

French Army To Leave Algeria

Violent Riots Greet Speech By De Gaulle

Could Now Use Army In Berlin, If Needed

PARIS (AP) — Boldly defying right-wing extremists, President Charles de Gaulle Friday night announced intentions of withdrawing the bulk of the nearly half-million French troops stationed in rebellion-torn Algeria.

Armed bands of Europeans and French military patrols clashed in wild rioting in Oran, the big western Algerian seaport.

As De Gaulle repeated his determination to come to terms with Algerian nationalists, explosions of plastic bombs crippled or shook radio and TV relay posts at Bordeaux, Toulouse, Nimes and Toulon, in France.

In Oran, the right-wing secret army organization jammed his broadcast announcement and put on a bitterly anti-DeGaulle broadcast of their own.

In France's Libourne region, the De Gaulle broadcast was cut abruptly when a bomb knocked over a relay tower. A similar blast at Muret crippled the program in the Toulouse region.

A heavy charge of plastic explosive — favorite weapon of the secret army — shook but failed to interrupt the program at Nimes. Four blasts at Avignon failed to halt the telecast there.

But another plastic bomb explosion severely damaged the television relay post outside Toulon, interrupting the telecast in that area.

De Gaulle's announcement that the Algerian troops would be withdrawn during the coming year brought thousands of Europeans in Oran into the streets demonstrating their anger.

Gun shots rang out and grenades exploded in a running fight in Oran's Jewish quarter.

An uncounted number of persons were wounded.

Other clashes erupted in the Oran suburbs, climaxing a night of tension that began with a protest shutdown by the European community during De Gaulle's speech.

After the speech, thousands emerged at Oran to join a deafening "casserole concert," beating out the five-beat "Al-ger-je Francaise" (Algeria is French) of the rightist secret army organization. Motorists joined in with horns and blincked their lights to the beat.

De Gaulle's decision to bring the army back to France also served notice on the Soviet Union that French troops will be available should the Berlin crisis erupt into actual conflict.

The president, speaking on radio and TV on a year-end program, coupled his announcement with a prediction of an accord with the Algerian rebels which would keep close ties between France and an independent Algeria.

De Gaulle also foresaw probable negotiations with Russia on the future of Germany and other world problems, and he pledged France's "constructive participation." But he conditioned this on Kremlin relaxation of world tensions by ceasing its threats and menaces.

He also said that such talks should lead Europe back into balance, and not merely be the machinery for extending Soviet control of the Continent.

The withdrawal, already begun with the transfer of two divisions from Algeria to eastern France in recent months, is to be speeded up. The president said two other divisions and several air force units will begin to move from Algeria to France next month, and others will follow.

French army strength now in Algeria is estimated at 400,000 troops, plus air force and various supporting units, most of them combat fit and hardened by years of guerrilla warfare against the Algerian nationalists. Some experts rate the French army, man for man, as the best in the Western world, although its equipment is admittedly out of date.

Belgian Denies U.S. Charges On Pro-Katanga Propaganda

NEW YORK (UPI) — Michael Struelens, a former Belgian Congo official now operating a public relations office here for Katanga President Moise Tshombe Friday denied charges by high State Department officials that he waged an expensive propaganda campaign against the United Nations Congo operation.

MICHAEL STRUELENS "Telling Other Side of Story"

Struelens is under subpoena to testify before the Senate internal security subcommittee next year concerning the invalidation of his U.S. visa Sept. 26 by the State Department.

He defended himself against both the State Department action and statements by Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs G. Mennen Williams and Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Public Affairs Carl T. Rowan.

Williams said Wednesday that Struelens' service had fabricated "horrendous lies of indiscriminate mayhem by United Nations troops."

Rowan said Struelens had gotten "some extremely vocal help on dispensing a string of myths and a stream of misinformation about Katanga and the Congo" by spending at least $140,000 in the last year.

Both charges, said Struelens at a crowded press conference in his Fifth Avenue office Friday, were untrue.

Struelens produced copies of financial records which he, as a registered foreign agent, is required to file every six months with the Justice Department.

The itemized accounting showed expenditures totaling $100,900.56 between Oct. 1, 1960, when the Katanga information bureau was opened, to Sept. 30, 1961. In the six months of his 1960 operation he said he spent $47,000.

Struelens said his budget from the Katanga Government for the year 1961 was $100,000 and that he expected to end the year having spent $85,000.

The money, he said, went into "telling the other side of the Katanga story" by means of personal lecture appearances throughout the United States before private

'Cold' Thief Takes Money, Register

A thief made off with $250 and a cash register from Don's Standard Service, 305 N. Gilbert St., Friday night.

Attendants and other patrons were in another room of the station at the time.

Witnesses said the man entered the station about 8 p.m., saying he wanted to get warm. When attendants and customers went into another room, the man picked up the cash register and ran out. Police said he must have had a car waiting nearby.

The thief was described as 35-40 years old, slender, about 5 feet 10 inches tall, and 140-150 pounds. He was wearing a dark brown hat, rust fingertip coat, and black leather boots with two unusual buckles. His pants were tucked into the boots.

Divers Fail To Find Body Of Trucker

Police Investigating Report of Hitch-Hiker Seen After Accident

By BILL STRABALA Staff Writer

For the second straight day Mrs. David Watson watched the grim dragging operations Friday which might have turned up the body of her husband. Their failure keeps alive a desperate hope that he somehow might have escaped and wandered off. Watson's two brothers stood by her.

The search for the Muscatine bread truck driver, feared drowned early Thursday morning continued Friday afternoon as two divers unsuccessfully probed the murky, ice-cold Iowa River near Hills. They will try again today, officials said.

Bob Vogel, one of the more than 10 volunteers, said the operation may be called off if they find no trace of Watson after today's efforts. A private cabin on the bank near the bridge has been opened for the search party, providing shelter from the near-zero weather.

Watson's bread van crashed through a bridge railing into the river early Thursday under mysterious circumstances.

Police officials, holding to the possibility of foul play, investigated a report of a hitch-hiker seen only a few miles from the scene shortly after the accident.

Eldon Duffy, Route 4, told police Friday he picked up a man on the sand road four miles north of Hills about 7 a.m. Thursday. Police place the accident time at shortly after 6 a.m.

Duffy, however, was unable to identify the stranger from photographs. He said the rider asked to be let out on Highway 6 at the edge of Iowa City.

Johnson County Deputy Sheriff Dave Cook said officials probably won't have a solution to the mystery until Watson is found.

The scuba divers, Paul Spicer, 730 E. Bowers St., and Virdon Eden of West Liberty, said their attempts to explore underwater brush piles for Watson's body were unsuccessful because the breathing apparatus on their equipment froze shut. Underwater visibility was also poor, they said.

Both men are members of the Coast Guard Auxiliary, a local emergency rescue organization. The divers said they have previously made cold weather dives, but usually in deeper water. The depth around the Hills bridge ranges from four to ten feet.

Police still have no evidence to explain why Watson was heading away from Hills at the time of the accident, but had not made his scheduled delivery there.

Stevenson Warns JFK On Goa Consequences

PALM BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — President Kennedy Friday received a warning from Adlai E. Stevenson that inability of the United Nations Security Council to deal with the Indian attack on Goa could lead to serious consequences for world peace.

The report from Stevenson, U.S. ambassador to the U.N., reached the Chief Executive along with a much more heartening message — expert opinion that his father, former Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy, is showing "marked improvement" from the effects of a Dec. 19 paralytic stroke.

The President met with his chief counsel, Theodore C. Sorensen, and received an intelligence briefing from his military aid, Maj. Gen. Chester V. Clifton. At midday, the Chief Executive embarked in the White House yacht, Honey Fitz, for a brief cruise in nippy, but sunny weather.

Late Friday, the President called another meeting of top White House advisers to discuss his forthcoming legislative program. His conferees were Sorensen, budget director David E. Bell, Myer Feldman, Sorensen's deputy, and Lawrence O'Brien, chief White House liaison man with Congress.

In addition to the Stevenson report on the first part of the 16th U.N. General Assembly session, Kennedy received and accepted the resignation of Gen. C. P. Cabell (USAF) as deputy director of Central Intelligence effective Jan. 31. The White House disclaimed knowledge of a report Cabell might be succeeded by Clifton.

The Chief Executive Friday also announced his selection of C. Alan Stewart as new Ambassador to Venezuela, succeeding Teodoro Moscoso who resigned several months ago to become regional director of the Agency for International Development (AID) for Latin America. Stewart, a former newspaperman who joined the for-who form American public opinion. He said he had thus provoked enemies within the African affairs section of the U.S. State Department and for this reason was being persecuted. The invalidation of his visa, he indicated, was part of his persecution.

He said Rowan's attack on him was "an insult to all those good Americans who share my point of view" about the U.N. Congo action and the U.S. support of it. Among these Americans he mentioned former President Herbert Hoover, former Vice President Richard M. Nixon, Sen. Richard Russell (D-Ga.) and Sen. J. Strom Thurmond (D-S. C.).

Asked if he had received support from American business concerns, Struelens said it was a major part of his task to attract American capital to Katanga, but that he had received no support for his cause from American business.

Struelens said his efforts to bring American business and investment into Katanga were repeatedly frustrated by the State Department.

Tshombe Says U.S. Pushing New U.N. Action in Katanga

Combined from Leased Wires

WASHINGTON — Katanga President Moise Tshombe charged in a telegram to President Kennedy Friday that the United States has been urging renewed United Nations action against Katanga.

The State Department immediately labeled the charge "absurd."

Tshombe also charged that troops of the national Congo army, with the assistance of the United Nations, launched a new attack against North Katanga Friday.

The secessionist president scattered protests and appeals for aid to President Kennedy, U.N. acting Secretary General U Thant, the British Government and Congo Premier Cyrille Adoula.

There was no confirmation of the attack from U.N. sources.

A U.N. spokesman in New York said reports had been received in the last few days of minor skirmishes in the area. But he categorically denied that the U.N. force was participating in any joint military operations with the Congolese, or had given any help to central Government forces in the skirmishes.

The U.S. State Department called on Tshombe to move promptly to carry out his agreement with Central Congo Premier Cyrille Adoula at Kitona last week to end Katanga secession.

Tshombe charged in his cable to Kennedy that U.S. Ambassador Edmund A. Gullion interfered in the Kitona talks. The same charge was made in Brussels Friday by Katanga Foreign Minister Evariste Kimba.

The State Department flatly denied this also. "At no time did Ambassador Gullion interfere in the negotiation," said Press Officer Lincoln White.

Tshombe reported the new attack at a new conference as the

U.S. Forming Task Force To Conduct Nuclear Tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States took a long step Friday toward resuming atmospheric testing of nuclear weapons. It announced formation of a joint task force to arrange and conduct the tests if President Kennedy gives the go-ahead.

This was the fourth of recent moves developing out of Russia's scrapping of the nuclear test moratorium and her series of explosive trials last fall.

Kennedy said on Nov. 2 that Russia's action required that the United States begin preparing for the possibility of resuming tests of nuclear detonations in the atmosphere.

A week ago, Kennedy and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan agreed during their Bermuda meeting that it was prudent to push plans for such tests.

In the meantime, the United States went ahead with a series of underground shots of relatively small size.

The Pentagon said Friday it has established "Joint Task Force 8," to plan, support with men, materials and transportation and to carry out atmospheric testing of nuclear weapons if Kennedy issues the final orders.

Composition of the joint force in all previous nuclear tests by the United States — representatives and technicians of the Army, Navy and Air Force.

Maj. Gen. Robert H. Booth, an Army officer who is now head of the Defense Atomic Support Agency of the Pentagon, was assigned over-all control of the task force.

For the present, the setup calls for the military task force to maintain "appropriate relationships" with the Atomic Energy Commission. However, if Kennedy orders a full go-ahead with atmospheric testing, the AEC will become an equal partner in the joint operation.

On Putting Colleges On a 12-Month Basis

For a long time we have felt that a change in the school year which would mean less summer vacancy in the physical plant deserved greater consideration than it has ever had.

In the light of this, we have been pleased to see the State Board of Regents give a green light to the three institutions of higher learning to move into an around-the-calendar program if it is feasible.

Having noted this, and so that the problem will not be looked at out of focus, it should be pointed out that the big bottleneck to a realization of this setup is in providing an all-year faculty.

Age Discrimination End

Many thousands of business firms have either written or unwritten policies of not hiring older workers. In some cases the age limit is set as high as 55 or 60, but in others it's far below that.

Now some jobs do require great physical stamina, and these cannot be filled by older workmen. But mechanization has continually trimmed the volume of this type of work.

It's doubtful how long we can afford this type of folly without serious trouble. According to the U.S. Labor Department, America's work force is expected to increase by 13% million persons between 1960 and 1970.

At the end of the decade, two out of every five persons in the potential labor force will be over 45.

What these figures add up to is this. We will have to stop our present practice of age discrimination in employment or the country will face a serious and artificial labor shortage.

The job future of our growing number of older workers is important to the economy in another way, too. If they have jobs and continue to draw paychecks, they will remain consumers of our national products, steady users of our services.

The first step toward improving the situation is to shatter some of the damaging myths of the past. The U.S. Department of Labor, along with some business and labor groups, have done research in this field.

Stop Truck Speeding

The announcement by the Iowa Public Safety Department that highway patrolmen will crack down on truck speeding after Jan. 1 is a welcome one.

Speed checks by the State Highway Commission at out-of-town points on highways repeatedly have shown that there is a greater tendency toward speeding by trucks than by passenger cars.

Violations by motorists should not be overlooked but it is logical to apply the most pressure where the speeding is the most common and this appears to be among the truck drivers.

Although the announcement by the Safety Department was welcome, one that was even more important was made by L. E. Crowley, executive secretary of the Iowa Motor Truck Association, Inc.

The temptation to speed will be a lot less compelling when the boss is clearly and forcibly opposed to it.

Peace Corpsmen Learning Caution Pays in Their Work

BOGOTA, Colombia — It was more than a week before the Communist press in Colombia worked out the party line for the Peace Corps and launched a campaign of vilification.

The Communists used cartoon primarily to hammer away at one theme depicting the Peace Corpsmen as spies and saboteurs sent by the Central Intelligence Agency to take over Colombia.

Without this church support the entire project would probably have been doomed from the start. President Lleras personally reviewed the list of villages suggested as possible Peace Corps sites.

MERT CREGGER, the ranking representative in Bogota for CARE which administers the Peace Corps program in Colombia, is equally determined to avoid any incidents.

There have been no reported incidents to date. In fact, the reception for the Peace Corps in the through Friday and from 9 to 10 a.m. Saturday.

There are scores of such conflicts of priorities. Coherence is impossible without well-established priorities, because this lack causes one set of claims to be given the heaviest weight at one moment, and another set at another moment.

VERY OBVIOUSLY, an argument about foreign policy priorities has been going on within the Kennedy Administration since inauguration day. The argument's pattern has rarely been absolutely clear, and its effects have been visible. A major stage of the argument was clearly passed when the State Department was reorganized and Chester Bowles was shelved. But the argument will end for good and all only when the President imposes his own viewpoint on all foreign policy-makers who really matter, just as Roosevelt did and Truman also did.

Matter of Fact—

Kennedy's First Year Reviewed

By JOSEPH ALSOP

In deep snow, but in an atmosphere of great gaiety and renewed hope, President Kennedy was inaugurated just a little less than a year ago.

The hope of the first month or two — the hope that the vast, intractable problems inherited by the new President could somehow be solved in a trice — has quite plainly not been realized. It was an illogical hope, never shared by Kennedy himself.

The let-down, when the impossible proved to be impossible, did the new Administration considerable harm abroad. The President's authority as leader of the Western alliance, even today, continues to be somewhat impaired because our allies at first expected too much and were therefore disappointed.

AFTER THE let-down, in fact, came the shake-down that every new Administration always needs. The new men began to adapt the governmental machinery to their purposes, to adopt settled viewpoints towards the great tasks confronting them, and to form regular habits of working with one another.

Of these, the most striking is the extreme competence that is the rule in most areas of Government. The domestic departments, to begin with, attract little notice, either from the President or the country. Yet they are decidedly more ably staffed, on the average, than they have been in a very long time.

The Treasury, again, has found an exceptionally able and highly sophisticated leader in Secretary Douglas Dillon — which is just as well, since Treasury's role has gained far reaching new significance from the balance of payments crisis.

THE DEFENSE DEPARTMENT, yet again, is now presided over by just about the most remarkable new man to come in to Government since World War II. As Secretary Robert McNamara operates behind closed doors, there is very little general understanding of how much he has accomplished. Yet he has already gone far to bring order and unity into his vast domain, and to impose logic and coherence on the formerly bizarre process of defense policy-making.

At the end of its 1961 shake-down cruise, in fact, the aspect of the Kennedy Administration is highly reassuring in every governmental area save one. In the area of foreign policy, many exceedingly able men have been put to work, headed by Secretary of State Rusk, but here there is nothing like the coherence, unity of viewpoint, and clarity of purpose that marked the great American policy-makers of the past, as in the best and most creative years of Harry S. Truman.

Two reasons for this difference are obvious. On the one hand, the problems that now have to be solved are uglier and more intricate. On the other hand, it is no longer so easy for the U.S. to solve great world problems by its own sole act. The men who invented the Marshall Plan, and thus saved Western Europe, would not be able to invent any comparably world-improving measure today.

BUT EVEN AFTER due allowance has been made, a nagging question-mark remains. Coherence in foreign policy first of all depends on general acceptance, by all the policy-makers, of a given order of priorities. When the claims of the Western alliance have to be weighed, for instance, against the claims of the less developed countries, everyone needs to agree about which claims should be put first.

There are scores of such conflicts of priorities. Coherence is impossible without well-established priorities, because this lack causes one set of claims to be given the heaviest weight at one moment, and another set at another moment.

VERY OBVIOUSLY, an argument about foreign policy priorities has been going on within the Kennedy Administration since inauguration day. The argument's pattern has rarely been absolutely clear, and its effects have been visible. A major stage of the argument was clearly passed when the State Department was reorganized and Chester Bowles was shelved. Adenauer In Com

BONN, Germany (AP) — Konrad Adenauer's confidence Friday that negotiations on the Berlin wall will start "sometime during the beginning of the coming year" was concluded, there was no war in 1962.

The chancellor did not act when, where, or on a level the expected negotiations would be held. But he made it clear that in his opinion no serious differences remain among the Western Allies to cause much further delay.

President Charles de Gaulle of France has balked at trying Adenauer to reach a settlement with the Soviet Union on Berlin until it is some preliminary atmosphere for success. He reiterated his stand in a nationwide address in Paris Friday.

Adenauer spoke of the position as reasonable and mountable. "The only questions at issue are over the timing of the preliminary conditions," he said. "De Gaulle's emphasis on the existence of the Berlin wall is not a problem."

Harold Tribune News Service Talk on Capitol Hill: India's invasion of Goa strengthens the position of opponents of long-term foreign aid financing. Iowa vs. Unbeaten Villanova in Tourney Finals

Hawks Seek 2nd Straight Holiday Title

Villanova Is Favored In Quaker City Event

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. — A tough, tournament-minded Iowa team will meet unbeaten Villanova in the finals of the Quaker City basketball tourney here.

The game is scheduled for 8:15 p.m. Iowa time. At 6:30 Pennsylvania plays Duquesne for third place.

The Iowa game will be broadcast over WMT radio, Cedar Rapids.

The Hawkeyes will be seeking their second holiday tournament title in two years. Last year, on the other side of the country, they scored a 72-65 come-from-behind victory over UCLA in the West Coast Classic Tournament at Los Angeles to take that title.

The Hawks were underdogs at Los Angeles, and they will definitely fall in that category again tonight. Villanova is currently riding a 10-game winning streak, the longest victory string in the nation. Certainly one of its biggest wins was the 78-53 upset of Duquesne Thursday night.

The Wildcats had been figured to have only an outside chance of beating the Dukes, but Villanova streaked to an amazing 42-19 half-time lead and was never threatened in the game. Until its loss to Villanova, Duquesne had been undefeated. It ranked third in the AP poll and seventh in the UPI ratings. Neither Iowa nor Villanova is ranked nationally.

Big guns in the Villanova attack are All-American candidate Hubie White and sophomores George Leftwich and Wally Jones. White, a 6-4 senior forward, led the Wildcats' attack against the Dukes with 22 points. Leftwich, a 6-foot guard, had 21 and Jones, a flashy 6-1½ guard, tallied 17.

Iowa will be led by its own All-American candidate, Don Nelson, who will be playing in the finals of a holiday tournament for the third straight year.

In addition to the West Coast Classic last season, the 6-5 Nelson played for the Hawks as a sophomore against Cincinnati in the New York Holiday Festival finals. The Hawks lost that game, 96-83.

Nelson has held scoring honors in both Iowa's Quaker City tourney games. Against Penn State he hit 29 points and Thursday he scored 17 as the Hawks defeated Pennsylvania, 72-64.

In the Penn Game, Iowa got additional balanced scoring from sophomores Andy Hankins, Dave Roach and Jerry Messick. Hankins, Iowa's No. 2 scorer for the season, had 13 points and Roach and Messick notched 12 apiece.

That trio of sophomores turned in one of its most promising performances of the young season. Junior guard Matt Szykowny, who had four points, was a defensive stand-out for Iowa.

Coach Jack Kraft of Villanova said Friday that he doesn't plan to double-team Iowa scoring threat Nelson tonight.

"They've got a good strong team," Kraft said of the Hawkeyes, "and any of their three big men — Nelson, 6-6 Dave Roach and 6-7 Doug Mehlfuss — are strong."

"They know how to get position and use their bodies to block. We can't double-team Nelson because no sooner than we do they throw to someone else. We might turn around and let Nelson get his 20 points and shut out the other guys."

Iowa Coach Sharm Scheuerman said Villanova is the "most explosive" club his team will be playing this year.

"They can get 10 points quicker than any team I've seen," he said. Iowa has won six games, losing to St. Louis and Evansville. It has now won four straight.

City High Defeats Anamosa 70-49

The Iowa City Little Hawks rolled to a 39-21 halftime lead and went on to defeat the Anamosa Raiders 70-49 in a non-conference game. City High now has a 3-4 record; Anamosa, 1-6.

Leading scorers for the Little Hawks were forward Gary Snook with 16 and guard Skip Hohle with 11.

Leading game scorer was Anamosa guard Denny Teymer with 34. Teymer connected on 13 field goals and eight free throws and put on a one-man second half performance by scoring 22 of the Raiders' 28 second-half points.

Scoring by quarters:
Iowa City 17 22 16 15—70
Anamosa 11 10 11 17—49

Dry, Soft Field Ready In Frozen Green Bay

GREEN BAY, Wis. (UPI) — Barring weather complications, the Green Bay Packers and the New York Giants will be able to shoot the works on a soft, dry field in Sunday's National Football League title showdown, despite recent snow and sub zero cold.

Workmen stripped off a tarp Friday at City Stadium for a sounding on the condition of the turf and found it unfrozen and dry. It had been covered with protective hay for several weeks.

The forecast is for dry and crisp weather Sunday, with temperatures in the 20's or 30's for the nationally televised battle before an expected sellout crowd of 41,000.

So the Packers and Giants can unlimber their best offensive weapons as each bids for their fourth world crown since these playoffs were started in 1933. The Packers are favored by three points.

The Packers, repeat winners of the Western Division title with their best record in 20 years, 11-3, worked out about 70 minutes Friday in comparatively "warm" temperatures, with the mercury ranging between 8 and 13 above. Thursday, they drilled in 11 below weather.

Fullback Jim Taylor, the Packers' top runner, and second best in the NFL, "is doing much better and should be ready to go," Lombardi said.

Halfback Paul Hornung, the Army private who has just been voted the NFL's "Player of the Year" award by United Press International, is "looking much better and I expect him to be in top shape," said Coach Vince Lombardi.

Lombardi conceded the Giants might have the edge if the field was frozen or muddy because of their better passing game, which features quarterbacks Y. A. Tittle and Charlie Conerly and receivers

Iowa State Tops Oklahoma 49-46

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Iowa State's smooth-working Cyclones put the ball in the deep freezer the final four minutes and downed Oklahoma 49-46 in the last semi-final game of the Big Eight basketball tournament Friday night.

Kansas State edged Missouri's surprisingly tough Tigers 62-57 and will meet the Cyclones in Saturday night's finals.

Sporting a supposedly safe 46-36 advantage with six minutes to play, Iowa State saw its lead evaporate as Eddie Evans hit three consecutive buckets for Oklahoma.

Leading 46-42 with 4:06 left, the Cyclones began a delaying game that pulled them through.

Loaded Football Weekend To Begin Today with Bowl, All-Star Contests

By JIM HACKLEMAN
Associated Press Sports Writer
College football's annual post-season extravaganza starts staging its biggest acts today, with stars galore and a supporting cast of hundreds performing from Florida to California.

On today's program are the Gator and Sun bowls at Jacksonville, Fla., and El Paso, Tex., and three all-star games, the East-West at San Francisco, the Blue-Gray at Montgomery, Ala., and the All-America at Tucson, Ariz.

On Monday come the glamorous New Year's Day attractions, the Rose, Sugar, Cotton and Orange Bowls.

Two teams with 7-3 records, Georgia Tech and Penn State, meet in the 17th Gator Bowl game before a capacity crowd of something over 50,000 and a national television (CBS) audience. Both Rip Engle's Penn State Nittany Lions who have been having stiff workouts, and Bobby Dodd's Tech team, which has prepped for the game in the usual easy-going Dodd style, appear fit and ready for what shapes up as a close one.

Georgia Tech is a slight favorite. Kickoff time is 1:15 p.m. (all times listed are Iowa time.)

A classic contrast, sharp offense vs. rugged defense, seems likely in the 27th Sun Bowl. Hank Foldberg's Wichita Shockers (8-2) are expected to play it wide open against the bigger Villanova Wildcats (7-2) of Alex Bell. A crowd of 12,500 is anticipated for this game, which is to be televised (ABC) starting at 3 p.m.

The East-West will show off a host of football luminaries in the 37th edition of the Shrine charity game, which benefits the hospital for crippled children.

Headliners on Joe Kuharich's 7½ point favored East team include Ernie Davis of Syracuse, Bob Ferguson of Ohio State and Roman Gabriel of North Carolina State in the backfield and Fate Echols of Northwestern, Irv Gode of Kentucky, Nick Buoniconti of Notre Dame and Gary Collins of Maryland on the line.

The West, coached by Jim

Owens, numbers Ron Bull of Baylor, Curtis McClinton and John Hadl of Kansas and Wyoming's Chuck Lamson among its backs, with Merlin Olsen of Utah State anchoring a giant line.

A full house of 59,000 will be on hand at Kezar Stadium for the game, with television coverage (NBC) beginning at 4 p.m.

The Blue-Gray pairs a North squad coached by Syracuse's Ben Schwartzwalder against a South team coached by Ray Graves of Florida. Schwartzwalder has several of his own Syracuse players on hand, including Dave Sarette, who will start at quarterback as the Blue tries for its fourth straight victory. Sarette's counterpart will be Auburn's Bobby Hunt. Kickoff for the Blue-Gray is at 1 p.m., with an expected crowd of 22,000. It will be carried on network TV (NBC).

Stars from big schools go against boys from smaller colleges in the All-America game. Andy Gustafson of Miami (Fla.) coaches the major squad, and Dave Nelson leads the small college team. Game time is 3:30 p.m.

Minnesota, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana State are favored in the four New Year's Day classics, all of which will be televised. Minnesota (7-2) of the Big Ten faces Big Five champion UCLA (7-3) in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena 4 p.m.

Four Iowa football players, seniors on this year's Hawkeye squad, are scheduled to see action in today's all-star games.

Bill Van Buren, center, is scheduled as a defensive starter for the East team in the East-West Shrine game at San Francisco.

End Bill Whisler will play in the All-American Bowl in Tucson, and guard Sherwyn Thorson and halfback Bernie Wyatt will play on the Blue team in the Blue-Gray game at Montgomery, Ala.
