More Rain

Baltimore is experiencing its worst drought in memory. The city is running out of water and the water crisis is likely to continue for several weeks. Mayor J. M. Brown, who has declared a state of emergency, said that the city is in a "critical situation." The city has been without water for several days and the situation is expected to continue. The city is relying on water from the Potomac River to supply its needs.

Endorse council action on Shaff Plan

The CITY COUNCIL'S action on going on record supporting a proposal to keep the Daily Iowan Tuesday night might be a bit unusual yet justifiable.

The Council voted 4-1 to favor the defeat of the plan, after a short debate on why they did not like the plan. Max Tocce, author of the motion, Fred Dodder and Mrs. Thomas Lewis, pointed out they felt the Shaff Plan was unfair to the urban areas and as council members, Iowa's sixth-largest city, they felt they should speak up.

Mr. Dodder said Wednesday that he felt the Council had an obligation to inform the citizens of what is facing them.

"I was glad that the motion came up because it gave the Council a chance to do its routine work and in turn let them that it is unpopular with the Council.

The way to make the people aware of an issue was viewed as somewhat unusual by Frank M. Reis, associate professor of political science. Reis said he had heard of any motion of which he was aware.

However, Reis said that he pictured the action had only favor to be favorable to the voters. If the Council felt that it is the interest of Iowa City to defeat the plan, the City Council is certainly justified in doing this.

As in any debate on legislation, both sides argued we feel that it shows a progressive and dynamic attitude on the part of the Council. The Council is demonstrated in the fact that they are not afraid to stand up and be counted in favor of what they approve.

The type of action should not stop with the Shaff Plan. Any type of action that involves city government and when those discussing the issue are by the people across the state. Of course, once councilmen should never go out to perform the political function, but on issues that definitely affect the interests of city, councilmen have an obligation to express themselves.

United States freeing economic muscles

Of kings and athletes

Football is a sport to some. To others it is big business. To many it is a hobby to be enjoyed and learned. The athletes are players given for practicing and participating in this rigorous activity just as the usual student is given special training and sometime guidance. Athletes here are placed in special "football dormitories" away from the rest of the campus. The dormitories contain centrally controlled rooms and conditioning, rest, and a well-catered tennis, recreation and football facilities.

The type of action that is altogether unusual, yet at the same time strange.

The first game of the season which was to be played should be placed by professionals hired by the school or that football players should be given a special status apart from the school's implementation or professional athletes. That suggestion, however, has usually over been ignored. A few schools have given "blue" cards to students. At the University of Alabama the idea seems to have been accepted by head football coach Paul Bryant, who was the only recent new of the new trend of the four.

What does all this have to do with NU? Nothing really. There are no athletes here that have been accepted by Big Ten University. We hope it stays that way and Iowans continue to attend good football teams without building their special places to live in. But the pictures will not come without making a petition. If they force a "university" elevation severe.

Brandt: Passer And Field General

The Badgers are ranked second in the nation after three straight seasons and their former quarterback, now a freshman, is looking to be a star.

The Wisconsin team in Big Ten play, until now, has been the power of the Big Ten with a running attack that broke the NFL record of 1947 with a victory over the Browns.

The brand new passers now in the secondary are the key to the offense.
