Labor Pays to Unionize Teachers

Compromise Sugar Act Sent to JFK

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate passed and sent to President Kennedy late Monday a compromise Sugar Act extension bill increasing the share of the American market allotted U.S. growers.

The vote was 54-12. The measure gives the President some flexibility in handling foreign sugar purchases, but not nearly so much as he asked.

The Sugar Act, originally passed in 1934, expired for the first time Saturday night. It will be reinstated as soon as Kennedy signs the measure.

The compromise bill had cleared the House Saturday. The Senate passed it only after a long afternoon of debate in which several senators complained that the bill continued subsidies unfair to U.S. consumers.

Others sharply attacked the extensive lobbying they said had surrounded the consideration of the bill this year.

There also were many references in the debate to the angry response of some Latin-American countries to the bill worked out by Senate-House conferees last Friday night.

Argentina complained that it was left out entirely in the allocation for foreign quotas. The Dominican Republic said it got far too small an allotment.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D-Minn.) the Democratic whip, told the Senate Kennedy and the State Department were concerned about this, and that an effort would be made to rectify it.

The compromise bill extends the foreign purchase provisions of the Sugar Act to Dec. 31, 1964, and the domestic sections to Dec. 31, 1966.

The act carves up the entire U.S. sugar market among American and overseas growers, with every pound of consumption allocated. This has operated to provide a sheltered, premium price for all growers. It is administered by the secretary of agriculture.

As soon as the compromise bill was passed, Senate Majority leader Mike Mansfield (D-Mont.) called up the Administration amendment designed to let Kennedy make some additional premium price allotments in the Western Hemisphere.

He offered it as an amendment to a House-passed bill restricting importation of honey bees.

But Sen. William Proxmire, (D-Wis.) and others said they might have further amendments, so Mansfield finally put the entire matter over until Thursday.

NEA Secretary Says Unions Spent Half Million in NY City

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — The executive secretary of the National Education Association said Monday that organized labor is spending heavily to unionize public school teachers, a move which he said could destroy the 812,000-member association.

William G. Carr told the General Assembly, convening here, "I believe the resources assigned this year by union labor to achieve its objectives among the teachers of New York City alone amounted to about a half-million dollars."

"According to informed sources," Carr said in his prepared speech, "the New York City drive received the support of the Auto Workers, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, the Ladies Garment Workers, and the Machinists, and others."

Carr told the 6,000 convention delegates the association has often been under vigorous and even bitter attack.

"This, however," he said, "is the first time in which forces of significant scope and power are considering measures which could destroy the association."

Carr said the education organizations board of directors has given highest priority to strengthening membership and services in the nation's big cities. It is in the metropolitan areas that the labor unions have made their largest gains in the teaching ranks.

In New York, for instance, the United Federation of Teachers, local affiliate of the American Federation of Teachers AFL CIO last year won an overwhelming vote in an election to determine who should serve as the teachers' bargaining agent.

In a one-day strike called last April 11, more than half the city's 40,000 public school teachers refused to cross the picket lines.

Carr told the convention, "Labor's achievements for industrial workers are impressive, but a public school is not a factory. American teachers must remain free and independent of entangling alliances with any one group in society."

The public schools, he said, serve all the children of all the people, and school personnel should not become entangled with organized labor, which "has policies on a variety of controversial economic and social issues, and advances those policies by definite political alliances and commitments."

Carr said the growth of union strength in the teaching profession is not a problem for the education association alone. State legislatures, school boards, the general public, and organized labor itself should take a close look at the issues involved, he said.

NEA headquarters is in Washington. In New York Charles Cogan, president of the United Federation of Teachers, said it is the UFT's opinion that the NEA should "stick to what it started with" and concentrate on research and publication activities.

"Due to its structure and procedure," Cogan said, "the NEA is not suited to be the representative of the teachers in economic bargaining."

He said Carr's half-million-dollar figure is "far above what we've gotten in actual cash" from the labor movement in the New York teachers' drive for organization and representation. He said he would be unable to estimate the total value of aid from labor in the form of organizers, advisers and other assistance.

Cogan said the New York City teachers voted overwhelmingly for representation by the UFT in spite of "very distinct and strong propaganda by the NEA affiliates here urging teachers to reject the UFT because of its labor affiliation."

"So far as New York City teachers are concerned," he said, "labor affiliation is considered an asset. It is considered important and desirable, not something to be shunned."

Even before McNamara spoke, the Military Advisory Committee had come out strongly against any cuts, and its chairman, Gov. Ernest Vandiver of Georgia, prepared a speech in which he said McNamara's plan contained grave deficiencies.

When Vandiver made his short reply, his speech got twice as hearty a reception as McNamara had received.

McNamara then met with the governors' military committee for more than an hour behind closed doors.

Vandiver afterwards told a hastily called news conference that the meeting was amiable, but that there would be no backing down. In his prepared text put out in Washington, McNamara had said: "We want no paper tigers in our reserve structure."

This was deleted shortly before he made his talk.

Considering his strong private feelings, Vandiver's public comments were surprisingly mild.

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York, predicted the governors will pass a resolution condemning McNamara's proposal.

At present the reserve program calls for 700,000 men. McNamara would reduce this to 442,000.

There are 4,336 Guard-unit locations across the country. McNamara would cut these to 4,041.

McNamara claimed the Eisenhower Administration had used the figures of 400,000 men for the National Guard and 300,000 for the Army Reserve without much attention to the military necessity. And he said the same holds true for a 10 per cent cut suggested in 1959.

"It is clear from the record," McNamara said, "that neither the Congress' 700,000 figure, nor the Eisenhower Administration's 630,000 was the product of military planning."

"Both figures were based on pure happenstance," he said,

Laotians Consider Red Aid—

Red China Claims U.S. Intervention

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Red China Monday accused the United States of worsening the entire Southeast Asia situation by sending troops to Thailand and by increasing armed intervention in South Viet Nam and the Formosa Strait.

Chinese Delegate Chang Han Fu, backed by the North Vietnamese delegate, made the charges at the opening of a new session of the 14-nation Laos conference. The meeting was called to complete a treaty to guarantee the neutrality and independence of the Kingdom recently united after years of strife.

W. Averill Harriman, U.S. assistant secretary of state for Far Eastern affairs, protested that the conference rules had been broken by raising an issue not involving Laos.

Turning to North Vietnamese Delegate Hoang Nguyen, Harriman said the question was out of order "just as it would be for me to raise the question of foreign military personnel who are well-known to be present in North Viet Nam as well as certain other neighboring countries."

Red Chinese units have been recently stationed in North Viet Nam.

The North Vietnamese representative insisted the success of the conference was "seriously threatened by the presence of U.S. troops in Thailand."

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) — The new Laotian coalition Government gave tentative approval Monday to a $600,000 aid offer from the Soviet Union and decided to recognize five more Communist countries.

The acting premier, pro-Communist Prince Souphanouvong, also indicated that American prisoners held by his Pathet Lao forces would be released a few days after the 14-nation Geneva conference agrees on a Laotian treaty, U.S. Embassy sources reported.

The decision to recognize Red China, Poland, Czechoslovakia, North Viet Nam and East Germany raised the prospect of a break in relations with three anti-Red regimes — West Germany, Nationalist China and South Viet Nam.

The SUI summer enrollment includes 3,152 men and 1,860 women. SUI's peak summer enrollment was 5,093 in 1947.

The Civil Aeronautics Board has not yet come out with its report as to the probable cause of the accident.

The fine was imposed on W. J. Brehmer, Minneapolis.

The FAA said the Electra maintenance manual prescribes the manner in which tension on the aileron — a control surface along the edge of the wing — should be adjusted, and also decrees that turn-buckles on the cables leading to the aileron be lock-wired.

The agency said Brehmer completed the installation of the aileron boost assembly without adjusting the tension of the aileron cables as required.

It said he also failed to "safely" or lock-wire the turn-buckles on for forward ends of the cable slack absorber units.

The FAA penalty did not mention the accident, since accident investigation is the function of the CAB.

Ben Khedda has arranged with Paris for the French Government to proclaim Algeria's independence Tuesday, officially ending more than seven years of bloody struggle against France for self determination in the Moslem land.

Observers said they hope Ben Khedda's authority and prestige may swing wavering elements of the 60,000-man Nationalist army to his side and thus prevent bloodshed and turmoil in Algeria.

REGINA, Sask. (AP) — Emergency centers throughout Saskatchewan labored Monday night to provide medical services in the midst of a doctors' strike against this province's new compulsory medical insurance plan.

A 10-month-old baby suffering from a serious illness died Sunday, the first day of the plan's operation and the strike. Its parents tried desperately, but in vain, to find medical help over a wide area.

The chief spokesman for the striking physicians declared that the doctors won't return to normal practice until the province's Socialist government drops the medical program.

They claim that the plan — the first of its type on a major scale in North America — opens the door to government control of the medical profession.

At first glance, that appeared to be nearly $9 million more than revenue from the 1960-61 fiscal year.

However, an auditing change in the State Liquor commission was made by the 1961 Legislature, and the actual revenue increase for the fiscal year which just ended was about $5.6 million.

Liquor profits in the past fiscal year were $10.25 million. Profits in the previous fiscal year were $6.5 million. However, in previous years operating expenses of the commission were deducted from the profits. The 1961 legislature appropriated about $3.75 million for commission operating expenses, with all profits to go directly to the state.

Final enrollment figures show a total of 5,012 students enrolled in Summer Sessions at SUI, President Virgil M. Hancher announced Monday.

The total, which is an increase of 200 over a year ago, includes 72 students enrolled in the 12-week Summer Session, initiated this year at SUI. The rest of the students are enrolled in the regular 8-week session.

Summer enrollment in each of the University's colleges is (last year's summer enrollment in parentheses): Business Administration 146 (135), Dentistry 14 (19), Engineering 102 (123), Law 186 (174), Liberal Arts 1,489 (1,464), Medicine 164 (4), Nursing 328 (294), Pharmacy 43 (49) and the Graduate College, 2,540 (2,554).

The large increase in enrollment in the College of Medicine reflects a newly instituted plan for year round use of medical teaching facilities in training students.

NAACP Votes To Picket Atlanta Hotels

Resolution Protests Negroes Excluded During Convention

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People decided Monday to picket Atlanta hotels to protest the exclusion of Negroes.

The action came with the adoption of a resolution read by Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the NAACP. It was adopted with a standing ovation.

The resolution was aimed generally at the Atlanta Hotel Association, but excepted one hotel — the Peachtree Manor — "which has accepted guests irrespective of color."

There was no immediate indication when pickets would be posted, but a committee was asked to meet Tuesday morning to take further action.

The action came as two white men dressed in Army-type uniforms and boots and wearing red swastika symbols of the Nazi party picketed the convention at the Atlanta Municipal Auditorium.

They marched in front of the auditorium where the NAACP opened its 53rd annual convention. A police patrol car, occupied by two officers, stood at one corner of the building. Another car with a lone officer circled the building periodically.

NAACP delegates, housed mostly in college dormitories, found hotels and motels jammed with thousands of members of the Loyd Order of Moose. Two motels reported turning Negroes away but said their rooms had been reserved far in advance by members of the white lodge.

The grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan, Calvin Craig, announced a series of Klan meetings starting Tuesday and climaxing Saturday night with a Klan Day observance on top of Stone Mountain, 18 miles from the downtown area.

Craig said any integration demonstrations staged by the NAACP would be countered by the white-robed Klansmen. He did not elaborate.

French officials said about 4,500 armed fighters supporting dissident Deputy Premier Ahmed Ben Bella, a foe of continued ties with France, have massed south of Algiers.

Heavily armed troops under orders of the nationalist Government of Ben Youssef Ben Khedda took over official buildings in Algiers, prepared to react quickly to attack.

The move by Premier Ben Khedda's forces apparently had the support of the French military command. France hopes that Algeria, which overwhelmingly voted Sunday to end 132 years of French rule, will maintain strong ties with France. Some quarters also fear Ben Bella's call for a Socialist state in view of the huge French investments in Algeria.

Ben Khedda has arranged with Paris for the French Government to proclaim Algeria's independence Tuesday, officially ending more than seven years of bloody struggle against France for self determination in the Moslem land.

Observers said they hope Ben Khedda's authority and prestige may swing wavering elements of the 60,000-man Nationalist army to his side and thus prevent bloodshed and turmoil in Algeria.

Mr. K Restates Russian Pledge To Defend China

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Khrushchev ignored Monday his ideological differences with Red China and pledged the Soviet Union will fight anyone who attacks that vast country.

Referring to the tension between Chiang Kai-shek's Formosa and mainland China, Khrushchev said, in a TV-radio speech, "Now we declare once again: He who dares to attack the Chinese People's Republic will meet a crushing rebuff from the great Chinese people, the peoples of the Soviet Union, and the entire Socialist camp."

"And let no one," he added, "have any doubts on this score."

He accused the United States of backing Chiang Kai-shek in his alleged plans for a "tiger leap onto the mainland."

"The admirals and the generals from the Pentagon are visiting Taiwan (Formosa) more and more often now," Khrushchev asserted. "The American military circles encourage and cheer up Chiang Kai-shek by sending ships of the 7th American Fleet to the Taiwan Strait."

"Thus, the American imperialists, revealing their interest in creating a new hotbed of war, increase the international tensions in the Far East."

The United States, on the other hand, has accused Red China of massing military forces opposite Formosa.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk said Monday that "it shouldn't surprise anyone that Soviet Premier Khrushchev has committed Russia to backing Communist China in case of an attack on that country."

"If the Sino-Soviet security pact means anything, it would seem to mean that," Rusk said in response to reporters' questions about Khrushchev's statement on the renewed military maneuvering in the Formosa Strait.

Talking with reporters after a lengthy meeting with the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Rusk saw no insoluble problems to prevent the writing of a new chapter by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Rusk said his discussion with Western leaders in the last two weeks left him "convinced that NATO and the commitments to the alliance are solid and strong."

He said there are some differences of approach among alliance members, but "there is no doubt that they can be worked out so that the alliance can write a new chapter in trade, the Common Market and in the control of nuclear forces."

Considering his strong private feelings, Vandiver's public comments were surprisingly mild.

Spy Soblen Recovering, Still Weak

LONDON (AP) — Fugitive spy Robert E. Soblen gained strength against his will with every passing hour Monday after an unsuccessful suicide attempt, but remained too weak to travel immediately.

A Justice Department official in Washington said Soblen is not in very good shape and is not expected back in the United States soon.

Even so, resumption of his enforced return to the United States from Israel to serve a life prison sentence could come as early as Tuesday afternoon.

As soon as he is strong enough, the 62-year-old psychiatrist will be put on a plane for the United States, where he was convicted of passing secrets to the Soviet Union. He jumped bail of $100,000 last week when the U.S. Supreme Court declined to review the conviction.

Scotland Yard detectives kept Soblen under close guard at Hillingdon Hospital near the London airport. They were there to prevent him from making another attempt on his life.

Anderson Is City Editor

Joan Anderson, 43, Hiawatha, has been named city editor of The Daily Iowan for the remainder of the summer.

She was appointed by Jerry Elsea, editor, to replace Norm Rollins, who resigned to accept a position with The Daily Times in the Davenport-Bettendorf area.

Miss Anderson formerly served as assistant news editor for the Iowan.

As president of ANDERSON the SUI chapter of Theta Sigma Phi, national professional fraternity for women in journalism, Miss Anderson attended the national convention in San Antonio, Texas last week.

She will reign, as one of the Queen's two attendants, over the All-Star's game with the Green Bay Packers in Soldiers' Field in Chicago Aug. 31.

Ann Lorack, Miss SUI of 1962, was also one of the 11 finalists for the All Star Queen title.

Carol Bradley, University of Wisconsin coed, was chosen All Star Queen for 1962. The event was sponsored by the Chicago Junior Association of Commerce. Her other attendant is Judy Schlieper of the University of Illinois.

They will be crowned at the All-Star Luncheon in Chicago July 31. A panel of four Chicago television and newspaper personalities chose the Queen and her attendants from the 11 finalists.

Every August the College Football All-Stars play the National Football League champions of the previous year.

Summertime Leisure Should Be Decreased

Exploding a myth is never easy — especially when millions adhere to the image and none of the so-called mass media do anything to discourage it.

Of all the myths existing in America the "good old summertime" stereotype seems to be the least needed but the hardest to erase.

The summer vacation is a holdover from a time when children were needed to work in the fields and the only break was an occasional dip in the river or old swimmin' hole of "Huckleberry Finn" fame.

Many children living in the 19th century were horribly overworked, a situation which led to scathing "muckraking" journalism, which quickened reform movements.

Today the municipal swimming pool, theaters and summer camps have replaced much of the stifling work of a century ago, but the new over-balance toward leisure calls for a new kind of "muckraking," a proposal for more work and less "goofing off."

Of course, many youths work all summer, some much more than forty hours a week. But in many cities high school students waste too much time doing nothing.

Committees working under the auspices of the White House have studied this phenomenon of youth's physical deterioration and the conclusions are always the same — more exercise is needed. The reports usually suggest more pushups and longer hikes for boy scouts, tougher gym courses during school and walking to the corner drug store instead of riding. There are, however, few suggestions for getting jobs which involve physical labor.

But the jobs are scarce or very low paying in most communities and we can't blame our youths for stopping to weigh the low wages offered against the value of their time.

Nevertheless, it is ridiculous for a 16-year-old to do nothing three months a year when during the other nine he may carry five or six subjects in high school, play football, participate in student government and play in the school band.

It isn't fair that our youth be extended a "take it easy" program during the summer when a full-scale academic and extra-curricular activity program is either offered or inflicted during the school year. The change in tempo, is not unbearable for young people, but they deserve something better.

A 30-minute movie, recently released by the National Education Association (NEA) tells how Wichita, Kan. has instituted a program of exploiting youth's talent over the summer months.

The film, titled "Summer Harvest," shows 34 per cent of the city's youth participating in summer classes.

The movie will be broadcast over 300 television stations this month in many cities which offer fine summer school programs. We hope the message will reach civic leaders in towns currently lagging in summer education and recreation programs.

You don't have to tell a youngster the country will be threatened by enemy rockets if he doesn't do his part in erasing the missile gap or decreasing the country's cultural lag.

Such an approach is feasible on a national scale, but hardly convincing when directed at one person. The best way to discourage a youngster's inactivity is to offer a reminder — that life after graduation doesn't allow for week after week of leisure time, so why not make summer a profitable time?

If this suggestion smacks of Karl Marx, we remind you of an American who was splitting rails a quarter of a century before the Communist Manifesto was written — Abraham Lincoln. There was no concern for national well being in Lincoln's work, only a desire for personal enrichment and monetary advancement — American youngsters today should set the same goals.

Mulish Feud

Observers have long noticed an occasional inclination among members of Congress to behave in a manner that seems juvenile or even childish.

An example that comes to mind is the mulish feud that halted work on money bills because the chairmen of the House and Senate appropriations committees were unable to agree on where to confer. Neither Sen. Carl Hayden nor Rep. Clarence Cannon would yield over a period of many weeks, with the result that no joint committee conferences were held during all that time.

A partial explanation may lie in the fact that both Hayden and Cannon are well past 70 years old. The circumstance cannot be made to bear all the blame. Rules that permit such petulant behavior ought to be changed.

Supreme Court Decision Should Be Questioned

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The Daily Iowan has editorially supported the recent Supreme Court decision involving the recitation of a prayer in New York's public schools. The following is the "dissenting opinion.")

By LARRY HATFIELD
Managing Editor

The recent Supreme Court "ban" on prayer in public schools raises many serious questions which should be discussed. They involve government-established religion, jurisdiction and boundaries of the court's power, and what effect the ruling might have on other areas of American life.

The ruling, which prohibited the recitation of a 22-word non-denominational prayer prescribed by the New York Board of Regents, was based on the first and fourteenth amendments. First, I would question whether the prayer itself was part of a "state established religion." True, it was written and recommended by the Board of Regents, but it was not required of any individual. It was a non-denominational and purely voluntary prayer. Any person who objected to it had the simple alternative of leaving the room or simply not saying it.

PARENTS OF some of the children involved in the case said that to not say it "embarrassed" their children and caused them "anxiety." I would ask if it is the business of the Supreme Court of the United States to protect America's children from embarrassment.

JUSTICE BLACK said that the fact that the prayer was on a voluntary basis was beside the point. It isn't if we are to accept his decision stating the 14th Amendment was being violated. No child was being denied due process of law or having his liberty infringed upon by the recitation of the prayer. I think the fact that the prayer was voluntary is very important and that the Court's interpretation of the 14th Amendment is very doubtful. I cannot see how it was applied in this case.

If the Court had established that the prayer was compulsory, the use of the 14th Amendment in the decision would have been justified. The Court did not establish this — in fact, it established the opposite.

I would also question whether this was a violation of the First Amendment, prohibiting the establishment of a state religion. Again the fact that the prayer was not compulsory and also that it was non-denominational doesn't suggest that the Regents made "any law establishing a religion."

THE MORE the decision is studied, the less it seems that the New York case was an appropriate case for the Supreme Court to rule on separation of church and state, denial of due process of law, or infringements on liberties.

The Court extended its ruling into an area where it has no right to make a decision until appropriate (relevant) cases are brought before it.

Assuming, however, that we accept the New York school ruling, do we have a right to expect similar rulings on such things as state-supported schools of religion. Can we expect all religious ceremonies removed from schools in Iowa, they are permitted by law? Will the "Everson Decision" of 1946 (in which Justice Black wrote the majority decision) be reversed? That decision said it was constitutional for public school buses to transport students to denominational schools.

WILL OUR courts continue asking you to swear to tell the truth, etc. with your hand on a (Christian) Bible before God? Will court still be opened by asking God to protect the court and the United States? Will Congress continue opening with a prayer? Will our money keep "In God We Trust" on it?

Will the President be allowed to set a day of prayer each year? Will he ask the help and blessing of God when he is inaugurated? Will the Pledge of Allegiance be banned? Will the third stanza of the "Star Spangled Banner" be stricken.

All of these practices have been established by law. By the Supreme Court's ruling, they should all be made unconstitutional.

IS ANY "PUBLIC" (that is to say, government) recognition of a Supreme Being unconstitutional? By the Supreme Court's current interpretation of the Constitution, it is.

Because of this decision, we are approaching an era of the question of "How far can the Supreme Court go?" If Congress makes a constitutional amendment permitting prayer in schools (which is unlikely), the question will be answered for that specific issue. But what of others?

Will these other areas in which a Supreme Being is recognized by law be brought under the scrutiny of the Supreme Court?

It appears that the court may have opened a wound on itself which may be extremely painful. But it was self-inflicted.

Or So They Say

Highways are happy ways only if automobile drivers are eternally vigilant.

There are two times in a man's life when his advice is sought: When someone wants him to serve on a committee or buy something.

The big push for the youngest Kennedy, whose qualifications for the senate do not appear to be impressive, may prove to be a major political mistake for the President.

The Government is piling up the most stupendous budget deficit of all time but it is reported that sizable tax reductions are in the offing. How do we do that?

I TALKED to a professor of political science about all this wallowing in apology and he said something very interesting:

"The trouble is it's always the wrong people who feel guilty. People who have no cause to feel guilty — many of whom weren't alive in Hitler's time — feel the guiltiest. The ones who have every reason to feel guilty don't."

"I get pretty angry at my students when they say: 'We have no moral right to protest about the wall because of what the Germans did under Hitler.' I get pretty mad. I tell them 'morality is always a forward thing.'"

Arrogance Gone; Now Apologetic

By JOHN CROSBY

Once noted for his arrogance, the German (if you'll pardon a sweeping generalization) is conspicuously, agonizingly apologetic.

You'll notice I sneaked in an apology of my own just now. A fellow gets the habit around here — apologizing for his opinions, his manners, his existence.

Americans who live here complain their speech becomes infected with the subjunctive, a groveling usage, if ever there was one: "I would have liked to have spoken to him if this would have been at all possible." This preposterous elaboration where in America you'd say: "Is Joe there? I'd like to talk to him."

IN ENGLAND, I had a German driver taking me to the country. Suddenly he swooped to the side of the road, parked, faced me fully, and embarked on an apology the like of which I have never before heard: "In my whole life, I have never before done such a thing, sir. I have been a driver here for ten years and you may ask my employer if I have not a blameless record. I am terribly sorry, sir. Such a thing has never before happened and I promise you, sir, it will never happen again."

His crime? He'd missed a turn, for God's sake!

It went on and on, this apology. I tried, in my American fashion to say all right already, let's get on with it. Never mind. Forget it. But that wouldn't do at all. He wanted to wallow. And he wallowed.

Also for some reason, he couldn't apologize and drive at the same time. He had to face me squarely, rolling in his contrition. All he succeeded in doing was making me even later for my appointment.

This sort of thing goes on all the time, individually and collectively, and assumes some very odd shapes. If a German can't apologize for his own sins, he apologizes for someone else's. The other day, a very intelligent, liberal, and, I think, blameless German said to me: "After the war, I never thought I could leave Germany again. I never thought it would be possible for me to face an Englishman again. Not that I had done anything wrong, but simply because I belonged to the same nation that produced Himmler and Goebbels and Hitler. Yet, within years, I found myself in London, climbing on the buses, looking at Englishmen right in the face as if nothing had happened."

THIS IS WHAT you might call the double apology. An apology for not being apologetic enough. I find it wearing and embarrassing and excessive. A little apology goes a long way. I'm partial to the English: "Sorry, sir." And that's that.

German newspapers wallow in apology on their editorial pages. When, for example, the new and very big cathedral at Coventry was dedicated, replacing the old one that the Germans flattened during the war, German students, who had been babies during the act of flattening, contributed their labor to the building of what has been called the jazziest cathedral in Europe. German newspapers cried: "This is propitiation for our sins."

In fact, the Germans like to propitiate the sins of their fathers in many ways. German students travel to Israel to help rebuild a country whose people their fathers sinned against so grievously. Young Germans, who were in swaddling clothes when Hitler died, apologize fulsomely for the Nazi regime. Probably the greatest orgy of mass guilt was "The Diary of Anne Frank," which Germans inflicted on themselves in scores of cities, going to the play and sitting there in silence, experiencing waves of national shame.

I TALKED to a professor of political science about all this wallowing in apology and he said something very interesting:

"The trouble is it's always the wrong people who feel guilty. People who have no cause to feel guilty — many of whom weren't alive in Hitler's time — feel the guiltiest. The ones who have every reason to feel guilty don't."

"I get pretty angry at my students when they say: 'We have no moral right to protest about the wall because of what the Germans did under Hitler.' I get pretty mad. I tell them 'morality is always a forward thing.'"

Matter of Fact

Kennedy May Stump Nation This November

By JOSEPH ALSOP

President Kennedy and his staff are now thinking seriously about taking the Administration's case to the country before this year's Congressional election. Speaking trips and spot speeches are under consideration for both September and October.

With great reluctance, and with little visible effect, President Eisenhower also entered the fray in the off-year elections while he was in the White House. But the interventions President Kennedy is planning will be very different from the Eisenhower interventions, which were always momentary, grandiose, and bland. To the extent the other demands of his office permit, Kennedy wants to take the stump in earnest, in the old-fashioned American way.

Within the White House staff, in fact, something of an argument is already going on about where the President ought to concentrate his efforts.

MANY SMALLER states have Senate seats and Governorships at stake, and one group would like these states to be covered. The other group is arguing for intense concentration on the big states like California, New York, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Illinois, where the voting trend will have more influence on the future composition of the House of Representatives. The President apparently leans to the latter view.

Going to the country in an off-year, as the President is now thinking of doing, is a very risky course of action. By getting into the campaign with both feet, instead of helicoptering in and helicoptering out in the Eisenhower manner, a President automatically engages his personal prestige in local races, in which his name is not on the ballot. Thus he loses if his party loses.

This time-honored argument for Presidential quiescence in off-years is still to be heard in the Kennedy White House. But there is much more force and conviction in the counter-argument, that taking the risk this year is one of those things the President "can't not do."

He "can't not do it," according to this line of argument because history is now moving so fast, both in this country and the world, that the old American political rules are partly outdated. Under the old rules, Kennedy would now stay above the

FOR MANY OTHER reasons besides the reports of the pollsters, the White House in fact believes that the President has not yet lost support in the country, except in the business community, "which always votes Republican anyway." As yet in truth, there is only one possible development that alarms the White House.

If times are bad and jobs are scarce, it is admitted that the election can turn into a near-disaster.

Gormly More 'Sane' Than Government

To the Editor:

Ray A. Cummings used the easy out of dismissing Walter Gormly as a "sick" man. Is it "sick" to make a strong personal resistance to a forced complicity in destructive and murderous actions, as Walter does? Or is it "sick" to build H-bombs, missiles, threaten others with their use, contaminate air, water and food, etc., as the Government does?

I find Walter much more "sane" than the Government. He is not dangerous to the community or to society, but to the Government, that is why he must be suppressed and discredited by phony "psychiatric treatment."

Perhaps Mr. Cummings thought Walter's action was without just cause because the news media forgot (?) to mention that the Internal Revenue seized his bank account. Perhaps Mr. Cummings' conscience was bothered. At any rate, he evaded the subject with his nonsense about indecent exposure and glue factories.

Wants Hatfield Article Re-Printed

To the Editor:

For the past week or so a controversy has been raging in the columns of the DI over an editorial written by Larry Hatfield on June 20. For a few days after the editorial appeared there were only minor rumblings against Mr. Hatfield, but on June 26, Miss Gwen Inman wrote an inflammatory denunciation. Then on June 30, Mr. Robert T. White proceeded to take Miss Inman apart with astonishing celerity. But on the same day the attack on Mr. Hatfield was continued with renewed vigor in Lucian Thomsen's ill-concealed reference to Hatfield's poor state of mental health.

The significant thing here to notice is that none of those who have participated in the controversy have, as Mr. White suggests, concerned themselves very much with Hatfield's arguments. This undoubtedly is due to the fact that the specifics of Hatfield's editorial have become unclear. Therefore, I suggest that this editorial be published again, or at least that its arguments be summarized.

contest. He would accept a Democratic set-back if that was the election result. He would then play politics against the new Congress for two years, in the hope of making a spectacular comeback in 1964.

BUT AS THE President himself has reportedly confided to those around him, it is "too dangerous" nowadays to waste two crucial years on political bickering between the White House and the Capitol. That means, in turn, that the President desperately needs a new Congress which will be more amenable and responsive than the present one.

Yet the old rules also say that the party in power always loses states in an off-year. If the President takes the stump, in sum, he will be breaking the old rules about Presidential political behavior, in the hope of breaking the old rules about off-year election results.

At the moment, the general political atmosphere in Washington can only be described as rancid; but the rancidity and discouragement have not as yet infected the White House. The White House view is that the Republicans in Congress are paving the way for an unprecedentedly good Democratic showing next November, by their fairly persistent partisanship and negativism.

"THEY'RE GETTING the image of a know-nothing, do-nothing, see-nothing, go-nowhere party, and it's bound to do them harm," according to one of the President's chief political advisers. Contrary to a recent report, moreover, the White House has most emphatically not been depressed by recent public opinion soundings by pollsters.

The Louis Harris poll, for instance, is supposed to have brought Kennedy bad news, has in fact discovered overwhelming public support for the President's action to hold the price line in steel, in tests taken both before and after the stock market decline. The same poll also found very recently that the President would carry New York state against Gov. Nelson Rockefeller by a whopping 2-to-1 majority if an election were held tomorrow.

FOR MANY OTHER reasons besides the reports of the pollsters, the White House in fact believes that the President has not yet lost support in the country, except in the business community, "which always votes Republican anyway." As yet in truth, there is only one possible development that alarms the White House.

If times are bad and jobs are scarce, it is admitted that the election can turn into a near-disaster.

Inmates Beat, Hold Guards 3 Hours

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (AP) — Six desperate killers on death row at San Quentin State Prison beat two guards into bloody submission Monday, seized their guns and held them hostage more than three hours in an escape plot that was doomed from the start.

A tear gas barrage, fired from the roof into the sixth-floor death row cells of 33 condemned men, forced the impulsive conspirators to drop their two guns and release the bleeding hostages.

Clyde Bates, 40, awaiting execution for the fiery deaths of six persons in 1957 in a Los Angeles tavern, pleaded over the telephone with Warden Fred R. Dickson at the last: "Don't come in with Tommy guns and kill us like rats."

One courageous guard risked his life to get out the first word. Sgt. Roy B. Kardell, 47, the left side of his head bleeding where he was hit by a bar, sat by a telephone on death row, a gun pressed against him.

Luis Meya, one of two men hired by Elizabeth (Ma) Duncan to kill her daughter-in-law, had an arm clamped tightly around Kardell's neck.

He was told he would be killed if, in making his regular 1 a.m. call-count report, he gave any inkling something was amiss. Kardell blurted out to the operator, "There's trouble on the row."

"I figured it was better to forfeit my life than let the boys get loose," said the ruddy-faced Kardell later.

The six escape-minded killers never had a chance under Dickson's long-standing policy: Never open a prison gate for any convict with a hostage, not even if the hostage is the warden.

"We gambled and lost," conceded Bates, "but we didn't have much to lose since we're all going to be executed anyway."

Get Solid 2-1 Conservative Win in Japan

TOKYO (AP) — Conservative Prime Minister Hayato Ikeda and his Liberal-Democratic party won a solid endorsement Tuesday in nearly complete returns in Japan's upper House election.

The Japanese stock market surged ahead on news of a Conservative victory of better than 2-1 in Sunday's election. Business circles said the public had endorsed Ikeda's plans to double the national income by 1971.

The 62-year-old prime minister announced in a television address that he will take measures to help farmers and workers in medium and small industries and "try to eliminate the existing discrepancy of income among the people."

His Conservatives added two seats at the expense of Socialists who campaigned on a platform of opposition to Ikeda's economic policies. While the lower House of Parliament has all the power in Japan, upper House elections are indicative of how political winds are blowing.

With all but seven of the 127 races settled, the Liberal-Democrats had 68 seats, the Socialists 33, while a religious group deposed the Moderate Democratic-Socialists as the House of Councillors' third force. The Communists put up 47 candidates and won three, including their party president, Sanzo Nezaka.

The Buddhist Soka Gakkai (Creative Values Society) elected all nine of its candidates and now has 15 members in the 250-seat House.

SUI Institute Gets Grant To Study PTO Accidents

Extensive investigation of farm accidents attributed to power take-off (PTO) attachments on modern farm tractors is being undertaken by the Institute of Agricultural Medicine at SUI.

The SUI study now in progress seeks information on the number of accidents attributed to this source, the manner in which they occur, the extent of the injury inflicted, and the contributions made by the victim through his attitudes, work methods, physical limitations, and knowledge of the equipment.

A complete report of each such accident and photographs of the equipment involved are brought back for analysis at the institute on campus.

The institute staff learns about the occurrence of such accidents by reading newspapers from all over the state. They have also asked the Iowa State Health Department's Division of Vital Statistics, county extension directors, and hospital administrators throughout the state to notify the institute about accidents of this nature.

When the institute receives a report of an accident involving the power take-off attachment, the institute investigator goes to the scene for interviews with the victim, witnesses, and the physician or the county medical examiner if a fatality occurs.

The power take-off, or power train, which serves as a source of power from the tractor to other implements consists of a splined shaft projecting from the differential of the tractor. A drive shaft, which revolves at a rate of 540 to 1,000 revolutions per minute depending on the throttle setting, can be attached. Accidents attributed to the power take-off usually involve the entanglement of the victim's clothing by the shaft. The individual's clothing may be torn, with only minor scrapes and scratches being inflicted, or heavy clothing which will not tear may be entangled, leading to severe mutilation of the victim and often resulting in death.

With tractors being used to operate increasing numbers of PTO equipment, the potential for accidents involving the attachment increases.

Tickets may be purchased from V.F.W. members. They are $1.50 for adults and $.75 for children.

Donovan's 2-Hitter Trips Orioles, 2-0

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland's Dick Donovan posted a two-hit, 2-0 victory over the Baltimore Orioles Monday night, facing the minimum 27 batters. Willie Tasby's eighth-inning homer snapped a scoreless duel.

The triumph ended the Indians' five-game losing string. Donovan (12-3) joined Minnesota's Camilo Pascual as the American League's top winning pitcher. It was his third shutout this season.

Pirate Rally Dumps Colts

HOUSTON (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates rallied for three runs in the seventh inning Monday night and hung on to beat the Houston Colts 4-2.

With the Pirates trailing 2-0, Roberto Clemente led off the seventh with a walk. A single by Dick Stuart and a double by Don Hoak produced one run and put runners on second and third.

Redlegs Split With Chicago

CINCINNATI (AP) — Gordie Coleman's two-run homer in the ninth inning Monday night gave Cincinnati a 4-3 victory over Chicago and a split of a two-night doubleheader.

Tight relief pitching in the clutch by Don Elston cut off a Cincinnati rally and nailed down a Chicago triumph in the opener, 6-5.

The Reds had not been ahead all night until the last inning of the nightcap when Frank Robinson started the rally with a double.

Elston took over from Dave Gerard in an effort to salvage the second decision but Coleman's homer followed.

Ernie Banks drove in five Chicago markers — four in the opener when he banged his 22nd season homer with a man on base and singled with two aboard.

Yanks Drub A's; Remain In 1st Place

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees, blew a 4-0 lead on home runs by Roger Maris, Hector Lopez and Mickey Mantle, rallied for four runs in the eighth inning Monday night and retained first place in the American League with an 8-4 verdict over Kansas City.

The Yanks' vaunted power quickly built a four-run lead for Bill Stafford, and the New York right-hander was breezing along on a shutout until George Alusik rapped a disputed lead-off homer in the A's seventh, with the Yanks protesting the drive was a foul.

The claim didn't stand, and before the inning was over Stafford was in the showers and the A's had tied it 4-4.

The Yankees, however, came back in the eighth.

The victory went to relief man Luis Arroyo, the Yanks' ace left-handed reliever who has been bothered by arm trouble all season.

Angels Win To Stay Even

WASHINGTON (AP) — Solo home runs by Bob Rodgers and Steve Bilko lifted the Los Angeles Angels to a 2-1 victory over Washington Monday night.

Switch-hitting Rodgers belted his fourth home run of the season off Steve Hamilton in the top of the ninth inning to provide the winning run. It was Rodgers' first homer of the season batting right-handed.

Bilko hit his fifth of the year in the sixth off Pete Burnside.

The Angels got only four hits off the two Washington left-handers. The others came in the fifth inning. One was a bunt by Jim Fregosi and the other a single by Eddie Yost.

Tom Morgan, third pitcher for the Angels, was the winner. He retired the last five batters.

Slam by Laver

Australia's defending champion Rod Laver goes high up to make a smashing return to Miguel Santana of Spain in their quarter finals match at Wimbledon, England, Monday. Laver's win made the semifinals of the men's singles tennis championship an All-Australian affair.

Laver Survives at Wimbledon; Meet Becomes All-Australian

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Rod Laver, the defending champion, defeated Spanish champion Manuel Santana Monday and turned the semifinals of the men's singles at the Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Championships into an all-Australian affair.

It was the first time one country had dominated the semifinals since World War I. Two Aussies — brothers Neale and John Fraser — also made the pay-off stages. The last time two brothers had got so far was in 1900 when Reg and Laurie Doherty of Britain did it.

Quarter-finals results: Laver defeated Santana 14-16, 9-7, 6-2, 6-2.

Neale Fraser, Australia, defeated Rafael Osuna of Mexico, who is studying at the University of Southern California at Los Angeles 6-3, 6-1, 4-6, 4-6, 6-2.

John Fraser, Australia, defeated Ken Fletcher, Australia, 1-6, 7-9, 6-4, 6-1, 6-2.

Martin Mulligan, Australia, defeated Bob Hewitt, Australia, 6-8, 6-4, 6-3, 6-4.

John Fraser and Mulligan were unseeded. Laver was the top seed and Fraser the No. 3 seed.

Laver will play Neale Fraser in the semifinals and John Fraser will play Mulligan.

Today three American girls will try their luck in the quarter-finals of the women's singles.

This is the women's line-up: Billie Jean Moffitt, Long Beach, Calif., vs. Ann Haydon, fifth seed, from Britain; Rene Schurman, fourth seed from South Africa, vs. Mrs. Karen Hantze Susman, seeded eighth, from Chula Vista, Calif.; Lesley Turner, Australia, seventh seed, vs. Maria Bueno, Brazil, third seed; Mrs. Vera Sukova, Czechoslovakia, vs. Darlene Hard, second seed, from Long Beach, Calif.

Patterson Wants To Develop 'Viciousness' Toward Liston

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN Associated Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — "I think that my biggest job is building up a thinking of viciousness about Sonny Liston before I fight him," heavy-weight boxing champion Floyd Patterson said Monday.

Patterson, natty in an olive green suit, and the 218-pound Liston, bulging a garment of the same color, met at a formal contract signing for their title match Sept. 25 in Comiskey Park.

Before they got together, however, Liston granted and groaned in trying to lift 110-pound Johnny Coulon, ancient former bantam-weight champion, whose "try to lift me," act amazed vaudeville circuits 45 years ago.

Liston, who said he plans to weigh 212 pounds when he meets Patterson, finally gave up on lifting Coulon.

"I will win the championship by an early knockout," the mustachioed Liston predicted.

Patterson was extremely frank in answering newsmen's questions. "I saw Liston on television knock out Cleveland Williams and Mike de John and I want to remember his tremendous punching power in these fights," Patterson said.

"But I do not want to remember Liston's fight with Eddie Machen which went the full distance. Some said that Liston did not look good in it and all I want to remember is how good he did look in his other victories. Mentally I want to face this man not knowing of mistakes he has made in the ring but instead his terrific punching ability.

"I would like something to happen to build up within myself a viciousness for him," Patterson continued. "How this feeling will come I'm not sure. It may be something he will say to fight writers that I will read about. This is what happened in my second match with Ingemar Johansson when I kayoed him.

"The early odds on the fight favoring Liston 7 to 5 helps me because I like the feeling of being an underdog."

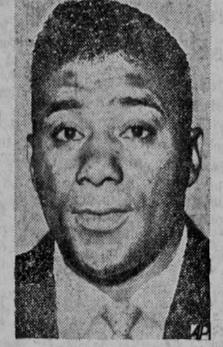

The contract carries a return clause and in the event that Liston should win, the two shall meet within a year although no site or promoter was specified.

Patterson will receive 45 per cent of the live gate and 55 per cent of ancillary rights. Liston gets either a flat 12 per cent, or a $200,000 guarantee of the live gate or theater television.

The Illinois Athletic Commission made Liston swear that he has no manager. Liston declared that George Katz is his manager on record, but Katz has nothing to do with this fight. In return, Katz will receive 10 per cent of Liston's cut and eventually will relinquish all tie-up with Liston as of Sept. 24, 1963.

Liston says he is his own manager, although a Philadelphia concessionaire, Jack Milon, will be Liston's adviser.

SAFER AND SANER

Families that have seat belts in their cars and use them will have a safer and saner Fourth of July holiday than families that don't. Seat belts work. The National Safety Council says they increase your chances of walking away from a traffic accident. If every one used them we could save at least 5,000 lives a year... reduce serious injuries by 1/2! There's still time to install seat belts in your car for the Fourth.
