The Right View Of A Test Ban

THE THOUGHT of a nuclear test ban is in it's definition.

But things are not as they may at a world

The proposed ban on testing that is being discussed in Moscow is not the end of all our problems. For, it is a start toward the easing of the tensions that have gripped the world since the start of the Cold War nearly forty years ago.

The point to be driven home is the need for the nations of the world to act wisely. A wise order in the world is a test of the first order and a baby may fall heavily to the floor when he attempts his first step, the world may plunge back into the fiery abyss of the Cold War despite a test ban treaty.

The most likely treaty that will emerge from Mos- - will include underground testing. This will mean that the signature will be able to continue to develop nuclear weapons. The threat of nuclear war will still be present along with the threat of development of onces new terrifying and devastating weapon.

Moreover, the United States, Great Britain and the Soviet Union will be the only nations bound by the treaty. France and Red China have announced that they will not sign any such agreement.

The Red Chinese are dedicated to the principle of spreading global ideology on any means including nuclear war. Mr. Mao Tsetung and the Chinese SYNDICATE are capable of building nuclear weapon in the near future. With three bases popping up into the sky, one of the three bases will perhaps attack America or Japan in the future.

But all is not quiet on the world. The world's three great power is gearing up to stop testing, a precendent for the world to learn how to live in peace. The three nations, which might possibly include France, Red China and old Egypt, would be able to stop the world from destructive weapons and limit the damage that could be done.

The French - under the guidance of their new-year leader, Charles de Gaulle - are determined to develop their own independent nuclear force.

But apparently hasn't and many undoubtedly have be- come wise. From the East Africa to the East Asia, the world is wise in the art of surviving. No era has been mired in such dark disasters, which might possibly include France, Red China and old Egypt, would be able to stop the world from destructive weapons and limit the damage that could be done.

We all know today, the eyes of the world are looking for the first step in a wise direction. This will be the moment when the world will be able to recognize that the wise order must be the only order.
