

SUI professor predicts federal seizure if railroads strike

If a strike idles the nation's railroads Aug. 29, the U.S. Government will probably seize the railroads within two weeks if no Congressional action is taken, SUI Professor Max Wortman said Thursday.

Professor Wortman said Congress and the President could not let the strike continue much more than a week, because the food supplies in cities, especially on the East Coast, would become short within ten days.

If the strike continued for as long as a month there would be wide-spread unemployment throughout the country, he continued. Mass unemployment — in the millions — would result because such items as steel could not be shipped to manufacturing plants throughout the country, for example.

Wortman, SUI assistant professor of industrial relations, pointed out that collective bargaining has all but failed, and the possibility of personal intervention by President Kennedy, Secretary of Labor Wirtz and others appears to have been exhausted.

It also now appears that the problem will not be turned over to the Interstate Commerce Commission, the SUI professor said. Management, which had favored ICC action, is now having second thoughts, said Professor Wortman. Since the Commission has traditionally held tight regulations on the railroads, management has become reluctant to let the ICC set work rules for them, too. Furthermore, Congressmen have become edgy over potential loss of votes of unions, which oppose ICC intervention.

The long background of the dispute and current lack of progress in negotiations indicates that the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen probably will strike Aug. 29, said Dr. Wortman. The strike would halt all 195 major U.S. railroads.

In this event, one of two actions is likely, he continued. The first is Government seizure of the railroads, which was done under similar conditions in 1917 and in post-World War II. In this case, an injunction ordering the union workers back to their jobs would be issued by a federal court.

This would raise several important and unresolved questions, noted Dr. Wortman. There is a question of who gets the profits of the railroads' operations while they are being run by the Government. Another question is whether managers of the companies and the union leaders should be negotiating or handling normal operations while the railroads are being run by the Government.

Other unions and industries fear that seizure of the railroads would set a precedent for nationalization of railroads and for similar action in other areas such as the steel and automobile industries, says the SUI professor.

The second possible course of action in the event of a strike is compulsory arbitration — the appointment by government of an impartial person to decide the issues, whose decision would be binding on both the union and the railroads.

This move might set a precedent for similar action in other industries, said Dr. Wortman, and neither unions nor management in any industry favor compulsory arbitration.

While the railroads have a strong case for eliminating the so-called "unneeded" workers, the effect of such a move on these 60,000 workers, their families, and towns dominated by railroad workers cannot be ignored, says Professor Wortman. He notes that the number of railroad workers has already been cut by about half in the past decade.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Railroad unions involved in the deadlocked work-rules dispute said Thursday they have accepted suggestions made by Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz for bargaining procedures.

"The secretary of labor has in his hands documents of acceptance from the five railroad operating unions on his suggestions for settlement of the manning issue in the work rules dispute," a joint statement said.

A spokesman explained that two groups of unions — those representing the firemen and engineers and those representing three traincrew groups — accepted Wirtz's proposals in separate actions.

The firemen and engineers are concerned with the firemen's job issue while the others are concerned with the other crucial issue in the dispute — train-crew makeup.

Wirtz's suggestions were advanced Aug. 2 to define the limits within which bargaining could proceed and were not intended as settlement proposals.

In another development, a report was circulated that the railroad brotherhoods were seeking to lead some voluntary plan to devise a settlement, either by additional negotiating with the carriers or by some sort of voluntary arbitration.

The fireman's union spokesman, however, said he had no direct knowledge of this but could not dispute it.

Settlement by negotiation or voluntary arbitration, would mean that it would no longer be necessary for Congress to act on President Kennedy's legislative proposal to turn the dispute over to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The two parties at present are in a truce to last until Aug. 29, the date on which the carriers are to introduce their controversial new work rules to eliminate thousands of jobs, which they consider unneeded. The unions are pledged to walk out as soon as such new rules are posted.

A Gross Christmas?

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the House is in session during the Christmas season — as now seems possible — Rep. H. R. Gross (R-Iowa) probably will handle arrangements for appropriate decorations.

Gross asked Democratic Leader Carl Albert of Oklahoma Thursday if something would be done to provide an appropriate atmosphere in the House if Congress is still in session then.

"If we're here at Christmas time," Albert replied, "I will be glad to join in designating the gentleman to arrange for decorations."

Rep. Clarence J. Brown (R-Ohio) who noted Gross' reputation as a penny-pincher on money bills, said he hoped the House leadership would designate someone else as "Santa Claus" so the seasonal arrangements would not be too skimpy.

Congo Republic head quits, army takes over

BRAZZAVILLE, Congo Republic (AP) — President Fulbert Youlou resigned by angry public demand today and the army assumed power until a new Government can be formed. There is no way of knowing now who will succeed him.

Two army captains named Mouz-tabakany and Moutsaka were placed in joint command of this young equatorial African nation, a little neighbor of the more widely known former Belgian Congo.

The only chief executive of the Congo Republic has ever had, Youlou gave up the presidency on the third anniversary of its independence from France under the pressure of rioting and unrest among strikers hotly opposed to his political and social policies.

The stocky little onetime Roman Catholic parish priest, 46, made his announcement from the steps of the presidential palace before more than 10,000 shouting Congolese demanding his resignation.

Youlou, once called the Black Messiah, signed his resignation after hours of negotiations in the palace with labor leaders, who are his arch-enemies, and with representatives of the military.

Briefly, he told the throng he had resigned to prevent the shedding of Congolese blood.

The people had long chafed against political and economic conditions in this largely agricultural nation of 795,000 and they had won their point. The demonstrators trooped back to squalid African villages on Brazzaville's outskirts to savor their victory.

Youlou was invited to remain in the palace under protection of the Congolese army and a detachment of French paratroopers.

His humiliation came on a day for which he once planned a great independence celebration that would launch his new "party of the Congolese" — the single-party rule he intended to impose.

This proposal was a prime object of resentment by labor leaders and workers. It was one of the causes of rioting Tuesday in which five died when crowds stormed the city prison under gendarmier rifle fire. Looking for jailed labor leaders, they freed all 480 prisoners inside.

Taylor: treaty OK unanimous

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor said Thursday the Joints Chiefs of Staff held long, hard discussions before deciding unanimously to support "in the final form" the limited nuclear test ban treaty.

They came to that conclusion without pressure from their Pentagon superiors, Taylor, chairman of the top military command, declared in reply to senators' questions.

He said the joint chiefs were consulted in advance of negotiations leading to the treaty and had full access to all communications between Moscow and Washington during the negotiations in the Soviet Union.

"We had an opportunity at any time to intervene," he said.

Taylor testified in public before a Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing attended by members of the Armed Services and Atomic Energy committees.

He had told the Senate Preparedness subcommittee Wednesday that the military chiefs felt advantages outweigh disadvantages of the pact to ban all except underground nuclear tests.

Spent summer at SUI—

Cuban refugees in Newsweek

Grinnell's warm reception for a Cuban refugee who will teach Spanish in high school there this year is featured in the education section of the current issue of Newsweek magazine.

Vincent Rangel's wife and four sons joined him in Grinnell this week, having remained in Miami, Fla., this summer while he participated in a special SUI program to train 30 refugees to be high school teachers.

To help relieve the shortage of teachers of Spanish in Iowa schools, SUI conducted the summer program on the Iowa City campus in cooperation with the State Department of Public Instruction.

The Aug. 19 issue of Newsweek notes that during their seven daily classroom hours, the Cubans studied not only teaching techniques but also American government and the U.S. educational system, in general.

About half of the Cubans participating in the SUI program were lawyers before they had to flee Cuba when Castro came to power. Many of them also had teaching experience in Cuban high schools and universities.

The world this morning

• Daily Iowan circulation department employes have spent more than 150 hours "stuffing" some 88,000 sections of tomorrow's University Edition of The Daily Iowan. The 11 section edition must be put together, (stuffed) prior to mailing 6,000 copies from a press run of 8,000 papers.

Included in the process of readying the University edition is: carrying all sections from the mail room to the Communications Center, stuffing the sections together, labeling each wrapper, sorting each wrapper into cities and states, affixing stamps to each wrapper, and wrapping each paper.

According to Jim Collier, Daily Iowan Circulation Manager, the activity preceding distribution of the University Edition tomorrow is "our own poke at automation."

• Two severe earthquakes — many times stronger than the recent devastating quake at Skopje, Yugoslavia — shook opposite ends of the earth Thursday.

The first quake caused tall buildings to sway for 20 seconds in downtown Tokyo.

About 11 hours later, an even more severe quake was reported, and seismologists placed it near the Peruvian-Ecuadorian border.

There were no reported casualties from either quake.

• NEW YORK — Navy yeoman Nelson C. Drummond, first American Negro convicted as a cold war spy for the Soviet Union, was sentenced Thursday to life imprisonment. He stood in shocked rigidity as he heard the penalty for his sale of military secrets to Moscow cash-and-carry basis.

He was arrested last fall in the act of passing data to two aides of the Soviet United Nations mission. The life sentence makes him eligible for parole after 15 years.

U.S. Dist. Judge Thomas F. Murphy could have sentenced Drummond to death.

• WASHINGTON — The Senate Finance Committee Thursday approved 11-6 the House-passed bill to keep the national debt limit at $309 billion for another three months through Nov. 30.

While at SUI, they studied the Audio-Lingual method of teaching Spanish, which concentrates on teaching a foreign language much as a native language is learned. That is, Americans first learn English simply by hearing their parents speak it, and instruction in grammar comes later.

Through this instructional method the Cubans will begin speaking Spanish to their students the first day of class, and minimize the need for using English.

Newsweek notes that both the Cubans and students who will be in their classes are enthusiastic over the new program.

Barnett overruled—Meredith will graduate this weekend

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — The State College Board overrode Gov. Ross Barnett Thursday and refused to delay the graduation of Negro James Meredith from the University of Mississippi.

The board voted 6-5 in favor of a subcommittee report recommending no action be taken by the committee or by the board.

The subcommittee warned intervention in university administrative affairs probably would cause all Mississippi's state universities and colleges to lose accreditation.

Barnett had asked the board to delay Meredith's graduation pending an investigation into whether the 30-year-old Negro's statements violated a university directive against inflammatory remarks.

Subcommittee chairman Tally Riddell quoted an opinion by state Atty. Gen. Joe Patterson saying "whether or not Meredith's statements are contrary to the directive of the chancellor is a factual matter for the determination of university authorities."

Riddell read a statement from Chancellor J. D. Williams saying the university "decided that neither Meredith nor any other student in similar circumstances could justifiably be expelled from the university."

Riddell noted the board was under federal court injunction not to interfere with Meredith's continued attendance and was on accreditation probation contingent upon permitting no political interference.

After the board voted to accept the subcommittee report over the protests of Barnett's five appointees, the governor commented, "I guess that ends it."

At his home here, where he is awaiting the Sunday graduation exercises at the university, Meredith declined comment.

Barnett made his move to delay the graduation by citing statements by Meredith in the wake of the June 12 assassination of Negro leader Medgar Evers of Jackson.

U.S. planes helpless as Cuban forces kidnap 19

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — U.S. fighter jets and a Coast Guard seaplane circled helplessly as a Cuban naval force strafed and then kidnaped 19 anti-Fidel Castro refugees on a tiny British Island in the Bahamas, witnesses said Thursday night.

Ten other refugees escaped from the two Cuban torpedo boats and a helicopter. One of the group, which arrived in Miami Saturday night, said engine trouble caused their predicament on the uninhabited cay 45 miles north of Cuba.

Coast Guard Lt. J. E. Mitts, 30, of Denver, a pilot, said the Cuban gunboats trained "guns on us, aircraft and small arms. It looked like each torpedo boat had a 20-millimeter gun mounted aft." Mitts said no firing was observed.

The Coast Guard said its patrol boat came across the scene on Anquilla Cay at 4:05 p.m. Tuesday. The crewmen aboard the twin-engine airplane radioed for help and, in all, eight American jet fighters responded.

State Department press officer Richard Phillips said in Washington the U.S. aircraft could not intervene under international law because the action was on British territory. He said the British made the request to take the survivors to Florida.

U.S. officials call claim 'propaganda'

MOSCOW (AP) — Communist China bared what may be the crux of its ever-worsening quarrel with the Soviet Union — a Chinese charge that Premier Khrushchev went back on a promise in 1959 to supply the Chinese with nuclear weapons and know-how.

So far the Soviet press and radio have kept silent despite a Chinese challenge to publish the disclosure.

Peking finally exposed the festering cut to its national pride in a slashing attack Thursday on Soviet nuclear disarmament policy published by the New China News Agency.

It claimed the Soviet Union had refused to provide China with "a sample of an atomic bomb and technical data concerning its manufacture," although it had promised to do so.

The Chinese broadside charged the Soviets tore up an October 1957 Soviet-Chinese agreement on cooperation in defense technology.

This also was the first public claim by the Chinese that the Kremlin had ever pledged to help China become a nuclear power. Its public line always has been opposition.

The Soviet abrogation of the agreement on June 20, 1959, "was done as a presentation gift" at the time Khrushchev went to the United States for talks with President Dwight D. Eisenhower in September, the Chinese charged.

It did not explain how something done in June was a "gift" for a September meeting which was not then scheduled.

The Soviet Communist party organ Pravda, in seeming anticipation of the Chinese blow, today published a justification of Moscow's refusal to share its atomic secrets with its allies.

It accused the Chinese of having broken with the rest of the world's "fighters for peace" over the limited nuclear test ban.

Behind the headline

An AP News Analysis by JOHN M. HIGHTOWER, AP Diplomatic Affairs Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials discounted Thursday a claim by Red China that the Soviet Union promised it nuclear weapons, then reneged on the pledge.

BOTH PRESENT and former officials regard as ridiculous the effort by the Red Chinese to link the alleged atomic wenching with Soviet Premier Khrushchev's 1959 visit to President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

U.S. officials said they are extremely skeptical of Red China's implied claim that Khrushchev agreed back in October, 1957 to supply the Chinese Communists with atomic weapons manufacturing data. They do not think Khrushchev ever had any intention of helping the Chinese Reds achieve nuclear military power and thus a position of parity with the Soviet Union.

THE STATE DEPARTMENT denied the Red Chinese charge of U.S. collusion to prevent Communist China from becoming a first-class power.

The implication that Khrushchev's alleged decision to scrap the 1957 atomic weapons agreement was somehow involved in his meeting with Eisenhower in September, 1959 is completely discounted by well-informed U.S. officials and former officials.

Former Secretary of State Christian Herter, who participated in the Camp David session, told The Associated Press, "I don't recall the subject's ever having come up."

THE BROADCAST by a Peking spokesman Thursday was an effort to discredit the limited nuclear test ban pact recently concluded by the United States, Britain and Russia.

Thus it is regarded in official Washington as largely misleading propaganda trimmed and twisted to suit Red China's purpose. But it is regarded also as a disclosure of the trigger issue of the whole raging conflict in the Communist world.

U.S. officials said it is entirely believable that the Soviet Government in October 1957 made an agreement with Red China to supply defense technology. It is also credible that Red China wanted to begin work on atomic weapons and may have interpreted Russia's technical aid commitment as meaning that the Russians should supply a sample A-bomb and manufacturing data.

But U.S. officials do not believe the Russians wrote or interpreted the treaty that way.

Clifford Odets dies of cancer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Cancer has claimed the life of Clifford Odets, whose plays of social protest in the 1930s made him one of America's foremost dramatists. He was 57.

The playwright died Wednesday night at Cedars of Lebanon Hospital. He had been admitted to the hospital July 23 for treatment of stomach ulcers. An operation July 31 disclosed cancer.

Odets, born in Philadelphia, was a prolific writer who started late. He was 29 when his first play, "Awake and Sing," was produced. Its eloquent cry against the social inequalities of the depression Era hit Broadway with intense force. It was followed by "Waiting for Lefty," "Golden Boy" and "Rocket to the Moon."

Odets was identified with many liberal causes. In 1952 he appeared before the House Un-American Activities Committee and announced himself a "disillusioned ex-Communist."

'Death Curve' should be tamed down

Only one small sign at each approach, indicating a gradual curve ahead, warns motorists of the three turns and abrupt dip in a twisting section of Highway 6, one mile west of Tiffin, known as "Death Curve."

"DEATH CURVE," a two-mile stretch of curving roadway on Highway 6 one mile west of Tiffin, claimed two victims — both young women — in a one-car traffic accident Tuesday night. Last year, two steel salesmen met their death on the same curving stretch in a flaming head-on collision. In addition, there have been many personal injury and property damage accidents in this same two-mile area.

Death Curve has a notorious reputation, not only with those who live there but also with authorities such as State Safety Commissioner William F. Suenpelt and highway patrolmen stationed in Johnson County.

Some experts contend the road is banked incorrectly. They say the two-lane asphalt roadway will throw a car to one side of the road or the other when it is traveling near maximum legal speed, especially in wet weather.

Residents express concern for their own safety when they enter the highway from the two county and three private roads on Death Curve. All these branch roads are blind or almost blind entrances.

There is little warning for drivers approaching Death Curve from either east or west. Only a small diamond-shaped sign with an arrow indicating one gradual curve is posted at each approach, two of many such signs posted throughout the state to indicate gradual curves lie ahead.

Death Curve is NOT a run-of-the-mill curve encountered on Iowa highways, however. It is a tricky, dangerous, hilly, twisting section of roadway in which a motorist encounters not one but three banked turns and an abrupt dip.

We suggest the Iowa Highway Commission erect large, conspicuous signs at each approach warning motorists to decrease their speed to perhaps 40 miles per hour. In addition, these signs should indicate diagrammatically that three turns and five-side roads do exist ahead. Perhaps these signs would, at least in part, reduce the deaths, injuries, and property damage now prevalent on Death Curve — and ease the apprehensions of Death Curve residents that they, too, may end up as so many motorists have in the past.

Sen. Estes Kefauver—

The coonskin cap looked natural on him

By RALPH MCGILL

Estes Kefauver — He was tall and shuffling — and somehow the coonskin cap looked natural on him. The imagination quickly clothed him in fringed deerskin jacket, pants and handmade moccasins his forebears had worn in the days of 'Nollychucky Jack' Sevier and his Indian fighters.

He was of that stock. For a long span of years the manyfolded, seemingly endless ranges of the Appalachians were a barrier to settlers who crossed the Atlantic to the port of Philadelphia. But, after a while they found the passes. British, Huguenot and German peoples built cabins deep among the ridges, stopping at small, pleasant valleys where chattering streams provided power for grist mills.

THEIR DESCENDANTS became the Southern mountain people — and they had little kinship in philosophy, political or spiritual, with cotton planters who lived off the labor of slaves. Theirs were the old clan virtues and for every cabin where the Huguenot strain ran to fiddles and square dancing, there were three where the severe strictures of Calvinism disapproved of undue merriment and the scrape of a resined bow on strings.

Estes Kefauver, whose sudden death of a heart attack, shocked the nation and reminded us all of how much we are in his debt, came from some of the early settlers who stopped in the beautiful land just at the foot of the passes into the great Smoky Mountains.

He was the first member of Congress since the spectacular investigative period following the Harding Administration to dig into criminal influences. He went after the syndicate of crime. His investigations coincided with the burgeoning talents and abilities of television. The nation looked on as criminals, petty and major, came and sat under questioning.

One day a camera genius kept his lens on the hands of a racketeer and millions watched as those hands, calm at the beginning of interrogation, began to twist and clench.

IT WAS AN AILING, bitter boss Ed Crump, with his political empire breaking up under the attack from East Tennessee, who gave the Tall Tennessean a chance in 1948. Crump sneeringly referred to the young challenger as "Harry Truman's pet coon". Kefauver promptly donned a coonskin cap. It became a symbol of the solid virtues of the mountain people, all over Tennessee, and later over the nation, children and adults began to wear such caps. Ed Crump privately condemned himself for what he thought was an error of huge proportions. It was.

Estes Kefauver, more than any candidate in modern times, made the handshake an effective political weapon on a national scale. He had the stamina that enabled him day after day to plod through a city, its offices, factories, and streets, the coonskin cap on his head, shaking hands. The Senate never had a member that worked harder. The people have not had a representative who more sincerely looked after their interests as he opposed the always conscienceless greed of special privilege.

EVERY NEWSMAN WHO saw him in action retains many memories of him in action. Two favorites here are from New Hampshire and the preferential primary of 1952. One day the indefatigable Kefauver, making the hand-shaking rounds in Manchester, came into a sausage plant. In the production rooms rows of women, many of them big and blowsy, stood before tubs of cooled casings into which the sausage mixture was stuffed under pressure.

He came in, as was his custom, unannounced. He went down the lines, shaking the hastily-wiped greasy hands of the startled women, asking for their vote. When he was done, and the coonskin cap had disappeared out the door, the silence was broken by a woman who bawled, "My God almighty, he's for me!" Kefauver did win New Hampshire's presidential convention votes.

Another memory — a high school principal asked him to address the students. He and his pretty wife, Nancy, walked down the aisle of the auditorium, followed by a dozen or so newsmen. We marched in to a familiar tune. At the piano two small girls peered at the music of a song neither had ever played before — Dixie. Their hands missed a few notes, but we recognized it.

Estes Kefauver was one of those who in the second echelons render valuable national service, even though the prize of politics eludes them. When the summing up is done, he will rank high.

Letter to the editor—

Troops: You're advancing to the rear

Faced squarely with defeat during the last days of World War II in Europe, the Germans insisted upon one of the most useless, senseless propaganda lines in the history of communications:

"Our victorious troops are advancing to previously prepared positions in the rear."

If you think this is a classic example of cynicism and stupidity, listen to the latest propaganda line being bruted about Iowa City these days. Allegedly on behalf of the hotels, motels and restaurants, a "public service announcement" would have you understand that "only an industry which 'compliments' Iowa is allowed to locate within its sacred boundaries.

FURTHER, ONLY three concerns apparently have passed the "test" so far. One of them, offering daily conducted tours through the "complimentary" plant, is a well-known manufacturer of toothpaste.

These statements seem unbelievable when you consider that the State of Iowa, and presumably every progressive community in it, is seeking officially and desperately to attract industry — any industry.

Just what is there about a legitimate industry that would spoil this artificially described "Garden of Eden?"

Is it smoke? What is pouring out of the mouths of the towering, ugly sentinels by the dam?

THE RAT-TAT-TAT of drills, chug-chug of pumps and screech of cranes do not constitute a symphony just because they are necessary complements to construction for educational purposes.

Or is it people — blue-collared with money in their pockets? There will be upward to 12,000 plus students coming into Iowa City this fall. Let us tell them the truth as we see it:

If you need a job to help you through the University, you will be hard put to find one. There are virtually no jobs in Iowa City.

IF YOU ARE LUCKY enough to find one, the "living" wage will be about $1.25 an hour. There is not enough labor in Iowa City to demand more.

You probably can get a menial and perhaps meaningless job from the University. It is possible that your expenses at this state supported institution could be less, but the charitable obligations are great.

It will be almost impossible for you to find a decent meal in Iowa City at a decent price. It generally is understood that students eat mostly hamburgers, and there is not enough money in town to promote more.

If you want a sophisticated liquor-by-the-drink, you will have to go to a nearby city. There, your scowling host will be happy to sell you anything — at a price. Tavern owners in Iowa City are far from convinced there are enough people in town who can afford collectively to keep a back bar in business.

IT WILL BE almost impossible for you to find sanitary, minimally-appointed off-campus housing for yourself or your family at prices you can afford. There are not enough people in Iowa City who by their very presence would tip the scales of supply and demand in your favor.

You, the students, are the major support of the greater number of businesses in Iowa City. When you leave, many of them take a pale vacation.

So, welcome, victorious troops. You are advancing to previously prepared positions — in the rear!

An expert look at expert lack

By MILES A. SMITH
AP Reviewer

EXPERTLAND. By Robert Sommer. Doubleday, $3.95.

Wherever men work, whether in a sausage emporium or a literary brain foundry, the "expert" has come in for some ribbing over the years.

As in the old saying, "An expert is a guy from out of town." (In the King James version, "A prophet is not without honor, save in his own country...")

But of late a whole new swarm of button-down-collar experts has buzzed out from the campuses, and it is this world of seers that Sommer is treating in his opus.

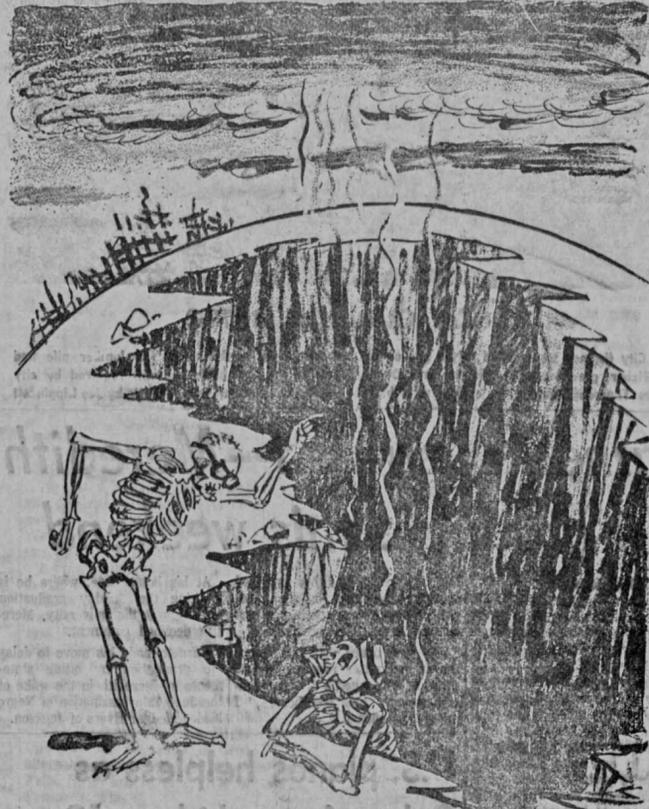

We've had some lively debunking of the business and advertising "games," from such snipers as Parkinson and Packard. Here we have something similar about scientists, professors, researchers, consultants, foundations, learned journals and the "little people" — assistants, technicians, secretaries — who support the dizzy gyrations of the experts themselves.

Sommer has combed his subject thoroughly. He has laid out a painstaking exposition of the now familiar campus fetish for publishing articles, with all the accompanying abuses and non-sensical results.

He also presents elaborate notes on the necessity for an expert to keep moving from one job to another. He delves into the status symbols of the trade, and outlines the ground rules of the care, feeding and delousing of this breed.

In the midst of his fun-poking, he has a serious theme. It is the increasingly stubborn insistence of the experts that their contributions to productivity — results — cannot be evaluated because there are no "real" yardsticks — and experts refuse to measure each other's intangible boondoggling.

Zoology meeting

Three members of the faculty of the Department of Zoology at SUI will participate in the XVI International Congress of Zoology to be held in Washington, D.C., Aug. 20-27.

Eleanor H. Slifer, professor of zoology, will present a paper on "Fine Structure of Insect Olfactory Receptors" in a specialized symposium on invertebrate chemoreception. Richard G. Kessel, assistant professor of zoology, will also present a paper at the meeting.

Professor Emeritus Emil Witschi, also of the SUI department, was a member of the United States organizing committee for the congress. He is now on leave from SUI to direct a research laboratory program in Europe.

The XVI Congress is the second such meeting to be held in this country since the series began in Paris in 1889. Since World War II, the congress has been held at five-year intervals in Paris (1948), Copenhagen (1953), and in London (1958).

Math meeting

Four members of the Mathematics Department at SUI will attend a meeting of the American Mathematical Society and Mathematical Association of America at the University of Colorado Aug. 26-30.

They are Professors H. T. Muhly, W. T. Reid, Drury M. Wall and Steve Armentrout.

Professor Armentrout will present a paper entitled "On upper semi-continuous decompositions of Euclidean 3-space into tame 3-cells and one-point sets," and Professor Reid will present a paper on "Principal solutions of non-oscillatory linear differential systems."

Scholarship

David Gervich of Marshalltown has been named winner of the Keokuk Daily Gate City Scholarship to study journalism at SUI beginning this fall.

The $100 scholarship was made possible through a gift to the SUI School of Journalism from the Keokuk Daily Gate City.

Omicron Nu

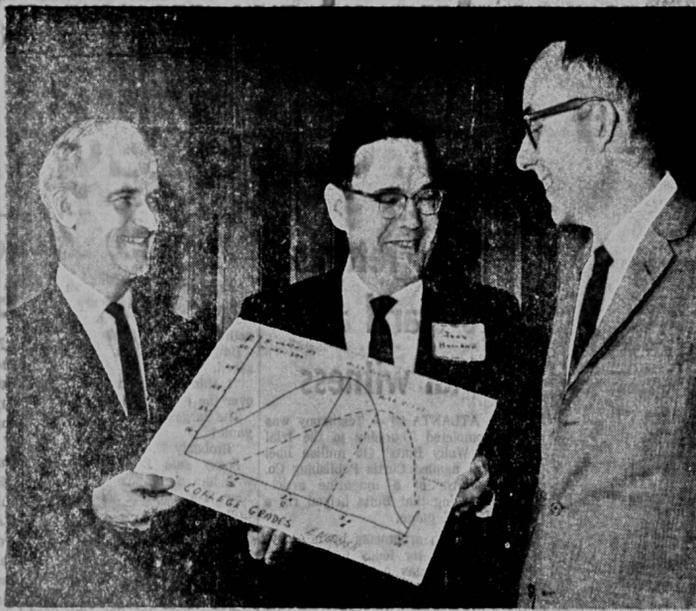

Membership in Omicron Nu, national home economics honor society, has been granted to 15 students in home economics and nutrition at SUI.

Among those initiated are: Mrs. Ruth Ann Schlotfeld, G. Charles City; Marilyn Rose Lawler, G. Des Moines; Mrs. Patricia J. Huff, A4, Iowa City; Mrs. Maxine Miller, G. Iowa City; Mrs. Geraldine Stoner, G. Iowa City; Mrs. Maggie Moore, G. Oskaloosa; Nancy Jane Daily, G. Champaign, Ill.

Also initiated were: Mary Jane Geheber, G. Ransom; Mrs. Lorna Wegert, G. Villa Park, Ill.; Mrs. Evelyn Evans, G. Columbia, Mo.; Norma Jean Jones, G. St. Louis; Beverly E. Hawkins, G. West Salem, Ohio; Eleanor Irene Good, G. Alberta, Canada; Margarita Penaherrera, Quito, Ecuador; Violeta Camera Lavides, G. Rizal, Pasig, Philippines.

The new members include students from the Department of Home Economics in the College of Liberal Arts, and the Department of Nutrition in the College of Medicine.

To be eligible for membership in the organization, a student must attain a "B" average or better in college work. Membership is open to graduate students, seniors and second semester juniors in home economics or a related field.

Examining charts used in predicting students' performance are Dr. John Holland (center), ACT vice-president, and Lowell W. Reed, regional director (left), both of Iowa City. ACT director tells duties of college testing agencies

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — College entrance testing agencies today must do more than their name implies if they are to serve higher education in a democratic society, a noted pioneer in educational measurement and research declared here Wednesday.

Dr. E. F. Lindquist of Iowa City, Iowa, told a group of the nation's leading college counseling and admissions officials that testers must analyze many other kinds of information about a student — his high school grades and credits, even his parents' educational backgrounds and other social data. Otherwise, he cautioned, they cannot enable a high school graduate to pick the college best suited to him.

And the interests of the individual student are paramount, Dr. Lindquist said.

Dr. Lindquist is research and development director for the American College Testing Program (ACT) at SUI, which is conducting a seminar here for college counselors. Purpose of the meeting is to help the counselors make fuller use of the agency's research information.

ACT's research service, Dr. Lindquist said, is already gathering, analyzing, tabulating and reporting this information for benefit of college, high school and student. And thanks to large scale computers, this is done fast, efficiently and in advance of registration — when it is most needed.

These computations, Dr. Lindquist said, help students decide in which college they can achieve their academic goals.

With ACT's data, a "digested" index card, a student's performance can be predicted in relation to the unique program or "idiosyncrasies" of any given college participating in the agency's research activities.

Probably the largest such agency in the nation, ACT reports scores for more than a third of the one million new freshmen students each year in some 820 colleges.

Without a standardized, efficient system of data reporting, the entire machinery of higher education would be plunged into chaos, Dr. Lindquist said.

A non-profit organization, ACT provides its testing reporting and research services to colleges without charge.

College officials participating in the Colorado Springs conference have recently been appointed as research consultants for ACT. They will apply the new techniques interpreted here at their own colleges and at others in their region. Represented are educators from all sections of the United States.

Mental Health Centers aid people of state

Iowa's 14 Mental Health Centers 52 per cent of the financial support for the centers comes from local tax funds, with the remainder coming from fees, gifts, community funds, and federal grants.

STATISTICS from the 12 established Mental Health Centers show that the number of new patients served per year increased from 1,058 in fiscal year 1950-51 to 2,763 in 1962-63. Counting patients who were continuing treatment, the total number of persons served by the centers in 1962-63 was 5,441.

In 75 per cent of the cases treated, the patients were reported to be improved.

A total of 42,820 interviews with individual patients were conducted by personnel of the centers.

ABOUT 33 PER CENT of all patients were diagnosed as having personality disorders, Psychoneurotic disorders and transient situational personality disorders each accounted for 25 per cent of the diagnoses. Twelve per cent, or a little above the national average, were diagnosed as psychotic disorders.

Some 43 per cent of the patients seen were children. Boys from 5 to 14 accounted for 16 per cent of all patients seen, while girls in that group made up only 7 per cent. In age groups above 15, more girls than boys were seen at the centers.

Almost one-third of the patients are self-referred or come at the prompting of family or friends. The majority of others are referred by private physicians, 29 per cent; schools, 14 per cent; health and welfare agencies, 14 per cent and the courts, 5 per cent.

Another fiery suicide leads to greater Viet Nam turmoil

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — South Viet Nam, plagued by Communist guerrillas and religious unrest plunged deeper into civil turmoil as word spread Thursday that a Buddhist nun had burned herself to death — the fourth such ritual suicide in two months.

Reliable informants said Nun Dieu Nien set fire to herself in the market place of Ninh Hoa, a coastal village 200 miles northeast of Saigon. She was the first woman fire-suicide.

Three monks had previously taken their lives that way in the Buddhist effort to focus world attention on their demands for civil and religious rights they claim President Ngo Dinh Diem's Government denies them.

President Diem and his family are Roman Catholics. The fiery suicides have taken place in four important centers of South Viet Nam — Saigon, the ancient capital of Hue, Ninh Hoa and Phan Thiet, 100 miles northeast of Saigon.

Communist Viet Cong guerrillas control the hinterland around those cities and they are reported exploiting antigovernment sentiments stirred up by the suicides and stringent government action against Buddhist demonstrations.

The Buddhist campaign has immensely complicated the struggle against Communist guerrillas. Buddhists, who make up about 70 per cent of South Viet Nam's population, claim they are discriminated against.

170 are arrested after St. Louis demonstration

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill. (AP) — City, state and county police arrested 170 Negroes, most of them teen-agers, while breaking up a noisy racial demonstration at the First National Bank Thursday.

Officers charged the adults arrested with assembling unlawfully in a mob form.

Two Negroes were taken on stretchers to a hospital after their appearance at the police station and another was charged with interfering with justice.

Those treated were identified as Homer Randolph, head of the East St. Louis chapter of the Congress of Racial Equality, and the Rev. C. B. Malloy, a demonstrator. They were not believed seriously hurt. They claimed they were struck while scuffling with police.

Clyde Jordan, editor of the East Side Monitor, a weekly newspaper aimed at Negro readers, was charged in a warrant with "unlawfully obstructing justice."

Patrolman Jack McNutt charged Jordan with slugging him twice while he was carrying a demonstrator. Jordan contended McNutt hit him.

The demonstrators were released on bond.

About twice as many demonstrators as paraded peacefully Wednesday before five downtown financial institutions sat or lay down on the bank floor to completely cover the lobby.

Two men charged in train holdup

LONDON (AP) — More loot from Britain's great train robbery turned up Thursday night, and two men were formally charged with helping to stage the $7-million holdup.

Police said the new find was discovered at Mooround, near the seaside resort of Bournemouth. The size of the cache was not disclosed.

The men were identified as Roger John Cowdery and William Boal, both Londoners.

The charge accused them of being concerned "with others unknown" in the pre-dawn raid on the Glasgow-London mail train a week ago.

A man and two women were also charged with receiving more than $2,520 in stolen banknotes.

They were identified as Mrs. Rene Boal of the London same address as William Boal, and Mary and Alfred Pilgrim.

The five were arrested in raids carried out by police Thursday and late Wednesday night in operations extending to Bournemouth.

They were brought to police headquarters at Aylesbury in Buckinghamshire — the county where the train was ambushed — and spent the day under close interrogation.

After the long grilling, a police spokesman said no more arrests were expected imminently.

Wednesday night police found about $280,000 in two cars at Bournemouth and captured two of the men after a street battle. The two women and the other man were arrested in London.

The Bournemouth pair were caught after police received a tip the two had stopped a woman in the street and asked about renting lodgings and a garage, offering to pay three months rent in advance.

When police arrived the two put up a struggle in the streets.

Later two cars and a truck were seized. Each is estimated to have yielded up to $140,000 in currency.

'Smile' before arrest

One demonstrator in protests at St. Louis Thursday, which erupted into violence, seems almost happy as a policeman lifts him from the floor prior to his arrest. The incidents began when several arrested pickets failed to respond to officers requests to enter police headquarters. About 170 were arrested.

Father Clark, 62, 'Hoodlum Priest', Dies of heart attack

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP) — The Rev. Charles Dismas Clark died of a heart attack Thursday.

His death was a major tragedy to normally unemotional ex-convicts at his rehabilitation center, Dismas House.

"What will happen to us now? Nobody can take his place," an elderly, heavily tattooed convicted robber asked of no one in particular.

Father Clark, 62, who was the subject of the film, "The Hoodlum Priest," had helped an estimated 3,500 ex-convicts toward rehabilitation.

The news brought to a virtual standstill redecorating work on the "Half-Way House" for criminals trying to go straight. They had been preparing for the Oct. 13 fourth anniversary of Dismas House, which the priest established.

The controversial Jesuit priest, who gained national fame for his work with criminals, entered the hospital three weeks ago. He had planned to leave it this weekend.

Yanks use slam to beat Red Sox, 10-2

BOSTON (AP)—New York blended a grand slam and a two-run homer by John Blanchard, two costly Boston errors and Stan Williams' steady pitching for a 10-2 victory over the Red Sox Thursday.

Blanchard's grand slammer climaxed a five-run opening inning off loser Earl Wilson.

Boston shortstop Ed Bressoud in the eighth inning and third baseman Frank Malzone in the sixth committed miscues which let in runs by the American League leaders.

Right-hander Wilson posted his sixth victory of the season after spinning a six-hitter.

Versatile Tony Kubek became the latest in a long list of New York Yankee ailing Thursday when he was pulled out of the lineup before the Boston game because of a painful right ankle and foot.

Kubek was taken to Santa Maria Hospital, where X-rays showed no broken bones. His return to the line-up was described as a "day to day proposition."

Giants whip Cincy, 6-3, with 4 in 5th

CINCINNATI (AP)—A key punt single by streaking Jim Davenport and Willie Mays' two-run single in a four-run fifth inning carried the second-place San Francisco Giants to a 6-3 triumph over fourth-place Cincinnati Thursday night.

The Giants victory left the defending National League champions three games behind the first-place Los Angeles Dodgers, 7-5 winners at Milwaukee.

In the decisive fifth, Harvey Kuenn drove in the first run with a single before Davenport dropped a bunt toward third and beat it into to load the bases. It was his third hit of the game and his fifth straight.

Joe Nuxhall then hit Willie McCovey with a pitch, forcing in a run, and Mays wrapped it up with his single through short.

Tom Haller added his ninth home run of the season for the Giants and Vada Pinson hit his fifteenth for Cincinnati.

Jack Sanford was the winner, evening his record at 12-12, with relief help from Billy Hoelt in the sixth.

Minnesota crushes Baltimore, 13-3

MINNEAPOLIS-ST. PAUL (AP)—Rookie Jimmie Hall slashed three hits, including his 20th home run, and drove in five runs to support Lee Stange's nine-hit pitching as Minnesota crushed Baltimore 13-3 Thursday night.

Hall's homer total matched the club record for a left-handed batter, set by Mickey Vernon in 1954 when the team was in Washington.

Other key Twins' blows were Hall's two-run single in the sixth and solo homers by Don Mincher in the second and Bob Allison in the seventh. It was Mincher's 13th, Allison's 26th.

New Jersey pro shoots 66 to lead Insurance City Open

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP)—Wes Ellis of West Caldwell, N.J., shot a five-under-par 66 Thursday for the opening day lead in the $40,000 Insurance City Open (ICO) Golf Tournament, but he can't afford to rest comfortably.

Right behind him were Bill Casper of Apple Valley, Calif., back on the PGA circuit after a three-month lapse because of an injured left hand, and Jerry Pittman of Tulsa, Okla., Casper posted a 67, and Pittman 68.

They were not far ahead of the field, either. Close behind were 13 others including Bob Goaly, the 1962 ICO champion; Art Wall Jr., who lost the sudden-death playoff to Goaly last year; Doug Ford, Tony Lema, George Bayer and Lionel and Jay Hebert.

While 27 in the field of 150 shattered par on the 35-36-71 Wethersfield Country Club Course, two of the nation's top pros, Jack Nicklaus and Julius Boros, came in with mediocre performances.

Nicklaus, the PGA and Master's champion, shot a 73. Boros, U.S. Open titleholder from Connecticut, posted a 74.

Boros was annoyed to the point where he showed a rare display of temperment at the 10th hole. He dug his iron into the ground after a poor second shot.

The 23-year-old Nicklaus joked about his round after he had finished. He said the 6,515-yard layout offered no advantage for his long shots, and that he should not be a favorite to win this 72-hole tournament.

The 43-year-old Boros, a sentimental favorite who has never won the ICO but would like to before the home folks, finished before noon and quickly disappeared.

Ellis shot five birdies in his excellent round. He took 31 putts. The 31-year-old former University of Texas medical student has won $7,609 officially in 13 starts this year. The top prize here is $6,400.

Casper, 32, was pleased with his comeback in which he picked up four birdies. He said it was "nice to be back."

The 26-year-old Pittman collected three birdies in his round.

Conceived by Arthur B. Modell, president of the Cleveland Browns, the Giants and Lions meet in the 4:30 p.m. (CST), opener and the Browns and Colts start the second game about 7 p.m.

The record attendance at a professional football game here was 82,872 on Nov. 6, 1960, when the Browns played the Giants.

Don Zimmer, who played with Roebuck for the Los Angeles Dodgers early this season, drove in two runs for the Senators and scored one. Washington outfielder Jim King slammed his 20th homer with the bases empty.

With the batter tied 4-4, Larry Osborne batted for Roebuck in the eighth and hit a bloop double to left. Osborne took third on an infield out and scored on Phillips' fly to left.

Testimony completed in case against Post

Butts returns to stand as final witness

ATLANTA (AP)—Testimony was completed Thursday in the trial of Wally Butts' $10 million libel suit against Curtis Publishing Co. because of a magazine article charging that Butts helped rig a football game.

Closing arguments by attorneys were set for today and Monday. The climax came at the ninth day of the trial which resulted from a Saturday Evening Post article charging that Butts and Coach Paul (Bear) Bryant of Alabama rigged last fall's Alabama-Georgia game.

The stocky Butts, who led the Georgia Bulldogs to their first bowl game, returned to the stand as the final witness.

His attorney asked him about testimony of university officials who had said Butts' character was bad. Butts was asked if the testimony he had given, denying the charges, was the truth.

"That is the truth, sir," Butts replied.

Testimony of a Chicago beer distributor, Frank Scoby, was read to the jury Thursday. Scoby's testimony was taken last month in Chicago.

Scoby said he had bet heavily on football games six years ago but never received inside team information from Butts.

Earlier, Judge Lewis R. Morgan told the jury the trial could not be completed this week. Indications were the 12 men would begin deliberations Monday.

Scoby said Butts, whom he had known about 15 years, was a close personal friend. But he said nothing of his gambling.

How much did you bet? he was asked.

"I think approximately $50,000 over the entire season."

The largest single wager on a game?

"Probably $2,000."

Scoby said Butts had visited with him socially in Chicago and New York about six or seven times last year.

Scoby said he did not remember specifically a call from Butts in Birmingham last Sept. 22, the day of the Georgia-Alabama game which The Post said was rigged.

Scoby said he did remember talking to Joe Sargent of Lakeland, Fla., about a business deal. Butts has testified he placed the call that day for Sargent.

Scoby said Butts often asked advice on business ventures, including small loan companies and Florida orange groves. He said he arranged a $6,000 loan for Butts at a Chicago bank in early 1962.

Koufax fails in bid for 19th, but Dodgers beat Braves, 7-5

MILWAUKEE (AP)—The Milwaukee Braves knocked out Sandy Koufax in the first inning Thursday, but the Los Angeles Dodgers came back to salvage the finale of a three-game series, 7-5. The National League leaders broke a 5-5 tie with two runs in the seventh.

A double by Ron Fairly which took a high bounce over third baseman Denis Menke's head was the key blow in the Dodger's winning rally. It followed a walk to Al Ferrara and sent loser Hank Fischer to the showers.

Bob Tiefenauer, veteran knuckle baller called up from Toronto, made his debut with the Braves as Fischer's successor. John Roseboro drove in the lead run with a sacrifice fly, then Maury Willis singled in another run.

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Six singles, a walk and an error added up to a seven-run fourth inning for the Detroit Tigers and sent them surging to an 11-1 victory over the Kansas City Athletics Thursday.

The Tigers had 15 hits and the Athletics eight but there were only two extra base hits, both of them doubles. Bill Bruton, Don Wert and Dick McAuliffe all had three hits apiece for the Tigers.

Phils take 5th from Chicago

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Tony Taylor's two-run triple and a run-producing double by Johnny Callison highlighted a four-run inning uprising that gave the Philadelphia Phillies a 4-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs Thursday night.

The triumph, the Phillies third straight come-from-behind decision over the Cubs, hopped Philadelphia over Chicago into fifth place in the tight National League pennant race.

An error by first baseman Ernie Banks opened the door to four unearned runs for the Phillies, who routed an old nemesis, right-hander Bob Buhl.

Buhl, a big winner this season against the Phillies, was sailing along with a 3-0 shutout until the eighth.

Trainer Explains thorough physicals prevent injuries

SPIRIT LAKE (AP)—A thorough physical examination by a doctor is the best way to prevent injury and fatigue among high school football players, Iowa State Trainer Ray (Brick) Bickerstaff said Thursday.

Speaking to more than 300 coaches attending the 23rd annual Iowa high school coaching clinic, Bickerstaff said:

"Research has shown that the first three or four weeks is the most injury-prone period for gridgers, so extreme caution should be taken during this period. No youngster should ever be allowed to take part in workouts until he has been given full clearance following a complete physical examination by a doctor."

There's no doubt about it: We pamper our youngsters too much nowadays. They ride when they should walk. They sit when they should be moving. They watch when they should be participating.

And all this inactivity is bad for them. Indeed, most leading heart specialists agree that today's inactive, unfit youngsters are likely to be candidates later on for diseases of the heart and blood vessels, overweight, and other disorders that feed on an easy-going existence.

What better reason is there for parents to urge school officials to strengthen physical education programs—for every girl and every boy? Yet, 60% of our schools have no daily activity program.

Local school officials will be responsive to your interest. Get in touch with them. The sooner, the better.

For information about a program that's easy to carry out and that's improved the fitness of many youngsters, write to The President's Council on Physical Fitness, Washington 25, D.C.
