

An Opposing View For the First Time

Some precedent must have been established Tuesday when the Soviet newspaper "Izvestia" printed the account of an interview of President Kennedy by Alexei Adzhubei, editor of that paper.

It was a precedent in the sense that never before have the Soviet people been given such an opportunity to see and examine an uncensored account of the views of a top Western leader — and with the sanction of the Soviet Government. It must be assumed that the Kremlin authorized publication of the interview since "Izvestia" is the official Government newspaper.

If it is a precedent in the sense that more of the same is to follow, then it is indeed a sunny spot in the mist of the Cold War. However, such a hasty conclusion should not be drawn immediately. Perhaps a contrary motive underlies this latest Kremlin move.

What seems appropriate here is a recent description of his impressions of Soviet society by a visiting lecturer at this University. He had spent several months behind the Iron Curtain as a member of a cultural exchange group.

One's first contacts with the people and the country, he said, create the impression that their society isn't really much different than ours after all. But after closer scrutiny — these impressions prove to be approximately the reverse of actuality.

As an example, he displayed a Russian filter cigarette. Upon first seeing it, he commented, one can see little difference between it and an American filter cigarette: Both have the filter and the tobacco end.

But after closer examination, he added, one finds that what we would expect to be the tobacco end (the long one) is really the filter. The tobacco is the minor part. And, a still closer look reveals that it isn't really a filter at all, but merely a long hollow tube.

"Izvestia's" Tuesday article was unusual because it printed — unaltered — Kennedy's views on the causes of current East-West tensions. (A check by the U.S. Embassy in Moscow confirmed that the comments were not changed.)

It is true that throughout the article Adzhubei countered Kennedy's statements with the Soviet line. But, the essential point is that a different side was published.

It is not too unlikely that for the "common man" Soviet citizen, this may have been his first encounter with views opposed to the standard party line. This could conceivably be the germination of opposition to the Communists.

How, then, could these "subversive" views be allowed to penetrate into the minds of the common Russian citizen? And especially after the Soviets have constantly maintained a system of jamming Radio Free Europe and Voice of America broadcasts?

"Tass," the official Soviet news agency, has already said that Kennedy "tried to take cover behind the old blind of an imaginary 'Communist menace.'" Could this be the beginning of a reversal of the apparent? Could the "Izvestia" publication be another device to be twisted into a further propagandistic tool against the West?

We can only hope that this will not be the case, and that what appears to be a solid beginning will not turn out to be a long hollow tube also.

Top Political Discussion

A discussion involving two top men in the Iowa political scene will take place tonight at 7 in the Senate Chamber of Old Capitol. The meeting is sponsored jointly by the Young Democrat and Young Republican clubs.

State Senator C. Edwin Gilmour (D-Grinnell) and Russell M. Ross, associate professor of political science at SU, will discuss Iowa politics centering around the question of which political party can do most for the future of Iowa.

The program promises to be a good one — and might be quite spirited besides. Ross served for nearly a year as Gov. Norman Erbe's executive assistant. He was Erbe's campaign manager in the 1960 election.

Gilmour, a former political science instructor at Grinnell College, was one of the chief opponents of much of the Erbe-recommended legislation last session.

If past experience can be counted on then, (and it usually counts heavily in politics), tonight's discussion should be a lively one. And, more important, it will provide a good opportunity for students to get a better understanding of the party stands and issues involved in Iowa Government through the statements of two men very well qualified to make them.

'Say, Why DOES He Need 100-Megaton Bombs Against Those Little Western Countries?'

W. Europe Will No Longer Be a 'Hostage' of Kremlin

By ROSCOE DRUMMOND

How would you feel if you were to wake up some morning and find that the menace of international Communism was appreciably receding?

Would you think that you were still dreaming, that it was too improbable to be true? This day is going to come. It is nearer our reach than we realize. The time is at hand to put behind us the feeling of impotence, the feeling that the Communists are the only ones who can make headway.

Let me say at the very outset that the outthrusting reach of the Soviet Union and Red China will not be suddenly paralyzed. Some of the fragile and underdeveloped countries may be allured by the idea that Communism has a quick and easy answer to industrialization.

Obviously we can't afford to let down our guard in any way. But I am convinced that within this decade we will wonder why we ever permitted ourselves to be brainwashed into believing that the alternative to being "Red" was being "dead."

THE REPORT I make is that after taking a firsthand look at the dynamism of Western Europe, there is an economic and political force in the European Common Market capable of changing the whole face of the cold war. We have had our eyes so riveted upon the crises from Laos to Berlin which the Communists have been manufacturing that we have failed to measure the vast and galvanic enterprise of this European community of nations.

The sweet of this development is breathtaking in its significance. It means that, instead of the Western Alliance's falling apart, Western nations are coming together in a way which creates an incalculable momentum. I refer to the following:

1—Embracing the six nations of France, West Germany, Italy, the Netherlands, Belgium, and Luxembourg, the European Common Market is achieving an economic and political success beyond the hopes of its most ardent advocates.

2—Its success is so great and its future so certain that the British Government, despite all the historic pressures of holding aloof from the continent, has decided to cast its lot with the Common Market. The British are joining — not to rescue it from weakness but to reap the benefits of full-bodied membership. To do this, Britain is willing to alter its ties with the Commonwealth, and abandon its traditional balance-of-power policy toward France and Germany.

They are even prepared to invest some of their sovereignty in the European political institutions necessary to manage the Common Market. Norway, Denmark, Ireland, and others of Britain's associates in the Outer Seven will almost certainly follow London's lead. This will mean the creation of a European economic community of more than 230 million consumers and producers whose goods, farm products, and workers can move across national frontiers nearly as freely as ours move across our state borders.

3—The fact is that the dream of Western European unity and the shape of a United States of Europe have been emerging before our very eyes. It is already well advanced. Its full attainment is decisively in the making.

ALREADY WESTERN Europe

is producing a gross national product within 10 per cent of the United States. With Britain and the others, it will soon be exceeding that of the United States.

The Common Market countries are achieving a rate of economic growth nearly double our own — the most prosperous area anywhere in the world. The new Europe, along with the United States, will so clearly demonstrate the vigor of its competitive, free-market, consumer economy that Communism will look, to more and more people, like the wave of the past.

Western Europe will no longer be a "hostage" to the Kremlin, as Khrushchev has boasted, nor an equal partner of the United States. It will gradually bring to an end the dangerous political polarization of the world wherein all power of decision had to be either with Washington or Moscow.

PARENT'S ADVICE

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — The leader of a Brownie Scout troop sent a questionnaire to parents of her Brownies asking them to list addresses, telephone numbers and similar information.

In case of emergency, she asked, what should she do if she couldn't reach either the father or mother of the child?

"Don't panic," responded the mother of one lively 8 year old.

On Other Campuses

By ERIC ZOECKLER
Staff Writer

There will be no women visiting the men's dormitory rooms at the University of Michigan this year, but soon male students and coeds will be living under the same roof and will share eating and recreational facilities with completion of the school's first co-educational dorm.

Last week Michigan's Residence Halls Board of Governor's rejected an Interquadrangle Council proposal to allow women visitors in men's rooms until one-half hour before women's closing hours.

The idea was instituted in October when University President Harlan H. Hatcher and the Board of Regents expressed concern over the lack of informal co-educational contact in the residence halls, the Michigan Daily reported.

A spokesman termed the measure "educationally unsound" noting the disturbances that might be created to the academic atmosphere of the quads.

He suggested that increasing the number of "open-open" houses on weekends, which require staff supervision and open doors, might provide a more satisfactory system.

Dean of Women Deborah Bacon, while opposing the proposal, thought it would be good if men residence halls held open houses on Sundays and women were at that time allowed to use their meal tickets to dine with their dates.

James A. Lewis, student affairs president has acknowledged student concern for "social life in a situation where thousands live in mass housing which denies personal living to a great degree." He said changes are being considered to adapt existing facilities for use by both men and women.

Already in the makings is a new dorm — Bursley Hall — being constructed on the north campus. The plan is to have women on one floor, men living on another, with both men and women sharing the facilities.

WATCH OUT, THOSE Eggheads are putting their heads together.

From Michigan State comes the report that the "Eggheads" of the nation, often laughed at and ridiculed, are forming a society on the MSU campus.

The term "Egghead" in Michigan language apparently means those persons who have the "smarts" or more specifically, over a 136 score on the Cattell III IQ test.

They are joining forces to create the "Mensa" club which will be devoted to giving highly intellectual men and women an opportunity to try out and hear new ideas before a receptive but critical audience.

For those interested in membership, says John A. Klemperer, the groups founder, the test must be taken and the score must be over 136. He said the test will be administered to anyone sending a dollar to Mensa, Box 153, East Lansing, Mich. If $4 is sent for the test a complete scoring breakdown and evaluation also will be prepared for the applicant.

Mensa has other chapters in New York City, San Francisco and Boston, and publishes a monthly magazine telling of the research done by its members.

YOU NEVER KNOW, but maybe you will take the big step before being graduated from SU and live your last few years here as a married student.

Mrs. Sally-Jo Moan of the University of Minnesota says in The Cent's Student Marriage, appearing in the U. of M. magazine, Ivory Tower, that after seven months of marriage she and her husband are squeezing by on a very worn shoe-string and the balance in their budget is often figured in cents.

Taking findings of many married couples living in both university housing and private dwellings, Mrs. Moan found the average monthly expenses in general to be: $100 — rent and utilities; $50 — food; $10 — health insurance; $15 — entertainment; $20 — clothing; and $20 — miscellaneous.

This adds up to a total of $215. Note that it doesn't include any allotment for automobile expenses.

So add it up. Is there cents in $STUDENT Marriage?

Letters to the Editor—

About the Concert

To the Editor:

It is curious how two people can react so very differently to a musical performance such as that given by the SU Symphony Orchestra and William Doppmann on Nov. 15. Larry Barrett, your music critic, wrote glowing tributes of the piano performance of Doppmann. It is not my part to be a critic of the concert, but since critics are fair hunting for anyone, I'll criticize Barrett's criticism instead.

He is of the opinion that the pianist and orchestra would have sounded magnificent even if they were playing the Iowa City telephone directory. Knowing that Larry is not given to satire, I assume this statement was sincere. But I must reinterpret his phrase as my ears and mind dictate, and state that while Doppmann satisfactorily rendered the large phrases of the yellow pages, he became lost in the intricate features of the main text, and on occasions he seemed to have the wrong number. His Mozart completely lacked the clarity and precision which are the very soul of Mozart.

Doppmann's performance was certainly unique in one feature, since this was the first occasion on which I have seen Mozart played a posteriori. Doppmann repeatedly "arose to the occasion" (I quote Barrett) so that when he came to earth again the crashing contact with the piano stool vied with the percussion section. I rejoice that (to quote Barrett again) "the whole orchestra would seem unlikely to rise to such precipitous heights." Doppmann's "physical involvement" was certainly complete.

However, when George Gunkle, G. wrote in last Wednesday's Daily Iowan about the concert, he wandered off to the conclusion that WSUI would be better without Barrett. Specifically, George Gunkle, G. claims that WSUI would be more dignified without Barrett. In my opinion, the resulting dignity would be the dignity of the deadstark, cold and unresponsive.

Argument and constructive criticism are good intellectual sports. Vituperation and the inclusion of personality and emotion into such criticism reduce it to a waste of time. Employing the techniques of G. Gunkle, G. on G. Gunkle, G. (as revealed in his letter) gives a glorious opportunity for a parody of his writing on Barrett — of course Gunkle would not be "Iowa City's grand matron of the arts warming up for a post-concert tea." — he exposes himself very obviously for affiliation with another standard female caricature.

The cadaverous attack by G.G.G. on Barrett had so much vituperation and emotion that I am compelled to wonder why G.G.G. does not take a very simple step after a concert on WSUI. In case he hasn't heard, most modern radios have a marvelous device called a switch. It goes ON — and OFF. Use it, Mr. G.G.G., and cease to emote.

A Chorus Of Yeas

To the Editor:

A chorus of yeas for the letter by Mr. Gunkle blasting Larry Barrett. The comments were richly deserved. Though did he say enough? He failed to mention that The Daily Iowan is also the repository for his reviews. They are both laughable and sad.

It is one thing to hear Mozart played impossibly badly (in this respect one has to qualify the "good pianist" rating somehow, for it seems to me a good pianist couldn't possibly do that to Mozart, at least in a public appearance; and having some knowledge of his capabilities, would choose something better suited to him) and quite another to be told by a supposedly responsible critic that the performance was one of the highlights of his life and historically of the SU Symphony. It is appalling to think that perhaps he made people believe it.

Surely the critic has a real function in acting as a guide in matters of taste. Mr. Doppmann may very well be a very good pianist but as of Nov. 15 he certainly couldn't play Mozart. Mr. Barrett had better look to his critical faculties carefully before giving us a line like that again.

Best Announcer

To the Editor:

George Gunkle's letter in the Daily Iowan of Nov. 22 deserves comment. While one may or may not agree with Gunkle's evaluation of the performance, his attack on announcer Larry Barrett is both intemperate and unfair. It is certainly appropriate for an announcer to convey his own enthusiasm as well as that of the audience when he is reporting a spectacle, whether it be concert or football game.

Moreover, as it happens, while Barrett may not be uniformly perfect in his pronunciation, he is certainly the best announcer WSUI has had in the past decade. As an actor Gunkle is no doubt well aware that even the best performer is occasionally guilty of a slip.

Psychopath? He Doubts It

To the Editor:

I wish to take exception to the letter of Nov. 16 which states, "anyone who would rather exterminate all human life than consider living under a different economic system is a raving psychopath."

The writer is obviously unaware that Russian Communism in operation is much more than a "different economic system." It is a complete way of life, one in which individual freedom is non-existent and the individual is entirely subservient to the state. Certainly this is opposed not only to our economic system, but also to every ideal Americans hold sacred.

Our history shows that few Americans have hesitated to fight for these ideals in order to maintain our present system. Would this vast number also fall under the general classification of "raving psychopaths"?

It seems to me that this is not a question of extermination of human life, but rather a question of the willingness of Americans to fight for their unalienable rights. I sincerely hope that the number of Americans who would be unwilling to engage in such a struggle is comparable to the number of "raving" psychopaths, since psychopaths do not generally "rave."

Plan Satire for Wayzgoose

A satirical review of "The Top News Stories of 1961" will be one of the features of the annual Wayzgoose Banquet Sunday, sponsored by Associated Students of Journalism.

All journalism students and faculty members are invited to attend, and invitations also have been sent to newspaper, radio and television personnel in the eastern Iowa area.

Main speaker at the 1961 Wayzgoose Banquet will be Jack Shelley, news director of WHO and WHO-TV, Des Moines. He is former president of the National Radio Television News Directors Association, and a World War II correspondent.
