Immediate Action Needed on Housing

Why Live Where Unsafe, Unhealthy Conditions Exist?

By CURT SYLVESTER
Staff Writer
(Third in a series)

More than 2,800 SUI students, now live in off-campus housing. Some of this housing is unsafe and unhealthy.

According to figures from the Off-Campus Housing Office, 2,045 students over 21 years old are living in housing which is not inspected by the University. Part of these students live in Coralville or rural Iowa City but most of them live in Iowa City, in many cases within walking distance of the campus.

An additional 793 married students live in un-inspected housing, bringing the total to 2,838 students living in unregulated dwellings which are officially considered "unapproved" by the University.

BEING "UNAPPROVED" does not, in itself, mean that housing is sub-standard. It does, however, mean that the house or apartment has not been inspected by the University Health Department and, in the absence of an enforceable city housing code, has not necessarily met the standards of health and safety recognized by state laws and many city codes.

Since this "unapproved" housing is not inspected, unless done specifically at the request of the owner or a tenant, there is no accurate way of computing the number of students living in sub-standard dwellings.

However, the conditions encountered by Daily Iowan reporters and the conditions described by Frank Kilpatrick, Director of the Inspection Division of the University Health Department, observed even in some housing which has applied for University certifications, illustrate clearly that much of the housing is sub-standard.

Kilpatrick listed several reasons given by students for living in poor housing conditions. The excuse most commonly given is that the students can't afford anything better.

PROBABLY THE MOST important and most critical factor in causing a student to live in the sub-standard conditions is the shortage of suitable housing near the campus. Kenneth Cook, Off-Campus Housing Assistant, said that there is always a greater demand for "top rate" houses than are available, either "approved" or "unapproved."

This shortage of suitable housing, already serious, will probably become more serious in the next few years. Robert R. Kennedy, manager of the Dormitory Assignment Office, said that although the dorms have not yet been filled for next fall, he is sure they will be.

At that time the capacity for the men's dorms will be 1,961, the same as it is now, and with the utilization of the Burge Hall Annex, the women's dormitories will house 2,680 students. Any overflow of students from the dormitories will be faced with the prospects of finding housing in an all ready over-crowded area.

Another reason cited by Kilpatrick for students living in low grade housing is "personal choice." The insufficient facilities, or in some cases, the complete lack of facilities, create for some students an exciting or romantic atmosphere in which to live.

ON SOME OCCASIONS, Kilpatrick said, the student lives in the low standards because he is unable to recognize good housing conditions. He cited, in particular, the case of a foreign student living in a sub-standard basement at a very low cost.

The student lived in this basement partly because he was not aware of better housing which might be available and also because he thought that anything better would be too expensive.

Some students, while they could afford the cost of better housing, do not have cars to drive to the campus from the outlying regions of Iowa City and consequently must live in sub-standard tenements close to the campus.

Another outstanding reason that students must accept the poor conditions is that owners and managers of the modern houses or apartments prefer to rent to married couples or to older persons. Problems of upkeep on furnishings and equipment, too much noise and shortage of parking facilities are some of the reasons landlords use in limiting the number of students living in their dwellings.

Whatever the causes of students being forced to live in unsatisfactory conditions, the waiting lists of students wishing to enter furnished, and in many cases unfurnished, apartments, indicated that SUI students would live in better housing if it was available.

In Viet Nam—

U.S. Is Trying To Save Life of Former Leader

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Henry Cabot Lodge said Wednesday the United States has been trying to save the life of a brother of the late President Ngo Dinh Diem who is condemned to die by this week-end on the guillotine.

The condemned man is Ngo Dinh Can, 53, former overlord of central Viet Nam who sought asylum at the U.S. consulate in Hue after the No. 1 coup that led to the death of the President and another brother, Ngo Dinh Nhu.

The U.S. ambassador denied widespread reports that the United States had handed Can over to the military junta after flying him to Saigon, 400 miles south of Hue.

"I Can had sought refuge at the American Embassy in Saigon I would have given him asylum, as I did when the Buddhist monks sought refuge under Diem's Government," Lodge said.

"But Can went to the American consulate in Hue and consulates have no authority to grant asylum. The Government took him from us and it had a perfect right to do so."

Lodge said the United States first tried to save Can's life by offering to fly him from Hue to Manila, but the Vietnamese Government refused permission and he was brought to Saigon instead.

He was convicted by a nine-man court here April 22 and sentenced

In Dispute with Moscow—

Red China Admits Congo Terrorism

TOKYO (AP) — Red China virtually acknowledged Wednesday it is deeply involved in the terrorism that has swept the eastern Congo and brought death to American and other foreign missionaries.

When the terror was at its height in Kwilu Province last January, the Congo government announced it had uncovered documents proving that the rampaging rebel warriors had Red Chinese support.

ON THE other hand, some American missionaries beaten by the guerrillas reported that the terrorists shouted "Moscow."

In any case, the official Peking People's Daily brought the Congo into the dispute with Moscow over the best road to world domination. It praised the Congo terrorists for resorting to violence rather than Soviet-style peaceful co-existence.

The Soviet Union is making its own pitch for influence in Africa. President Ahmed Ben Bella of Algeria in Moscow heard his nation praised Wednesday by President Leonid Brezhnev as an inspiration for other nations seeking independence. Premier Khrushchev sailed from Yalta for an official visit to President Gamal Abdel Nasser's United Arab Republic.

FBI agents said the body was that of David Wulff, who last had been seen when he left his home in Willingboro, N.J., to attend a cleanup project in his second-grade classroom. He apparently never reached the school.

The FBI said a search of the area was launched after a check of the itinerary of Joseph Francis Bryan Jr., 25, arrested in New Orleans last week on a charge of kidnaping a 10-year-old boy who was found dead.

Bryan, who had been listed as one of the FBI's 10 most wanted criminals, was arraigned Monday and ordered removed to Charleston, S.C., in connection with the kidnaping and death of John David Robison of Mt. Pleasant, S.C.

The Robison boy disappeared from his home Feb. 27 and his body was found in a shallow grave March 31 near Hallandale, Fla.

The FBI said Bryan's travels were checked through credit card purchases.

USSR Announces New Aid Program for Algeria

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union announced Thursday a massive new aid program for Algeria in what appeared its biggest effort to influence that formerly French-ruled part of North Africa.

A long-term credit of $125.5 million and other major assistance for Algeria were announced here as Soviet Premier Khrushchev sailed for the United Arab Republic.

Nothing came to the surface, the spokesman said.

Communist Viet Cong guerrillas sank the U.S. converted aircraft carrier Card with an explosive charge last Saturday.

The Swenson arrived in Saigon Monday. American sources said the Swenson has his sonar detectors operating 24 hours a day while in Saigon.

Goldwater's victory assures him 32 first-ballot votes from Indiana's GOP convention delegation, to be selected later.

Welsh, who got about 368,000 votes to 170,000 for Wallace, will take the state's 51 Democratic delegate votes to the convention for Johnson.

But most of the attention seemed to be focused on Wallace's frank bid for Northern support in opposition to the Johnson administration's civil rights bill now before the Senate.

Wallace's claim that his showing — almost 30 per cent of the Democratic votes in Indiana — was

Jury Amendment Killed by Senate

4 Roll Calls Needed To Kill Morton Plan

Long Freeze on Rights Action Ended
By Senate Leaders

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, after 49 days of talk, took its first vote Wednesday night on an amendment to the civil rights bill and rejected, on a dramatic series of four roll-calls, a jury trial amendment opposed by the bill's sponsors.

The final tally was 46-45. This had the effect of confirming an earlier 45-45 roll call. Two other parliamentary votes intervened.

THE LONG freeze on action was cracked under an informal agreement between the Senate's leadership and Southern foes of the measure.

It pointed to the realization of predictions by the bill's sponsors that their own jury trial proposal would eventually be accepted.

A vote on the leadership proposal could be a long way off — or soon — depending on how many parliamentary roadblocks the Southerners want to bring into play.

But no votes are expected Thursday or Friday while several senators accompany President Johnson on visits to their states in the Appalachian region.

HOWEVER, Johnson himself put the Senate on notice that he is hoping for final passage of the bill by the end of this month or early next month.

At his news conference Wednesday he said if Congress doesn't finish its major work, including the civil rights bill, he would seriously consider calling the legislators back after the Republican National Convention in mid-July and, if necessary, after the Democratic convention in mid-August.

The defeated amendment was offered by Sen. Thurston B. Morton (R-Ky.). It would have provided for jury trials in all contempt of court cases arising out of the civil rights bill.

MORTON'S proposal was offered as a modification of an amendment proposed by Sen. Herman E. Tamm (D-Ga.) to provide for jury trials in all contempt cases, not just civil rights, except where contempt is committed in court.

The amendment that the bill's sponsors are pushing is one by Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield of Montana and Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois. It would be confined to civil rights cases, as Morton proposed, but would guarantee trials only where the penalty might exceed 30 days in jail or a $300 fine.

As the Senate continued debating, leaders of both parties held their second closed meeting off the floor to work out an agreement on which amendments they will try to push through. The session was attended, as was Tuesday's, by Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy.

Highway Commission Okays Corridor Report

AMES (AP) — The Iowa Highway Commission Wednesday approved the corridor report for the Cedar Rapids Expressway.

Commission's Urban Engineer C. B. Anderson said Cedar Rapids has been concerned with the need of an arterial street, north and south, through the city.

If No Rights Action—

Johnson May Ask Congress' Return

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson raised the possibility Wednesday he might call Congress back to Washington if it doesn't act on his civil rights and other priority bills before adjourning for the national party conventions.

The President told an extraordinary news conference on the White House south lawn: "Some cynical people think there may be a deliberate slowdown in the Senate."

"If there should be that kind of a slowdown," he continued, "I would seriously consider coming back here, of course, after the Republican convention in July and, if necessary, coming back after the Democratic convention in August."

HE STRESSED hope the lawmakers would pass the bills he has asked them, but if they don't, "I will seriously consider calling them back to vote them down or up. I will cross that bridge when I get to it."

The news conference was extraordinary in that it included wives and husbands of White House reporters, as well as their children — hundreds of them. Counting reporters, there were 1,000 persons present.

Johnson spent a large part of the time reeling off statistics about how well off he said the country is, and how it can stay prosperous.

HE SAID Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara will leave Friday for mutual defense talks in West Germany. He will go on from Bonn to Saigon, to take another look at the situation in South Viet Nam.

It will be recalled that the secretary was there as late as last March. The war against the Communists in Viet Nam had taken an apparent turn for the worse at that time.

Johnson said McNamara first would fly to West Germany on Friday for talks on cooperative research and development and other defense matters.

There was no indication from Johnson how long McNamara would be in Germany and when he would go on to Saigon.

Huxley: New Vision Found In Humanism

Sir Julian Huxley, scientist, philosopher and world leader, called the Humanist Revolution one in thought rather than one directed against any single object.

Humanism is concerned not with the state or a supernatural being but rather with the human species, Huxley said.

He addressed a capacity audience Wednesday evening in the Main Lounge of the Iowa Memorial Union.

Huxley described the world today as a place where man seeks to destroy himself — where religion is losing its grip and population is exploding. Aside from this negativity, man is gaining "a new knowledge of his place as integrated in time."

HUXLEY reiterated the evolutionary element occurring in biology, social structures and thought.

He cited the main phases of biological evolution: Matter became self-producing and later natural selection entered in. Improved varieties appeared from biological evolution.

Evolution is directional and automatic, Huxley said. "Natural selection is a determiner and not a higher being."

The real breakthrough is in the area of thought. Progress, he said, is not inevitable but possible only if directed by minds with fixed goals.

IN THE AREA of thought there evolved a new pattern based on science and knowledge. In this new thought all phenomena are natural, he said. "Religions are just as natural as plants or animals. There is no break between mind and matter — between natural and supernatural."

The major problems of the new vision called humanism include nuclear war. Huxley said it is inevitable that in the end the world should be in peace. Men should find areas where nations are able to cooperate.

Another problem is that there are 160,000 people born per day. "It is not the absolute number but the rate of increase that is so terrifying," he said.

"OUR RECREATION, solitude and natural resources such as coal and water are being threatened. The parks are overvisited and sights cannot be seen due to the sightseers," Huxley stated.

The gap between the rich and poor countries is widening, Huxley said. "The poor with higher birth rates must use their resources to feed babies rather than industrialize."

Huxley emphasized the need for research in birth control and family planning to help the situation.

22.9 FOR GAS—
The gasoline price-war brought prices to 24.9 cents a gallon for regular and 28.9 cents a gallon for premium at most major brand stations by noon Wednesday.

Several independent dealers offered regular gasoline for 22.9 and premium at 24.9.

THAT RIVER AIN'T SAFE!

Red cross Water Safety Chairman William D. VanAtta emphasized the dangers of swimming in the Iowa River in a letter to the City Council.

VanAtta said that the use of the river for swimming "is hazardous at best." He added that the water is unsanitary, the bottom is littered with cans, broken glass and debris, underwater visibility is limited to a few inches and there is no provision for immediate emergency assistance.

He asked that the council pass an ordinance prohibiting swimming in the river within the city limits.

Air Force Plane Crashes; 4 Dead

FORT WALTON, Fla. (AP) — Four Air Force commandos were killed Wednesday and four others were injured when a twin-engine plane crashed at Hurlburt Air Force Field near here.

The aircraft was on a routine commando training mission when it crashed.

Cause of the accident was not immediately known.

Names of the men involved in the crash of the C123 are being withheld pending notification of next of kin.

Chimney Crashes In But Phi Delt Escapes

David Marshall, B3, Newton, narrowly escaped serious injury Wednesday morning when a large section of the chimney of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity house crashed through the ceiling of his room and landed three feet from his bed.

Later, a workman from Noel's Tree Service narrowly missed injury when helping to remove a tree from the house's roof.

THE CHIMNEY was toppled by the tree, blown over by Wednesday's 45 mile per hour winds.

Marshall said he was awakened by the sound of the tree hitting the roof, and jumped under the bed.

He said that seconds later pieces of slate and wood from the roof and bricks from the chimney fell all over the bed.

The chimney section lodged in the ceiling of the room below Marshall's, causing superficial damage.

DAVE BOWMAN, A4, Franklin

Lakes, N.J., president of the fraternity, estimated the damage at approximately $5,000.

After attaching steel cables to the tree, workmen from Noel's Tree Service attempted to lift it off the house by using a winch truck parked in the front yard of the Sigma Pi fraternity house.

The trunk was too heavy and the truck rolled on its side onto the front porch of the Sigma Pi house.

A wrought iron railing which circles the porch cut completely through the cab of the truck, narrowly missing the driver's head.

After righting the truck, the workmen finished removing the tree.

Need immediate action to improve housing

THERE IS A NEED for immediate action to improve rental housing in the downtown area of Iowa City. A large portion of the rooms and apartments, which students call "home," are despicable and barely livable.

Rats, cockroaches and other pests infest some of the apartments. Dirt often gathers on walls and floors, fire escapes are broken or non-existent, porches and steps are broken and dangerous, bathroom facilities are dirty and broken, the heating and ventilation are sub-standard. The list could go on and on.

A major portion of the blame rests on the shoulders of the landlords. They are the ones who can improve their apartments by systematic cleaning, painting and improvements in the facilities. Some of them, of course, own properties that are beyond the stage of improvement, and these landlords should tear down their units and replace them with newer types of housing — where allowed by zoning ordinances.

Landlords contend that they do not have the funds to make these improvements. We cannot accept this argument. Landlords who operate some of the better apartment houses in the city make continually needed improvements by plowing rental earnings back into their facilities. Furthermore, when one house provides living space for 15 to 20 students at $30 to $50 each per month, it would not be unreasonable to expect a large share of this income to be used for improvements. And this much money could finance sizable improvements.

Other landlords place the blame on the students who live in the apartments. They claim these students refuse to clean their rooms, refuse to carry out the garbage, destroy facilities and get the walls and floors unduly dirty. One landlord has said that after one school year her newly painted apartments will have to be repainted because of student carelessness.

These are legitimate claims in many instances. However, it would seem that the landlord could control this student destruction by enforcing stringent rules about apartment care. Students who fail to obey should be forced to move.

A few landlords contend that students are not forced to live in the apartments and, if the facilities do not meet their approval, they should live elsewhere. This argument is hardly valid. For all practical purposes, students are forced to live in these apartments because there is nothing else available. Student housing in Iowa City is limited and a student wishing the privacy of an apartment may have to take what is available. There are better apartments in the city, but most of the better ones are rented many months in advance of the opening of school and there are too few to take care of even a majority of the students.

Other nice apartments are located on the outskirts of Iowa City or in Coralville and University Heights. For a student without access to a car, he is prohibited from living in these places unless he is willing to walk two or more miles to class each day.

We are not supporting a drive for upper class, Park Avenue type housing. There is nothing wrong with living in old apartments with old furniture. But these apartments should meet housing regulations which call for livable apartments — apartments with workable facilities, proper safety devices, reasonably clean and recently painted rooms and proper heating and ventilation. And, of course, these apartments should be free of rats, bugs and other rodents.

The best way to improve housing is for the landlords to take it upon themselves to bring their apartments to livable standards. Unfortunately, most landlords will not spend the time and money to do so. Thus, it is left up to the City Council to force landlords to take this action — immediate action.

The Ralph McGill column—

Conscience and the admiral

By RALPH MCGILL

WASHINGTON, D.C. — There are two things today which trouble the Navy's conscience. One is the submarine Thresher which disappeared with 129 men aboard on April 10, 1963. The other is a quiet, slender, mild-mannered, gray-haired wisp of a man who is equally at home with the Greek philosophers, the Renaissance titans and nuclear reactors, especially those installed in submarines. There almost certainly would not now be a fleet of more than 20 nuclear-powered Polaris submarines had not the Congress some years ago cut a piece of Navy red tape and retained the admiral when the Navy sought to pass him over and thereby have him dropped from service.

Nothing succeeds like success, and the admiral's unquestioned achievement in the field of nuclear-powered vessels has given his country the mobile deterrent that makes all enemies think twice. Polaris submarines are, in a sense, mobile underwater missile bases.

ON APRIL 17 one of those many reports of committee hearings came off the presses in the Government printing house. There is such a flood of these that few receive more than a casual scanning. This is true of the one of April 17, which is a fairly thick book containing Part Five of the testimony of many organizations and interested individuals in various aspects of the nation's defense weaponry, including bombers, missiles and submarines.

Testimony concerning the lost Polaris submarine Thresher had been made before the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy. The publication of April 17 contained the first release of such testimony, which up to now has been classified. An essential portion of it was given by Admiral Rickover. Only one or two alert reporters dug out what he had to say about lack of individual responsibility being accountable for many of the Navy's technical difficulties and the equally inefficient condition in which much of Navy management in construction is transient.

In the published testimony the admiral said: "It is significant to me how few of the senior people in the responsible management positions at the time of Thresher's loss had anything to do with her basic design. It is rare for an officer both to start and finish a job. For example, during the five to six years encompassed in the design, construction and evaluation of the Thresher, some of the key job changes were approximately as follows: The Portsmouth Naval Shipyard, which was assigned the detail design responsible for the Thresher, had three shipyard commanders, three production officers, five planning officers and three design superintendents. The Bureau of Ships, during this period, had two chiefs of bureau, six or so heads of design division, and three heads of the Submarine Type Desk. Some of the individual bureau technical codes concerned with the Thresher had about four to six changes of management during this same period. Of course, these figures do not include the numerous changes in the subordinate ranks which were made during this period. How can you have individual responsibility on this basis?"

Admiral Rickover then said: "Much of the effort of the Court of Inquiry was directed to finding out who was responsible for the design of the Thresher; who made the fundamental technical decisions; who authorized deviations from plans; who authorized deviation from specifications. The inadequate ballast tank blowing system is a case in point. Who is responsible? With the present Navy system this is an impossible question to answer. The nearest you can come is to say that 'the Navy is responsible.' In other words, all you can do is to point to a collectivity. . . ."

There will almost certainly be further examination into the construction of the Thresher. There is a report in Washington that the Navy censor may have overlooked this part of the testimony when he cleared it for publication. Certainly more questions will now be asked. Who did authorize deviation from plans? Why were there deviations from specifications? Without question, effort will be made to pierce the curtain of collective responsibility and find out why these deviations occurred.

Some months before the loss of the Thresher, Admiral Rickover had stirred controversy by reporting that many of the parts received in Polaris construction did not meet specifications and had to be redone by the Navy at great expense. A new underwater hunt for the Thresher is expected to be made this summer. If it is possible to find enough of the remains to sustain the theory of Admiral Rickover that the hull and the ballast tank blowing system were inadequate, then, as one congressional spokesman said, all hell will break loose.

Literary father of the year

By ART BUCHWALD
BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — We have just been named Literary Father of the Year by the National Father's Day Committee. It is the highest honor any writer in America can receive, just one notch above the Pulitzer Prize, and we're very humble about it. This is how the honor came about. Most Washington newspaper fathers are rarely ever home. In checking down the list, the committee discovered we averaged at least two-and-a-half days a week at home, which was a record for someone in our business. Any newspaperman who sees his kids that often has to be the Father of the Year.

children were so excited, they called us right away.

"You've just been named Father of the Year," our wife said. "I thought you'd like to know."

"I knew I was up for it," we said. "But I was afraid Sonny Liston would beat me out in the finals."

"When are you coming home, Daddy?" our son asked on the extension.

"I must be out another week," we told him. "I have speeches to make all over the country."

"You're always away," he complained.

"That shows how much you know. If I wasn't away so much, I would have never been elected Father of the Year. They don't give these awards to nobodies. They give them to successful persons."

"What's a successful person?"

"That's somebody who is never home."

Our daughter got on the phone. "Are you going to bring us any presents?"

"Of course I am. What kind of a Father of the Year do you take me for?"

"If you come home right now, you don't have to bring any presents," she said.

"I can't come home and you know it. Why can't you kids get anything straight?"

"You don't have to shout at them," our wife said.

"I'm not shouting," we shouted.

"Here I am, trying to make a living, and all I ever get from anyone is when are you coming home?"

Our wife said, "It's not a bad question when you come to think of it."

Stone-throwing could be fun

By DEAN MILLS

A CHANCE for throwing stones (figuratively, we trust) is being offered the University community tonight in a panel examination of the University's attitude toward human rights. The list of speakers is impressive; they should give the University some thought to think about in an area in which (almost) everyone has strong feelings but (almost) no one does anything about them. Panelists will include students

MILLS

"I have a good mind not to go to New York and pick up the award."

"You mean you have to go to New York to get the award?"

"Of course I do. They won't give it to you if you don't show up for the luncheon."

"That means you'll be away again."

"You don't understand. In order to be worthy of the award, you have to earn it. You have to be seen around. People have to get to know you. Who's going to know you're Father of the Year material if you spend all your time with your family?"

Schwengel promotes Week in Washington program

By NEAL RAINS
This year, five SUowans are participating in the Week in Washington program as guests of Congressman Fred Schwengel and Neal Smith. This program, conducted by the Iowa Center for Education in Politics and the Republican and Democratic parties, is to a large extent the brainchild of Congressman Schwengel. Mr. Schwengel was first elected in 1954 to the Eighty-fourth Congress, but even before his election he was interested in creating a program similar to the one that has been developed. Congressman Schwengel discussed the idea with Dr. Robert Ray, then director of the Institute of Public Affairs, and the program was established by the Citizens Clearing House. TEN STUDENTS were selected to participate in the program in 1965. During the "Week's" first few years, Congressman Schwengel served as host annually to ten Iowa college juniors — five from each party. For the past two years, Neal Smith has sponsored six students, while the Schwengels have continued to entertain ten students in their Washington home. Week in Washington interns are given briefings by various Government officials, they attend Congressional and Supreme Court sessions, tour Governmental agencies, visit the National headquarters of the party of their choice, and engage in the usual sightseeing. The evenings are kept free for various forms of entertainment. Participants in the program are selected in February by the advisory board of the Iowa Center for Education in Politics. The internships are limited to residents of Iowa attending a four year institution of higher learning in the state. Selections are based on recommendations from party leaders, the applicants' participation in campus and political activities, and his academic record. THE WEEK in Washington program is only one manifestation of Congressman Schwengel's interest in education. He maintains a legislative research team here at the University composed of four law students and two faculty advisers. This utilization of student research assistants is unique in the congress. The Congressman has also had fourteen political science professors as observers in his office during the past ten years. For the last three years, an SU graduate student has been employed for one year as a legislative assistant by Congressman Schwengel. Two of these three students have been Democrats. Schwengel is known among his colleagues as "Mr. Capitol Hill" for his interest in the history of the District of Columbia. He is currently serving as president of the Capital Historical Society. No one who has ever met the congressman can question his sincerity and dedication to his job. The Congress could well use more men like Fred Schwengel.

SUI Law Review Enhances Prestige

By TOM GERDIS
Staff Writer

Happiness is not being an Iowa Law Review editor — but security is having been one.

The seven-member Iowa Law Review editorial staff feels that the honor of directing this quarterly is more "prestigious" than to have been named to Coif, a national law honor society.

Working on a law review is the best single preparation for law practice, said Willard Boyd, Review adviser and professor in the College of Law. One editor of the 1963-64 Review said that his work on this periodical is more valuable than his class work because there is more problem-solving.

Another emphasized the average amount of money spent on preparing articles for publication in the Iowa Law Review — 200-250 hours.

Legal writing is difficult and time-consuming because each statement and conclusion must be corroborated by a citation from a previous court decision, he said. In its finished form, the legal paper is about half statements and conclusions and half footnotes or citations.

This same editor believes that many law faculty members have no conception of all the long hours required for the editors to check out each sentence in a manuscript submitted for publication. And those faculty who are aware are usually the ones writing for law reviews — they usually come to class unprepared because of the rigorous demands of their writing.

THE IOWA LAW REVIEW has three sections: articles, notes and comments. Articles are by guest authors, usually law school faculty members or other eminent legal authors, and usually occupy the first half of an issue. The notes, 15 to 25 pages, and the comments, five to ten pages, are written by SUI law students and occupy the last half.

Each year the winter issue, planned two years in advance, is devoted to a symposium on one area of law. The late Paul Sayre, professor in the College of Law who passed away in 1959, originated the symposium idea in 1933.

Other law reviews followed his lead. Recent symposia subjects in the Iowa Review include heresy, evidence, guardianship and federal jurisdiction.

During World War II, when there were very few law students, Sayre published symposia rather than not publish the Review at all.

THE SUI REVIEW editors have a free hand in planning, organizing and editing. Student work which stimulates creative ability, thorough research and resourceful legal study receives special emphasis. Students with a B-average or better are invited to write for the Review.

Candidates from the law junior class demonstrating ability in legal writing serve on the student board of editors selected each spring by the outgoing all-senior board for 12 months residence following their appointment. The publication's offices are located in the tower area of the College of Law.

Some 4,000 subscribers throughout the United States and abroad receive the Review, and it participates in an exchange program with more than 200 other reviews, state and federal government agencies, university libraries and 25 foreign countries.

AMONG DISTINGUISHED former SUI Law Review advisers are Willard Wirtz, Secretary of Labor, who served the University from 1937 to 1939, and Frank Strong, 1934-37, now dean of the Ohio State University Law School, Columbus.

The Iowa Law Review was founded in 1915 by Herbert Goodrich, later dean of the University of Pennsylvania Law School. He was subsequently named judge of the Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia.

"The Iowa Law Review is the most important teaching device we have for law students. It compares with the thesis and dissertation in other graduate schools," Boyd said.

As one of this year's editors said, "Working on the student board of editors does not guarantee a job after graduation, but it is a good reference when trying to get an interview."

Mrs. Nora Alice Higby, 66, 21 Koser Ave., was injured in a two-car collision at 10:30 a. m. Wednesday.

She is listed in good condition at Mercy Hospital.

Dining Facilities Open at U-Hospitals

New dining and kitchen facilities for staff members, employees and patients have been opened at University Hospitals. They replace facilities which were part of the original SUI General Hospital, built in 1928.

The new facilities, located at the southwest corner of General Hospital, are part of a Minimal Care Unit currently under construction. The kitchen and dining rooms, the Minimal Care Unit and a Research Building are part of a construction program costing more than $3 million.

Almost a quarter of a million dollars worth of modern equipment has been installed in the dining room and kitchen which will serve 5,500 meals per day to employees and patients in all areas of the SUI Medical Campus.

The new facilities, which are operated by the hospital's department of nutrition, employ 165 to 170 under Dr. Margaret Ohlson, professor of internal medicine.

The dining room will really be three dining rooms when construction is complete. At present, staff and employe dining areas, separated by a cafeteria service unit, are in use.

At the northeast corner of the dining room a coffee shop and glass-walled entrance are being built.

The kitchen, located directly below the dining areas, contains 12,000 square feet and has walls of structural glazed tile and a metal-pan acoustical ceiling.

Pella Watches Weather Maps At Tulip Time

PELLA (U) — Pella folks were keeping an anxious eye on the weather on the eve of the annual Tulip Time Festival which opens Thursday.

They were hoping that scattered showers forecast for the area wouldn't cast a damper on the colorful proceedings.

This community of 5,200 has more than three million tulips which, residents said, should be at their peak for the festival if beating rains and strong winds don't shatter the blooms.

Moeller Discusses 1963 News Trends

The management of news, particularly news coming from the Federal Government, was a main concern for newsmen during 1963, Leslie G. Moeller, director of the SUI School of Journalism, stated in a recent article.

This concern, he said, resulted from the Government's attempt to control news and from newspaper operations which gave special treatment to certain sections of the news.

Moeller's comments on newspapers appear in the International Yearbook for 1963, published by Funk and Wagnall.

In his article, Moeller noted that newspaper executives are examining their approach to news content. There is a trend toward more depth reporting and interpretative writing, he said.

Other trends and developments in newspaper reporting and publication during 1963, as described by Moeller, were increased newspaper circulations despite the 114-day New York and the 129-day Cleveland newspaper strikes, an increase in suburban dailies, emphasis on mechanization and high-speed equipment, increased starting salaries for journalists and stepped-up recruiting efforts to find new young staff members.

While the number of dailies changed only slightly in 1963, suburban dailies continued to increase in number, circulation and advertising volume.

The closing of Hearst's New York Mirror in October, whose 434,743 circulation was second largest in the nation, focused attention again on trends toward consolidation of ownership and reduction of papers in the major cities, he said.

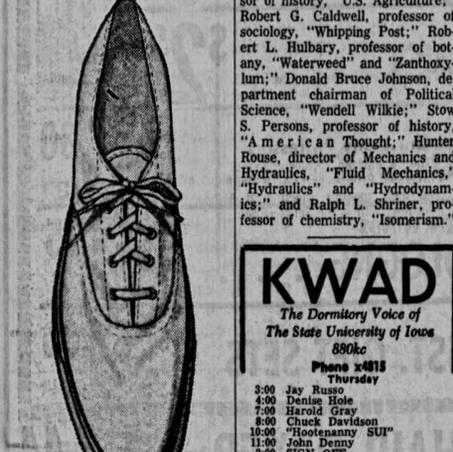

ISU's 'Eggmobile' Will Visit Fairs

A mobile home trailer has been converted into a traveling exhibit of modern poultry merchandising by Iowa State University. The mobile exhibit, which is called the "Eggmobile," will be on display at fairs in Iowa this summer.

The "Eggmobile" illustrates the poultry industry's modern methods of egg handling and merchandising. The exhibit also features a step-by-step process the egg follows from producer to consumer.

New recipes for egg cookery will be given away at the displays. Leonard Z. Eggleton, extension poultry marketing specialist at Iowa State, will answer questions for visitors.

Why pay less than $10 for a canvas shoe?

Frankly, the Sperry Top-Sider canvas shoe is the most expensive you can buy. But it's worth every penny. The famous, exclusive anti-slip safety sole has made it the only shoe for men and women who have boats. (Great tennis tennis, too.) And the rest of the shoe makes it perfect for all casual wear. The non-chafe loose lining, that releases your foot. The double-deep heel cushion. The tailored look. So why pay less, when you could wear fashion's famous Sperry Top-Sider canvas shoe for $9.95?

Junior Press Meets Johnson, Beagles

(EDITOR'S NOTE: One of the youngsters who accepted President Johnson's invitation to attend a news conference on the White House lawn Wednesday was the son of AP's diplomatic affairs writer, John M. Hightower. Here is 13-year-old Jimmy Hightower's account of the event.)

By JAMES A. HIGHTOWER
WASHINGTON (AP)—The President, Mr. Johnson, on Wednesday had a press conference for the children of the reporters who have covered the White House through the years.

When I first arrived at the White House gate my mother and I had to tell our names to get in. Inside the White House grounds I saw a sandtrap for golf practice which I think was put in by President Eisenhower and was also used by President Kennedy.

The area around the yard has red and white tents with tables where punch and cookies were served. I never heard my father talk about having cookies and punch at a press conference.

When the President showed up everybody stood and applauded until he climbed up on the stand.

THE PRESIDENT started speaking and we all listened. He told about events during the week and progress he had made in helping people have jobs and earn money.

I started making notes on some of my school paper and some of the people around me said, "Why is that boy writing down notes?" I was too busy to answer.

When Mr. Johnson finished answering reporters' questions he said he wanted everybody to see his beagles and to like them. Also he said he hoped everybody would like him. He added the hope that the public would keep on liking him and the dogs.

Commission Pushes Finish Of IS No. 80

AMES (AP)—The Iowa Highway Commission acted Wednesday to push completion of Interstate 80 to the Mississippi River and renewed construction of the super-highway in western Iowa.

The commission approved low bids for the final 10 miles of Interstate 80 work in Scott County to bring the highway to the west side of the Mississippi bridge now under construction.

Quad City Construction Co. of Rock Island, Ill., was the apparent low bidder on 8.9 miles of portland cement concrete pavement from a mile east of U.S. 61 to a mile west of the bridge. The company's total bid on the two paving projects was $2,459,468.

For grading and paving one mile of Interstate 80 from U.S. 67 southeast to the bridge, the apparent low bidder was E. A. Kramme Co., Inc., and John P. Abramson Construction Co. of Des Moines. The bid was $1,512,221.

Railroads Bounce Back from Decline

By ROGER LANE
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK—The nation's railroads pass a milestone today on a comeback trail bristling with obstacles and crises.

THE MILESTONE is dropping a few thousand locomotive firemen from payrolls, men representing possibly one-half of one per cent of the railroad work force.

It was the first concrete result of four and one-half years of battling for modernization of work rules said to entail $600 million a year.

Despite many industry gains since financial disaster loomed in 1961, a new lease on life remains to be won — except for a few rich lines.

SINCE the low ebbs three years ago, railroad revenues, earnings and freight tonnage have risen. Headway has been made on automating, cost-cutting mergers, tax relief, modernizing the car fleet, rate-making flexibility and in recovery of cargo lost to truck and barge haulers.

Once transportation monarchs, the railroads after World War II deteriorated.

Competitors — highway, air, water and pipeline carriers — nibbled away at their freight business, REGULATORY handcuffs and government subsidies to highway, air and water carriers quickened the slide. So did hidebound rail managers who viewed trucking as a fad.

Passengers deserted the railroads for private automobiles.

The burdens of the $27-billion industry's enormous debt, staggering passenger deficits, outdated terminals and yards, backward methods and overstuffed payrolls threatened to capsize the system.

Brighter Seen by

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson and his top economic advisers painted a rosy picture of the nation's economy to a gathering Wednesday and said full stimulating effect of the act is yet to be felt.

But Johnson expressed concern about aspects of the economic picture and urged the Administration Council to throw its weight behind his drive on poverty support civil rights and care legislation.

THE PRESIDENT told advertising executives they were great persuaders' and said he wants to enlist their skills.

Johnson has often forecast a bright outlook for the economy. So it was no surprise when he said during a panel discussion by Walter W. Heller, his economic adviser, Secretary of Treasury Douglas Dillon and Secretary of Commerce Luther Hodges.

very of cargo lost to truck and large haulers. Once transportation monarchs, railroads after World War II deteriorated. Competitors — highway, air, motor and pipeline carriers — nibbled away at their freight business. REGULATORY handoffs and government subsidies to highway and water carriers quickened the slide. So did hidebound rail managers who viewed trucking as a foe. Passengers deserted the railroads for private automobiles. The burdens of the $27-billion industry's enormous debt, staggering operating deficits, outdated terminals and yards, backward methods and overstuffed payrolls reaped to capsize the system. When the 1960-61 recession lifted, road fortunes started rising. The government helped with tax relief, a freer hand in setting competitive rates, a kinder view of mergers and occasional White House support.

Brighter Economy Seen by Johnson

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson and his top economic advisers painted a rosy picture of the nation's economy to a business gathering Wednesday and said the full stimulating effect of the tax cut is yet to be felt. But Johnson expressed concern about some aspects of the state of the nation and urged the Advertising Council to throw its weight behind his drive on poverty and to support civil rights and health care legislation. THE PRESIDENT told the advertising executives they are "the great persuaders" and said he wants to enlist their skills. Johnson has often forecast a bright outlook for the national economy. Warren Lights Veishea Torch For Iowa State

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chief Justice Earl Warren lighted the torch Wednesday for the annual Veishea celebration beginning Thursday at Iowa State University in Ames. As members of the Iowa Congressional delegation looked on, the chief justice touched a stick of flame to the torch on the front lawn of the Supreme Court Building. The name Veishea comes from the first letters of the various colleges making up the university. The annual celebration starts with a torchlight parade. Visitors, including high school seniors, then are shown at open houses some of the work being done at the university. The Veishea committee asks a prominent person in public life to light the torch. When Warren accepted the invitation, the committee sent the torch to Rep. Neal Smith (D-Iowa) who brought it to the court Wednesday. Smith then flew to Ames with the torch, which was doused for the airplane trip.

'Yankees No Supermen'

Dressen Not Surprised At Yanks' Slow Start

NEW YORK (AP) — Count Chuck Dressen, the dandy little manager of the Detroit Tigers, is among those not too surprised at the slow start of the New York Yankees this season.

"I've preached all spring that the Yankees can be had," said Dressen, whose Tigers lost 4-3 in 10 innings Tuesday night.

"I think a great deal depends upon their two young pitchers, Jim Bouton and Al Downing. They've both got to come through again for them. If they don't, watch out."

"I've always said the Yankees were no supermen. Especially with their big guns — Mantle and Maris — out of the line-up."

"Our guys have always been aware of it. Unfortunately, it doesn't appear that the other clubs feel that way. We beat 'em eight times last year. Only one other club did as well. No other contender beat the Yankees more than six times."

Dressen noted that the Yankees' entire first-string outfield of Mickey Mantle, Roger Maris and Tommy Tresh had been sidelined in the game against his club by hamstring muscle pulls.

Dressen, never at a loss for solutions, said he had a formula for ending the Yankees' domination over the rest of the American League.

"THE REST of us have got to concentrate on beating the Yankees," he said. "We should hold back our best pitchers for them. The way to win a championship is to hold the favorite even and knock the daylight out of the second division clubs."

Nicklaus, Palmer Head Colonial Meet

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — The wheel of fortune spun toward Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer as they prepared Wednesday to renew warfare in the Colonial National Invitation Golf Tournament.

RAIN HAS FALLEN intermittently the last two days and the area was placed under a tornado alert Wednesday. But the long-range forecast called for possible scattered showers for the start of the four-day event today, with conditions improving daily.

A PRE-TOURNAMENT poll produced few surprises. Nicklaus and Palmer were picked to finish 1-2 in that order in the field of 72 and Julius Boros drew strong support to successfully defend his title.

A few votes also went to Ben Hogan who consistently plays Colonial's 7,122-yard course as if he owns it. The Fort Worth battler has won the tournament five times.

HIS LONE TOURNEY excursion this year came at the Masters, where he registered a one-under-par total for 72 holes en route to a tie for ninth.

Gary Player, the lithe South African, heads a foreign delegation among the best in the tournament's 19-year history.

Portions of play Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally.

MODZELEWSKI SIGNS—CLEVELAND (AP) — Defensive tackle Dick Modzelewski, obtained this year in a trade with the New York Giants for end Bobby Crespi, signed a contract Tuesday with the Cleveland Browns.

Nicholson's Homers Beat Athletics, 6-4

CHICAGO (AP) — Dave Nicholson hit one of the longest home runs ever recorded in ancient Comiskey Park in the fifth inning and followed with another in the sixth as the Chicago White Sox defeated Kansas City 6-4 in the opener of a two-night doubleheader Wednesday night.

Measurement of Nicholson's first blast, which went over the left-center upper deck roof, was 573 feet. Only other slugger to hit a ball that far in the park was Jimmy Foxx, a quarter of a century ago.

Nicholson, strikeout king last year who had fanned 19 times this season, sent his third homer of the season into the left field upper deck in the sixth with Joe Cunningham on base. It climaxed a four-run inning that provided White Sox starter Gary Peters with his third victory against one loss.

Phillies Defeat Braves; End Losing Streak

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Wes Covington's two-run homer in the eighth inning gave Philadelphia a 7-6 victory over Milwaukee Wednesday night and ended the Phillies' four-game losing streak. The loss snapped the Braves' four-game winning string.

Rookie Richie Allen led off the eighth for the Phillies with a walk and moved to second base on a passed ball. Bob Tiefenauer got the next two outs before Covington beat his former Brave teammates with a shot over the right field wall.

Badgers' Reichardt Tops Big 10 Hitters

CHICAGO (AP) — Outfielder Fred Reichardt of Wisconsin, defending Big Ten batting champion, has captured the conference baseball hitting lead with a .591 percentage.

Reichardt, also a star Badger halfback, won the batting title last season with .429. If he repeats, he will be the first player in modern Big Ten history to do the trick.

Reichardt, with 13 hits in 22 trips for six games, also leads in total bases with 15, but Michigan State outfielder Dick Billings is tops in RBIs with eight.

No fewer than six pitchers have 2-0 records including a trio from undefeated Michigan (6-0). The Wolverines two-game winners are Clyde Barnhart, Bill Wahl and Marlin Pemberton.

Wisconsin's Lance Torbet (2-0) leads conference pitchers without yielding an earned run in 16 innings.

Iowa pitcher Steve Green is one of six who have not allowed an earned run but in 10½ innings he has an 0-2 record.

Yellows To Meet WSUI Mike Hawks

???????

The Daily Iowan "Yellows" will begin their 1964 softball season Sunday with a warm-up game with the WSUI Mike Hawks.

The game will be played at 2 p.m. on the Women's Athletic Field and will get the Yellows in shape for the annual encounter with the Poly Sci Pinkos later this spring.

The Yellows will be attempting to continue their winning ways — ways established over many years. A group of seasoned veterans along with a few outstanding rookies will form the nucleus of the Yellow team.

The Mike Hawks are an unknown team from the halls of the Engineering Building. Their supporters claim they have not lost a game since 1959, but statistics show they haven't played since 1959.

Cubs Edge Giants, 4-2

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Right-hander Larry Jackson pitched a steady five-hitter and drove home the winning run Wednesday as the Chicago Cubs edged the San Francisco Giants 4-2.

Willie Mays celebrated his 33rd birthday with a double and a single, and Willie McCovey slammed a 400-foot homer, but the rest of the Giants could do little with the curve-balling Jackson. He struck out 10.

Jackson doubled in the Cubs' third run in the fourth after Billy Cowan walked.

Iowa Teams To Compete In 11 Events This Weekend

The spring's biggest period of sports events — 11 from Friday through Monday—arrives for Iowa teams.

At home there are five contests, including three conference baseball games, a golf tournament and a triangular track meet.

This is the home card: Friday at 3:30 p.m. Michigan State baseball; Saturday at 1 p.m., Michigan baseball doubleheader; 1:30 p.m., Northwestern-Ohio State-Iowa track meet; and 8 a.m. 36-hole 8-team golf tournament.

Tennis and golf teams have heavy schedules. The netmen meet Illinois at East Lansing Friday and follow with Michigan and Michigan State there Saturday.

Golfers compete in their own 8-team meet at home Saturday against Illinois, Indiana, Michigan State, Minnesota, Northwestern, Notre Dame and Wisconsin, in a 36-hole tournament.

Then the golf team takes on Illinois, Northwestern and Wisconsin in three dual meets at Evanston Monday. These meets close the schedule of the crowded period.

For the baseball team, now 1-5 in the conference for a share of eighth place, the task is a hard one. The Friday foe, Michigan State, is tied for second at 5-1 in the present standings and Michigan, to be met in two games Saturday, is the league leader, unbeaten in Big Ten play, at 6-0.

The triangular track meet figures to be fairly close. It is the first time Ohio State, Iowa and Northwestern have been scheduled in an outdoor meet. This meet ends Iowa's home schedule. Iowa was second in the home triangular last Saturday, won by Wisconsin with Minnesota third.

Then the golf team takes on Illinois, Northwestern and Wisconsin in three dual meets at Evanston Monday. These meets close the

Revoked Parole Of Schneider

District Judge Clair E. Hamilton revoked the parole of Robert Joseph Schneider, 19, Route 3, Oxford, Wednesday and ordered Schneider to serve a 10-year sentence for armed robbery. Schneider had pleaded guilty to the robbery of a Coralville service station in 1961.

Authorities said the parole was revoked because of fracas at Swisher dance hall and at Oxford Saturday night.

The State Parole Board asked 1963 that the parole be revoked after Schneider was again charged with armed robbery and with der. Judge Hamilton refused to revoke the parole because insufficient evidence.

Schwengel: Rotate Foreign Personnel

Fred Schwengel, congressman from Iowa's first district, has proposed a program to require a certain number of Foreign Service officers of the State Department to serve a sabbatical leave each year with people at the grass roots level in the United States. He outlined his plan recently before the House Foreign Affairs Committee. Schwengel's program calls for a provision in this year's foreign aid bill asking that 150 Foreign Service officers, Foreign Service Reserve officers and staff personnel be assigned to live in college communities. Congressman Schwengel told the committee that in such communities they could teach classes, meet with business, professional, farm and labor groups, and lecture university organizations and faculty groups to bring a greater understanding of the difficulty of formulating and administering United States foreign policy. The program is intended to correct what Schwengel feels to be a major fault in the formulation of United States foreign policy — the lack of communication between the government and the people.

'Innocents' — Spirits Fight For Spirits

"The Innocents," written by William Archibald as an adaptation of Henry James' "Turn of the Screw," will open at 8 to-night in the University Theatre. Henry James was very much interested in moral evil. Both his father and his brother said they had been visited by spirits, and both suffered nervous breakdowns. "The Innocents" is concerned with a governess living with two children who finds that they are under the influence of two deceased servants. The struggle between the spirits and the governess for possession of the children's souls is the basis of the play.

Slightly Higher Cost of Good Housing Is Well Worth While

'Home' Uncovered

Whenever new construction is undertaken in the Iowa City area, more sagging houses often are opened to the public eye. This house, used for student apartments, was uncovered when land was cleared, foreground, for the new Iowa City Water Plant near Madison and Bloomington Streets.

However, legal restrictions and high costs prevent a simple solution of building huge, first-class apartment houses in the campus area.

ALTHOUGH THE COST of living in the better housing is somewhat higher than the average sub-standard housing costs, the improved facilities and conditions make the cost difference seem minimal.

Costs in downtown Iowa City or in the surrounding area run from as low as $25 per month for a sleeping room to $140 for a two-bedroom apartment. The rent in three representative large modern apartment houses units ranges from $95 per month, for a three-occupant unfurnished apartment to $150 per month for a completely furnished two-bedroom, two-occupant apartment.

The lowest possible costs for students living in the new apartments would be about $32 each for the three people in the unfurnished $95 per month unfurnished apartment. In the lowest cost furnished apartments four men can get by for as little as $36.25 each.

NEARLY ALL of the owners of new apartment houses provide a refrigerator, stove, laundry and garbage facilities for even the unfurnished apartments. Most provide carpet and drapes. Many offer TV-hookup for the residents' convenience.

The most expensive of the furnished apartments feature carpeted floors, professionally designed custom interiors, central or individual air-conditioning, colored appliances and storage facilities.

Allan Poots, president of Park Fair, Inc., Coralville, said that the units being built by his corporation will have tennis courts and a swimming pool in addition to the conventional facilities of the individual apartments.

HARVEY WYJACK, manager of the Town and Campus Apartments in Iowa City, said that although there were a few empty unfurnished apartments, there is currently a waiting list of 50-75 people, most of them desiring furnished apartments, others waiting for summer school openings or for apartments next fall.

Although interest in the new facilities indicate that similar ventures in the campus area would be welcomed, the problem is not that easily solved. Most forbidding drawback seems to be cost — both obtaining land in the campus area and then meeting the tax payments.

Steven Darling, Iowa City realtor, pointed out that many of the owners of land near the campus are using their houses as apartments or are renting rooms to stu-

Hancher: Changing Trend Is Away from Liberal Arts

By DOREEN HYDE
Staff Writer

President Virgil Hancher said Wednesday that education is moving away from the concept of a liberal arts education to professional education as a result of the modern trend toward specialization.

In a speech before the honorary fraternities of the College of Engineering, Hancher called for continuing review and addition of new knowledge to school curricula. Hancher said the "revolution in ideologies" has changed the conception of a university from teaching to one of the production of scholarly and scientific endeavor.

"FIELDS OF KNOWLEDGE no longer have sharp lines of demarcation," Hancher said, "but rather shades of difference." He said it is necessary to take a new look at old things, and ask whether things which have existed in the past are relevant now.

Hancher said that bringing specialists together in one place to teach is a "response to a felt need." He said that institutions such as the Massachusetts Institute of Technology are able to do this more easily because scientists tend to drop material which has become irrelevant. He added that schools such as SUI and Harvard have a harder time doing this because they are traditionally liberal arts schools.

"The plea for liberal education cannot stop the trend toward professional education," Hancher said. He suggested that the best type of liberal education is in conjunction with professional education.

HANCHER SAID a particular field can be properly taught, learned and practiced liberally to be used as a gateway to both the liberal and professional education. Pressing problems of the world have forced universities to drop the concept of being "ivory towers," Hancher said. "This is quite proper because it is important to discover ways and means of keeping America from becoming decayed and archaic."

He said the new breed of undergraduate students must be taught and approached in a different manner than those 50 years ago.

He said graduates in future years will have to keep in "continuous and close touch with some university to be aware of changing knowledge. Anyone who feels his education is completed upon receiving a degree is quite naive."

France Wants Alterations For NATO

PARIS (AP) — France is urging reforms in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and hoping for action in 1969 if not before, informed French sources said Wednesday.

IN BRIEF, President Charles de Gaulle wants to shake up the whole NATO political and military command structure to put full emphasis on independent, national forces, with France playing the United States and Britain.

These sources, who probably reflect De Gaulle's own thinking, called the present NATO organization outdated.

Some of the French ideas may be discussed at The Hague next week at the NATO foreign ministers' annual spring meeting. But the informants said French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville will not make any precise proposals.

Paris officials simply want the motion of NATO reform to circulate in advance of 1969, when any member can withdraw from the alliance simply by giving a year's notice.

SUGGESTED changes in 1969 can be coupled with an implied threat to quit if changes are not accepted. French officials, however, deny they intend this sort of diplomatic pressure.

High Winds and Dust Hinder Iowa Residents

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Iowans held onto their hats and skirts Wednesday, as winds of up to 60 miles an hour churned up dust and debris across the state.

In southern Iowa, high winds were blamed for an accident in which the car and trailer of a Fairfield, Calif., couple were overturned.

The accident on Highway 6, about a mile west of Victor, injured Mrs. Aileen McInnis, 61. She was thrown from the car and pinned underneath the machine. Her husband escaped injury.

STATE HIGHWAY Commission workers put up snow fences in Mahaska County, in hopes the fence would hold dust as it does snow.

Visibility was reported to be zero in Mahaska County for a time. Similar conditions last weekend were blamed for a six-car collision on U.S. Highway 63. Wednesday's winds came in the wake of tornadoes which roamed northwest Iowa Tuesday night, doing extensive property damage and injuring several persons.

ONE TWISTER dipped down at Alta, in northwest Iowa, Wednesday morning, ripping the roof off a barn, damaging a home under construction, and uprooting trees.
