

Summer Enrollment Highest Since 1947

In a preliminary enrollment report, President Virgil M. Hancher announced Tuesday that 5,129 students have enrolled at SUI for 1963 Summer Session.

He said that when late enrollments are completed, approximately 5,225 students will be enrolled — nearly 100 more than the post-war high of 5,135 in 1947 when returning veterans swelled enrollment.

The final summer enrollment at SUI is expected to be more than 200 above last year's total of 5,012 students.

The 1963 total includes 334 students enrolled for classes in the 12-week Summer Session which was initiated last summer, with the rest enrolled in the traditional 8-week session. Last year only 64 students were enrolled in the 12-week session.

BY STARTING college work immediately upon high school graduation and by taking three successive 12-week summer sessions, many students will be able to complete requirements for a bachelor's degree in three calendar years rather than the traditional four years.

The SUI summer enrollment includes 3,126 men and 2,003 women. Enrollment by colleges is: Business Administration, 122; Dentistry, 11; Engineering, 82; Law, 197; Liberal Arts, 1,574; Medicine, 140; Nursing, 241; Pharmacy, 33, and Graduate College, 2,729.

In addition to the regular summer school students, some 2,400 persons will attend 35 conferences and institutes on the SUI campus during the summer.

THE SPECIAL summer programs include five for high school students. Four hundred students enrolled for a two-week All-State Music Camp, 250 attended the week-long High School Journalism Workshop, and 50 are now attending a one-month Speech and Dramatic Art Workshop.

One hundred outstanding high school science students were selected to attend two summer-long science institutes supported by the National Science Foundation. The students are enrolled in college-level science classes and working with SUI professors on research projects.

FIFTEEN SUMMER programs are planned for school administrators and teachers. Eight hundred elementary and secondary teachers in the fields of English, elementary science, biology, journalism, music, and speech and dramatic art; representatives of Iowa junior colleges; counselors and guidance personnel, and school superintendents are attending the conferences and institutes ranging from three-day to summer-long programs.

Events in connection with the 50th anniversaries of the SUI College of Education and Department of Home Economics will be attended by some 500 persons during July.

THE REMAINDER of the summer conferences are designed to acquaint professional persons in the state with new developments in their fields. Included are programs for librarians, physicians, nurses, business executives, social workers and peace officers.

In addition, thousands of Iowans are expected to visit the SUI campus to attend events scheduled as part of the 25th annual Summer Fine Arts Festival and Summer Session Lecture Series.

A sell-out attendance of more than 10,000 is expected for the 20 performances of the SUI Repertory Theatre.

AN ATTENDANCE of 4,000 is estimated for music events scheduled in the Fine Arts Festival. Included on the program are the operas "La Traviata" and "L'Inferdella Delusa," the All-State Music Camp concerts, and concerts by the SUI Symphony Orchestra, Metropolitan Opera artist Jerome Hines, and the Iowa String Quartet.

Some 3,000 persons will attend SUI summer lectures by Marquis Childs, Washington news analyst; August Heckscher, former White House consultant on the arts; Dean Howard E. Wilson of the UCLA School of Education, and sociologist Zelma George.

DeGaulle Silent On JFK's Speech

PARIS (AP) — President Charles de Gaulle and the French government discussed President Kennedy's swing through Germany but maintained an official public silence Tuesday on Kennedy's rebuttal of De Gaulle's policies.

One government source said French officials did not wish to engage in any public polemic with Kennedy — at least, not at this time — on the future of Europe and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO).

KENNEDY

By coincidence, the Cabinet was meeting while advance copies of Kennedy's Frankfurt speech were becoming available. But there was no comment on it either from De Gaulle's office or from the Foreign Minister.

IN FRANKFURT President Kennedy called for renewed effort to expand and preserve NATO and pledged the risk of American cities to nuclear holocaust in the defense of Europe.

In a major policy speech in St. Paul's church in this Main River city, the President flung a direct challenge to the policies of French President Charles de Gaulle.

He urged a massive new effort to preserve and expand Atlantic unity and warned that doubt and indecision could tumble the Atlantic Alliance to ruin. De Gaulle long has put NATO second to the interests of France.

Kennedy delivered the main speech of his tour in the historic church, where he called on NATO Allies to fulfill a great new mission leading the world to peace and freedom.

"The United States will risk its cities to defend yours because we need your freedom to protect ours," he declared.

He mentioned De Gaulle by name anywhere in his speech or in remarks elsewhere, but his meaning was plain to all who heard his words beamed all over Western Europe by radio networks.

"Those who would doubt our pledge or deny this indivisibility of those who would separate Europe from America or split one ally from another — would only give aid and comfort to the men who make themselves our adversaries and welcome any new Western disarray."

DE GAULLE

This amounted to a direct clash with De Gaulle, who has expressed doubt that the United States would risk nuclear destruction for the sake of European security.

Kennedy laid down his concept of the goals of the West; peace and freedom for all men, for all time, in a world of abundance and justice. He made plain how he believes this could best be done.

"The first task of the Atlantic community is to assure the common defense," he said. "That defense was and still is indivisible."

Swede Spying For U.S.S.R. Is Arrested

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Swedish Air Force Col. Stig Erik Wennerstrom, holder of the U.S. Legion of Merit, was arrested Tuesday as a Soviet spy of 15 years — five of them spent as Swedish air attaché in Washington.

Police said the colonel, 57, admitted selling both Swedish military secrets, and those of other countries, to the Kremlin. The police announcement did not identify the other countries.

He was serving as special adviser on disarmament to the Swedish Foreign Ministry when police picked him up on espionage charges.

Foreign Minister Torsten Nilsson reacted angrily to what he called the worst spy scandal in the history of this traditionally neutral country. He ordered Wennerstrom's two alleged Soviet contacts — one a major general — out of the country and protested sharply to the Soviet Embassy about violating both Swedish and international law.

The government underlined the seriousness with which it viewed the affair by issuing a special communiqué which said it would watch developments carefully and take the necessary measures as soon as more details are uncovered.

Prime Minister Tage Erlander came back from vacation, but an aide said the return had been scheduled previously and was not directly connected with the spy case.

Wennerstrom was last in the headlines in June 1957 when his daughter, Christine, then 16, ran away in Washington with Senate page boy Huw Williams.

The two were found in Pennsylvania after an 18-day joy ride through the Eastern United States and Canada using a souped-up convertible. Her parents rushed the girl home to Sweden.

Williams, son of a widowed clerk in the Senate mail room, was later convicted of being an accessory to an armed robbery and sentenced to six years in a federal youth prison.

Wennerstrom, a police statement said, confessed he photographed secret documents with a special miniature camera and personally handed over the rolls of film to his Russian contacts. They said he apparently operated as a lone wolf.

Many aspects of the case are still under investigation, police said, and further details cannot be revealed.

The Russians ordered to leave Sweden immediately were Maj. Gen. Vitaly Nikolsky, military attaché, and George Baranovsky, first secretary at the Soviet Embassy.

Wennerstrom was assistant Swedish air attaché in Moscow when the Nazis invaded Russia in June 1941. He went back to Russia as air attaché in 1949 and served until 1952.

30-80 Year Term Given To Chapman

ALBERT LEA, Minn. (AP) — Robert Eugene Chapman, 22, of Albert Lea, pleaded guilty in District Court Tuesday to a charge of second degree murder in the shooting death of a minister he said made an indecent proposal to him.

Chapman, an unemployed laborer, was immediately sentenced by Judge Warren F. Plunkett to serve 30 to 80 years in prison.

Chapman was charged with first degree murder in the death in late May of the Rev. B. E. Njordet, Silver Lake, Iowa, pastor, but was permitted to plead to a lesser charge of second degree murder.

COUNTY ATTY. Robert C. Tuveson said: "It is speculative whether a conviction for first degree murder could be obtained" because there was no evidence of premeditation and no witnesses to the crime.

After making his plea, Chapman testified that the Rev. Mr. Njordet picked him up on an Albert Lea street about 3 a.m. May 23. He further testified:

Njordet asked where he could get a drink and offered Chapman a ride home. He then asked Chapman to accompany him to get a drink.

They first drove to Glenville, 10 miles south of Albert Lea, and then to Hayward, about 10 miles east, but could find no taverns open.

FROM HAYWARD they drove about a mile southwest and parked on a country road.

Njordet made indecent advances to him and got out of the car and took his clothes off. "Just think of me as your girl," Chapman quoted Njordet as saying.

This remark "just got me feeling sick all over . . ." Chapman continued. "About that time I pulled out a .22 caliber pistol. I told him to shut his mouth. Just then I . . . squeezed the trigger."

THE WOUNDED pastor turned to him and said, "What's going on here?" Chapman shot him again and then stabbed him.

Chapman said he didn't know until Sheriff Everett Stovern told him later how many times he had shot and stabbed Njordet.

Chapman was charged with operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated, reckless driving, and driving without a license.

Paroled from Anamosa in 1958, Domer came to Iowa City to work in October, 1962.

He had been serving a 10-year sentence on a breaking and entering charge.

Chase Ends With Arrest Of Parolee

George F. Domer, 26, on parole from the Anamosa men's reformatory, was arrested by the Iowa Highway Patrol early Tuesday morning after a 110 mph chase on Highway 6 west of Coralville.

Domer was arrested after the auto he was driving crashed through a mileage marker, ran over two highway dividers, and went over an embankment and into a ditch after missing the intersection of 218 and 6, at 1:30 a.m.

Domer was hospitalized for observation at SUI hospital and was listed in satisfactory condition Tuesday.

Coralville police officer Dan Mayer gave chase to the Domer car after it sped through Coralville and turned onto Highway 5. Officers said the auto did not overturn.

Domer was charged with operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated, reckless driving, and driving without a license.

City Faces Problems With Water System

City Council Hears Plans For Paving

The 1963 paving program for Iowa City was discussed in a public hearing at an adjourned meeting of the City Council Tuesday night.

The program, which was heard before a filled Council Chamber of the Civic Center, involves the parts of 10 streets and one alley.

The greater part of the cost of the $240,764 program is to be accessed against benefited property owners. The city will pay $7,062, according to estimates. No property shall be assessed which is more than 300 feet from the street to be improved.

"They didn't mention THIS in the summer school catalog."

Atlantic City Chosen Site Of Democratic Convention

WASHINGTON (AP) — Exuberant Democrats on Tuesday awarded Atlantic City, N.J., their 1964 nominating convention and shouted approval of a resolution endorsing President Kennedy's civil rights legislative program.

The Democratic National Committee fixed Aug. 24 as the opening date of a meeting at which Kennedy and Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson are expected to be renominated by acclamation.

The New Jersey resort city, a Republican stronghold which frequently votes Democratic in presidential elections, won out over Chicago in what was described by William S. Potter of Delaware as a close vote.

'L'Inferdella Delusa' Featured Tonight

"L'Inferdella Delusa," by Joseph Haydn will be presented by the Opera Workshop tonight at 8 in Macbride Auditorium.

The comic opera, directed by Herald Stark, professor of music, was presented to a large, appreciative audience at the University of Minnesota last Tuesday.

The performance in Minneapolis won approval from writers for the Minneapolis Star and the St. Paul Pioneer Press.

The opera will be presented in an English translation by Landon Robbins.

The program will be a feature of SUI's 25th Fine Arts Festival.

Water-Use Curbs Asked by Leikvold

By GARY SPURGEON
Managing Editor

City Manager Carsten Leikvold asked Tuesday that the people living west of the Iowa River refrain from using water to wash cars or sprinkle their lawns between 4 p.m. and 9 p.m.

The action was prompted when trouble developed on the west end of the city water system Monday evening. Many homes reported that pressure was so low that they were without water and that others could get only a trickle from their faucets.

Leikvold said the city used a record 4,800,000 gallons of water Monday. He said the problem was not that the city doesn't have the water, but the pumping facilities are inadequate to keep up with the demand experienced Monday.

The city manager noted that the eastern part of the city has had no pressure problem because the new 16-inch mains are able to keep up with the demand.

Moore was not too concerned that the lawns would suffer permanent damage. "Nature has a way of taking care of blue grass," he said. "It seems to lie dormant."

"OF COURSE, we have a lot of shade and that helps," he stated.

The level of the Coralville Reservoir has been coming upward despite the dry weather. The Army Corps of Engineers reported that the level of the upper pool at noon Tuesday was 678.74 feet. The standard level of the pool is 680 feet.

The Corps said that this level would be attained, but that the Reservoir had been rising very slowly. They also reported that the outflow at the dam was being held constant despite heavy usage in Iowa City and in other cities downstream.

The Weather Bureau said that top soil moisture throughout most of the state was very short. Local gardeners have said that many of their garden crops are suffering from the weather. Iowa crop reports said that the corn and some of the forage crops were being hurt.

And finally, the Western Farmer's Almanac predicts that there will be no rain until Friday. Then it will continue for six days until July 3.

Airmen Clear In British Security Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three U.S. enlisted airmen rushed home from England for investigation of rumors linking them to party girl Christine Keeler, were cleared Tuesday of any involvement in Britain's sex-and-security scandal.

Arthur Sylvester, Assistant Secretary of Defense, told newsmen the inquiry "has not given any indication whatsoever of any security violation."

"No military information was ever solicited from these men nor was any furnished by them," he said.

"None of these men was involved directly or indirectly in any way in the Keeler, Ward, Profumo case or had any knowledge concerning it."

Sylvester said the three are enroute back to duty at their 3rd Air Force Base in South Ruislip near London, which they left last Friday. He refused to identify them because he said "it would be unfair to them."

However, British newspaper reports named two of them as Charles Lee Wright of Mount Vernon, Ill., and Sgt. George Hopkins of Belleair, Ohio. The Pentagon has conceded that men with such names are assigned to the 3rd Air Force in South Ruislip but refused to say they are the men questioned.

Sylvester declined to comment when asked about reports that the men questioned are Negroes.

Miss Keeler is the central figure in a scandal which has brought the resignation of British War Minister John Profumo and the arrest on morals charges of Stephen Ward, a fashionable London osteopath.

SUI Hosting 30 Musicians

More than 30 music teachers are attending a workshop this week at SUI on the teaching of music at the junior and senior high level. The workshop is the last in a series of three music education workshops at SUI, which began June 17.

In addition to attending lectures and discussions, the teachers are observing rehearsals of the All State Chorus, a part of the All State Music Camp now being held at SUI.

Staff members for this week's workshop are Edward Anderson, director of choral activities, Colorado State University, Ft. Collins, Colo.; Milton Anderson, director of choral music, Davenport High School; Frederick C. Ebbs, director of hands, SUI; Neal E. Glenn, professor of music education, SUI; Richard Hervig, associate professor of music, SUI; Allen Keller and Joe Noble, graduate assistants, SUI; Eldon Obrecht, professor of music, SUI; DeForest Mortiboy, supervisor of music, Davenport schools, and Himie Voxman, professor and head of music, SUI.

Cole Pleads Guilty To Larceny Charge

Larry James Cole, 21, a temporary resident of Iowa City, pleaded guilty to a charge of larceny of a motor vehicle at a hearing in Johnson County District Court Tuesday morning.

Bond was set at $3,000 and Cole, is now being held in the county jail.

Cole was arrested at 12:30 a.m. June 11, on the Happy Hollow playground after a chase by police. Police said Cole had stolen a car from Ron's Conoco Station, 2300 Muscatine Ave.

Officers noticed the car when it ran a stop sign, and pursued it to the playground.

Cole was later picked up by police and charged with the July 18 break-in at the same service station. He was arrested after police traced a set of keys dropped in the station storage lot. Police said that keys to used cars kept in the storage lot were the only items missing in the break-in.

Drought Aids Elm Disease

The current drought is contributing to the rapid spread of Dutch Elm disease in Iowa City, according to City Forester Ed Bailey.

Bailey says that under drought conditions the acute form of the disease takes hold very rapidly and a tree will die within a few days after infection.

He says the majority of 165 identified cases in the area are the acute form of the disease. But he calls equally dangerous the chronic form of the disease where the tree dies gradually over a period of several years.

WITH THE CHRONIC form the beetle stays in the tree for a long period and gradually carries the disease to trees in the surrounding area. These are most dangerous, Bailey says, because property owners are less willing to have the trees removed.

Bailey says the city has pretty well caught up with the big job of removing dead elms — perhaps because the summer's first crop of disease-carrying bark-beetles may be nearing its end. However, another crop of beetles is expected in late July and in August.

Of the current total of 165 diseased trees, 107 are on private property. Bailey says that generally owners cooperate about having trees removed.

THIRTY-FOUR of the trees on public land are on city property, mostly on parks. Fourteen are in city parks, six on playgrounds, and three on school property.

The concentration of the disease is in northwest and southeast Iowa City. Bailey says that the reason for this is probably that the northwest side is close to a tree-disease infested island-type area in the loop of the river between Manville Heights and Coralville and also because of the rolling terrain.

— Trees More Susceptible —

In the southeast the trees may have been affected from the nearby countryside or perhaps from trucks passing on the highway from infested areas in the states east of here.

Bailey has checked the island-type area in the northwest section and has found it is under county jurisdiction. The County Board of Supervisors says that it has not yet had any requests for Dutch Elm disease control in areas outside municipalities.

THE TREE DISEASE is under control in central Iowa City east of the river, according to Bailey. The few isolated cases of the disease have been removed there.

Trees owned by the city and by homeowners in the city have been affected with the disease during the last month. Coralville has also had some problems and are considering steps to combat the disease.

OBSERVATIONS

Arise! Smite Down the Staff Plan Election, Dec. 2, 1963

Julie London, We Shall Miss You

SOME OF THE MAJOR CIGARET manufacturers have decided to discontinue advertising and promotion on college campuses. This action will mean that there will be no more cigarette ads in college publications — newspapers, magazines and football programs — and that free packs of cigarettes will no longer be distributed on campus.

This apparently represents a recognition by the cigaret industry that their products may have harmful effects on health. By stopping campus advertising, so the reasoning goes, young people will not be afflicted with the nasty habit of smoking.

It seems that stopping campus advertising is like locking the barn after the horse has escaped. Although we have no factual evidence at our fingertips, it appears that smoking among young people begins at the high school level. Surely, these smokers are not going to stop just because their college newspaper does not carry cigaret ads.

Further, there seems to be an assumption the students do not come into contact with other publications — which is obviously false. Therefore, we can see no logic in stopping campus advertising when other papers and magazines are filled with cigaret ads. Are we to assume that general media advertising has no effect on students?

Another assumption that seems to lie behind this decision is that college students are not mature enough to decide whether they should smoke or not. Our stand on this issue is obvious — it's a bunch of hogwash.

Nevertheless, the decision has been made. We can only make a simple prediction and that is that college students will continue to smoke despite the stoppage of advertising.

And as we draw the smoke of our cigaret deep into our lungs, we think wistfully — "Julie London, we shall miss you." — Gary Spurgeon

There Was A Bridge Game, A Movie And . . .

RESEARCHERS AT IOWA State University recently concluded that study habits of college freshmen decline rather discouragingly after their first semester. Scholarship engendered by parents and the desire for the top-notch high school grades important to college admission, it seems, is often lost once the student makes it to college.

He is seduced, as it were, by the temptations of social life in the fraternity or dormitory. And the grades slump after the first semester.

We were worrying the other day about our own grade slump after that industrious freshman year. But then somebody suggested a bridge game and there was a good movie in town. . . . — Dean Mills

Maybe It's Worth It

Discouraged? Cheer up and hit those books. The 1963 Finance Facts yearbook published by the National Consumer Finance Association reports that 43.9 per cent of the nation's family heads with four years of college receive $10,000 or annual salary while only 15.7 per cent of the high school graduates without college work receive that much.

So maybe it is worth it after all. — Gary Spurgeon

It's Gonna Be Wet

The recent long dry spell has caused local gardeners much worry and they are now looking for some magic way to get rain.

We would like to advise them not to be too worried because the entire state becomes wet after July 4. — Gary Spurgeon

"Look, Everybody, I'm Not Paying Any Attention"

Civil Rights Nightmare

By JOSEPH ALSOP

WASHINGTON — Behind the President's civil rights message, there is a nightmare — the word is not too strong — which has increasingly troubled the minds of the President himself, Attorney-General Robert Kennedy, and all other members of the Administration high command.

The nightmare was dimly suggested in the passage forecasting that "the result of continued Federal legislative inaction will be continued, if not increased, racial strife — causing the leadership on both sides to pass from the hands of reasonable and responsible men to the purveyors of hate and violence (and) endangering domestic tranquility."

Bluntly described, the President's nightmare is that the Negro protest movement will somewhere, somehow, overflow, from the sheer force of pent-up emotion, into the kind of violent excesses that will shock moderate opinion in the white community — and may even require Federal intervention.

This is not a foolish nightmare. As it happens, some of the best reporting on this tragic topic has been done by the New Yorker. The other day the New Yorker had a piece describing, among other things, a Black Muslim meeting in Harlem, at which the chief speaker, a certain Conrad Lynn, triumphantly predicted that "there is going to be a lot of white blood flowing in this country! . . . We have guns and are going to make our presence felt."

The commentary on this outburst was then supplied by a young Negro woman, unnamed, who was quoted as saying, "There's going to be trouble . . . Every night now in Harlem, there's a rumor that some white policeman has abused a Negro. On a hot summer night, it wouldn't take much to set off a riot — not isolated violence, but a kind of revolution."

"Five years ago, it was still a problem for social workers — jobs, education, housing . . . Now something will have to be done on an enormous scale, or there's going to be murder."

The alarmingly explosive atmosphere described by this young Negro woman is also being reported to the Justice Department by its informants throughout the country. The main cause of the explosiveness, it must be added, is not the fact that the schools and public facilities of the state of Alabama are still segregated.

The main cause is, rather, the fact that in the Chicago Negro community, for instance, nearly one of every five able-bodied workers is out of a job. As the young Negro woman in the New Yorker also remarked, "The families of some of these people have been on relief for three generations; they have energy and no work to spend it on."

Small wonder, then, that the situation is explosive. The sudden increase of explosiveness is not hard to understand, either. Precisely because the cause of equal rights has begun to gain a little ground, the old passive acceptance of their lot by the great mass of American Negroes has quite abruptly been transformed into a new militancy.

Such, then, is the combustible raw material which may too easily explode into excess by the Negroes, in one or another American community. Except for the Negroes themselves, no one has more to lose by such an explosion than the President. It will be bad for the country he leads, bad for him personally, and bad for his party as well.

Yet he is reportedly curiously philosophic about it. He does not blame the Negro leaders for the competition in militancy that has begun among them. He certainly does not blame the Negro community for the strength and bitterness of the emotions that are beginning to well up; instead, he blames the injustices which cause the emotions.

The one point that both the President and Attorney-General Kennedy are endlessly stressing to all who discuss the subject with them is, characteristically, a practical point. If Negro militancy goes too far, it will inevitably provoke an answering reaction in the white community, and a reaction which may be even stronger in the Northern cities than in the South. In that case, the Negroes, being the minority, will be the chief sufferers.

This is the kind of practicality which caused James Baldwin and the other Negro leaders who met with Attorney-General Kennedy in New York to go away complaining that he "did not understand." The trouble is that he did understand, and they did not.

What they did not understand is that the wholly justifiable Negro claims for equal treatment in all fields will never be met solely because they are justifiable. In this harsh world, alas, justice is not automatic.

The Negro claims will be met, in fact, if decent, Christian white opinion also continues to insist on these claims being met. And therein, of course, lies the danger to the Negroes, as well as to the country, of the kind of excesses that may too easily (and one must add, too understandably) occur as the present crisis develops.

Paris Competes With London

Rain, Rain All The Time

By JOHN CROSBY

PARIS — Summer has arrived. I know because I looked at the calendar which I keep for the purpose. I couldn't find it out any other way.

Summer is a rumor in these parts. Last year it skipped the place altogether. In America, we talk about those old-fashioned winters. Well, here, you hear talk about those old-fashioned summers. You know, with sunshine, flowers, swimming. The kind that grandmother used to have.

People arrive here from the United States with summer clothes. The fools. What do they think this is — Miami? Europeans have forgotten what summer clothes are for. Actually, some Paris shops have been showing the same old bathing suits off and on all spring. No one's buying them, of course, but it's felt they should be displayed. They have a sort of historic interest, like Versailles, showing how people used to live in the old days.

France Soir reported gloomily the other day: "Summer begins Saturday. After the glacial springs, dreary and rainy, that we have endured in France for 93 days, everyone wants to know if their vacations are to be spoiled by bad weather too." France Soir then listed what marches not in the shops and stores. One thing that isn't marching in Paris — bathing suits. For what? Business at the hairdressers has been a disaster. Why take a permanent out in the rain? The restaurants in the Bois de Boulogne have described their spring business with one splendid word: catastrophe.

You want to know what's selling well in the stores? Well, raincoats, umbrellas, and boots. Also, France Soir reports a run on skivvying suits. That's one place where rain doesn't bother you — underwear.

This is my first year abroad and the weather is certainly peculiar. I was warned when I got here that the winters would be long. That was in September and it was winter then and there are grounds for believing it's still winter. Very unusual weather, they tell me. Well, weather is always unusual, but I think there are limits to the unusualness of weather and this is overstepping them. Eighteen months is a long winter, all right. Even in Russia they are not that long. In the Profumo affair, the English are trying to be very French in the sex department. The French are retaliating by going very English in the weather department. Much more of this and the French will be able to boast their weather is just as lousy as the English.

This will take some doing. The English are still way out in front in the lousy weather department, bless them. One of the great joys of England is to read the weather reports in the paper and to look and listen on television. "There will be bright intervals," says the guy on television, trying to extract a drop of cheer out of the usual awful weather. Last winter the weather got so appalling that it outran meteorological vocabularies. The situation required another Shakespeare:

Blow, winds, and crack your cheeks! rage, blow, You catarracts and hurricanoes, spout Till you have drench'd our steeples, drown'd the cocks! You sulphurous and thought-executing fires, Vaux-couriers to oak-cleaving thunderbolts, Singe my white head! And thou, all-shaking thunder, Strike flat the thick rotundity o' th' world! Crack nature's mold . . .

The guys didn't have the language for the job, but you could tell by the faces. The weather guys would come on television looking half-scared to death: "Please don't hit me," they would plead. "I can't be held responsible for what I'm about to say." Then would come the dismal news. Fog. Sleet. Snow. Typhoons.

Osbert Lancaster had a cartoon showing the weather chap on television closing his report with the words: "And that's the weather for tonight. I now demand police protection."

But the awful English weather brings a degree of appreciation for good weather or even fair weather or just plain ordinary weather that is marvelous to behold. I was coming back from an English weekend in a car once and my host looked out the window and said, "Sun shining!" — a note of incredulity in his voice at the sheer wonder of the thing, a rising inflection, as if witnessing a miracle.

Paris is not only trying to compete with London in the rotten weather department, but is acquiring — or trying to acquire — the English imperviousness to the elements. The other day France Soir showed a picture on the front page of an outdoor performance of "Amphitryon" given in the pouring rain. Every last playgoer had an umbrella, eyes fixed on the stage, an expression of total triumph if not downright dismissal of the weather. A triumph of Moliere over the elements.

Not even the English could have carried it off better.

The Ralph McGill Column

The Soviets And Alcohol

By RALPH MCGILL

Fordham University provides an excellent service to U.S. medical and research service by publishing occasional translations of publications from Soviet medical sciences. Latest of these concerns therapeutic methods employed by psychiatry in the U.S.S.R. Even a layman, perusing these, may extract some information about life in the Communist world.

It is at once obvious that the attempt to build a new Soviet man has not succeeded. The creation is, alas, subject to the same neurotic pressures, fears, anxieties, depressions and instabilities possessed by the capitalist man.

There also are some of the same addictions, notably to alcohol and tobacco. The editors of the Fordham Monographs dryly note that, while the Russians refer to alcohol addiction as a "vestige of capitalism," it is a vestige which is increasing at a great rate.

The U.S.S.R. has set up a system of "sobering" centers and the treatment for encouraging abstinence is somewhat heroic.

"The inebriated," says the report of the Russian psychiatrists, "are usually brought to the sobering center by truck, are undressed and 'sobered' by pouring cold and warm water on them alternately."

Treatment aimed at making the alcoholic able to resist the urge to drink, also is lacking in any subtlety of approach. In this country the drug antabuse is widely employed. Once a patient has taken it he is unable to retain alcohol. A drink makes him, or her, sick. But the drug must be taken regularly.

The Soviets do not make much use of antabuse. More lasting have been the various methods based on conditioned reflexes. (We are reminded of Pavlov's famed experiments with conditioning the reflexes of dogs.) An example follows: The usual liquor or wine bottle is put on the table. But before the patient may reach for it, he, or she, is injected with 25 to 0.5 cc of a one percent apomorphine solution (this induces vomiting). The patient is then made to take his favorite drink. Extreme retching results. The treatment continues. Soviet psychiatrists report that after from eight to 40 such "treatments," vomiting "takes place as a conditioned reflex." In other words, so conditioned does the patient become that the very sight of a bottle makes him immediately ill.

In some clinics, Soviet doctors report, the very confirmed drunkards require a more powerful emetic. In these cases the alcoholic is confronted with his bottle and then made to swallow a mixture of cod liver oil, castor oil, glauber's salt (sodium sulphate) and copper sulphate. These essentials are mixed in distilled water and administered three times a day.

Patients are required to report to psychiatric centers after being released from the apomorphine treatments. One of the group therapy treatments is to play back to the patients a tape recording of one of the member's talk during one of his worst periods of drunkenness.

Results are not too satisfactory — a conclusion reached by treatment centers in the United States.

— At Kiwanis Luncheon —

Mahan Praises Legislature

By TOM IRWIN
Asst. City Editor

Bruce E. Mahan, Dean Emeritus of the SUI Extension Division and freshman Democratic Representative to the Iowa Legislature told members of the Iowa City Kiwanis

BRUCE MAHAN
Guest Speaker

Club, Wednesday, "I enjoyed it down there." Mahan, 72, told the Kiwanis group at a noon luncheon, he has been around the State Legislature since 1923, having been an active lobbyist and legislative consultant for the Board of Regents. Speaking of his election to the Legislature, Mahan said, "I was the first lobbyist to go the other way."

Selected by the Democratic Central Committee as running mate with Scott Swisher (D-Iowa City), Mahan said he did as most freshmen Legislators are expected to do in Des Moines. "I did very little talking and lots of listening," he said.

When asked if he wanted to open the Iowa House debate on the liquor by the drink issue, Mahan said he told his fellow law makers, "I've waited 72 years for this."

When Mahan did speak, the Representative from Johnson County delivered his now famous "Gracious Living" speech, in which he pointed out that Iowa had been in its "golden age" during the period it had liquor by the drink.

The Legislature approved the measure 68 to 40. Mahan, who beamed his approval of the accomplishments of the legislative session (the longest regular session in the history of the state), told the group it was the most productive session, in terms of needed legislation, he had seen in 40 years.

The appropriations bill for the Board of Regents and a bill providing for the refinancing of the dormitory system was pointed out by Mahan as being especially important to the growth of SUI.

Mahan cited the bill providing for regulation of public utilities and the bill allowing investment by cities of unused balances to be of great benefit to Iowa City, and mentioned the bill allowing city authority for issuance of bonds for industrial sites, of particular importance in bringing industry to Iowa.

Mahan pointed out legislation that did not materialize this year, the billboard bill, reorganization of state government and tax measures, but expressed to the Kiwanis that the legislative session was, all in all, a constructive and a very productive one.

Mahan served on several committees during the legislative session, and told the group with obvious pride, he was "on the hill" by eight a.m., had never missed a session, and had only missed one roll call when he was called to the telephone.

Mahan, who "retired" at 70 and was elected to the House at 72, told the group whether he would again seek public office was his own "$64 dollar question."

'K' Will Visit Berlin After JFK's Visit

BERLIN (AP) — East Germany announced plans Tuesday to parade Soviet Premier Khrushchev in East Berlin Friday, two days after President Kennedy visits West Berlin.

West Berlin authorities meanwhile predicted a turnout of a million West Berliners when Kennedy arrives Wednesday for his first look at the Red Wall.

The East Berliners got their latest word in an announcement from the National Front, a propaganda organization, calling on them to decorate houses, streets, squares and factories with Red flags for Khrushchev.

Moscow Radio Monday night had made a surprise announcement that Khrushchev would come to East Germany to help celebrate the birthday of party boss Walter Ulbricht, who will be 70 on Sunday.

There was general agreement here that Khrushchev was making the trip to counterbalance the effects of Kennedy's visit.

Family Life Under Study

Techniques for applying the findings of recent studies in human relations, family life, mental health, and related areas are being explored by some 40 Iowa educators at the SUI Workshop on Education in Human Relations and Mental Health. The two-week workshop will close Friday.

Ruth Hase and Margaret Wade, elementary teachers, are attending from Iowa City.

Designed for teachers, administrators, and supervisors in Iowa schools, the program is sponsored by the Iowa Mental Health Authority and the Grant Foundation in cooperation with the SUI Preventive Psychiatry Research Program.

Bridge Damaged by Fire, Will Be Closed to Traffic

CLINTON (AP) — The 70-year-old bridge over the Mississippi River between Fulton, Ill., and Clinton, Iowa was closed Tuesday night after fire destroyed about 200 feet of wooden sidewalk on the west span of the structure.

William E. Ellwanger, manager of the bridge, said it would be closed until it could be determined whether heat from the blaze had weakened the metal roadbed or the supports.

Cause of the fire was not immediately determined. Firemen speculated that the blaze may have been caused by a lighted cigarette discarded by a motorist crossing the bridge.

Ellwanger said he could not estimate the amount of damage. The two-lane bridge is scheduled to be replaced with a new structure in the next few years.

The bridge carries mostly local traffic although Alternate U.S. 30 is routed over it. Regular traffic from U.S. 30 crosses the river at an eight-year-old bridge south of the burned structure.

The fire in the sidewalk was fanned by winds which hit the structure sitting about 65 feet above the water.

Four Clinton fire companies and two fire trucks from Fulton, Ill., battled the blaze.

The fire burned the section of sidewalk on the bridge over the main channel of the river. Authorities said towboats crossing under the span would not be delayed.

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Six persons were killed and about 30 injured when a passenger train and a freight train collided Tuesday at Sao Domingos station near Lisbon, railroad officials reported.
