at all polling places at all times. Identification cards and a master list of names will be carefully checked.
Gilles said there are still many positions open for poll supervisors. Presidents of housing units have been asked to supply names of qualified individuals to the committee. The applications should be sent by March 9 to Steve Holm, 320 Ellis Ave., or left at the New Information Desk of the Union.

Supervisors will be selected on March 13 and will attend a training session on March 21. They will serve for one or more of the periods 8:30-11:30 a.m., 11:30 a.m.-1:30 p.m., and 1:30-4:30 p.m.

A letter from Dean Stuit will be sent to the poll supervisors to be presented to instructors, urging them to excuse the student from class for the day.

Step Forward

President John F. Kennedy has signed one of his campaign proposals in establishing, by executive order, a Youth Peace Corps which, in his own words, will serve, "to pioneer new fields on the world's underdeveloped frontiers."

The Corps will be a pool of trained young Americans sent overseas by the Government to help foreign countries meet their urgent needs for skilled manpower.

Not only will it assist these nations to grow, but it will provide the greatest possible growing experience for a new generation of young people in our country.

Since Kennedy first made his campaign proposal, the Daily Iowan has backed the idea of the Corps both in editorials and news stories about its development.

The Corps will not be for those looking for an easy time or for glamour and adventure. The President has taken pains to stress what will be the Spartan nature of the program.

But these conditions haven't lessened the enthusiastic response to the Corps. Shortly after Kennedy made his announcement, thousands of phone calls and telegrams poured into Washington from prospective volunteers.

Kennedy's executive order provides for only a pilot program however. The President has sent a message to Congress asking that they eventually establish the Peace Corps through legislation.

U.S. Defense Policy Sees Need for Conventional Arms

By J. M. ROBERTS Associated Press News Analyst The United States, acting on the realization that the enemy has the initiative and can call the tune of war in any tempo, has finally brought its defense thinking to full circle.

Although the President says final decisions are yet to be made, it appears certain that a better balance is to be sought in the emphasis on conventional and nuclear weapons.

This is to give the United States the ability to counter any blow at the level set by the enemy, and not merely through nuclear retaliation.

The British have recognized this in their last two defense budgets.

One reason is the growing awareness that the West has not one, but two, important enemies. One of them, the Soviet Union, has declared its war to be economic and political, but possesses devastating nuclear potential.

The other, Red China, lacking nuclear weapons but relying upon great military manpower, openly advocates military action to promote international Communist expansionism.

One war with Red China already has been put down by Western conventional arms. Yet in three years with a strategic air-borne army existing on paper, the United States is still relying on conscription of commercial planes to carry a large part of the troops to brush fires.

Saying frankly that they are looking at the vast areas open to Soviet or Red Chinese strikes, still depending mostly on the United States for nuclear retaliation, and noting the size of the Soviet submarine fleet, the British will spend 90 per cent of their defense budget this coming year on conventional forces.

The United States placed emphasis on conventional forces during the Korean War under a policy designed to avoid a nuclear conflict in which the Soviet Union might join.

This has been connected more and more, as the Soviets threaten to beat down Western political resistance without a general war, with what has become known as defense against nuclear blackmail.

In that threat many observers have seen the possibility of spotty aggression which the Communists would hope to get away with because of Western reluctance to throw in nuclear weapons.

And that's the kind of thing the new counter thinking is designed to counter.

SEVEN YEAR PROJECT LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Seven years ago, the little home of the Church of the Nazarene in this Adirondack community was condemned and its 23 members left without a meeting place.

Last fall, the new building, valued at $50,000 and almost paid for, was dedicated. Members had contributed $16,000 in the building.

The Rev. C. C. Cunningham, pastor, put it simply: "If you worship God, no sacrifice is too much. Seven years of sacrifice by our small membership is well over-shadowed by the fact that we have built a church in His memory. Another new House of God stands in the free world."

TURNABOUT

Many of the students who heard John Niemeyer proclaim "his membership in good standing with the Young Democrats" at last week's Student Council meeting were surprised to read he helped organize the Young Republicans at Loras College two years ago.

JLK Sci Department only two years to make him "see the light."

"Hey, where 'ya going?" called one SUlowan to a friend on his way to a 9:30 "Pursuit of Happiness" the student answered. "Pursuit of Happiness? Where does that class meet — in the Liner?" quipped the other.

Failure to find Don Nelson listed among the AP All-America team prompted one SUlowan to write the following verse:

Several SUI coeds were perturbed Wednesday afternoon when they found that males filled most of the seats at the Major in Marriage movie on labor and delivery. "They're the cause of it all, and now they take the seats so we can't see what happens," remarked one disgruntled coed.

Two tall strangers approached an SUI coed near the Union bowling alleys Sunday evening. One of them told her he was Terry Dischinger from Purdue. "Terry DISENTER?" she asked. "What a funny name. What are you guys doing in Iowa City?" she asked.

R. H. Adamson, G. Des Moines, thinks any reapportionment bill that passes the Republican-controlled Iowa Legislature this session is bound to be the SHAFT PLAN.

From the speed the Democratic-dominated Congress is moving, Adamson adds, it appears as if they want to lead the American through 40 years of wilderness before taking them to the Promised Land.

"To See Or Not To See, That Is the Question —"

Should U.S. Help Soviets Close Their Missile Gap?

By ROSCOE DRUMMOND WASHINGTON — Should the United States help the Soviet Union close one of its own "Missile gaps?"

This is no class-room question. It is immediate and high policy. You might think that the answer should be simple. Perhaps it should be but so far the Eisenhower Administration and the Kennedy Administration has each answered it both ways.

At stake is whether the Soviets are to be permitted to buy from the United States $1,500,000 of newly developed, very complex machines capable of producing high-precision ball bearings as small as 15/1000th of an inch.

This is not just another commercial transaction. The reason is that these ball bearings are predominantly used in the guidance systems of military missiles and spacecraft and other highly complex military weapons.

So far American industry has in total operation only about 72 of these very special machines. The Soviets want to get 45 like them delivered real fast.

Naturally, the U.S. manufacturers would like to sell them — if the government is prepared to issue the necessary export license.

The Department of Commerce, which makes these licensing decisions has been on all sides of the question.

During the latter months of the Eisenhower Administration the Department first decided that the sale could be made, then that it couldn't, and later that it might.

When the Kennedy Administration took over, Secretary of Commerce Luther Hodges found himself inheriting a whole series of position papers, most of which favored letting the Russians buy.

Secretary Hodges had to decide yes or no. He decided yes, but lately, since Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, (D-Conn.), vice chairman of the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, has been raising pointed questions and apparently acquiring fresh information Hodges has held up the license until Dodd can give the department his report.

Dodd is reporting: That the sale of this machinery might well save the Soviets several years' delay in closing their present gap in the "miniaturization" of their missile and spacecraft guidance systems. (It is this miniaturization which makes it unnecessary for the U.S. to have such powerful thrust for its own missiles.)

That, according to industry experts who's findings Dodd is submitting to Hodges, these machines the Soviets want to get from us cannot be duplicated elsewhere at the present time.

All the arguments are on one side.

sion tools to the Soviets was removed by the Eisenhower Administration some time ago on the ground that what we would sell the Soviets, they could get elsewhere.

At one stage only the Defense Department members of the Advisory Committee on Exports objects to the issuance of the ball-bearing license.

Obviously, the U.S. manufacturer does not lightly want to throw away business which means jobs as well as profits.

What is really disconcerting is that it should take so long to get the pertinent facts together in one place and that in the end the Department of Commerce, which has the authority to decide these matters, did not appear to have full knowledge until it was provided by a Senate investigating committee.

It is well to have skeptical congressmen scrutinizing the executive branch of the Government but they can't do the job regularly. The yes-and-no and yes-and-maybe-not handling of the ball bearing decision suggest that the whole procedure of granting export licenses needs to be reviewed.

None of this means that former Commerce Secretary Frederick Mueller or Secretary Hodges want to help the Soviets. It does mean that the mechanism for getting the facts fully and promptly is dangerously pretty creaky.

Lincoln's Use of Poetry Discussed by SUI Prof

By E. P. KUHL Written for THE DI (Editor's Note: Mr. Kuhl, an emeritus professor in SUI's Department of English, has lectured on Chaucer and Shakespeare in British universities. In 1952, he also lectured at the Shakespeare Institute in England.)

In raising the objection to David Mearns' remark (see letters below) I tried to make it clear that aesthetically he erred was too narrow. Since he advanced the point, I wish to amplify; and I shall call on Carl Sandburg to state the significance of Shakespeare to Lincoln.

On "Richard II:" The tragedies of Shakespeare took on deepening interest for Lincoln in the progressions of the war. Politics and war, plots and whispering, blood-soiled prospects moaned over, convic conscience faced with comic trust and belly-bursting laughter; the same humanity whether riding an English stagecoach or a B. & O. passenger train, comrade greeting from the line "In God's name what are you and how come you hither?" In the White House in winter and at the Soldier's Home in summer John Hay heard "The Ancient," as he sometimes wrote of Lincoln, recite:

"For God's sake, let us sit upon the ground, And tell sad stories of the death of kings . . . (Sandburg's "Lincoln," IV, 122)

On "Macbeth:" On Sunday, April 9, steaming up the Potomac, wrote Chamberlain: "That whole day the conversation dwelt upon literary subjects. Mr. Lincoln read to us for several hours passages . . . from Shakespeare. Most of these were from 'Macbeth' and in particular, the verses which follow Duncan's assassination." These relate how Macbeth becoming king after the murder of Duncan suffered torments of mind. "Mr. Lincoln paused here while reading, and began to explain to us how true a description of the murderer that one was; when the dark deed achieved, its tortured perpetrator came to envy the sleep of his victim . . ."

Duncan is in his grave; After life's fitful fever he sleeps well; Treason has done his worst; nor steal, nor poison, Malice domestic, foreign levy, nothing Can touch him further. (Ibid., VI, 194-195)

Who of us would dare fathom Lincoln's anguish in that dark hour? He was the voice of his era, the conscience of his country in a crucial moment — perhaps the prophet of underprivileged peoples yet unborn in the uttermost parts of the earth.

My letter and Mr. Mearns' reply in "Shakespeare Quarterly" are as follows:

Mr. David C. Mearns, in his review of Harkness and McMurtry's "Lincoln's Favorite Poets," misses the point. He boldly states that Lincoln read Shakespeare for "elegant and mouthable extracts," that the "untutored parvenu of the Prairies" adorned his public utterances and private speeches. This view is based on the modern concept of art for art's sake; Lincoln read his Shakespeare (and other poets) as did earlier generations including the Tudors: history and literature were still a sermon, a fact that cannot be overemphasized — witness Sidney's "teach delightfully." As Lord Charnwood observes in his "Lincoln," a mastery work of deep insights now the fashion to belittle, the Bible and Shakespeare were the very web and woof of Lincoln's thought and style. It is good to see the Illinois State Historical Society in its splendid work at New Salem failed to stress the importance that Harkness and McMurtry honor Jack Kelso; it at a time when the Humanities face a dilemma, are indeed on the defensive or overshadowed, voices of alarm are being heard. Barnaby C. Keeney, the distinguished medievalist and president of Brown University, points to a weakness: "Sterile professors attract sterile students to the humanities and, unlike sterile animals in nature, they reproduce" ("Speculum," 1955). Henry Moe, head of the Guggenheim, sounds an alarm:

You should go forth, boldly, in this world of awful instruments and sluggish consciences, and tell the world what William Langland and his poems have wrought. You should tell the world that in charity, relief, and education, in the cultivation of learning, the advancement of knowledge, and the progress in culture of society, gifts to what the law calls charitable uses have been, under God, decisive; and that, under God, William Langland wrote a poem that made these charitable purposes.

You may proclaim with confidence — with no apologies because you cannot put a satellite into orbit — that the humanist compared to the rocketeer, is both the greater and the prior role. For the humanist always has moved in outer space — that is, the space beyond materially weighable things — searching in that rich realm for the guiding Truth of the human spirit. ("PMLA," May, 1959)

There may be no opera; "Samson and Delilah" has been rescheduled for March 16, at 7:30 p.m. Only one change, however, was necessary in tonight's Evening Concert. Beginning at 8 p.m., listeners may still expect to hear Concerto Grosso No. 1 (1925) and Concerto Grosso No. 2 (1952) by Ernest Bloch and a violin and piano sonatina by Schubert. But the Guitar Concerto, Op. 67, by Malcolm Arnold, has been omitted in favor of a guitar recital of shorter duration.

AN ADDITIONAL CONVENTION AT WSUI is the regular, weekday Calendar of Events, at 11:55 a.m. Events in and around the SUI campus are publicized for the benefit of sponsors and listeners alike. You are cordially invited to submit your notice for consideration; time should be allowed, however, for the notice to be presented several days in advance of the actual event.

"HUAC" will be the only Thursday taken to assay the workings of the Congressional Committee headed by Representative Walter of Pennsylvania.

ISU Social Life Dull, Says Student Survey

There may be four men to one woman at Iowa State, but SUI still has the edge on them in social life.

According to answers in a student poll conducted by the Iowa State Daily in January, ISU's social situation is "dull," "decadent," and "slow."

The questionnaire quizzed coeds on the number of dates they have, whether they'd like to date more, their dating status (pinned, engaged, etc.), and the men they dated.

More than half the 359 women who responded said they had less than one date or not more than two dates a week. However, a majority of these women, mostly those pinned or engaged, said they were satisfied with the situation as is.

51 per cent of the respondents considered themselves "dating around." Fraternity men were most frequently listed as dates.

Coeds listed several causes for the "slow social life." The ratio, four men to one woman on the ISU campus, was brought into many responses.

"If the ratio is one to four," one woman said, "where are the four hiding?"

Lack of male initiative was attacked as a reason for dateless-ness. ISU men use the ratio and the idea that all the "sharp" women are busy as an excuse for not dating.

People at ISU are unwilling to be friendly and outgoing, according to one coed. She pointed out the failure of exchanges, saying that campus opinion regards people who attend exchanges as the kind who "can't" get a date any other way.

University regulations were also listed as bad for social life at ISU. Heated porches on women's dormitories would help, according to one coed. Several others thought an increase in the number of late leaves and later women's hours would solve the social problem.

Difficulty in meeting members of the opposite sex is a big part of the problem, some coeds said.

"Even though Iowa State is co-educational, there is little chance for students to meet through class attendance," one woman said. "This is especially true in the College of Home Economics where classes are generally made up entirely of girls."

One coed inspired controversy with the remark, "by the time you subtract the number of boys with half of the farm on their boots, the ratio evens up."

A letter in the Daily Forum of the paper replied: "Many of the male students on this campus are from the farm and do their share of dating. Believe it or not some of these fellows get pinned, engaged and even married."

For you women who have this attitude, remember the next time you set your slim, trim figure down to eat that these old clods have worked hard to put that food in front of you and are just as well qualified for dates as anyone else."

An informal, relatively inexpensive gathering place where students could relax, meet others, and "drink respectfully" was one suggestion for improving ISU social life.

Ames recreational facilities were called "geared to the teen-age level, not to college students." Shows, bowling and the Union were listed as the main forms of entertainment.

A poor relationship between Greeks and unaffiliated students was cited as another barrier to lively social life. Campus social life is divided into strata, one coed said, and it is difficult to meet individuals not in your own class.

The last word came from a coed who is pinned. "The men who don't date ought to — we women aren't too bad, really," she said.

Cabinet Wives—Stays Out of Politics —Martha Hodges

AP Newsfeatures Dignified, silver-haired Martha Hodges has the strong features of a woman who knows her view of the world with a warm sense of humor.

She prefers to leave the public spotlight to her energetic husband, North Carolina's ex-governor Luther H. Hodges, the new secretary of commerce. Except for infrequent appearances before small groups of women, she has always stayed off the political campaign trail.

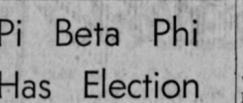

Although in public she gives the impression of being reserved, friends say she becomes witty and outgoing in her circle of intimate friends.

MARTHA HODGES Knows Her Mind

Wash., and Mrs. John C. (Nancy) Finlay, Rangoon, Burma. Luther Hodges Jr., 24, a graduate student at Harvard University, is married and the father of an 18-month-old girl.

Mrs. Hodges is an excellent bridge player. She also paints, a hobby she took up during the war when she found it helped take her mind off the problems of the world. She reads widely and has a keen interest in the state's Museum of Art in Raleigh.

She is obviously proud of her husband, and a close friend says Hodges frequently talks problems and issues over with her, asking her advice.

Since he is such a traveler and so wrapped up in his activities, she is the one who keeps family ties with children and grandchildren strong.

Indiana Won't Be Taken by Surprise By Hawks Again

By PHIL CURRIE

Indiana, an up and down team all season, Saturday will challenge the high-flying Iowa Hawkeyes, a team which started the Hoosiers on their downward path in the Big Ten race Feb. 11.

At that time, the newly reorganized Iowa team, recovering from its ineligibility blow, upset the Hoosiers 74-67 in a game at Bloomington, Ind.

The victory knocked Indiana's record to a 3-3 mark and was the first of a series of defeats for the Hoosiers.

"We may have had a psychological advantage over Indiana when we played them before," said Iowa Coach Sharm Scheurman Thursday. "They knew we had lost four starters and may not have expected us to do so well."

Scheurman said he did not expect to have that same advantage again Saturday night, but he also remarked that his team is much improved too.

Although the Hoosiers have only a 5-6 Big Ten mark, they are far from being a pushover club.

"They are capable of beating anyone in the league on any given night," said Scheurman. "They are a real fine ball club and have a number of good individual players."

Tops of all those individuals is Walt Bellamy, a 6-11 center that heads the Hoosiers in nearly all categories. Bellamy just this week was named to the All Big Ten team and the second team All-American squad picked by the Associated Press.

He currently ranks fourth in Big Ten scoring with a 19.9 average and is second in rebounds to Ohio State's Jerry Lucas. Bellamy is averaging 16.1 rebounds per game, Lucas, 16.5. In 11 conference games, Bellamy has connected on more than 52 per cent of all his field goal attempts.

Last summer, Bellamy played on the U.S. Olympic team in Rome in the Summer Olympics.

Other leading players for the Hoosiers are forward Tom Bolyard and Gary Long, a guard. Bolyard stands in sixth place in conference scoring with a 16.3 average. Long is also averaging in the double figures with a 13.0 mark.

Perhaps the most impressive Hoosier performance this year came when they nearly defeated Ohio State. The Buckeyes won 73-69 but Indiana got off 31 more shots and out rebounded Ohio State 57-50. That game came three days after Iowa missed, topping the Buckeyes by one point, 62-61.

The Hoosiers will also be shooting for the 401st victory for their coach, Branch McCracken. McCracken, who has piloted clubs for 28 years, got victory No. 400 Saturday when Indiana defeated Illinois.

In his 19 years at Indiana, McCracken's teams have compiled a record of 295 wins and 123 losses. In eight earlier seasons at Ball State his clubs had a 93-41 mark.

Sauer Won't Defend Big 10 Saber Title

Iowa's fencing team will compete in the Big Ten meet Saturday without the services of defending champ Ralph Sauer.

Sauer, who last year helped lead Iowa to a second place finish by winning the saber event, will remain in Iowa City to work on a "big law assignment," Iowa Coach Dave Dittmer reported. His replacement, reports Dittmer, is sophomore Jared Tinklenberg.

Dittmer feels that Sauer's absence will probably hurt the Hawks' chances, but Tinklenberg should gain valuable experience next season. Defending epee champion John Youngerman, Bob Peterson, epee, Emil Luft, isaber, and sophomore foilman John Anderson and Lance Hellman round out the six man squad.

"Right now our best chance is for a third place finish," estimated Dittmer. "I expect Ohio State to walk away with it and Illinois should finish second." He added that third place will be a three way scramble among Iowa, Wisconsin and Michigan State.

Five teams are entered. Dittmer said that saberman Emil Luft should make the finals and that the epee twosome of Peterson and Youngerman should be strong in that event.

Peterson, 24-9 in epee, is as good as anyone in the Big Ten reported Dittmer. Ohio State's Mike Cronk will be Peterson's toughest opponent.

The Hawks, 2-9 this year, finished second in the championship meet last year. Illinois was first.

Saturday's meet will be the last Hawkeye engagement before the NCAA meet at Princeton, N.J. March 24-25. Iowa will send three men, the leading scorers in their respective weapon classes.

City High Defeats Regina; Moves on To District Finals

In their first meeting on a basketball court, Iowa City High way-laid city rival Regina 57-49 in a district semifinal game at the Iowa Field House Thursday night. The Hawks led by Tom Tipton, 46-34 winner over Monticello, in the 7-30 district wrap-up at the Field House tonight.

City High's taller, stronger cagers outrebounded the Regals mercilessly throughout the game but couldn't pull away from scrappy Regina until some 26 minutes of the game had gone by. At that point the score was knotted 41-41 but City High outscored the Regals 16-8 to capture the eight-point winning margin.

Regina took an early lead but saw City High pick away at it for a 14-13 first quarter lead. The Hawks moved in front 31-21 but goals by Tom Jensen and Jim Cannon closed the gap to 35-31 at the intermission.

Jensen then hit three goals at the start of the second half and helped the Regals stay even until the 41-41 deadlock. With playmaking teammate Larry Rogers on the bench for three-fourths of the game because of fouls, Jensen picked up the load and notched 16 points for the night.

 Purdue Coach Ray Eddy had a busy evening during the Iowa-Purdue game when he frequently disagreed with the officials who called 59 personal fouls during the contest. The game may have been hard on Eddy, but after he made a few trips off the bench, referee Chuck Chuckowits (right) also raised his hands in despair. —Daily Iowan Photos

Bob Kennedy Uses Football—

Mixes Play with Work

By WHITNEY SHOEMAKER

WASHINGTON (AP)—Now we know why the Attorney General keeps a football in his office. He keeps it there to have a football to throw around the office, of course.

The word that Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy mixes the forward pass with antitrust suits came out at the Justice Department Thursday.

Visitors had been curious about the football on the fireplace mantel of Kennedy's fifth-floor office in the Justice Building, which is on just about the 40-yard line of downtown Washington.

Kennedy and Deputy Atty. Gen. Byron (Whizzer) White, it develops, toss the pigskin to and fro while deliberating matters of law.

For many years the Attorney

General has been one of the mainstays in a family, which includes a brother in the White House, which is fond of touch football games. He also qualifies with experience as a varsity end at Harvard.

White possesses more distinguished credentials. He was an All-American halfback at Colorado in 1937 and later starred as a pro at Pittsburgh and Detroit.

The story has gone around that a Justice Department employee was startled one evening shortly after Jan. 20 when he spotted two strangers prowling about the building.

"Anything I can do for you?" he asked suspiciously.

"Yes," replied the younger of the two strangers. "I'm Bob Ken-neddy and this is Mr. White. We're looking for the gym."

The employe escorted them to it.

Kennedy's brother has played only one abbreviated round of golf since inauguration day, but he is equally hep on physical fitness. John F. Kennedy played football in prep school, swam at Harvard, still goes for golf, tennis, swimming and sailing.

Matmen To Compete In Big Ten Meet Today

By GEORGE KAMPLING Staff Writer

A nine-man team will represent Iowa in the Big Ten wrestling meet today and Saturday at East Lansing. The only weight class in which there will be no Hawkeye contender is the 115-pound class.

Coach Dave McCuskey's crew finished the dual season with a record of five wins against six losses, and a conference mark of four and four. The only conference team not faced by Iowa this year was Ohio State.

Defending champion Michigan, along with Michigan State, Illinois and Purdue are the favorites according to McCuskey. "It'll be a tossup from fifth on down. We are a lot weaker than we were last year," said the Hawkeye coach, "and the other teams all seem to be stronger, so I don't look for us to do any better than we did last year when we finished fifth."

Leading the Iowa team will be co-captains Joe Mullins and Del Rossberg. Mullins finished second last year in the 167-pound class, and Rossberg was third at 147.

Going for Iowa at 130 will be unbeaten Tom Huff, holder of an 8-0-1 dual record and a member of the All-America wrestling team named by the Amateur Wrestling News, two weeks ago.

Huff missed the Hawks' last meet but will be ready for the Big Ten meet.

The rest of the Iowa team named by McCuskey will be Don Huff, 123; Dave Gates, 137; Steve Combs, 157; Sydney Walston, 177; Dick Jenkins, 191; and Larry Straw, heavyweight.

Walston, who wrestled at 147 during the dual season, finished the year with a fine 7-2-2 record. Combs completed the season with a 7-3 mark. Mullins after starting with a 6-1-1 record, lost his last three matches, including one to Don Corriere, 1959 157-pound

LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP)—Adele Darling Avery, 21, the most famous of Purdue University's Golden Girl baton twirlers, died Thursday afternoon of a massive hemorrhage on the brain.

She had never regained consciousness since she was stricken Tuesday noon in her apartment in the court for married students.

Rossberg, who was ineligible the first semester, has a 1-2 mark, wrestling at 177 and 191. Don Huff goes into the Conference meet with a 4-3 mark. Hawkeye heavyweight Straw, is winless in four matches, while 191 pounder Jenkins has a 1-6-3 mark for the year.

Jay Honohan, SUI Alumnus, Appointed I. C. Police Judge

Atty. Jay H. Honohan was appointed to a special meeting of the Iowa City City Council Thursday to succeed Police Judge Ansel Chapman who resigned earlier this week to return to his law practice.

The appointment, effective Monday, is until Dec. 31 when Chapman's term was to expire. Chapman was police judge here for three years.

Honohan, upon hearing of his appointment, told The Daily Iowan, "I'm very happy and hope to continue the fire work Judge Chapman has done."

The new police judge received his law degree from SUI last June. He is associated with the law firm of Messer and Cahill, 1 E. Washington St.

Honohan said he intended to continue his law affiliation and that he expected no conflict with his police judge duties.

The City Council formally accepted Chapman's resignation with regret and expressed deep appreciation of his conscientious service to the community.

Chapman, who graduated from SUI with a B.A. in 1936, will be accepted associated Monday with Atty. William L. Meardon and William F. Suplee. Offices are at Washington and Linn Streets.

He will also continue as manager of the Varsity Theatre here. Chapman received his J.D. from Yale University Law School in 1939.

Honohan, 31, is married. His wife, Nancy, is a teacher in the Mid-Prairie Community School District. The Honohans have no children.

A native of Chicago, Honohan was reared in Boone and graduated from high school there in 1948. He received his B.S. in psychology from Iowa State University in December, 1955.

The new police judge is a member of the Johnson County Bar, Iowa Bar and American Bar Associations, and belongs to the Elks Club and the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

In other action the council appointed City Manager Peter F. Roan as Civil Defense Director.

The council also proclaimed April 14 as Pan-American Day, and April 9-15 as Pan-American Week. This is to commemorate the 71st anniversary of the formation of the republics of both Americas into the Organized American states.

Lobby Group Summer Jobs Open for 2

Two Iowa college students will be selected to work this summer with national lobby groups in Washington, D. C. Robert F. Ray, director of the Iowa Citizenship Clearing House, announced today.

The students will receive fellowships of $750 each, and will be expected to work full time for two months in the Washington offices of lobby groups, Ray said. Deadline for submitting applications is Mar. 6.

Any second- or third-year student at any four-year Iowa college or university is eligible to apply for the award. Application forms are available at the political science departments of the colleges.

The program is similar to one conducted in 1959, Ray explained. Three students received awards, working with the National Association of Manufacturers, Americans for Democratic Action, and Southern Coal Producers Association.

The selections will be made on the basis of scholarship, the courses students have completed and the grades earned, and the quality of the research work they expect to do in connection with their internship experience, Ray said.

'Need', 'Special', Grants Available for SUIowans

SUI students who want to obtain scholarships must now apply in one of two areas — "need" or "special," according to Charles Mason, coordinator of student aid.

Under the "need" classification students have an opportunity to apply for four scholarships: The Student Aid Scholarship, the Carr Scholarship, the Drew Memorial Fund Scholarship, and the Old Gold Development Fund Scholarship.

These scholarships require that the student show a critical need for financial assistance. All demand at least a 2.5 grade-point average, except the Old Gold Development Fund Scholarship, which is given to students achieving above average grades.

"Special" scholarships being offered are 50 University Merit Awards of $100 each. Students maintaining a "B" (3.0) average or higher who have made a worthwhile contribution to some activity are eligible to apply.

Two other "special" scholarships available are the LaVerne Noyes Scholarships and the I Club Scholarship. To obtain the LaVerne Noyes Scholarship, the student must be a direct descendant of a World War I veteran, and have a minimum 2.5 grade-point average.

The I Club Scholarships are offered to recognize outstanding performance in some fields which require specific skills — such as art, debate, music, and sports. The required grade-point is 2.0.

All of these scholarships cover tuition and fees at SUI of $240 per year. Two exceptions are the University Merit award which gives $100 awards and the I Club Scholarship which pays out-of-state tuition and fees, up to $520.

For further details, students may apply at the Office of Student Affairs and talk with Charles Mason. The deadline for scholarship application is June 1.

Summer Session For H.S. Students

A $23,960 grant from the National Science Foundation will enable 60 superior high school students from a three-state area to attend an eight-week science and mathematics institute at SUI next summer.

Students attending the institute — the second to be held at SUI — will receive college-level training in biology, chemistry, mathematics and physics, according to Robert E. Yager, assistant professor of science education and director of the project at SUI.

Two Reasons Noted for Possible Future Devaluation of U.S. Dollar

EDITOR'S NOTE: If other actions to correct the country's unfavorable balance of payments fail, devaluation of the dollar may be necessary. The implications of this "fall-out" action are discussed by SUI economists Walter Krause and Frank G. Steindl in this third article of a series being presented by The Daily Iowan.

Devaluation of the dollar may come, not because we are powerless to prevent it, but because we may find that we would rather undergo it than bear the consequences of alternative plans, say SUI economists professors Walter Krause and Frank G. Steindl.

Krause and Steindl foresee two possible reasons why the United States might choose to devalue at some future date.

First, action to restore the necessary balance in international accounts may not produce the hoped-for results. For example, efforts to expand exports may fall short.

Second, a course of action aimed at more employment and more rapid economic growth may add to balance-of-payments pressure.

In either event, the two economists point out, the United States would be compelled to give consideration to devaluation as a reasonable alternative among the courses open to it.

An analysis of the current U.S. balance-of-payments problem by Krause and Steindl, titled "Gold and the Dollar," appears in the winter quarterly issue of the Iowa Business Digest. The Digest is published by the SUI Bureau of Business and Economic Research.

Just what is devaluation? It is a legalized cheapening of the dollar relative to other currencies, the SUI economists explain. To illustrate, with $1 currently valued at 4.2 German marks, a dollar devaluation to the extent of 20 per cent would result in $1 being worth only 3.36 marks. Or, as seen from the standpoint of West Germany, the mark would rise in value from 24.8 U.S. cents to roughly 29.8 cents.

would come to be valued at $43.75 per ounce following a 20 per cent devaluation. An interesting side-effect of the higher gold price is that any gold stocks on hand are assigned a higher value.

We should not rush to devalue, thinking that such action offers an easy way out of our current balance-of-payment problem, they say. The point is that devaluation has a "price tag" on it too; specifically, it creates a whole set of problems of its own.

Krause and Steindl indicate that a good try should be made to remedy the country's balance-of-payments plight without resorting to devaluation. But they feel that the country should not forsake all other goals simply to avoid devaluation. At some point devaluation might be the lesser evil, and thus some thought can well be given as to how to proceed if the time should come when devaluation would seem a lesser evil among alternatives.

By way of a recommended course of action for the United States to follow, Krause and Steindl support a three-pronged approach to the problem.

First, they feel that special effort should be made to expand exports. The single best hope to bring about export expansion, they feel, is through genuine improvements in productivity in the domestic economy. Though they feel that this is likely to be slow in coming, the effort should none the less be made.

Second, while the two economists feel that devaluation should not be deliberately invited, neither should it be regarded as something to be avoided "at any cost." The goals of more employment and moderately accelerated growth are important enough, the two economists feel, that devaluation should not be ruled out if it becomes necessary in the course of pursuing these goals.

In short, the two economists do not regard devaluation of the dollar as inevitable, but see it as a possible end-result that this country should not necessarily abhor as it weighs the alternatives open to it. If devaluation is undertaken, however, the country should attempt to act with the sanction of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) so as to assure itself of international approval, Krause and Steindl assert.

Third, well before taking any action as drastic as outright devaluation, this country should contemplate using the drawing rights it has with the IMF, Krause and Steindl believe. The U.S. has joined the IMF and has contributed financially to it, and should now consider using the resources of this institution just as numerous other countries have in the past when in basically similar circumstances.

Supplementary international resources so obtained might then tide this country over until basic domestic corrections can occur (such as productivity improvements), thereby making devaluation unnecessary even though growth is pushed. And, if devaluation should still prove necessary even after use of the IMF's resources, at least other countries would be provided with tangible evidence that this country had tried the alternatives before it submitted to devaluation.

Stevenson Warns Red Intervention

NEW YORK — Adlai E. Stevenson counseled the Soviet Union Thursday to "think twice" about intervening in Africa, to avoid the possibility of sparking a nuclear war.

"Africa is the Balkans of today," the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations said at a luncheon given in his honor by Mayor Robert F. Wagner and the city government.

Erbe Talks on Appropriations, Taxes, Trimester, Liquor

Interviewed by SUlowans at Statehouse

Veteran Governor

"Following my commission in 1944 as a first lieutenant in the Air Force, I flew 35 combat missions in a B-17 from England after D-Day."

Current state legislation covering a wide range of topics was discussed by Governor Norman Erbe in an interview this week with representatives of Radio Station KWAD.

The interview will be broadcast on that station Sunday at 10 p.m. on the "Spotlight on SUI" series.

Conducting the interview were three SUI students—Arnold I. Turkheimer, A4, Bronx, N. Y., station manager; John Niemeyer, A4, Elkader; and Sue Katz, A2, Davenport. It was held in the governor's office in the statehouse in Des Moines.

As a prelude to the discussion, Erbe reminisced about his four years as a student in the Quadrangle. He attended SUI from 1937 to 1941. After World War II, he returned to this campus to study law.

Concerning financial aid to state-supported colleges and universities, he expressed hope that a compromise could be reached between what the Board of Regents wants and what the legislature is able and willing to give. The problem is one of distributing money available to various programs around the state, he explained.

"I have heard talk in the Senate," he said, "of a possible increase in taxes, but no talk of diverting the revenue gained by such an increase to the Board of Regents programs."

He expressed sympathy with SUI President Virgil M. Hancher's views on the matter, but added that the people of Iowa are first interested in property-tax relief measures. Erbe did not feel that basic raises in professors' salaries would get to the heart of the problem, but he said he was extremely interested in such programs as the development of junior colleges and the possibilities of a terminal education plan, by which students would only attend college for one or two years.

He was intrigued by the TRIMESTER program of 12-month schooling. "Perhaps this is the answer to better use of present physical facilities," he ventured.

An advance AFROTC student himself, Erbe said he thought the ROTC program fits well into the national defense picture. He explained that he was not familiar with the military's requirements for either a voluntary or compulsory program and therefore gave no opinion on the issue.

He did not feel that liquor by the drink was a pressing problem or one of general feeling, "although many students in Iowa City may desire it," he kidded. He predicted that it would be 10 or 15 years before anything is done on the problem, explaining that he felt most of the interest was in the cities and not represented in the rural areas of the legislature.

On the question of obscene literature on the news stands, Erbe pointed out a bill passed by the legislature in 1885 making it a felony to distribute such material, punishable by one year in prison or a $1000 fine. As Attorney General, he requested local authorities to enforce this law.

Explaining that he had had only six meals with his family since he took office in January, he said his favorite recreation was getting home and being with his wife and three children.

'May I Present ...'

Sue Katz, A2, Davenport, is shown presenting the governor with an honorary membership card to Quadrangle's radio station KWAD. Station manager Arnold Turkheimer arranged the interview with Erbe.

KWAD Inquires

As the Governor ponders, Miss Katz asks: "What recent action has been taken by your office on narcotics control in Iowa?" Erbe answered, "A narcotics information group has been formed and

'Frankly'

"I think the educational requirements for getting into the University should be kept right about where they are now — and frankly, I don't know where they are now," Erbe said.

Heavy o'er Thy Head

"I don't think there is anyone upstairs (legislature) who doesn't think the requests of the Board of Regents are sound, that they are needed and but what they should be granted . . ."

Daily Iowan Photofeature

By Ralph Speas

Persistent Question

"I've visited long and at length with President Hancher, and I'm thoroughly familiar . . . and sympathetic with his views . . . but we get back again to that old economic question: Where is the money going to come from?"

Practical Political Science

Associate Professor Russell Ross has been on leave of absence from his position in the Political Science Department here since last year to direct the successful campaign for Erbe. Ross now serves as his personal advisor and secretary. Shown here to the right of Erbe, his leave of absence is due to terminate this coming fall.

'I Think'

"I think it's the duty of the . . . state educational institutions to provide education to all who can take this education . . ."; and "I'm very much in favor of this long range plan for capital improvements (submitted by Board of Regents), I hope the legislature will authorize it and will authorize this planning ahead in order to take care of the influx of students which are expected by 1970."
