Student Tells of New Year's in Japan

By TOKIO FUJIKADO

On the first day of the Year's Eve celebration, people all over the world do something to bring in the new year. It is wrong to say that all the Japanese people do the same thing. There are two kinds of people: one who celebrates the New Year's Day; and another who celebrates the New Year's Day.

For example, the first kind of people believe that the New Year's Day is the beginning of a new life, and they celebrate it by visiting temples and shrines. They wear new clothes, go to temples and shrines, and make offerings to the gods. They also eat special foods, such as mochi, which is a type of rice cake.

The second kind of people believe that the New Year's Day is a time to reflect on the past and to plan for the future. They do not celebrate the New Year's Day in the same way as the first kind of people. Instead, they focus on the future and on what they want to achieve in the coming year.

The atmosphere of the New Year's celebration is quite different from that of the Chinese New Year. In China, the New Year's celebration is more about family and is celebrated with fireworks and other traditional Chinese activities. In Japan, the New Year's celebration is more about reflection and planning.
