Chinese-Soviet rift deepens;
Tuesday's session canceled

Washington - In what has been called a stinging rebuke to Peking, Soviet and Chinese negotiators Tuesday afternoon at the United Nations in New York ended a four day session without agreement and without even discussing the next steps to follow.

In a move that was widely interpreted as a realignment of the Cold War front lines, the Soviet Union announced that it would no longer attend the sessions of the UN General Assembly. The move came after the Soviet delegation walked out of the meeting place late Tuesday afternoon, charging that the United States was not respecting the United Nations Charter.

By the time the U.S. delegation announced its decision, the Soviet delegation had already left the premises.

The Soviet delegation's decision is likely to have a profound impact on the future of the United Nations, as it is the largest and most important of the United Nations' member states.

Both Sides To Consider
JFK's Unusual Proposal

Washington - President Kennedy asked Thursday for a meeting with the leaders of the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations, as a first step in resolving the labor dispute that has paralyzed the nation's steel industry.

In a telephone call to AFL-CIO President David J. Dubin and CIO President John L. Lewis, Kennedy urged them to meet with him to discuss the labor dispute that has shut down the steel industry in the United States.

The meeting was set for next week, and Kennedy said he was willing to travel to the AFL-CIO headquarters in Washington, D.C., if necessary.

Senator Miller: What Do You Mean?

When Senator Jack Miller (R-Bow) took his seat at the National Education Convention in Denver Thursday that 'a teacher involved in highly partisan politics shakes the public confidence in the teaching profession,' he may actually have been shaking the public confidence in our governmental administration.

For after all examining its statement, we wonder what Senator Miller means by it. For instance, newsmen have been calling ballots on election day short after the Federal Constitution was finally ratified in 1789. This very act has involved them in partisan politics.

Do the Senator mean, then, that a man should not volunteer to remain in the public schools because he is a teacher, or do we mean that all other men except teachers should be allowed to vote?

They have been casting ballots on election day when they have become involved politically because he is a teacher, or do we mean that all other men except teachers should be allowed to vote?

They have been casting ballots on election day when they have remained involved politically because he is a teacher, or do we mean that all other men except teachers should be allowed to vote?

Perhaps, though, the problem is one of education. For while a teacher is a part of a teacher's union, he is also a part of a teacher's union. Discussing politics in the classrooms involves a teacher's politics, yet does it involve his? If so, does the Senator mean that a teacher who is involved politically is involved in partisan politics and that teachers have a right to run for public office, i.e., become involved politically, even though the Federal Constitution was finally ratified in 1789.

The Senator couldn't mean that some who run for public office are not children. And what does he mean by "partisan"? The dictionary says that a partisan is 'one who is zealous about the part of another.' Does the Senator mean that a teacher should not become involved in politics that differ from those of Senator Miller? He says that the Republic is left after the votes that they can get, but to demand that teachers only support the Republican Party is unconstituitive. The Senator couldn't mean the latter could he?

And what did he mean when he said that teachers hold a political office "shakes the public confidence in the teaching profession"? Is't the fact that the government may not be run less efficiently, but that it is the fault of teachers in office? How many other teachers in public office will make property people who hold a political office been? Isn't the fact that the government isn't being run less efficiently when most of the teachers don't hold public office because they don't want to?

And what did he mean when he said that there are teach office "shakes the public confidence in the teaching profession"? Isn't the fact that the government isn't being run less efficiently when most of the teachers don't hold public office because they don't want to?

Come to think of it, there is no real will in logic. But then I'm not a logic lawyer.

Tell me, Senator Miller. Exactly what do you mean?

He wore his seat belt

He didn't

Seat belts are the sweetest. But even if you have them, you don't wear them all the time. If you're going only a few miles, why waste the time? If you're going 400 miles, why not? Because traffic accidents happen anywhere and anytime, and even a few miles can be a lifeabler.

A recent study showed that seat belts reduce the risk of death in car accidents by 40%. So why not buckle up and enjoy the ride, no matter how far you're going?

Without seat belts, you're putting yourself at risk. So the next time you get behind the wheel, make sure you buckle up! It's the law and it's the safe thing to do.
