'Bad Housing All Over the City'

A Violation

Here is just one example of violation of the state housing code which requires landlords to keep common garbage areas clean and free from undue litter. The statute says "Every dwelling and every part thereof shall be kept clean and shall be free of any accumulation of dirt, filth, rubbish, garbage, or any other matter. . . ."

Ramshackle rooms and rundown tenements, visible to anyone willing to see, have existed in Iowa City for years.

But like a cancerous growth they have long remained beneath the surface of city life for those not directly in touch with them.

A citizen's committee, headed by Mrs. Eugene Spaziani, has quietly been studying housing conditions here for nearly a year. Its recommendations were presented to the City Council last month in the form of a 19-page model housing code.

THE WORK of the committee, the proposals in the code and some shocking examples of sub-standard housing in the city have received relatively little attention.

"Recent wide-spread interest in local housing conditions and in the housing code — or rather the lack of one — was stirred greatly by the efforts of Eric E. Bergsten, assistant professor of law, and by four students who wished to test the effectiveness of the state housing laws.

The students refused to pay their March rent and thus precipitated the Marlas-Ellwein eviction case. Bergsten represented them in the case, and thus gained added knowledge of sub-standard housing in the city.

He first learned of the students' situation through his wife, who was serving as vice chairman of a citizens committee and had been studying housing conditions here. BERGSTEN later talked to the students, three of which were law students. The students asked him for advice on the provision of the state code which prohibits landlords from taking legal action against tenants in sub-standard housing who refuse to pay their rent.

Bergsten offered to defend the SUUwans if they wished to test the state code in court. The March eviction case and the events leading up to it were not Bergsten's first experiences with city housing conditions.

"When I ran for city councilman last fall," he said, "I canvassed more than half of the city going door-to-door myself. I noticed a lot of the poor housing conditions then."

Sub-standard housing conditions exist "all over the city — not just in one confined area," Bergsten said.

"THESE APARTMENTS are not just being rented to students. Transitory workers, construction workers, older people and lower income groups — sub-standard apartments are being rented to all of these people."

Bergsten said the eviction case pointed out the inadequacies of state law and the need for an Iowa City housing code.

"This case has stirred a lot of people who were vaguely aware of the situation and wish to do something now," he said.

Anamosa Prison Riot Stopped by 41 Officials

For Those Listing with University—

SUI To Inspect 'Unapproved' Housing

SUI late Thursday took a major step in insuring continuation of its "interest in the standards of housing for all students."

M. L. Huit, Dean of Students, said that health and safety inspections by the University Department of Health will be required of all unapproved housing units if their owners seek to use the vacant-listing service of the Office of Student Affairs.

The move could affect "several hundred" Iowa City landlords who use the service each year, according to James Rhatigan, off-campus housing adviser.

STANDARDS required for the unapproved housing were not outlined by the University.

Unapproved housing was defined by SUI where married students, graduate students or students 21 years old and over may reside, but that has not passed a rigid inspection needed to become "approved" by the University.

Rhatigan said he was not sure how many students use the listings outside of the Office of Student Affairs in University Hall. But he added:

"THERE'S CERTAINLY more interest in the listings than we have offerings to accommodate them."

Huit urged landlords to make requests for inspections now if they plan to list their housing next fall. Requests may be made to the Environmental Health and Safety Division, ext 2765. There is no charge for inspections.

The same policy has been in effect for the past three years with respect to University-approved housing where all unmarried, undergraduate minor students must live. This includes both University housing and off-campus housing, Huit noted, and must be "approved" whether it is listed or not.

LETTERS EXPLAINING the new inspection policy are being sent to those landlords who last year listed housing not requiring University approval. Plans to extend the inspection service have been formulated over the past several months in cooperation with the University Department of Health, Huit said.

Huit emphasized that the University has a continuing interest in the standards of housing for all students, whether they live in approved or other housing. He added:

"THE SUCCESS during the past several years of our Health Inspection program to upgrade the physical conditions of approved facilities for undergraduate students provides further reason for extending the general policy to the listing of graduate facilities."

Huit stated that over a three-year period the inspection program shows that nearly 100 houses in which students were exposed to health and safety hazards either have been removed from the approved list or the most serious hazards have been eliminated. Most remained on the approved list, he said, because improvements were made. There are now 275 off-campus houses on the approved list.

Landlords who seek new approval for undergraduate housing as well as any who wish to list housing with the Office of Student Affairs will also be asked to sign an agreement notifying the office that the landlord is willing to rent to students regardless of their race, creed, color, or national origin, and only on the basis of their merits as persons, Huit said.

$5,000 Loss As 15 Inmates Burn Laundry

Third Disturbance In Seven Months At Men's Reformatory

By DON KLADSTRUP
Staff Writer

ANAMOSA — Prison officials, aided by about 35 Highway Patrolmen and six county sheriffs, quelled an uprising of nearly 200 prisoners at the Iowa Men's Reformatory Thursday. Officials said the disturbance could have developed into a full-scale riot.

"The whole damn place could have blown sky high," Acting Warden Benjamin Baer said.

Trouble started when a foreman left two prisoners in the laundry, and a member of the custodial force later came along and locked them in their cells for illegally being in the laundry.

"The two men were apparently intoxicated from sniffing soap wrapped in wet rags," Baer said. "They were running around the laundry room with rag bands around their heads and playing Indians."

"A THIRD man who was somehow involved, got away, obtained a heavy iron bar and started stirring up the other men in the yard," Baer said. "He was trying to gain support for the release of the other two prisoners we've put in solitary confinement. The incident occurred at a time when 200 other prisoners were leaving their work shops to clean up for dinner."

Authorities rang a bell as a signal to clear the yard and all but about 12 to 15 prisoners went to their cells. The prisoners took refuge in the laundry where they set a fire which caused approximately $5,000 in damages.

The law officers, carrying shotguns and tear gas grenades converged on the laundry. As they did, the prisoners retreated into the cannery building. The prisoners surrendered when lawmen threw several tear gas grenades into the cannery.

COMMENTING on the disturbance, Baer said that "it was fortunate we were able to persuade most of the prisoners to go to their cells, or we could really have had a mess on our hands."

This was the third such disturbance at the reformatory since last October when a riot resulted in more than $250,000 in damages.

"But we've got the real nucleus of the bunch this time," Baer said, "and we're really going to rap the troublemakers." Prison officials were unable to pinpoint the ring-leaders of the last disturbance which occurred April 8 as an outgrowth of dissatisfaction among prisoners over commissary prices and visiting room accommodations. Governor Hughes, when informed of the latest demonstration, said he was "fed clear to the ears with this. I think there's a hard core of men there that will have to be dealt with severely."

Warden Baer echoed similar feelings when he said he planned to deal "harshly" with the men. Baer said he did not know what would be done with the "trouble-makers" at this time. The ring-leaders of the major riot last October were transferred to the State Penitentiary at Ft. Madison.

20 Injured By Tornadoes At Waterloo

WATERLOO (AP) — About 20 persons were reported injured Thursday when tornadoes hit at dusk in a residential area in Waterloo and a trailer court just southeast of here at Raymond.

Extent of the injuries was not immediately known.

What police called "a minor tornado" struck southwest Waterloo, damaged several homes and businesses and broke windows at Schoitz Memorial Hospital.

A mobile home was overturned, trees were uprooted and buildings were damaged at Raymond.

Tornadoes also struck in Fayette county northeast of here, with buildings on 10 farms reported damaged and minor injuries suffered by several people.

A Schoitz Hospital spokesman said about 20 persons were treated for cuts. All but two were released, and the two held were not seriously injured, the hospital said.

The roof of the James L. Brown home in southwest Waterloo was ripped loose and tossed on another building, and Brown's son, Dave, suffered minor back and leg cuts when a portion of the roof fell and knocked him down.

Brown, state editor for the Oelwein Daily Register, said the storm was over in "a second. But I've never seen anything like it."

The wind picked up a boat and trailer at the Robert Holmlund home in Waterloo and rammed it through the house, coming to rest in a bedroom. No one was in the room.

Law Officers Unload

Sheriff's deputies and police from nearby towns empty their weapons outside the Men's Reformatory at Anamosa Thursday after Acting Warden Benjamin F. Baer called for reinforcements to quell a disturbance at the prison. About 16 ring-leaders were placed in cells separate from the rest of the men as a result of the uprising.

Commission To Study Employment

The Iowa City Human Relations Commission made plans to examine city government for guarantees of fair employment and services Thursday evening.

In the meeting, Rev. L. D. Soens, chairman of the Commission, asked members to meet with city officials to determine if clauses insuring equal opportunities are included in contracts involving work done for the city. Members hope to examine some of the contracts and will consider further action if they find no written guarantees.

Further action was also discussed on the Commission's "Fair Opportunity" project. The project involves asking businessmen and professional people to give outward expressions of their practice of equal employment and services opportunities.

The Commission decided to print and distribute a brochure explaining why groups should practice equal employment and services.

The Commission also moved to send letters of commendation to local businesses who include terms like "equal opportunities" or "fair employment practices" in their advertising. Letters will also be sent to newspapers and radio stations asking that they suggest that advertisers include these terms in their ads.

Commenting on the progress of the Iowa City Human Relations Commission, Rev. Soens said, "The history of most human relations commissions is that it is not possible to move as fast as they would like, for accomplishments depend upon people's attitudes and how well informed they are. Informing people and changing their attitudes is a slow thing in itself. Nevertheless, I am very satisfied with the progress of this Commission."

Sparks Fly at Civil Rights Meeting

By STEVE DEWOLF

The rain that threatened Iowa City Thursday night would never have drowned out the sparks that flew at the civil rights discussion sponsored by SARE-Friends of SNCC in the House Chamber of Old Capitol.

The hall of questions, answers and comments were aimed at one major target — how can SUI work constructively toward civil rights.

Entitled "Come throw Stones, the discussion was headed by a panel. Participants were M. L. Huit, Dean of Students, Edwin Allaire, associate professor of philosophy, Peter Hall, instructor in sociology, Seymour Gray, A3, Des Moines; Mike Carver, A3, Waverly; Mike Kenney, G, San Francisco; William Perkins, Winnet Hagens, James Bennett, Li, Newton.

ONCE THE stones started flying, it was a no holds barred affair all the way.

"How about fraternities and Negroes?" someone in the audience asked.

Prof. Hall's answer: "The only way fraternities will get Negroes pledged is to go out and ask them to join. No Negro would be willing to go through rush on their own after the Hankins de-pledging incident."

Andy Hankins was pledged by Delta Chi social fraternity two years ago and subsequently depledged. He was the first — and last — Negro to be pledged by an SUI social fraternity.

MIKE CARVER, Li, Waverly, former student body president and a fraternity member, said that when the time is right for a Negro at SUI to join a fraternity will depend on the leadership of the fraternity and the amount of outside pressure put on the fraternity.

In defense of Greeks, Inagrace Perry, A3, Ottumwa, said she thought sororities and fraternities had made a significant step toward breaking down old prejudices. Asked by Perkins why she belonged to "an organization which discriminates" if she believed in brotherhood, she said she thought she could do more working within the organization rather than turning her back on the problem.

Panel and audience participants were blunt in stating their feelings toward the University's stand on civil rights.

Woman Injured

A woman was hit by a car in Tiffin Thursday at about 11 p.m. while she was walking across the street in front of the Lark Restaurant. Her injuries were believed to be serious, and she was taken to the Emergency Ward of Mercy Hospital in Iowa City. Further details were unavailable.

BENJAMIN BAER
Quells Riot

The grass is greener on LBJ's lawn

SINCE HIS EAR pulling and beer drinking escapades before the press last month, the President is evidently trying to renew his image with the nation's newsmen and their readership.

Veteran newsmen Clark Mollenhoff discussed this "social" aspect of Washington news coverage in his lecture here on April 30. He discussed the dangers involved when a reporter accepts favors from politicians.

Once, after he and his wife had attended a dinner at the White House, she turned to him and said, "Wasn't that great?" He agreed with her, but added, "As soon as I start to feel that I have to be invited back — I'm dead."

How true his words ring. Although there is nothing really wrong with a press conference on the White House lawn, where the newsmen are urged to bring their families, it just does not seem like the proper atmosphere for doing business.

Would a police reporter take his wife to a bank hold-up? Or would it sound logical for a journalist to take his family along when he goes for an interview with labor racketeer? No, not only because of the unsavory aspects of reporting these stories, but also because getting the news is a full time job and there is just no time to turn that job into a family picnic.

The whole idea of associating with the President and other top politicians on a social level increases a Washington reporter's feeling of status and prestige. Anything which he might do to jeopardize this newly acquired position will not be pleasing to him.

President Johnson is not the only politician to utilize flattery as a device to gain favors from the press. Nikita Khrushchev is also skilled in manipulating the Western Press.

He grants a visiting correspondent a private interview and treats him like a king, then he leans over and gives him "the real story" on what Russian plans are. The pressures may be applied in Cuba, Viet Nam and the Congo, but the newsmen will write that these actions do not really mean anything. Khrushchev really wants to live and let live. He told them so, while swimming nude in his private pool. How much more direct can you get it?

Johnson's lawn party may have been a big hit with the ladies and children, but we hope the newsmen will not let it affect their news judgment.

And if the President picks someone up by his ears again, while drinking beer, the press should report it anyway — the public has a right to know these things.

Whose business God?

IT'S SOMETIMES AMAZING what good, God-fearing people can do in the name of their God. Alabama's Gov. George Wallace and others, for example, have uncovered the biggest hotbed of atheism since England's Hell-Fire Club. The villains are sitting behind the bench of the U.S. Supreme Court.

The basis of their argument that the Court is ramrodding God right out of the country lies in three recent decisions. The first, Engel vs. Vitale in 1962, ruled unconstitutional the required recitation of a school prayer composed by the New York Board of Regents. In two separate cases in 1963, the Court banned required readings of the scriptures in Pennsylvania and Maryland schools.

All three decisions were applicable to required religious exercises, thus seeming a natural interpretation in harmony with the First Amendment. It's not so natural, unfortunately, in the eyes of too many congressmen, who would amend the Constitution to put God back in the schools — on an officially recognized basis.

Awfully considerate of their feelings, we suppose, but a little frightening in terms of its possibilities for establishing state-approved religion in a nation which was founded partially on the idea that religion is the individual's, not the state's business.

Bergman's 'Silence' lacks solid meaning

By RAY PRESTON
Iowan Reviewer

If Ingmar Bergman was Renais then "The Silence" would be his most important film to date. The connection is ease and manipulation of control for Bergman's embarrasing cover the medium shows still further development.

But this very ease and grace with which Bergman now evokes his power has provoked at least a few important critics to describe his latest work as lazy: that is, increased personal involvement bred out of success.

"Time" declared that the main issue in "The Silence" describes the loss of God, I had to read this for I was certainly unable to get it out of the film. Not only God, then, but it seems to me there's a lot more missing from "The Silence."

I speak not of those little pieces of sex footage left in Stockholm or New York or Chicago, I really had enough of that to get the point.

But I need those sequences which I presume Bergman is still mulling over before I can get much meaning out of this film. The excuse I find for this is that Bergman's ability now allows him to work in such conservative bareness that the film technique and his supersonal symbolism just obtrusively like a tote-sack of bones.

ALL I CAN say is: "The Silence" opens and ends on the same shot, the young son's face. At the end he reads a note given to him by his aunt, a translator by profession, written in the near-incomprehensible language of the "foreign" country locale.

The only recognizable words are "heart" and "hand." It is possible that a boy of his age could have a future improved over the "silent" present.

There are no men of any consequence in this strange land. Instead we have a pre-adolescent boy, an ancient waiter, a water-phallus, and a lovely troupe of performing dwarfs. My guess is that all the men we would expect to find are away at war.

AT LEAST several of them drive a tank through the town (I guess men drive tanks in this country). Here is my description of a tank: A tank is a massive, lumbering object with a fore-bowing appearance which is almost impossible to obstruct or halt.

(weapon) sticking out in front. Bergman's tank rumbles through this cardboard sound-stage town during the middle of the films most violent love scene. (Ouch?)

The boy's mother is a nymphomaniac but spends most of her time indulging her body by baths, naps, and changing clothes. She is unable to communicate with her sister (the boy's translator aunt) who is a Lesbian but contents herself with onanism.

The aunt (representing the "intellect" as opposed to her "physical" sister) is dying of some unnamed but obviously fatal disease. As the "intellect" is dying toward the end of the film she curses her sister and procreation — the sister has produced the child.

ASIDE FROM the barrier between the sisters they are unable to communicate with anyone in the country. Other than the few words in the note at the film's end the only other significant act of communication I saw was the little boy urinating in the hall of the posh hotel — and I haven't the slightest idea of what that means for the film.

All this is pretty obvious stuff and one can make what he wishes out of it. My confused objection, aside from a little boredom, is that Bergman's technical confidence is baring his ideas to close to the surface.

Take that foolish tank, no, better leave that alone; rather, take the character of Death in "The Seventh Seal"; this chalk-faced, blackhooded character of too serious demeanor was certainly "corny," but it was acceptable and seemed to work within the rich texture of idea, imagery, and imagination which continually embellished that film.

BUT NOW we have the symbol placed in a form which is turned the opposite direction. Richness of development is assiduously avoided. Bergman now tries to obtain development from repeated examination and variation of the most simplified statement.

This may be normal progression for an artist, but in this case I find two problems. The statement must be formidable enough to stand up under the strain; and all attempted variations of examination must be clear and distinct in and of themselves. This is aside from technical virtuosity.

From what I saw and could understand in "The Silence" my inclination was to go up and join the litterers at the rear of the house, albeit not for the same reasons.

"You Guys Think You Have Trouble?"

Letter to the editor—

Correct climbing methods are urged for climbers

To the Editor: We were all sorry to hear about Seymour Gray's fall off a cliff at Palisades Kepler Park last weekend. The extensive news coverage of this event was undoubtedly fairly accurate, but the unfortunate choice of terminology was definitely misleading. There was a strong implication that connected the accident with the core of local climbers associated with the Iowa Mountaineers. Gray and party were reported to have been on a "climbing outing," a term coined by the Mountaineers in advertising their activities. Gray and party have not climbed with the Iowa Mountaineers. The term "climbers" was used in describing the rest of the party of six with Gray, a term which implies these people have climbed before and, indeed, have developed a proficiency at the sport. Only one of the six other than Gray had ever climbed before. It should have been reported that there was a securely placed person on the top of the cliff holding the rope that would have safely caught Gray if the knot (or lack of knot) around his waist had not failed.

Climbing, like any other sport, has rules and regulations to make the sport more enjoyable and safe. A definite violation of these rules through negligence allowed this mishap to occur. Perhaps prospective climbers will benefit by this accident by learning about correct climbing techniques and climbing with qualified people.

We wish a speedy recovery for Seymour Gray.

I'll do all I can, but...

By PETER M. HALL
Guest Writer

(Mr. Hall is an assistant professor of sociology. This is the first of two articles; the second will appear Saturday.)

Now that the Human Rights Conference is over we can all go back to leading our normal comfortable lives. (Aren't you glad that Brotherhood Week only comes once a year?)

We will return to our old patterns of interaction and conversation. Dialogues begun about integration will probably not continue. We have made our contribution (that is, some of us have) by attending meetings, giving money, singing, linking hands with our neighbor, and perhaps even speaking with a stranger of a different color.

We heard about the horrors of life in the South and the corruption of our National Legislature and we nodded. ("All true and something should be done about it, but it is all so far away and we are not involved.")

BUT COMING closer to home let us review the results of the opening session of this conference on Thursday evening, April 23. What happened there should not be allowed to be forgotten because it symbolized the contemporary problems here on the campus. (And there are problems, in case you didn't know it.)

There are three aspects of this meeting which strike me as needing exposure and emphasis. The first is the alienation of local Negroes from campus life and their intense hostility at the way they have been treated here at SU1. ("Why did you have to go to Mississippi to find out that Negroes were human beings?")

This alienation and hostility is not new. It has existed for some time but it has probably not been expressed in public before and in an interracial setting. This is not an interracial setting. This is not an unreasoned hostility on the part of Negroes here. It has a history of repeated acts which have indicated to the Negro that he did not belong or that he was socially inferior. But it has to be emphasized because many of the whites present at that meeting and on the campus in general were unprepared for the open hostility.

(Is it possible that they really do not like us? I'm not prejudiced, some of my best friends are—) But let's not forget it — they don't like us; they have good reason not to like us and it is up to us to see that they change their opinions.

And in order to change the opinions of the Negro, the whites must begin to act differently and in accord with basic social principles of equality.

THIS ANTAGONISM and hostility will obviously take time to change since Negroes have good reasons to be suspicious of whites. But perhaps as a result of the open expression of these feelings, true awareness will come to the whites on this campus.

automation refuses to grow less. The outlook is for a slow increase.

KNOWLEDGEABLE educators point out that the future of education will be more and more concerned with the impact of poverty. They believe this because our history shows that change in education arises always out of political action.

Our public school system, for example, grew out of political action and was established only after beating down very considerable opposition. President Johnson's action against poverty is one that has been delayed across a long span of years.

We can see the slow accumulation of poverty; the many evidences of human erosion produced by it are all around us. Only now are the nation's resources to be mobilized against it. Therefore, education more and more will be concerned with it.

THIS, of course, means a revolution in education, not yet comprehended or blueprinted. It will reach into every corner of instruction from elementary to university levels. A few examples will illustrate:

In New York an estimated 10 to 20 thousand pupils who graduate annually from high school, with an average of 80, cannot go to college. The free city colleges can take only so many. They accept students in order of accomplishment.

An average of 80 isn't good enough despite the fact it is a respectable figure. Not too many years ago it was good enough to open the doors to most colleges. These multi-hundreds graduating annually do not have money to pay tuition. Their grades are not good enough for scholarships.

THIS IS a story common to all American cities and towns. In most of them it is even worse, since rare is the city that offers free colleges which can take the top performers.

The politics of segregation have done incalculable educational injury to both races. The human results are before us in every large city and in the rural regions of the South. They indict us in the statistics of literacy and employment and income.

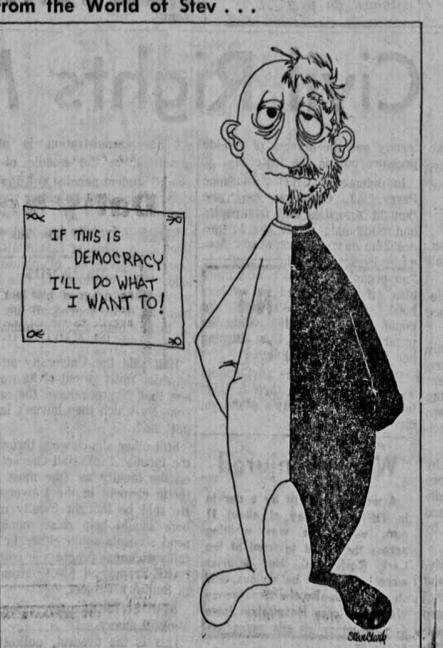

We now wonder why we have waited so long for the attack on poverty. But it will begin. When it does, we increasingly will see political action bring change to education. It is, of course, long overdue.

New Housing Code Needed For 'Renewal' Bad Housing —

While some more personnel might be required to enforce a city code, Bergsten said he believes that the main job of enforcement could be done by the existing staff.

The City staff now inspecting buildings includes the Electrical, Plumbing, Building, and Sanitary inspectors as well as the Iowa City Fire Chief, who spends much of his time inspecting buildings.

"BEFORE THE present officials can act to enforce housing laws, they must have the support of the City Council, which ultimately means the support of the community," he observed.

Bergsten said he does not know if the community now supports a strictly enforced code, but he hopes that most people would back this.

"A SIGNIFICANT number of people I've talked with do favor a code, but I could not say about the entire community."

All Iowa cities engaged in Urban Renewal programs are now enforcing their housing codes, according to Bergsten.

Iowa City now is considering applying to the Federal Government for an Urban Renewal program. The City Council would first have to adopt an enforceable housing code before the Government would allocate these funds.

"I don't know about the other cities in Iowa at present, but in 1943 Burlington-Summit housing case, every city in the state filed a certification that they were not enforcing their housing laws. This was 20 years ago, but it was also more than 20 years after the state housing code was enacted."

SOVIET VISIT—OSLO, Norway — Soviet Premier Khrushchev will be accompanied by his wife, Nina, members of their family and a delegation of about 50 when he visits Scandinavia in June-July, the Foreign Ministry announced. They will come by boat.

Cites Crowd's Inaction

Prof Discusses N.Y. Rape Case

The failure of 40 onlookers in New York City to respond to cries for help from an 18-year old nude girl was the result of a collective behavior situation in which there were no set rules, according to Richard Wilmet, associate professor of sociology.

Wilmet compared the incident to fire. He said in a small community every event is a local responsibility. "There is a voluntary fire department and everyone pitches in. They may even form a bucket brigade."

"But in a large community," he continued, "a crowd is a very real hazard. It gets in the way of the experts who can take care of the situation."

"One wonders if the situation is genuine, who is responsible for what and what to do next," Wilmet said. "People don't know what kind of help is needed, whether police or medical or psychiatric. The problem is to have complete knowledge."

However, he said, even in a case where an onlooker has knowledge that is as complete as possible, such as seeing a child struck by a car, he still can't rush in. Anything he would do to aid the victim could do more harm. An onlooker's responsibility in that event would be to secure medical assistance, Wilmet said.

He pointed out that one person could trigger action by the whole group, but where doubt exists there is no overwhelming responsibility to act.

"I guess the real problem is how many have to be present to create a moral responsibility," Wilmet said.

...agination which continually embellished that film.

BUT NOW we have the symbol placed in a form which is turned the opposite direction. Richness of development is assiduously avoided. Bergman now tries to obtain development from repeated examination and variation of the most simplified statement.

This may be normal progression for an artist, but in this case I find two problems. The statement must be formidable enough to stand up under the strain; and all attempted variations of examination must be clear and distinct in and of themselves. This is aside from technical virtuosity.

From what I saw and could understand in "The Silence" my inclination was to gc. up and join the titillers at the rear of the house, albeit not for the same reasons.

...from these individuals sounded like a public confession. (I have seen the light and will now do all that I can for civil rights, but...)

These were truly the statements of partially converted sinners who are on the road to salvation.

THEY HAVE come, what must seem to them, a long way on that road but they still stand between two worlds. The world of the organization still looms large in their identities. (Can I be responsible for destroying my brothers? Should I ask my brothers to destroy themselves? Can I ask my sister to give up a nice new house simply because a Negro girl needs a place to live for six months?)

But, let us committed types, not be so sceptical of our new acquaintances. We should know that they represent at one time the bulk of the campus community and at the same time they represent new waves of attitudes emerging as a result of a nationwide revolution.

We have had the truth for a long time but they are just learning and it is not easy to shuck off the shackles of traditional thoughts. But what is necessary to remember here is not to let the moderates and new members forget that there is still a long way to go. They need to have the consciences pricked constantly (just as we also do) so that they are not allowed to sit on the fence.

...all American cities and towns. In most of them it is even worse, since rare is the city that offers free colleges which can take the top performers.

The politics of segregation have done incalculable educational injury to both races. The human results are before us in every large city and in the rural regions of the South. They indict us in the statistics of literacy and employment and income.

We now wonder why we have waited so long for the attack on poverty. But it will begin. When it does, we increasingly will see political action bring change to education. It is, of course, long overdue.

Organized by the Student Civil Liberties Coordination Committee there, the demonstration will be a "silent march" and "mail-in" from the SCI campus to the downtown post office, one mile away. The march will start at 3 p.m. and all classes will be suspended.

Students and faculty participating will "carry" letters to Iowa senators Bourke B. Hickenlooper and Jack Miller and to Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy and President Johnson.

The march will conclude a week-long study of the issues involved in the Civil Rights bill. During this week students and faculty have been examining the issues in classroom discussions, informal lectures and panel discussions in the residence halls and the College Union.

Fund Raising Begins
For Elliott Gallery

By PAULA KAPLAN
Staff Writer

"Stage one of the fund-raising campaign for a gallery to house the Elliott display is well under way," reports Loren Hickerson, executive director of the Alumni Association.

The collection is owned by Owen and Leone Elliott from Cedar Rapids. The collection, valued at nearly a million dollars, consists of paintings, drawings, prints, silverware, jade, and numerous other objects.

The first and current stage involves the development of interest in the project among alumni, leading Iowa citizens, and friends of art, according to Hickerson.

The three persons most directly involved in the first stage are Hickerson, Dr. Frank Seiberling, head of the SUI Art Department, and Philip D. Adler, publisher of the Davenport Times.

"Stage two will involve participation in building the gallery on the part of corporate and other organizations which have a great stake in Iowa's future and national image," Hickerson said.

Hickerson said that he does not know when the second stage will begin.

"Stage three will involve the broad opportunity for anyone interested in Iowa to take part in this great kick-off project for the development of a major cultural center," Hickerson said.

"The greatest value of the Elliott Collection is to the people of the state and the region. The collection represents a great cultural resource for Iowa."

"The primary value will be for anyone who has a chance to see it and who appreciates art. It's the state's stake to keep the collection here in Iowa."

"The image of Iowa is agricultural, especially in the Eastern part of the country," Hickerson said. "The average Iowan who is sensitive to the fact that Iowa is not regarded as highly as he thinks it ought to be chafes because he knows that Iowa is much more than agriculture."

"With the addition of a great museum in Iowa, the image of Iowa will change. Anyone who's still frustrated with Iowa's image can change the image more quickly this way than any other," Hickerson said.

The display has been offered to the SUI Art Department with one stipulation: that the University provide a permanent, adequate gallery to house the collection.

Elliott and his wife have expressed the wish that the new gallery be substantially completed by the summer of 1967.

Higher Taxes for Some

WASHINGTON — The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) cautioned pay-as-you-go taxpayers Thursday that there probably will be larger tax bills and smaller refunds at income tax filing time in 1965.

The IRS advised all single taxpayers who make more than $5,000 a year and all married couples in the $10,000-plus bracket to check their withholding against their probable tax for 1964.

It is the first time the service has made an announcement on the likelihood of bigger out-of-pocket payments by many taxpayers in 1965 although the matter has received widespread publicity.

Hawkeyes Host Spartans Today

Petersen Won't Play; Gebhard Iowa Starter

Iowa's Hawkeyes, now sharing eighth place in the Big Ten with a 1-5 record, battle with the top two teams in the league today and Saturday. The Hawks host Michigan State, tied for second, on the Iowa diamond at 3:30 p.m. today, and league-leading Michigan in a double-header at 1 p.m. Saturday.

The Spartans have one of the finest over-all records in the Big Ten. They have won 17 of 21 and their 5-1 record in conference play puts them in a tie for second place with Minnesota.

Meanwhile, Iowa, after beating defending champion Illinois in the opener April 24, has lost five straight games: two to Purdue and last weekend three to Minnesota. Today is the Big Ten home opener for the Hawks.

Bob Gebhard, who has a 4-2 season's record, is today's probable starting pitcher. Gebhard has beaten Illinois, but lost to Minnesota. He has pitched 50 2/3 innings and has an ERA of 2.56, allowing 28 hits, 14 earned runs and striking out 37 batters.

Jay Petersen, Iowa third baseman who is second in hitting, will not play this weekend. Petersen injured an ankle about three weeks ago, returned to action in the Minnesota series, but now has the ankle in a cast for ten days.

Outfielder Ken Banaszek, shortstop Ron Shudes, shortstop-outfielder Harry Ostrander and sophomore Skip Hohle have played third base this week.

Probable pitcher for the Spartans in sophomore left-hander John Krasnan, who has a 5-0 record and an ERA of about 1.60. Although the hitting and pitching has been strong, the Spartans have had trouble on defense, with physical and mental errors.

MICHIGAN STATE has defeated Northwestern, 13-7; Wisconsin, 2-1; Illinois, 5-2; and Purdue, 5-4, and 3-0 in conference play. The Spartans only loss was to Wisconsin, 9-8.

Michigan, the Saturday opponent, has a 12-12 record for the season, but half of the Wolverines' victories were over Big Ten teams, and all of their losses were to non-conference foes.

The Wolverine team is hitting only .239 while their opponents have hit .266. Only one player, center fielder Ron Tate, is batting over .300, but Michigan has got strong pitching and good fielding.

BILL WAHL (3-0) is the probable pitcher for the first game and Marlin Pemberton (2-0) will pitch the second. Wahl has a 1.05 ERA and Pemberton 2.66.

Iowa's pitching situation for Saturday's games is not definite. Steve Green will probably hurl the first. Bob Schauberg, the other usual Saturday starter, has a sore elbow and may not be able to play. The choice will then be made from Joe Madden, Ron Stroup and possibly Carl Brunst, who now is available after the cast was removed from his ankle.

Mets Break Losing Streak; Defeat Reds

NEW YORK (AP) — Tim Lincecum's two-run homer off Jim Maloney and Al Jackson's nine-hit pitching combined to give New York a 3-2 triumph over the Cincinnati Reds and snap a five-game losing streak for the Mets Thursday.

Harkness's homer, his third of the season, found the hit extended single by Ron Hunt. The hit extended the scrappy second baseman's hitting streak to eight straight games.

The Mets, who collected all their seven hits in the first six innings, increased their lead to 3-0 in the second. Charlie Smith singled, stole second and scored on a single by Moran.

South Finkbine golf course will be closed to the public and all university personnel except varsity golfers from 1 p.m. today until 2 p.m. Saturday.

Iowa hosts an eight-team, 36-hole tournament Saturday at 8 a.m. The teams will play practice rounds on South Finkbine this afternoon.

Iowa Netmen At Illinois

Iowa's tennis team, led by Arden Stokstad, meets Illinois at East Lansing, Mich., today, and then plays Michigan and Michigan State Saturday.

The Hawkeyes now have a 4-6 record for the season. Dave Strauss, the No. 1 singles man, will be back in action after missing two weeks because of a back injury.

Other men in Iowa's lineup will be Marc Mears, Dick Riley, Tom Benson and John Ebert.

Illinois' leading player, Frank Noble, who returns this season after missing 1963 competition with a forearm injury, placed second in the Big Ten in 1962. Other top Illini include sophomores John Sisson and Tom Bauer.

Bowling Champion

Fran Feuer, Iowa coed who won the third National Intercollegiate Women's All Events Bowling title at Minneapolis in April, displays the Marion Ladewig trophy presented to her.

Miss Feuer, a junior from Winnetka, Ill., rolled a 626 series to capture the singles crown, contributed a 593 series to the winning team score and added a 554 series toward a second place doubles finish for her winning 1773 all-events total.

Voting for All-Star Team Won't Be Done by Fans

NEW YORK (AP) — The major league All-Star teams for 1964 again will be chosen by the players, coaches and managers, Commissioner Ford Frick said Thursday.

The game will be played at New York's brand new Shea Stadium, Tuesday, July 7.

A recommendation by the player representatives to return the voting to the fans "in order to stir up more interest" was rejected on the grounds it was "not practical."

"The teams chosen in the past few years by the players has been regarded as truly representative and that method of selection has been retained," said Frank Slocum of the commissioner's office.

The ALL-STAR teams had been picked by the fans from the game's inception in 1933.

The vote was turned over to the players in 1957 after considerable criticism of the 1956 fan vote which resulted in six Cincinnati players as starters and two others as alternates following a campaign sponsored by a Cincinnati radio station.

"THE COMMISSIONER'S office received suggestions regarding the possibility of having the teams chosen by the fans rather than by the players," said Slocum. "As a result, a lengthy study was made of the possibilities, including con-

Rookies' Homers Give Red Sox Win over Tigers

DETROIT (AP) — Rookies Dalton Jones and Tony Conigliaro each slamed two-run homers as the Boston Red Sox scored a 7-3 victory over the Detroit Tigers Thursday.

Jones' homer, his fifth hit of the two-game series, came in the third inning off Detroit starter Phil Regan and gave the Red Sox a brief 2-0 lead.

Conigliaro's homer, his fifth of the season, was hit off reliever Julio Navarro in the ninth.

Dick Stuart also knocked in a pair of runs for Boston.

Stuart's bases-loaded single in the seventh was the deciding hit. A throwing error by Detroit catcher Bill Freehan, after the first two batters had singled, aided the rally.

LBJ Views Poverty Areas Of Appalachia

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — President Johnson met the poor folks of Appalachia and the mid-South Thursday and coupled an appeal for public support in his anti-poverty program with a job at Sen. Barry Goldwater.

Johnson flew by helicopter from Seymour Johnson Air Force Base near Goldsboro, N.C., and landed in a field near the home of William David Marlow, a tenant farmer of Nash County, N.C. Marlow is supporting his wife, mother-in-law and seven children on an income estimated at $1,500 a year.

The President and his party shook hands with the Marlows, who were waiting for him on the porch. "Hello, I'm President Johnson," the chief executive said. The group then went into the Marlow's home for a brief visit.

The crowd awaiting Johnson at the airbase was 10,000, up to that time the largest of the day to greet the President on his six-state, two-day trip.

Earlier the President slapped at Goldwater before an audience of 7,000 persons in the Knoxville, Tenn., Coliseum. He assailed "men of timid faith and narrow vision." He said if such people had their way the "for sale signs would be on TVA this hour."

It was Goldwater who once said a "for sale" sign should be posted on the Appalachia properties of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Johnson was in top form as he swung through Maryland, West Virginia, Ohio and Tennessee en route to North Carolina and Georgia.

In his Knoxville text, Johnson cited GOP charges that his proposed war on poverty is a "cruel hoax." Johnson did not identify the author of this charge but aides traveling with him said he referred to former Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

Johnson said that 30 years ago some people called the Social Security plan a cruel hoax.

"I do not believe you want men of timid faith and narrow vision to speak for the conscience of America," Johnson said.

"I do not believe you want to entrust the American dream to men who would turn it into a nightmare."

Knoxville is in the heart of TVA country and Johnson took the opportunity to praise TVA as "the world's shining example of how government and free enterprise can work hand-in-hand to help people."

Johnson's first stop on this second Appalachia tour in 13 days was in Cumberland, Md., where he took the stance of a preacher and drew everything except "amen" from his audience as he appealed for public support for his anti-poverty program.

"Our first objective," he said, "is to free 30 million Americans from the prisons of poverty. Let me hear your voices!"

And several thousand voices rose in a chorus of approval.

Equally enthusiastic were crowds at the Martinsburg, W. Va., airport where he changed from helicopter to jet transport, and on the campus of Ohio University at Athens, Ohio.

Thousands swarmed around Johnson's open car as he drove the half-mile to the university's auditorium from the football stadium where his helicopter landed.

Frequently the motorcade was halted. Johnson jumped out of his car several times and went on a handshaking spree. Occasionally, he waved his big Texas hat at the crowd.

RR Strikes

End Quickly

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Firemen engaged in brief strikes against three railroads Thursday — the day the rail lines began to eliminate hundreds of firemen's jobs under the ruling of an arbitration board.

Pickets appeared at the Pennsylvania Railroad's Conway, Pa., yards — the world's largest — at dawn, but they left shortly after noon.

Firemen struck at 12:01 a.m. — the effective hour of the job cut-back — against two important Illinois switching lines, the Toledo, Peoria & Western Railroad — TPW — and the Peoria & Pekin Union Railway — PPU.

But, slightly more than 10 hours later, R. J. Strand, Peoria district general chairman of the AFL-CIO Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, put an end to the stoppage. He acted after he had received a call from union chiefs in Washington.

Operations quickly began a return to normal.

The arbitration board set up by Congress last year ruled that the railroads could eliminate unneeded firemen on diesel locomotives in yard and freight service.

Under the ruling: Men with less than two years seniority could be culled out Thursday with severance pay. Those with 2 to 10 years seniority must be offered similar jobs at comparable pay. Men with more than 10 years seniority cannot be removed.

LBJ Appeals For Rejection Of Extremism

Ends Six-State Tour With Cheering Crowds Of 500,000 Georgians

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Half a million Georgians poured into streets Friday to cheer President Johnson before he wound a politically profitable trip through the poverty-stricken Appalachia area.

Johnson strongly appealed for social justice and rejection of extremism and "the tattered and credited banners of the past."

FROM Atlanta, Johnson traveled by helicopter to Gainesville, northeast Georgia for the phase of his trip.

"Full participation in our society can no longer be denied men because of their race, religion or region," he said in Gainesville.

Recalling a visit of President Franklin D. Roosevelt to the area in 1938, Johnson said: "If President Roosevelt were standing on the square today, he would say 'America must go forward with compassion and justice for all it cannot go forward at all.'"

Johnson said he wanted an "era of compassion and justice" pledged to carry forward his fight against poverty and discrimination.

"I BELIEVE Georgia will lead with the entire nation to a day that every man enjoys all the security that him by the Constitution," he said there.

In suburban Atlanta, the president picked up a beggar on the car hood by Beth Harlan Johnson hoisted the bound man's hand around the collar — the ears as he had done to his beagles at the White House.

"They understand this here," he said.

CORRECTION

In an article appearing Thursday's edition of The Iowan about the Iowa Law view, the writer said, "... those (law) faculty who aware (of the long hours) quired for the editors to cut out each sentence in a manuscript submitted for publication are usually the ones writing law reviews — they usually to class unprepared because the rigorous demands of writing."

This inadvertent wording led to the erroneous impression that professors come to class unprepared because of the rigorous demands of their writing. The student being interviewed actually said that editors of the Law Review often come to class unprepared because of the hours required to edit and publish the review.

The Daily Iowan regrets this misquotation.
