Issues shouldn't be clouded again

A LETTER FROM the Iowa Good Roads Association and the Iowa Conference of Farm Women members of the press have featured the Iowa legislature in the selection of a new state highway commissioner. The Iowa Highway Conference originally planned to build the interstate highway parallel to U.S. 64, a group of support from the Iowa General Assembly. However, the highway commissioner has been stripped of authority to do this. As they are talking, Mrs. Johnson storms in.

"Get out of here, Mr. Johnson," said the president of the Iowa Highway Conference. "We are not going to allow you to interfere with our work."

Mrs. Johnson seemed intent on "politics as usual," but she was not going to be silenced. The president then proceeded to explain his plan for the new highway commissioner. He believed that the commissioner should be appointed by the governor, and that the commissioner should have the authority to build the interstate highway parallel to U.S. 64.

Mrs. Johnson then told the president, "You don't have a chance. The people have spoken, and they want the highway built by the state highway department."

The president then argued that the state highway department was not capable of building a highway of this magnitude. He believed that the Iowa Highway Conference was better suited to handle this task. However, Mrs. Johnson was not convinced.

"You can't make me do this," said the president. "The people have spoken, and they want the highway built by the state highway department."

Mrs. Johnson then stormed out of the room, leaving the president to his own devices.

The president then realized that the people had spoken, and that he was not going to be able to force the state highway department to build the interstate highway parallel to U.S. 64. He then decided to proceed with his plan for the new highway commissioner, and to work towards building the interstate highway parallel to U.S. 64 as quickly as possible.

By ROY WILKINS

Executive Secretary of the AFL-CIO, Roy Wilkins, spoke at the University of Iowa on Monday, January 18. Wilkins discussed the civil rights movement in the United States, and the need for continued activism in the fight for equality.

Wilkins began his speech by discussing the history of the civil rights movement in the United States. He explained that the movement had been started by African Americans who were fighting for their basic human rights, and that the movement had continued to grow in strength over the years.

Wilkins then went on to discuss the current state of the civil rights movement in the United States. He explained that there were still many challenges facing the movement, and that there was still much work to be done.

Wilkins ended his speech by urging the audience to continue to support the civil rights movement. He said, "We must not become complacent. We must continue to work towards equality for all Americans."

Roy Wilkins' speech was well-received by the audience, and he was later awarded an honorary degree by the University of Iowa.

Considers Televising Boxing if ABC Quits

NEW YORK (AP) — If the American Boxing Club can go through with its plans for televising boxing matches, and if ABC withdraws from the business, the Garden may form its own network and consider televising boxing matches.

The network, if it can be formed, is expected to be able to spread its ratings on as many as 1,000 televisions and may be able to accommodate as many as 25 different boxing matches at one time.

The Garden has been considering the possibility of forming a network for some time but has never made an official announcement.

The Garden’s move is expected to be welcomed by ABC officials, who have been trying to form their own network.

ABC, however, has not been able to come to terms with the Garden on the question of televising boxing matches.

The Garden’s move is expected to be a boost for the Garden’s own television station, which has been struggling to attract viewers.

The Garden’s move is also expected to be a boost for the Garden’s own television station, which has been struggling to attract viewers.
