

Burton Dull Named SUI Dad of Year

By JOHN SCHOLZ
Staff Writer

Burton Dull, Lemars attorney, was named SUI "Dad of the Year" at last night's pep rally. A rain soaked crowd of more than 100 fans stood before the east side of Old Capital to participate in the last pep rally of the 1962 football season.

Robert Downer, L3, Newton, president of Omicron Delta Kappa, upper classmen's leadership honor society, introduced Mr. Dull.

Mr. Dull expressed appreciation for the honor and immediately turned to the subject of Iowa football. "We can never say those boys haven't played hard-nosed football," he said.

IN ENDORSING SUI Coach Jerry Burns, Mr. Dull said "we have the finest coach and coaching staff in the country."

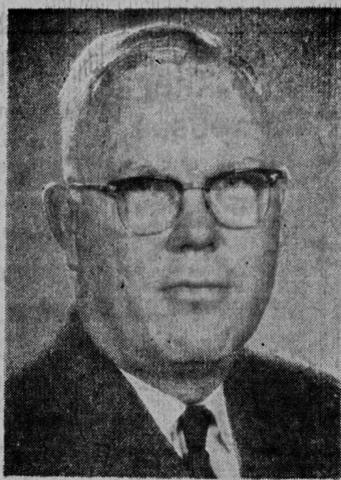

Switching to the outcome of today's Iowa-Michigan football game, Mr. Dull said, "if that ball bounces right for our change tomorrow we are going to beat Michigan."

A 1935 graduate of the SUI College of Law, Mr. Dull was nominated for "Dad of the Year" by his son and daughter who are SUI students. They are J. Michael Dull, L4 and Jean A. Dull, A4, both of Lemars.

Mr. Dull has just completed a year as president of the SUI Dad's Association. In his SUI days, Mr. Dull won major "I" letters three times as a wrestler.

IN OTHER HIGHLIGHTS, Coach Jerry Burns also addressed the crowd. "I want to say how much the staff and I appreciate your support," he said. "I hope that tomorrow your support will help us bring home a victory for our Dads," he added.

Burns, who arrived late at the pep rally, humorously told the crowd "I went down to the union foot bridge, but couldn't find anyone. I thought maybe they didn't like my contract or something." Other pep rallies have been held this season at the east end of the union foot bridge.

The pep rally centered around the theme "Mash Michigan." A combo from Alpha Epsilon Pi fraternity borrowed the theme for a song title and performed a vocal number. The cheerleaders and pom-pom girls helped distribute badges bearing "Mash Michigan" to the crowd.

RON ANDERSON, A4, Dike, was master of ceremonies. At the end of the program, he told the crowd, "let's really turn out tomorrow and give Jerry Burns and the Hawkeyes the kind of support they need to really mash the Wolverines."

Jean Dull will introduce her dad to her Alpha Delta Pi sorority sisters at an open house and buffet dinner after today's game. At 11:30 p.m. the sorority will have a cozy for all members' dads which will include a serenade as well as refreshments and other entertainment.

Senior Hawks Set To Wing For Dads

By ERIC ZOEGLER
Sports Editor

Although a national football ranking won't hang in the balance and a Rose Bowl bid won't be at stake, today's Dads' Day Iowa-Michigan football game looms as a crossroads battle for both clubs.

More than 55,000 fans are expected to file into Iowa stadium to witness this battle of also-rans, but when kick-off time arrives at 1:30 p.m., the teams probably will fight as if they were after the No. 1 spot in the nation.

For Iowa's luckless Hawkeyes it will be a joyous homecoming from a sound 10-0 beating by Minnesota last week and a chance to prove to their fathers and to dads of other SUI students that they aren't a mediocre team.

Possibly the fact that an Iowa team has yet to beat a Michigan representative in Iowa stadium in the 22-game series may also provide some motivation.

For Chalmers "Bump" Elliott's charges, a win will be necessary to avoid what could turn into the worst Wolverine football campaign since 1936.

The Hawkeyes' big objective at this point seems to be to match last year's 5-4 output. Jerry Burn's new three-year contract indicates that everyone connected with the Iowa sports scene seems to feel he and the Hawks can come through.

The contest marks the last home game for 77 Hawkeye seniors, two who have been synonymous with Iowa football successes the past three years.

rousing applause they'll receive will be only a small part of the gratitude that Iowans will be able to pay these stars.

Along with Fergie and Matt, Lynn Lyon, Bill Perkins, Dayton Perry, Sammie Harris, Earl McQuiston, Jim Winston, Al Fischer, Hugh Fischer and Dick Turici will be taking their final bows as Hawks before home fans.

Lyon is expected to get the call to start at left end replacing injured sophomore Tony Giacobazzi. McQuiston will be at his familiar right guard post and Perry will remain as a stumbling block for the sputtering Michigan offense.

In the Wolverine's two wins and five losses thus far this season, its offense — specifically protection of its quarterbacks and ability to give its backfield running room — has been Elliott's chief problem. In the past four games — the last a 14-10 win over lowly Illinois — the former Iowa backfield mentor has tried four different quarterbacks and four different offensive alignments, to almost no avail.

Last week's "Elliott Special" was in direct contrast with the Hawks' "Floating T" as the Michiganders lined up with only one end and an outflanked halfback, thus leaving a tackle eligible.

Actually, regardless of what Elliott runs today, his main contention probably will be to stop Iowa's new running game and sophomore fullback Vic Davis.

Davis, who is one of 11 Hawkeye players who hail from the Wolverine state, has been a twisting, darting and powering Iowa ball carrier since earning a starting assignment in Iowa's 29-14 upset of Ohio State.

The Detroit Eastern High School flash now stands second in rushing figures only to Ferguson with almost four yards per carry. Fergie has picked up 4.2 yards a run.

These two runners, along with an improved Iowa line, will attempt to win Iowa's fourth game in a 62-year rivalry which began with a 29-0 Iowa win. It's possible, too, that the junior and senior Hawks will remember the Wolverine 23-14 win in Michigan Stadium last year.

But the main stumbling block to an Iowa win rests, of course, in the Hawks' ability to hang onto the ball, especially during sus-

Wisconsin Faculty Adopts Race Pact

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The University of Wisconsin has added a new weapon in its attack on racial and religious discrimination by campus fraternities and sororities.

The Wisconsin faculty served notice last week that discriminatory membership practices cannot be forced on university student groups by national officers, alumni, advisors or others from off campus. The faculty passed a resolution requiring local members of student groups to have complete freedom to judge each student on the basis of individual merit.

The action was coupled with a vote to require all fraternities and sororities to report by Feb. 1 on present membership selection practices.

Since 1960 Wisconsin has operated under a rule that prohibits fraternities and sororities from rejecting membership, candidates on the basis of race, color, religion or national origin.

But the question of racial discrimination came to a head earlier this year when the Beloit (Wis.) College Chapter of Delta Gamma was put on probation by the sorority's national council after it pledged a Negro girl.

Delta Gamma's national council said its action toward the Beloit College chapter was for other reasons, but the Wisconsin faculty human rights committee decided to look into the matter.

Investigation of the incident led the committee to recommend that the Wisconsin Chapter of Delta Gamma be closed down. The committee said Delta Gamma's national council membership policies "represent a degree of control by outside groups inconsistent with rules of the university."

The recommendation that the campus chapter be banned by next June 30 brought protests from the local sorority that it was not at fault and was put in a position of being unable to take action to lift the ban.

To date, the faculty has not acted on the recommendation.

Indians, Chinese Wage Sharp Border Battles

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Indian and Red Chinese troops fought sharp battles Friday on the northeastern front of India's undeclared border war. A Defense Ministry spokesman said the Indian forces were holding their ground against what he called a massive Chinese counterattack.

Red Chinese broadcasts heard in Tokyo said the Communist forces were striking back after the Indians had laid down a heavy artillery barrage to cover troops advancing on Chinese border guards near Wolang.

By Indian account, the Chinese had opened a big attack on the area around Wolang. But the Chinese broadcast mentioned fighting also at Towang, about 300 miles west of Wolang.

The Chinese said that around Towang, Indian forces in the Se La area "launched their heaviest attack."

Earlier, Peking radio said the Communist regime had delivered a serious protest to India against military buildups around the disputed border areas. It also said the Chinese forces "suffered heavy casualties under repeated bombardments by Indian troops" in the Wolang area Nov. 6 and Nov. 12. The Chinese also charged that Indian aircraft had violated Chinese airspace.

The fighting appeared to be among the fiercest since the Chinese launched their all-out push into disputed border areas Oct. 20.

The village of Wolang, 15 miles west of Burma, is a key defensive area for Indian forces. It's fall to the Red Chinese could give the Communists a natural passage down the banks of the Lohit River into major oil producing areas in India's Assam State.

It appeared the Chinese were trying to outflank Indian positions at Wolang in the valley jungles.

The Chinese drove south from the Tibetan town of Rima shortly after opening their Oct. 20 offensive, crossing what India considers to be the border there. The Chinese claim 32,500 square miles south of the Tibetan border in the northeastern area.

After capturing Kibitoo on Oct. 22, the Chinese continued down the Lohit River for about 12 miles before meeting solid Indian resistance at Wolang.

The Chinese paused to bring up reinforcements, giving the Indian army a chance to bring in reinforcements of its own. Confidence grew in New Delhi that the Wolang plug could hold the Chinese.

The counterattack was the first test of the Indian ability to hold the invaders on prepared positions.

The News In Brief

By United Press International

WASHINGTON — Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy left the White House Friday for a weekend at the First Family's rented country estate in Middleburg, Va. The President is expected to join her there today.

The First Lady left at 8:30 a.m. (CST) by car and her son, John Jr., was driven to the Glen Ora estate later in the day. Four-year-old Caroline remained at the White House and was expected to fly to Middleburg by helicopter today with her father.

PARIS — Fifty-six stolen paintings including works by Utrillo, Matisse, Dufy and Vlaminck valued at $2.2 million were found in a barn 50 miles outside Paris. Stolen last year from a museum in St. Tropez, they apparently had been abandoned by thieves who found them too hot to sell.

NEW DELHI — Both India and China announced two major battles at each end of the disputed McMahon line in Indian's northeast frontier agency. Both countries called the battles fierce and said they were still raging.

KARACHI — Pakistani police armed with steel-tipped clubs turned back a procession of several hundred students marching on the U.S. Embassy as part of a nationwide protest against Western aid to India. In an earlier demonstration, several hundred persons tried to tear down the American flag at the U.S. information library but Pakistanis working there discouraged them.

BERLIN — The U.S. Army protested to the Soviet High Command in Germany against the "abduction at gunpoint" by East German police of three American soldiers who wandered into East Germany by mistake. The three men were released Tuesday afternoon after being questioned for hours.

HAMILTON, Bermuda (AP) — Hope waned Friday for 18 Greek sailors who risked death in stormy seas to escape being trapped on their blazing explosive-laden ship.

A U.S. Coast Guard spokesman said wreckage was spotted that could be that of a lifeboat from the Greek freighter Captain George, abandoned Thursday 300 miles northeast of Bermuda.

Seven members of the 25-man crew of the 7,187-ton World War II Liberty ship were plucked to safety from one lifeboat shortly after going over the side into a raging sea.

The tanker Trinity Navigator messaged the Coast Guard it was en route with five of the rescued crewmen to Paulsboro, N. J., and expected to arrive at 11 a.m. Sunday.

The Trinity Navigator asked advice in treating a 45-year-old crewman with steam burns on his legs.

Another survivor was reported to have suffered a back injury. Otherwise the rescued crewmen were described as in good condition.

The fate of Capt. George Karamezis, youthful master of the freighter, who had vowed he would not give up his ship "unless absolutely necessary," was not known.

Miss. Court Indicts Two In Violence

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — A county grand jury accused federal marshals Friday of "agitating and provoking violence" in a night of bloody rioting over desegregation at the University of Mississippi.

The grand jury returned two indictments in the case, but, under Mississippi law, the names of the persons and the charges will be kept secret until arrests are made.

Circuit Judge Walter M. O'Barr told newsmen the persons indicted were not residents of Mississippi.

He also said, "Neither the President nor the attorney general was named."

Sheriff Joe Ford of Lafayette County was ordered by the grand jury to place the two persons under arrest and have them "in the next session of court," which is March 2, 1963.

O'Barr, a Mississippi native, previously charged the 23-man grand jury to indict anyone who helped incite the Sept. 30 riot at the University — including President Kennedy and "stupid little brother Robert Kennedy," the U.S. attorney general.

In its final report, the grand jury assailed Chief U.S. Marshal James P. McShane for his order to fire tear gas toward demonstrating crowds the night James H. Meredith, a Negro, entered the University under federal court orders.

"We find that this illegal action on the part of McShane set off the tragic violence which followed," the grand jury said.

Despite a criticism that federal marshals were under "leadership of the poorest sort," the grand jury commended the marshals "for not firing their pistols directly into the crowds."

The marshals suffered several critical injuries in the riot — including a shotgun blast in the neck of one man. Others suffered broken bones and cuts from flying bricks, sticks and bottles.

In Washington, Atty. Gen. Kennedy reiterated that the marshals acted "with great bravery and restraint" and said the grand jury "could not or did not consider all the evidence" relative to the rioting.

Kennedy said all federal actions on Sept. 30 "were made by prearrangement" with Gov. Ross Barnett — this in answer to the grand jury claim that federal authorities gave insufficient notice that they were bringing Meredith

Meredith and Youth Dine; Room Is Hit

MERIDIAN, Miss. (UPI) — A University of Mississippi freshman student who found his room in shambles last night after he dined with Negro student James Meredith said tonight he was undecided about remaining at the school.

"I just don't know what I'll do," Craig Knoble said from his home here. "I wouldn't want to leave school and jeopardize my credit rating."

Knoble came to his home here following the incident.

Asked if he feared for his safety on the campus, the chemistry major answered: "slightly."

Knoble, and another student, William Temple of Washington, D. C., who dined with Meredith, in the school cafeteria found books and bedding strewn about their room, a ceiling light smashed and a phonograph damaged.

Knoble said several students jeered him when he left his room to report the break-in to campus authorities.

"But one thing," he said, "the students didn't spit on me."

French Artist Dies; Painted Paris Life

PARIS (UPI) — French painter Jean-Gabriel Domergue, 73, collapsed and died on a downtown Paris street Friday night.

Domergue, born in Bordeaux March 4, 1889, started as a landscape painter and then went on to scenes of Parisian life. He was particularly known for his paintings of nude women and for his portraits of French aristocracy.

He painted portraits of Greta Garbo and of French movie star Martine Carol.

SUI Runner Cops New Track Time

DES MOINES (AP) — Larry Kramer, SUI athlete, won the state inaugural cross country race sponsored by the U.S. Track Federation Friday, running the four-mile route in 19 minutes 55.8 seconds.

Kramer bettered the Wave-land course record of 20:59.5 held by Drake's Joe Riepe. Kramer's Iowa teammate Gary Fisher was second and David Lee of Des Moines finished third.

Soviets Support Cuban Shooting Of U.S. Aircraft

Fears Mount In Washington Over Cuba

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government served notice Friday that it will continue its aerial checking on Cuba, providing protection for its picture-taking planes if necessary.

This was the response from the State and Defense Departments to Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro's threat to shoot down the U.S. reconnaissance craft flying over Cuba. So far, most of the U.S. planes have encountered no attacks.

There is mounting concern among Washington policymakers as the U.N.-mediated negotiations for a settlement of the Cuban crisis heads toward a climax.

One worry is that Castro might follow through on his threat, thus setting off shooting in the dispute over a Soviet nuclear threat in Cuba.

Another object of U.S. concern is the continued presence in Cuba of Soviet jet bombers. President Kennedy regards them as offensive weapons which must be removed, along with the missiles and other nuclear war equipment already shipped away from the island.

Kennedy met Friday with the executive committee of the National Security Council and with the Joint Chiefs of Staff but both meetings had been arranged in advance of the first word Thursday of the new Castro threat.

U.S. fighter planes are in the Caribbean area where they could provide escort for the photographic craft if necessary. Castro is estimated to have around 100 Soviet MIG fighters but it is not known how many Cuban pilots he has who are sufficiently trained to fly the jet aircraft in combat.

Rain's Reign Threatened

Old Man Weather dumped a chill on SUI Dad's Day and left threats of snow.

The light precipitation which began in southwest Iowa Friday afternoon will be changing to snow and spreading into the northwest this morning and over all but the southeast corner by tonight, the Associated Press said.

Cold and freezing will prevail today with highs only in the 30s and lows in the 20s in the Iowa City area.

The cold will continue at least through Sunday, AP said.

U.S. Flights Will Continue — Protected

Zorin: U.S. Decision Cause of Concern For World Peace

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The Cuban crisis sharpened Friday with the Soviet Union defending Fidel Castro's threat to shoot down U.S. planes and the United States declaring flights over Cuba would continue with all protection necessary.

Soviet Delegate Valerian A. Zorin said the Cuban prime minister's protest against the U.S. reconnaissance flights "is perfectly legitimate" and that attempts to violate Cuban sovereignty "cannot but provoke universal condemnation."

He termed the flights unlawful and said the U.S. decision to continue them caused "deep concern for the peace of the world."

Zorin spoke in the U.N. General Assembly's main Political Committee, where a Cuban representative had asserted Castro's warning to shoot down planes was already being put into effect.

But U.S. Delegate Arthur Dean told the committee that Castro's threat carries no weight with the United States.

Dean said that pending U.S.-Soviet agreement on all measures for verification of removal of offensive weapons from Cuba "the United States will be forced to continue to take its own appropriate measures to assure against the possibility that the people of the Western Hemisphere may be threatened from Cuban soil."

He said the members of the Organization of American States had decided to take all steps necessary to guard against any threat from Cuba.

"And the United States, in accordance with that mandate, will continue to carry out that mandate and will use all means necessary to assure that this is done," he declared.

The exchange came amid mounting concern that the Cuban crisis may be approaching a new danger point.

Castro's verbal blasts failed to budge U.S. determination to continue air surveillance over Cuba pending agreement on adequate verification of removal of all offensive weapons.

U.S. officials said the flights would continue with U.S. planes taking whatever steps may be necessary to meet hostile action from Cuba.

In Washington, President Kennedy called in his top military and diplomatic advisors for consultation.

The State Department declared that Castro had rejected all efforts to obtain adequate verification of a secret arms buildup in Cuba.

Reliable sources said U.S. determination to maintain surveillance had been transmitted to the Soviet Union on Thursday night during the latest round of U.S.-Soviet negotiations.

But No Serious Injuries

Two persons were injured Friday evening when a car driven by Charles Mason, an Iowa State University student from Webster City, collided with a station wagon driven by Sarah Engel, 17, daughter of Paul Engel, professor of English at SUI. Miss Engel's car was stopped to make a left turn onto Old Route 6 about one mile west of Iowa City on Route 6 when the accident occurred, ac-ording to State Highway Patrolman Howard Shapcott of Iowa City. Miss Engel suffered minor neck injuries and Mason had leg bruises and cuts. Mason was charged with failure to maintain an assured clear distance. Both cars were extensively damaged. Pictured above is the car driven by Miss Engel.

Need for Better Science Reporting

Newspapers may be castigated for the kinds of news they print and for sloven methods of operation, but they still do the best job in some important areas. Consider the reasoning of a university research coordinator on the importance of science news:

1. The prosperity of the United States and the winning of the Cold War depend on an increasing production of scientific knowledge.
2. American support of science depends upon public approval.
3. Public approval depends on public understanding.
4. The public is interested in science, but is not informed.
5. What the public does know, it has learned primarily from newspapers.

Newspaper editors and publishers might be expected to run up and shake the hand of Fred R. Cagle, professor of zoology and coordinator of research at Tulane University, for such a compliment. But Dr. Cagle is not complimenting newspapers.

Writing in The Bulletin of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, Dr. Cagle said there remains an unfulfilled and urgent need for a means of furnishing science information to the public.

"The newspaper concept provides the best hope for meeting this need," he said. "Although television now has the leading role in mass entertainment, the public continues to depend primarily on the newspaper for information."

However, the maximum efforts of newspapers cannot overcome the enormous handicap of lack of personnel oriented in science and science affairs. Established newspapers cannot make the essential contribution in the reporting of science news within the next decade.

Dr. Cagle would create a science newspaper, a cooperative effort of scientist and journalist. He contends that the public now learns about medicine, space and "cute scientific achievements" in newspaper coverage. Newspaper emphasis, he said, leads the public to conclude that science is medicine, space exploration or "gadgets." Science, however, is much more. And science pervades the university.

One point Dr. Cagle makes of local interest is that universities are not "gaining profits" from federal "aid" for science (a popular misconception), but, rather, universities provide service to the Federal Government for a much lower price than government would pay to have the research done elsewhere.

There is no quarrel with Dr. Cagle's thesis that there should be more and better coverage of science news. There is no reason to expect less of a science reporter covering science than a sports reporter covering sports. Indeed, more is expected of the science reporter.

There is a distinct need for better training of science reporters. This training can start in the universities providing "laboratory" newspaper facilities. A program of this kind will not supply all of the science reporters needed in the next year or two. But a concerted effort — by universities, journalists and scientists — can help bridge the gap and promote adequate coverage of science news in the future.

No Deception, Please

The endless rows and piles of Christmas goods now awaiting the great sales push will soon play the principal part in the great national contest between producers and consumers. We do not hope for or advocate a change in the struggle for the holiday buck, but we hope the deception of some sales pitches will be toned down in the promoting of toys for small children.

We expect adults to be discriminating in their choices and we view their role in the contest as an even or better chance to come out ahead of the merchant. But small children have no chance to judge the merit of a product. In their eyes sizes are distorted and make-believe is confused with reality. Toy boats which must be put together from an instruction sheet may be pictured already constructed and carrying a crew of commandos.

A simple electric train may be advertised along with tunnels, roundhouses, switches and extra track which do not come with the set.

The very small children who put such blind faith in Santa Claus reach into their stockings with a confidence not yet destroyed by misleading advertising. We hope this year's crop of Christmas toys will please children as much in reality as they do in advertisements.

'But Lots of His Students Study Over Here — Why Should It Bother Him if My Students Study In The Physics Building?'

Letters to the Editor—

Keller Called 'Demagogue'

To the Editor:

Oh, what is the mission among us of that universal man and instant picketeer Walter Keller? Having brought ridicule on many good causes with his flying squad of pickets ("We picket anything") now he speaks to us of the art. And it is perhaps no great surprise to find that his humanitarian sympathies for the underprivileged come accompanied by the shameless and ruthless tricks of the practicing demagogue.

When I speak of this demagogue, I am referring specifically to his review of Paul Engle's poem "Song of the Cedar" in Thursday's Daily Iowan. The issue is not at all the merits of that poem, which will be appreciated or jeered at according to the taste and bias of those who know the text. The issue is not Mr. Engle's feelings. I suppose he is by now used to such discharges of filth from those around our town who have no other way of acknowledging how much they owe him.

The issue is purely and simply whether Mr. Keller's evident bigotry and demonstrable perversion of a few critical tricks will go unrebuked in a community where things of the mind ought to be respected above all else.

The fundamental trick of the demagogue is to flatter the ignorance of his audience, to pretend that he is offering them the means by which they can make a good judgment when he is in fact suppressing those means.

Mr. Keller quotes from the poem. Surely, one might think in haste, this is a fair way to demonstrate its qualities, especially since no one is obliged to accept the closely appended direction from the reviewer that tells him what it is cool to think of it. It is, after all, a technique of sampling. What, on a hasty glance, would seem fairer than that?

Nonsense. It is this illusion of fairness that the demagogue counts on to cover his manipulations. Any beginning student of the physical sciences knows (if English majors do not) that a selective sampling is the surest way to corrupt the results of an analysis.

To make perfectly clear the dirty trick Mr. Keller tried to pull, let me give you an example of how it can be applied to any poem.

I quote a line: "Overcome — O bitter sweetness . . ." Whooeee!

Isn't that corny? That old "bitter sweetness" sounds like Kathleen Norris, doesn't it? And wasn't there some sticky movie (not a classic film) once with the icky-licky title "Bitter Sweet"? Ergo, Yeats really boo-boomed when he wrote that song for the "Anti-gone," didn't he?

Let's try another fragment: "I am dying, Egypt, dying . . ." Now there's a syrupy, jangly bit of what e. e. cummings used to call "unpoetry." It certainly ought to show Mr. Keller's following of marks and cools what a bomb "Antony and Cleopatra" is.

Well, of course what I have demonstrated by these examples is not that Shakespeare and Yeats wrote bad poetry — or ads for the myth of Egyptian patriotism — but that anyone who didn't scruple against it could write reviews like Mr. Keller's of anything.

I suppose it may be argued by some that Mr. Keller has a right to his opinion. I hasten to align myself with that argument. In a legal and political sense he has every right to it, whatever shabbiness went into its composition. Since, for its own unguessable reasons the DI grants him space, he has the right of power to disseminate that opinion. But surely in a university community one who reviews the arts ought to earn his right to an opinion with some respect for the intellectual and moral responsibilities of criticism.

I don't like his bigotry.

Stresses Open Mind In Capital Punishment Issue

Much has been said and written recently concerning the issue of capital punishment ostensibly, though the discussion seems to go little farther than a criticism of Iowa's punishment by hanging, as far as this observer can tell. Too, the modes of presenting cases against the issue (having seen none presented favoring it) seem to stress satirical, extreme — somewhat hysterical — approaches to the problem. Based upon limited experience gleaned from time spent in a state penitentiary, then, I should like to present some points which I deem relevant, but which seem to have been neglected or overlooked in the rather one-sided argument to date.

It is interesting to note, I believe, that the idea of capital punishment stems from the ancient Judaic doctrine of "an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth" — rightly interpreted as an injunction against retribution more severe than the injury caused by the wrongdoer. The fact that the state handles the punishing function, I submit, is preferable to an individual's making recompense for his own grievances, which would likely lead to chaos.

Punishments used in Middle Ages (e.g., burning at the stake, boiling in oil, breaking on the wheel) seem a great deal more sadistic and unwarranted than those employed currently, also, if that be the objection. Enlightenment and methodological refinements have been slow but steady in coming, and have culminated in the penologists' realization that rehabilitation is the rightful and ideal goal of penal confinement.

From a strictly pragmatic point of view, one must inspect the issue from the standpoint of the prison employe, be he officer or official. These men have dangerous jobs at best, to be sure, but the most commonly verbalized view I have observed among them concerning the capital punishment issue is that they would feel very insecure (and with good reason, probably) if they had to come into daily contact with murderers already "doing life" who had nothing more than another life sentence to fear in retribution for killing an employe. No man can serve more than one life sentence.

At this point in time, then, I favor capital punishment, though I agree with those who argue for the most humane form of execution available. I also am strongly biased against those persons who may never have seen a murderer, a penitentiary, or an execution, but who launch vehement crusades against something about which they have so little realistically-based information.

No man's word is infallible on this issue, so each of us must choose figures of authority carefully, certainly, but I would encourage an open mind for and broad knowledge of the many aspects of the issue, before one commits himself to a stand, be it pro or con.

Says Responsibility To Learn Is Taken from Students

To the Editor:

Apparently, Janet Minx, in her editorial, assumes that a university should be fair in its treatment of students; should actually want its students to learn something. Evidently she has not received the message. Life is not fair. No one ever promised us that what is worthwhile would be easily earned.

Therefore, it is good for the student to have as many obstacles put before him as possible. It teaches him how rough life really is. Stop the student before he gets as far as the material to be learned. Trample on him, it'll only take a minute. Forget the subject matter — give tests that indicate the student's mystical ability to think in the exact words of the professor. Emphasize grades. Regiment all students — make them file into the test room in lines — and be sure there is absolutely no way that anyone can cheat. Take the responsibility for learning away from the student.

Provide him with an excellent excuse for hating books, and give him something to soothe his conscience with, when, perhaps 20 years later, he begins to realize that he had fooled himself — and that learning was his own responsibility after all.

"American women are giving up their birthrights as intelligent human beings because they pretend to have no brains and are getting awfully good at it," said a noted Columbia University professor of anthropology, Margaret Mead.

"Women want to get married so badly and have children that they are more anxious to drift into no intellectual life whatsoever . . ." Prof. Mead both suggested the reason and the cure for the lack of leading women intellectuals. She attributed the lack of competent women in such fields as construction engineering or astronautics to an attempt by women to compete as pseudo-men.

Prof. Mead concluded, "I don't know any woman who is a good second-rate man. If women truly desire to achieve in the world they must accept and utilize feminine qualities in their efforts."

The student daily at the University of Southern California conducted a survey among students, attempting to gather a definition of love.

While no one inclusive definition was forthcoming, the paper nevertheless gleaned some very interesting opinions.

In a lighter vein, one student defined love as ". . . the willingness to sacrifice everything, asking nothing in return. However, the more I know women the more I love my sports car. Its more faithful."

A more typical and more serious student reflection: "Love is the conscious compatibility of two persons in all phases of life. The compatibility is on an intellectual level as well as a physical one."

Eighteen Drake University students are training for the Drake U. College Bowl TV appearance, scheduled for December.

The final selections for the team will be made by the end of November. Each of the 18 has an almost straight A average and ranked in the top 1 per cent on entrance exams.

The Society of American Military Engineers is putting black and yellow fallout shelter signs on shelter areas at Iowa State.

Each sign gives the name of the shelter, its capacity and the faculty "commander" assigned to head the area.

Federal food supplies, primarily biscuits, are expected to arrive at State within five weeks. After the arrival, each shelter will have enough food for at least five days.

The University became eligible for federal aid when the Board of Regents agreed to make school facilities available to local Civil Defense authorities during an emergency.

The judge of the sixth district court, New Haven, Conn., sat stone faced, dealing out sentences to a long line of shoddy-looking drunks.

The humorless judge dismissed another of the many drunk cases, called for the next case, looked at the defendants and broke into a big grin.

Standing before him, a sharp contrast to the procession of drunks, were seven carefully dressed Harvard students prepared to accept their punishment for a 4 a.m. October band concert on the Yale University campus.

The judge quickly regained his composure and listened to a Yale security officer say the student arrest was unfortunate and unnecessary.

The judge then solemnly turned to the students and said he had considered sentencing them to sit on the Yale side during the traditional Harvard-Yale football game, but he added, that seemed too great a punishment. He then dismissed the case, a rather generous gesture, it would seem, for the judge was a Yale grad.

Matt, Fergy Bid Farewell to Iowa Stadium

Matt: Fans Remember Last Game

By HARRIETT HINDMAN
Assistant Sports Editor

"Matt Szykowny" — the name Iowa sports fans have heard so frequently for three years and which opponents have heard for what must seem more like ten years — will echo across the gridiron at Iowa Stadium for the last time when Michigan invades Hawk-eyeland today.

Szykowny has already won six letters at Iowa, three in football, two in basketball and one in baseball. As a sophomore Matt played behind Wilburn Hollis, and got his big chance in the Minnesota game of 1960 when Hollis was switched to halfback and Szykowny started at the quarterback position.

The senior from Pittsburgh, Pa., said that he chose Iowa because of its engineering and football programs. "I limited my choice to a Big Ten school because they have more of a national look. In my visits, I met several engineering professors and Evy and the football staff. I felt Iowa was the best I could pick both from an engineering and football standpoint."

During his high schools days at North Catholic High School in Pittsburgh, Matt was an all-state quarterback and a star on the state championship basketball team. He also played baseball.

Szykowny really came into his own at Iowa last season when Wilburn Hollis, a pre-season all-American candidate, was injured in the second game of the season. Szykowny took over and directed the Hawkeyes to a 5-4 record.

Matt was the No. 2 passer in the Big Ten in 1961 with 79 completions in 120 attempts for a .561 percentage, 1,078 yards and seven touchdowns.

After three years of appearances in Iowa Stadium, Matt commented on his last game, "It will be a thrill, of course. I'd like to end up winning as we will be a winning ball club if we can take these last two. I think the fans always remember what you do last and so of course I'd like to do a good job and see the team play well."

As one of the few players to play under both Forest Evashevski and Jerry Burns, Szykowny said of the coaches, "As far as football goes, I think they are two of the greatest football minds in the country. When Evy was head coach, Jerry drew up a lot of our defensive plans. There's really no difference as far as coaching goes. Evy has a great record and Jerry is a young coach who is really going places. He's always coming up with something new. He's a wonderful guy to play for and puts a lot of emphasis on the team. That's the type of coach I like to play for, one that wants to win, but is willing to take the ups and downs with the team."

So far this season, Matt has completed 50 of 88 attempts for 606 yards, five touchdowns and a .568 completion percentage. He also handled punting chores while Lonnie Rogers was injured and averaged 36 yards per kick. He has kicked two of three conversions, and is tied for scoring honors with Cloyd Webb, one of his favorite receivers.

Matt analyzed the new "Floating-T" offense instituted by Burns this year, "It is more of a passing offense than a split-T and we should have had a lot more opportunities to throw. It is a good offense and spreads the defense. I think with the backs we have we could have provided more of a threat."

Matt said he is definitely going to play baseball next spring, although he gave up the sport last spring in favor of his engineering studies. "I'm interested in playing professional baseball," explained Szykowny, who was a pitcher and shortstop on the Hawk team his sophomore year. "I want to count on my engineering degree first of all, but if I can sign a baseball contract, I'd like to give it a try."

I wouldn't say that I wouldn't give pro football a try if given the opportunity, but I prefer baseball. Asked if he considered baseball his favorite sport, Matt said, "Like any athlete will tell you, I like the sport that's in season; I couldn't really say one was my favorite." Matt is married to the former Sandy Tinker of Kettendorf and the couple has a four-month-old daughter, Kimberly Lynn.

New Michigan Offense Challenges Hawkeyes

By TOM WEBBER
Sports Editor, Michigan Daily

While the Michigan football team went about its week's preparations for today's encounter with Iowa, the rest of the campus was busy exuding a collective sigh of relief — at least Michigan could still beat Illinois.

There had been considerable doubt about this possibility, and it wasn't until the last minutes of the fourth period that it was secured. The Wolverine fans, all 49,000 of them, even counted out the final ten seconds on the clock for the first time this season.

The general feeling is that anything short of a rout in the final two games would be welcomed now that the Wolverine fans have escaped the possibility of having their worst season in history. As it is, this stands to be third to the 1934 and 1936 tragedies. Michigan won only once in eight tries those two years.

But despite all the gloom and increasing awareness of the basketball and hockey teams, Head Coach Bump Elliott has made Michigan an interesting team to watch in the last four games.

Accused of being unimaginative in his first three years, Elliott has changed his offense four times the last four Saturdays and has tried four different quarterbacks.

Elliott has run through Dave Glinka, a two year starter; Bob Timberlake, a sophomore stand-out who has been switched to halfback; Forest Evashevski Jr., who is riding the bench again; and almost forgotten Bob Chandler, who has started the last two games.

The formations have varied from normal wing-T to a wing-T with unbalanced line; wing-T with end over, tackle eligible; T-formation with flanker and split end; and tight-T. The latest one, if Elliott stays with it, will be a direct contrast with Iowa's offense. Whereas the Hawkeyes use three ends, Michigan used only one end last week and he was usually outflanked by an extra halfback, leaving the tackle eligible on the other side of the line.

Chandler has moved into the Wolverine lineup after an absence of two and a half years. Way back in 1960 he was battling with Glinka for the starting quarterback spot when a side-line tackle in the second game of the season put him out of commission with a serious knee injury.

At the time doctors called it the worst knee injury of its kind they had ever seen. Many doubted whether he would be able to return to football. Last year he returned, but obviously favored the

Fergy: We Must Beat Wolverines

By Staff Writer

Hawkeye Football Captain Larry Ferguson, rated by Coach Jerry Burns as "one of the best running halfbacks" in the nation, bids goodbye to Iowa fans today when he leads the Iowa eleven against Michigan at 1:30 p.m.

Fergy said Thursday, "I haven't really thought of it as the last home game. We certainly want to win this ball game not only because it is the last home game, but because it will really help our record. Also we want to win it for Jerry because it is his old home team and a big rivalry for him. I think it will be one of our better games, both statistically and in scoring — two things which we haven't been able to combine in one game very much this season."

Ferguson was named All-American halfback in 1960, when he averaged almost seven yards per carry on Iowa's Big Ten co-championship team. Last season, the 5-10, 193-pound speedster was injured in the opening seconds of the season and was unable to return to the gridiron until this fall, when he made his appearance as captain of the Hawks.

Fergy, who plays left halfback in the "Floating-T", commented, "The new offense wasn't anything real different to us as we had been running plays with both ends split. It just involves a little different use of personnel."

So far this season, Ferguson has led the Hawkeye rushing attack, gaining 295 yards on 70 carries for a 4.2 yard average. He also leads Iowa in kickoff and punt returns, and helps Paul Krause on pass defense.

The Iowa captain said he thought that having several Michigan boys on the squad had definitely helped team spirit in preparing for today's battle with the Wolverines. "There is always the old story that 'We want to go home for Christmas.' The Michigan boys have been leading calisthenics at practice all this week. Last year we got a card from Michigan saying that Iowa got the left over players from that state. We don't feel this is so, but that Iowa got some of the top ones and we're out to prove our point."

Larry attended Madison High School in Madison, Ill., and participated in football, baseball and track.

In his spare time, the little that he has between football and studies, the Iowa captain likes listening to music, watching television, and playing cards which he said is "one of the things I do most."

"I would definitely like to take a crack at pro football if the opportunity presents itself," Ferguson commented.

A student in education, Fergy said of his future, "I like to work with kids. I'd like to be a coach, but

BACKFIELD CHANGES
AMES — Clay Stapleton, Iowa State's football coach, made two backfield switches Friday for the Cyclones' game with Kansas State at Manhattan Saturday.

Ozzie Clay, a junior, will start at tailback and Dave Hoppman will move from tailback to quarterback.

Relaxing Before Practice

as long as it's working with kids in general it wouldn't necessarily have to be coaching. I think there is a lot of opportunity both in the field of recreation and coaching."

Larry listed the touchdown he scored in the 1960 victory over Ohio State as his biggest thrill while playing football at Iowa. The tained drives. In Iowa's four defeats this campaign, fumbles at inopportune times have spelled defeat. In three wins, the Hawks have played nearly errorless football.

Elliott's crew has had its troubles, too. The Wolverine probably will bank on the performance of quarterback Bob Chandler, after three other signal callers have not been able to find the key to operating the club.

Dave Glinka, who with returning Dave Raimy gave the Iowans fits last year, has been injured and lost to the team. Forest Evashevski, Jr., son of the Iowa Athletic Director and a graduate of the Iowa City Little Hawks, will see action as Chandler's understudy.

The fourth signalcaller, Bob Timberlake, has proved to be more effective at left halfback and will be starting at that post this afternoon.

Whereas the Hawks have been sporadic in the team's six appearances, the Wolverine have shown improvement. After whipping Army, the team failed to score against four Big Ten opponents until it scored two touchdowns against Wisconsin in losing 34-14 and in its win over the Illini.

Principal Cancels Boy-Girl Football Game; Too Rough

GUILDFORD, England — The principal of Guildford Technical College canceled Friday a football match between girl and boy students. Each team said the principal feared the other would get hurt.

"The match was arranged without the knowledge or consent of the staff," said Dr. F. C. Scott, the principal. "One cannot allow boys and girls to play rugby without making inquiries."

Rugby, the father of American football, is a hard-running, hard-tackling, hard-kicking game, in which the players wear no padding.

"The college feared we'd be too tough," said the boys' captain, Michael Short. "I don't think anyone would have been hurt. We expected to win — without getting rough."

Prof. Urges Storytelling For Children

"Parents and teachers have an obligation to children to tell them the old stories — from folklore and fairy tales — so they become a part of their literary inheritance," said Mrs. Ellis Newsome, assistant professor in library education, Thursday night.

Speaking before a meeting of the Parents' Cooperative Preschool, the newly-elected President of the Iowa Library Association emphasized the old stories because "they give another dimension to children's lives. If you can tell them stories from your own background, the ones your grandmother told you, that is also enriching and children seem to particularly enjoy these."

Fairy tales are excellent for many reasons, she said. "They do not preach, but delineate the principle by making it implicit in the writing. It is nearly always inherent in the action of the story itself."

She stressed "telling" stories rather than reading them to children and said "the storyteller creates interest because of his own enthusiasm. Storytelling is a 'shared' experience. Children need such 'shared' experiences with adults they love."

Three clues Mrs. Newsome cited to selecting good stories were those rich in imagination, with a clearly defined plot and good literary style.

"Stories should give children something they can carry away with them," she said.

Music Fans Plan New Area Groups

Dr. and Mrs. Kenn Hubel of 619 North Linn St. are inviting Iowa City jazz and classical music enthusiasts and amateur vocalists to organize into various informal groups.

The Hubels hope to be contacted by amateur musicians in the area who are not presently participating in organized groups. They hope to form classical ensembles of two to five instruments, various jazz groups of three or more instruments and a choral group.

Interested persons may phone them at 7-5615.

Kennedy Slates News Conference

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy will hold a news conference at 6 p.m. next Tuesday, his first since Sept. 13, the White House announced today.

This is the longest interval between news conferences since Kennedy took office.

Press secretary Pierre Salinger was asked if there were any special reason for the lateness in the day for the news conference. "That's the hour we selected," he replied.

Santa Claus Plans I.C. Visit Friday

Santa Claus is scheduled to arrive in Iowa City around 4:30 p.m. Friday, Nov. 23.

He will tour the residential areas on a fire truck and make his downtown appearance at 6 p.m. He will be downtown until 9 p.m. in front of the building formerly occupied by the Ford Hopkins Drug Co. This will be Santa's headquarters throughout the Christmas season.

Stores will be open that Friday evening to celebrate the Christmas opening and will also be open on nine December evenings: 3, 5, 7, 10, 12, 14, 17, 19, and 21.

P.O. Ordered To Halt Sale Of Misprints

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sale of a million deliberately misprinted stamps was halted Friday by the Post Office Department under a restraining order obtained by a New Jersey man who has 50 of 400 original, unintentional misprints.

Public sale of the Dag Hammarskjold stamps was not stopped, however, until an eager public had gobbled up 375,000 of them in less than four hours.

The court order to halt the sale was issued by Judge Gerland McLaughlin of the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals at Newark, N.J., and rushed to Washington Friday afternoon. It was obtained by Leonard Sherman of Irvington, N.J., an amateur stamp collector who had visions of a half-million dollar windfall from the original "mistakes" that he holds.

Postmaster General J. Edward Day had ordered 1 million more misprints after discovering that 400 had been distributed inadvertently with a yellow color portion printed upside down.

Day said the Government wanted to "prevent inflated value of the few accidental inclusions from depriving the average collector of the opportunity to purchase the unusual stamp."

Sherman and many other stamp collectors raised an uproar. Sherman went further than other known holders of some of the original "mistakes." He failed yesterday to get a sale-halting injunction from a Federal District judge in Newark, but appealed to the 3rd circuit court.

Although Sherman had put a $500,000 price tag on his 50 stamps, philatelic experts said his estimate was far too high. Some experts figure the original misprints were worth about $350 each, which would total about $17,500.

In addition to the 375,000 deliberately misprinted stamps sold before imposition of the restraining order, postal officials said enough mail, telephone and telegraph orders were received to exhaust the entire batch of 1 million reprints — and then some.

Merriman Smith Raps JFK's Press Secrecy

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — Merriman Smith of United Press International, dean of the White House press corps, said Friday if the international crisis is so serious that vital information should be withheld, the people of the Nation should be told this.

Smith, speaking at the convention of Sigma Delta Chi (SDX), professional journalistic society, said the press ought to fight back against the trend toward Government secrecy.

"We have the same right to selectivity as the Government has," Smith told the SDX members, many of them prominent newsmen from around the country. "We have the right to print or not to print."

He said he was not advocating that editors arbitrarily refuse to publish Government news. "But we don't need to print propaganda," he said.

Smith, in his speech, put most of the blame for White House secrecy on the President's advisers. He said Pierre Salinger, the President's press secretary, had opposed the clampdown.

"The President has been listening to a few advisers who have the scornful idea that it is proper that the press speaks only when spoken to, or reports the news with 'one-sided fairness,'" Smith said.

"The President does not share this view. But he would be less than human if he failed to absorb some amount of this anti-press talk."

"The President deserves all the understanding we can muster in these times," Smith said. "But understanding does not have to be equated with fearful silence."

He said if Kennedy felt the cur-

U.S. Supports Nuclear Arms In Europe

PARIS (AP) — The United States pledged its support Friday for an integrated European nuclear force within the framework of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to head off "proliferation" of purely national nuclear forces.

George W. Ball, undersecretary of state, told the closing session of the eighth annual NATO parliamentarians' conference that Washington would give serious consideration to a genuinely multilateral European ballistic missile force, fully coordinated with the other deterrent forces of NATO.

In this he was reiterating in a more positive form what McGeorge Bundy, President Kennedy's special assistant for national security affairs, recently told an Atlantic association meeting in Copenhagen, to the effect that the United States is willing to share its nuclear responsibility with a unified European force.

In reply to a question from one British delegate, who asked if the American government would sell nuclear weapons to Europe, or help with technical knowledge in their manufacture, Ball said the United States would give sympathetic attention to any European proposal provided that the European force was multinational and manned on a multinational basis.

Duplication, Ball said, referring to national deterrent forces, is neither wise nor desirable. Ball stressed that Europe's participation must be fully coordinated with the American effort.

Step Closer to Moon—

Saturn Rocket Scores Again

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—The great Saturn rocket scored its third straight test flight success Friday and the United States mounted another rung on the ladder to the moon.

With its massive eight-engine power plan fully fueled for the first time, the 162-foot, 550-ton monster sent a thunderclap rolling across the Cape as it soared on a flight of four minutes and 55 seconds.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration reported that preliminary study of data indicated the Saturn had performed perfectly.

It was the longest flight yet for the rocket which in later development will start American spacecraft on the way to the moon.

As on the first two tests, both successful, only the first stage was ignited in the world's largest known rocket. The vehicle generated a thrust of 1.3 million pounds, equal to 30 million horsepower.

The flight ended abruptly as planned at an altitude of 104 miles when a radio signal from the ground exploded charges that ripped the rocket to shreds.

The deliberate detonation spewed 23,000 gallons of ballast water—92 tons—into the icy ionosphere and a massive cloud of ice particles blossomed like a parachute, then dissipated within seconds. The huge white mass, several miles across, was clearly visible to observers at Cape Canaveral.

The man-made ice cloud was strictly frosting on the cake. The water was aboard to simulate the weight of upper stages to be flown on future Saturns.

Scientists hope camera and other tracking studies of the cloud will provide information on atmospheric physics—what happens for instance when a great amount of matter is suddenly introduced.

A similar cloud created by purposeful destruction of the second Saturn last April produced synthetic lightning.

Teachers Sought For Overseas Duty

To fill teaching vacancies overseas, the United States Air Force is recruiting trained civilians for the 1963-64 school year.

Teachers are needed to fill positions in Azores, Bermuda, Denmark, England, France, Germany, Italy, Libya, Labrador, Morocco, the Netherlands, Newfoundland, Norway, Philippines, Spain, and Turkey.

Applicants must have a bachelor's degree, a teaching certificate, and two years of teaching experience in a public school. Secondary teachers should have a minimum of 18 semester hours of college work, supplemented by 18 semester hours in each subject field to be taught. Applicants must be from 23 to 60 years old. Salaries are $4,435 a year for teachers, and $7,415 for principals. Interested persons should file applications immediately.

Further information may be obtained by writing to Overseas Placement Officer, Office of Civilian Personnel, Offutt Air Force Base, Neb.
