When the field was cut to the low 50 for today's final 36 holes, he only notable casualty was Sebastian Miguel of Spain. The cut-off point was 148. There were 23 layers under par for the two rounds.

Behind Rodgers and Lagrange, Guy Wolstenholme of Britain and Ted Ball of Australia tied for fourth at 137. Ball had a 67 for the second round. Tony Grubb of Britain, Brian Wilkes of South Africa and Jean Gariel of France had 88's.

Goldwater Unique; Not An Exploiter

By WALTER R. MEARS

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — While the campaign crowd cheered him, Arizona's Sen. Barry Goldwater stood smiling and waiting — and a trifle impatient.

For nearly 10 minutes the ovation thundered through New York's Madison Square Garden, and the chant "We want Barry" became a roar.

"You'll get him if you'll just be quiet," the senator shouted. Goldwater's reaction to that burst of cheers may be unique in presidential campaigning, but so in many ways, is Goldwater.

"He's not a man who likes to exploit his triumphs," said campaign director Denis Kitchel. "He acts pretty much in victory as he does in defeat."

BY HIS OWN ACCOUNT, Goldwater is bucking the trend of history, seeking the White House as a senator from a small western state.

He goes where he wants when he wants, often ignoring the protests of his local campaign following. He's said some things that would have other politicians washing their own mouths with soap.

He is outspoken and blunt, but introspective and affable; he is at once doctrinaire and doubting.

Goldwater is a man with his own ideas, not only about presidential campaigning, but almost everything else.

AN EPISCOPALIAN, Goldwater doesn't campaign on Sundays. He has walked briskly through more than one Sunday-morning crowd of airport greeters.

While Goldwater denies it, the suspicion persists that he was swept by the tide of events and the fervor of his conservative following into a presidential bid he didn't really relish.

But last Jan. 3 — three days after his 55th birthday — Goldwater announced he was going after it.

"I wouldn't have got into this if I didn't really want it," the senator insists.

"HOWEVER," he has no overwhelming desire to be President," says a traveling aide. "If he thought there was another conservative who could do the job he'd be glad to have him to it."

Goldwater is no spellbinder on a campaign platform. He delivers some of his toughest campaign attacks in a near-monotone. But Goldwater fans turn out for message, not style. And the senator gives them that — two-fisted at

Barry Asks Miller To Be VP Nominee

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater has asked Rep. William E. Miller of New York to become his vice presidential running mate, Sen. Thurston B. Morton said Wednesday night, and Miller has accepted.

"The Miller matter is all but settled," the Kentucky senator told a reporter.

There was no official comment from Goldwater but at his headquarters it was learned that the senator had phoned Miller this afternoon to offer the New York congressman the second place and Miller accepted.

Edward K. Nellor, Goldwater's press secretary, said the senator would have no immediate comment.

Miller also had no immediate comment but he has made clear he would like to have the nomination and his friends mounted an active drive in his behalf Wednesday.

Morton, who is permanent chairman of the Republican National Convention, said:

"I am told that Goldwater called Miller and asked him to take second place and Miller agreed to do so."

Earlier in the day, Miller, the retiring GOP national chairman, was pictured then as having the inside track.

Late-Comer Scranton Loses Moderate Bid

Gov. William Scranton of Pennsylvania lost his late-starting bid for the Presidential nomination from the Republican Party Wednesday night.

His campaign, which started only five weeks ago, was a hard-hitting battle from the beginning. Scranton repeatedly asserted that the American people and the rank and file members of the Republican Party didn't want Barry Goldwater to be nominated.

A death blow to the Scranton campaign was dealt on June 20 when Illinois delegates voted unanimously to support Goldwater.

The Scranton forces were badly beaten in their attempt to change the Republican platform Tuesday night, although Gov. Scranton did receive some votes Wednesday night from the New Hampshire delegation.

Sen. Goldwater Receives Nomination Unanimously

Iowa Caucus Splits, 14-10, For Goldwater

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Iowa's delegates were divided almost down the middle as the Republican national convention neared a decision on its presidential nomination Wednesday night.

Polled at a caucus, 14 delegates said they preferred Sen. Barry Goldwater and would vote for him.

The 10 others lined up behind Gov. William Scranton of Pennsylvania.

"In casting my ballot for Mr. Scranton, I am exercising my conviction that a majority of the people in Iowa favor him," Republican State Chairman Robert Ray said.

Sen. Bourke B. Hickenlooper told the delegation he thought Goldwater has the best chance of being elected president.

Rep. Charles B. Hoeven of Alton, another Goldwater supporter, said Scranton is a "me too" candidate.

"You can't elect a 'me too' candidate in the United States," Hoeven said. "We tried it with Wilkie, Dewey and Nixon."

Those who said they would cast their ballots for Goldwater included:

Favoring Scranton were: William Koehler, John E. Warren, Atty. Gen. Evan Hultman, Harold Goldman, Ralph Bastian, John C. McDonald, Francis Braley, Ray, George Nagle and Ben Webster Jr.

Gov. Scranton Makes Move For Acclamation

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater swept to a unanimous Republican Presidential nomination Wednesday night and achieved the goal he pursued long and hard: The chance to challenge President Johnson this fall.

Gov. William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania moved that Goldwater's nomination be made unanimous, following approximately 30 minutes of balloting by delegates of the 50 states. Gov. George Romney of Michigan seconded the motion, which was carried by voice vote in the convention hall.

The Arizona conservative's expertly engineered bandwagon simply rolled over Gov. William W. Scranton and the stop-Goldwater forces arrayed under liberal and moderate banners at the convention.

THE VICTORY had its cost in wounds and bitterness. Goldwater is expected to act swiftly, beginning in his acceptance speech Thursday night, to try to mend differences and whip the party into fighting trim for the rough battle ahead.

His nomination came with the traditional noise and drama of political conventions, even if there was no surprise.

GOLDWATER has acknowledged — with what Richard M. Nixon described as "refreshing candor" — that he has an uphill fight on his hands against Johnson.

SCRANTON HAS said Goldwater can't win and will bring down with him many Republican state and congressional candidates because of his views on domestic problems and foreign policy.

FRANTICALLY, Scranton's forces attempted to chip away at Goldwater's solid wall of delegate support, built meticulously from the precincts up since he told the 1960 convention it was time for conservatives to take control of the party.

Scranton, who didn't enter the competition until Goldwater refused to vote for cutting off the Southern filibuster against the civil rights bill, never got his campaign off the ground.

He tried to make a breakthrough in the big Illinois delegation but was rebuffed. Worse, the delegation's chairman, Sen. GOP Leader Everett M. Dirksen, gave Goldwater's drive its final shot in the arm.

HE AGREED to nominate his fellow senator, although they had been on opposite sides in the civil rights bill vote.

Arriving in San Francisco, Scranton saw that his fading chances had just about disappeared. He challenged Goldwater, an old friend, to a debate in a letter so sharply worded it made Goldwater "boiling mad."

Later Scranton said, "I did not write it and did not see it and did not sign it."

THE LETTER was about the only flash of real excitement during the convention.

The Scranton forces also engaged the Goldwater backers in a lively convention floor fight over the seating of delegates. The Scranton motion would have barred delegates chosen in discriminatory procedures.

The Goldwater delegates shouted it down and showed the senator's iron grip on the convention.

They carried to the convention floor Tuesday night motions to broaden the platform's civil rights plank, to denounce extremism and to reaffirm the president's solitary control over nuclear weapons.

All the proposals were aimed at Goldwater, and all were defeated.

All Liberal Arts To Benefit—

Physics Building II Planned

(Editor's note: Aug. 6-7 the State Board of Regents will be asked to approve an SUI asking of $22,615,900 for building projects during the 1965-67 biennium. If the Regents approve all 17 projects included, they will be presented in January to the State Legislature for consideration. This is the first of a series of articles on the building projects being requested for the SUI campus.)

By NORBERT TATRO
Assistant City Editor

Part I of the new Physics Building will benefit not just the SUI Physics and Astronomy and Mathematics Departments, but the entire Liberal Arts College.

The Part II building — to be just east of the new Physics Research Building now under construction at Dubuque and Jefferson Streets — will house undergraduate facilities in the Physics and Astronomy Department, all facilities for the Mathematics Department and the Computer Center.

Dr. James Van Allen, head of the Physics and Astronomy Department, in an interview with a Daily Iowan reporter, pointed out that the Part II building will free the present Physics Building on the Pentacrest for use by other departments in the Liberal Arts College.

Just what departments might move into the old building is not known, but some SUI officials list greatest needs in the areas of humanities, social sciences and foreign languages.

Part II of the Physics Building is one of 17 projects the University is slated to ask the State Board of Regents to approve in August. The 1965 State Legislature will be asked to appropriate funds for the projects approved by the Regents.

The 17 SUI projects total more than $22 million.

Part I, now called the Physics

Research Building, is to be used only for offices, physics library and graduate facilities.

The building under construction cannot be used for undergraduate facilities for at least 10 years after completion because of regulations governing the approximately $1 million in federal funds being used for it.

Part II, which has been in the planning stage for about five years, will be connected to the Part I building. Part II will run north and south between Jefferson Street and Iowa Avenue. Van Allen said the building would take up all the East Hall parking lot and would run almost to the sidewalk along the west edge of Easthall.

About one-fifth of the new building will be occupied by the Computer Center.

The Computer Center, according to a University report presented to the Regents in June, will need a new computer in 1965. "It is doubtful that the present space will be adequate for a new machine," the report said. The Computer Center is now located in East Hall.

"Although present space houses the computer and allied equipment," the report says, "it affords only minimal service and operational space. There is no room for needed additional allied equipment."

Housing the Computer Center in the new Physics Building is logical, Van Allen points out. "We have a close relationship with the center. We're its biggest single customer." He estimated Physics Department demands make up about one-third of the Computer Center's business.

At present, Van Allen says, "we're running back and forth all the time."

Eliminating "running back and forth" for other departments is also one of the objectives of the new Physics Building. When Part I is completed — Van Allen estimated in May, 1966 — the Physics and Astronomy Department will be spread over two buildings two blocks apart.

The Mathematics - Physics - Astronomy Library will have to be split. Physics books will go to the new building; the others will stay at their present location.

Part II is expected to cost $1,600,000. SUI officials hope to get $100,000 in federal grants. Van Allen says these grants may or may not be obtained. No effort, he says, has been made to acquire federal money for the Part II building.

An "optimistic schedule" would put completion of Part II at the fall of 1968, Van Allen says, if both the Regents and Legislature approve appropriations for the building.

(Tomorrow: the proposed Music Building.)

Computer Center Elbow Room Rare

The University Computer Center, located in the north wing of East Hall, has but few offices and those few are frequently crowded. This picture was taken at a period of "low" usage; only one person is at each desk. Often during the day six or eight people are crowded in the small office, trying to use the desks, find data in the file cabinets, or getting coffee. Plans call for a new Computer Center covering 16,000 square feet in the proposed Part II of the Physics Building. The new building would be located in land now used for parking lot adjacent to East Hall.

'Dinny' is all frosting, no cake

By JOE KIRKISH
Iowan Reviewer

(Editor's note: This is the second Iowan review of "Dinny and the Witches," following our policy of publishing two reviews of each of the Repertory Theatre presentations.)

DINNY & THE WITCHES, presented by Repertory Theatre, is a spirited, fast moving production, extremely enjoyable in its parts. But all frosting and no cake, it will not last in memory beyond the theatre's exits.

THE FAULT doesn't lie in the direction. Prof. Larry Clark guides his cast with the same professional quality that made ROSHOMON the success it was. With only rare exceptions, his inventiveness, over-all understanding of what he wants and how to get it and sense of unity are once again obvious in this production. Nor were the technical effects at fault. In a play dominated by some of the neatest tricks since Wayne and Schuster, an unusual degree of care was paid to everything from function to dramatic effects in both staging and lighting; and costumes by Hazel Hall were the most appropriate, down to the last detail, for the first time in years. And even the sound effects, often a kind of crutch, were appropriate and came off fairly well.

AND ABOVE ALL, the cast was not to blame. Never did I see actors work so valiantly against such odds to please an audience. Though not equal in excellence (the 3 rulers and 3 fennies played visually well but spoke their lines with only occasional quality, while Dinny, played by Sean Ian Glynn, was consistently created but not believably sincere in his seemingly open-faced I-love-the-worldness), still they, along with the rest of the unusually good cast, built a solid rapport, partly because they sensed the underlying weaknesses in the play and worked desperately in their attempts to create a silk purse out of the proverbial sow's ear.

Also they possessed the talents to actually succeed at times in overcoming the deficiencies. The personal attention paid to the creation of believable characters out of flimsy stuff, though generally forced to resort to "types" in order to carry across the skin-and-bones parts, and surprisingly clever make-up down to such minute details as skin tones and nail polish, all combined to make the play enjoyable at least scene by scene.

IT WAS PLEASING, for example, to see even so badly written a part as that of Jake come to life through the capable talents of Blake Leach, who played the role not unlike a youthful Bert Lahr.

What then makes DINNY only a near-hit, a play that succeeds only as long as it is watched, a production that fades in minutes like a dying echo?

IN THE FIRST PLACE, author William Gibson is writing out of his element. He is a good writer, but a realistic writer, and he creates his best material within familiar bounds. MIRACLE WORKER, his first success, is a heart-warming play but built in a commercial, familiar structure, as is his second success, TWO FOR THE SEESAW—still realistic and, though less so, still relatively conservative in format.

IN DINNY he seemed to make an unfortunate leap into fantasy, too quickly, and he was unable to cope with that rare medium.

Fantasy has been successfully handled by his predecessors, some of whom he copied from badly. His witches, for example, smack of the madwomen in Giroudoux's fine satirical fantasy, but they lack their richness and depth. And the entire play rings suspiciously with blends from HARVEY and MRS. McTHING, but without the discipline of their authors.

AS A RESULT, much of DINNY is not only badly imitative, but obscure where it ought to be subtle and muddy where it should glow with clarity. Too many scenes are arbitrarily tossed in, too many threads left to be tied at the end and too many questions left unanswered so far as motivation of the characters are concerned. The underlying theme seems to be that perfection can never be found on earth, so it shouldn't be sought there. One witch bases that assumption on original sin, the next on inefficiency, and the third on human nature. So far, so good.

But the completely arbitrary happenings that occur within such a thought arouse the suspicion that Gibson himself was unclear in his own mind as to his modus operandi. And since confusion and chaos must be clearly defined in order to be communicated, first in the author's mind and then in his writing, it can only be interpreted as such when the delineation is dramatically THERE, and not when haphazardly jumbled, as has occurred in this production.

BUT MORE is at fault, within the dialogue itself. Almost intentionally, Gibson has sprinkled his play with some of the most banal material ever dared. Bad parodies, based mainly on word opposites ("Our Father, who are in HELL," etc.), some in bad taste and others not even humorous ("Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the sword"), are further chinked with more unfunny borrowings from the classics: "That sounds like a tale told by an idiot, or something."

On down to the lowest of all, the pun: during a strip tease scene, the cry, "What's coming off here?"

All unforfeitable!

THE AUTHOR'S LACK of discipline was further demonstrated by his attempts to intersperse music through the play, and so we were expected to accept some badly faked trumpet playing along with a musical that wasn't really a musical but a straight play in which characters awkwardly broke into a cappella songs at frequent and inopportune moments in the action.

AND, FINALLY, the curtain calls, in spite of an earlier promise not to hold them, were just too precious and very anti-climatic. The last 10 minutes of the play, in fact, was written as a series of climaxes, one chained to the other instead of being built upon one another, as if Gibson were saying, "Since I can't provide you with one good climax, I'll smother you with half a dozen, the sum total of which should add up to a gigantic wallop — and if that isn't enough, I'll tag on a gimmick curtain call to solidly clinch it."

But this is the way the play will end, not with a wallop, but a gay, titillating whimper.

Goldwater now faces problem of unification

THE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION in San Francisco has the usual quota of noisy demonstrations, pretty girls and campaign gimmicks, such as cans of "gold water." But there are also some unusual elements present in the activity centering around the Cow Palace.

The overwhelming support that the large majority of the delegates have shown for Barry Goldwater of the Arizona Senator's nomination seem a routine piece of business.

The large support Goldwater has is not a surprise; it reflects the intensive campaigning that Goldwater forces did within the various state Republican organizations, long before the convention.

What is unusual is the conflict between the delegate support for Goldwater and the lack of support found in other Republicans by the Gallop and Harris polls, and other samplings such as the Des Moines Register's Iowa Poll.

These polls, which have proven to be reliable in the past, indicate that Goldwater is not the preferred choice of the rank-and-file Republican sampled.

But these polls have not had any great effect on the delegates in San Francisco, nor did the protest march of 35,000 civil rightists in downtown San Francisco — the largest civil rights protest since last summer's March on Washington.

The strength of Goldwater's support showed well in the floor fights over the platform: there were no concessions to the liberal Republicans, who may find it difficult to run on the Goldwater-Republican platform this fall.

Gen. Eisenhower, in one of his more daring comments on the political scene, criticized the convention delegates for the boos that greeted Gov. Rockefeller and others who spoke in favor of the platform amendments. The General felt that booging gave a bad impression of division within the Party.

The convention has been divided, bitterly so. Sen. Goldwater has a hard task ahead of him in trying to unify the Party for November and he has no help from the platform.

The Republican nominee for the presidency may find that modification of his views may be the only answer to unification. The question now is whether these views can or will be modified.

South Carolina textile manufacturer called 'single most influential delegate'

By ROBERT S. ALLEN and PAUL SCOTT

SAN FRANCISCO, July 15 — The single most influential delegate at the Republican National Convention is a six-foot-two, New York born South Carolinian who is totally unknown to the public, is aptly nicknamed "big red," rules an extensive textile empire and is worth more than $100 million.

THIS UNIQUE political power is Roger Milliken, 48. Married, has five children, lives in Spartanburg, S.C., calls Yale his alma mater and is a dedicated friend, supporter and major financial backer of Senator Barry Goldwater from way back — starting in 1959 when they first met after a speech by the Arizonaan in Greenville, S.C.

To Milliken the views, concepts and preachments of Goldwater were true gospel and time has intensified this deeply held conviction.

AT THE 1960 Republican convention, Milliken felt so strongly about his champion that he personally put up all the money for a blitz drive and huge rally to nominate him for vice president, despite Nixon's avowed preference for Henry Cabot Lodge as running mate.

Only Goldwater's insistence on withdrawing in the interest of harmony, averted an explosive, headline-making clash.

THIS CONVENTION it's different, but one thing is the same. This time it is all Goldwater and, as four years ago, the unknown but all-powerful Milliken is in the inner center of the all-pervasive and irresistible Goldwater organization, quietly but firmly supervising and directing just about everything that it does.

MILLIKEN has a key voice in every major decision and move, and most others, too. Also, he more than carries his share of footing the bills. Among the politicians, Milliken is admirably known as, "A man who puts his money where his mouth is."

The two men are in constant touch through an elaborate communications network that Milliken established and paid for.

Operating from a downtown hotel through this network, Goldwater, all his numerous leaders and representatives in every delegation, plus many other individuals can be reached in minutes, or less.

A TOP ASSISTANT of Milliken

in this vital activity is John Grenier, 33-year-old Birmingham, Ala., lawyer. Also filling key roles are Peter O'Donnell, Texas, founder of the original "Draft Goldwater Committee," and Wirt Yerger, Miss., head of the Southern Chairmen's Conference.

In addition to personally knowing all Goldwater leaders and contacts at the convention and being in touch with them, Milliken knows or has instantly available everything that is deemed necessary to be known about every one of the 279 Southern delegates — and many others from other sections.

THIS INFORMATION covers pertinent personal, business and other "valuable" data. As he does in directing his textile empire and other business interests, Milliken "pops in" unannounced at delegation headquarters, etc., for a personal check-up to make sure everything is proceeding as it should.

The South Carolinian was doing that in Goldwater's behalf long before the convention. A member of the potent finance committee of the National Committee, Milliken used this inner position to repeatedly ward off efforts of Goldwater rivals to bring big party contributor pressure to bear on delegates to switch.

GRAPHICALLY illustrative of this tense backstage maneuvering was Milliken's instant and decisive counter to the challenge of a Scranton supporter on the finance committee who hotly contended the $12.8 million "minimum" goal set for the election campaign could not be obtained if Goldwater were the nominee.

That ended the discussion. Another important score credited to Milliken is persuading New Jersey's Richard Sellers, treasurer of the National Committee, to swing over to Goldwater despite strenuous appeals by big financial supporters of Scranton to back him. Sellers' timely declaration for Goldwater is credited with undercutting a high-powered blitz to sweep New Jersey's 40-men-ber delegation into the Scranton column.

Core of the Goldwater organization and immovable foundation of the Arizona's victorious race for the presidential nomination are the 279 delegates from the Southern states. Every one of these delegations is all white. There is not a Negro among them.

There are only 11 Negro delegates in the convention. The SOUTHERN delegates are tightly organized and led by devoted Goldwater followers. The Southerners have their own headquarters meshed into the Goldwater organization and communications network. While separate, they function as a unit.

In charge of the Southern headquarters is John Grenier, the young Birmingham lawyer who is a top Milliken lieutenant. Working closely with Grenier are Texas' O'Donnell and Mississippi's Yerger.

The Southern headquarters takes care of everything for the delegates and their wives — from providing satisfactory hotel accommodations to baby sitters, if that is wanted.

This is the first time in GOP history that the South has operated in this sledge-hammer manner and with such strikingly resounding success.

Milliken sees himself as representative of the new breed of "Goldwater Republican" that is coming into ascendancy in the party, particularly in the South.

"I LOOK UPON myself as one of the leaders of the 'new' Republican Party that Senator Goldwater is building," Milliken recently told a business friend. "This new Republican party is a young party, especially in the South. We attracted some 15,000 young people, many of them just out of college, to a state convention in Texas."

"It was the largest in the history of the South. The leaders of this new Republican Party are young, in their 30s and 40s. With Goldwater as their standard bearer, they are going to bring the two-party system to the South and win a national election in doing so."

Buchwald says—

Warren Harding is definitely 'out' as Barry's running mate

By ART BUCHWALD

SAN FRANCISCO — It can now be definitely confirmed that Sen. Barry Goldwater has decided not to have Warren G. Harding as his running mate on the Republican ticket. The decision was made after the discovery last week of 250 love letters Mr. Harding had written to a married woman in Marion, Ohio, the former President's hometown.

The scandal which broke right on the eve of the Republican convention, BUCHWALD has turned San Francisco upside down. There had been rumors for years about Mr. Harding's private life, but none of them could be confirmed.

Then an historian named Francis Russell, working on a Harding biography, found the letters and revealed their contents. Harding supporters here in San Francisco said that the revelation at this time was part of the smear campaign of the anti-Harding forces at the GOP convention.

A SPOKESMAN for the Harding Vice-Presidential ticket said, "Mr. Harding's personal life should have no effect on his qualifications as Mr. Goldwater's running mate. His philosophy is as near to that of the Senator's as any of the men mentioned for the ticket, and it would be a pity if the American people condemned a man because of these letters."

Another Harding supporter said, "I haven't seen the love letters, so I can't comment. The only thing is that it's hard to believe that a man like Mr. Harding would write them on Senate stationery, with the taxpayer's money.

WE QUOTED one of the poems Mr. Harding wrote to Mrs. Phillips, the wife of a Marion merchant.

I love you more than all the world,
Possession wholly imploring;
Mid passion I am oft-times whirled,
Off-times admire-adoring,
O God! That fate would only give Us privilege to love and live.

THE HARDING man said, "I don't believe that is out of the mainstream of Republican thinking. As a matter of fact, it squares very much with the 1964 Republican platform."

But many Goldwater supporters, who were leaning towards Harding as the Vice-Presidential candidate have started to have second thoughts on the matter.

"The American women," a lady delegate told us, "will not approve of a Vice-Presidential candidate who has a mistress."

ANOTHER GOLDWATER supporter said, "The scandal could lose us the Bible belt."

And still another Goldwater-plunged delegate told us, "The personal life of Harding is not our affair, but if he wants to run for public office, he's going to have to give up Mrs. Phillips."

THE LAST WORD on the love letters came from Goldwater's chief advisors said, "As far as we're concerned, as of now Harding is dead."

Miller appears to be likely choice for veep

By DORIS FLEESON

SAN FRANCISCO — The harshness of Gov. William Scranton's last-ditch fight against Sen. Barry Goldwater surprised Goldwater and upset his strategy for the election campaign against President Johnson.

UNTIL THE CONVENTION was about to open, the Senator did not close the door to the Governor for Vice-President. To Goldwater, his attractive young rival looked like the best olive branch he could offer to the moderate internationalists who oppose a Goldwater nomination and threaten to bolt Johnson.

While there has been talk of National Chairman William Miller for second place, Goldwater is not so divorced from reality as to believe that Miller is truly a national figure. Nor is Miller a representative New Yorker with local prestige and a hold on the imagination of that great state.

MILLER is what Al Smith used to call an apple-knocker, meaning that he comes from an upstate district largely immune from the broadening pressures of a pluralistic society. He is a lawyer with public utility clients who wanted him to go to the House and he did. Until this year they had successfully resisted his desire to get out and make money for his large family. His revolt was made possible in part because his majority dropped in 1962.

Goldwater and Miller understand each other very well. They have been party spokesmen for four years, and they have traveled many miles away from the Washington spotlight, sometimes together but always meeting the same big wheels in the party.

THEY KNOW, therefore, that their views are much alike. Goldwater is from a small state whose meaningful growth has been from the top down, due to an influx of well-heeled people who like the climate. Miller's district is fairly typical of those Northern areas which furnish so many emigrants to softer, sunnier climes of the Southwest and southern coast of the Pacific.

Miller's Vice-Presidential boom is largely self-started. An important ingredient of it is that he is a Catholic and presumably will attract the more conservative among his co-religionists.

GOLDWATER has said here that he will run a "gut-cutting" campaign against President Johnson. Miller, judging by his past speeches and House record, does not know how to run any other kind.

The Senator could, of course, decide to turn the low road over to Miller if Miller is chosen. The almost-certain nominee is giving the matter consideration and discussing it with his callers. He has expressed surprise to one of them that he has had so few disagreements with the possible choice of Miller.

WHAT THE SENATOR forgets is that this is a Goldwater-dominated convention which wants what he wants, and also that only possessors of that little gold eagle, insignia of the Inside Circle of True Believers, gives entry to him.

All outsiders have trouble even landing on the Goldwater hotel floor and, once there, are rigidly screened by a literally eagle-eyed receptionist. The truth is, reported by eagle wearers, that Goldwater spent most of the week end toying with his ham radio set, specially imported for his delectation. The American influence on many aspects of life in West Germany is very noticeable, according to Prof. Fred L. Fehling, of the SUI Department of German.

Prof. Fehling returned to Iowa City July 11, after spending a month in West Germany as a guest of the Federal Republic of West Germany. He and five other American professors of German visited principal cities, universities and cultural centers.

THE WEST GERMAN Ministry of Culture sponsored the planned tour to acquaint the professors with the educational and cultural aspects of West Germany.

"In education, the West Germans seem to have taken their cue from America," Prof. Fehling said. "They are apparently trying to Americanize their educational system in regard to a more natural student-teacher relationship."

Fehling said the West Germans do not want to make their educational system so easy that the traditional European quality will be sacrificed. The students in the secondary school classes which Fehling observed were "kept pret-

Ex-Convict Wanted In Iowa Sentenced To Indiana Prison

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — An ex-convict accused of attempted murder in Iowa was sentenced Wednesday to 15 years in the Indiana State Prison for the armed robbery of a South Bend supermarket.

Richard Everett Fuqua, 42, who pleaded guilty to the charge June 26, was sentenced by Judge F. Kenneth Dempsey of St. Joseph Superior Court. He was arrested in a hotel near the supermarket 45 minutes after it was robbed of $209 on June 18.

A charge of assault and battery with intent to murder is pending in Davenport, Iowa, against Fuqua in connection with the critical wounding of a Davenport woman, Mrs. Annabel Kirkman, two days before the South Bend holdup.

Police said Fuqua has a record dating back to 1940, including two escapes from prison in Oklahoma. He was sentenced to a life prison term in Huntsville, Tex., for robbery by assault in 1943 but was paroled later.

Dr. Sheppard Released From Prison

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Dr. Sam Sheppard, convicted wife slayer, was ordered released Wednesday from Ohio Penitentiary by a federal judge who held he had been denied his constitutional rights for a fair trial.

U.S. Dist. Judge Carl A. Weinman ordered the release under $10,000 bond. He said Sheppard's custody is "void," and if Cuyahoga County — or the state — takes no action within 60 days the release becomes final.

Later, state officials said this would mean that Sheppard could be released Thursday, then go to Cleveland to appear in Common Pleas Court there preparatory to setting a date for a new trial.

F. LEE BAILEY of Boston, Sheppard's attorney, said in Boston after hearing of the decision, that he would come to Columbus on Thursday. He planned to accompany Sheppard to Cleveland, if the release can be arranged by that time.

Sheppard, in prison since 1955, has had his case in the courts since his conviction, but all his appeals, even to the U.S. Supreme Court, had been denied until now.

The murder case attracted almost worldwide interest. It had its beginning in the Sheppards' Bay Village home near Cleveland on July 4, 1954. Sheppard's pregnant wife, Marilyn, was found slain in her bedroom with 35 body wounds from a blunt instrument.

SHEPPARD MAINTAINED then, and since, that a "bushy haired" intruder killed his wife.

The osteopath was arrested July 30, 1954, and was indicted on a first-degree murder charge Aug. 17, 1954. The trial began Oct. 18 of that year, and on Dec. 21, a jury brought in a verdict of second-degree murder. Sheppard was sentenced to life imprisonment. Immediately, his attorneys began a fight for his freedom that has continued without a letup.

SARE Members To Wash Cars To Help COFO

SARE-Friends of SNCC will hold a car wash Saturday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in Benner's Towncrest Shopping Center.

About a dozen SARE members will be on hand to wash cars for $1. Money from the car wash will be sent to COFO, sponsors of the Mississippi Summer Project which is working to help Negroes obtain voting rights and free schools. The local group has set a goal of $500 for the car wash, according to Mark Denzin, AI, Iowa City, a SARE member.

Five SUI students are in Mississippi this summer working with the COFO project.

Journalism Head Named to Panel

Prof. Leslie G. Moeller, director of the School of Journalism, has been named a member of a panel on "New Worlds for Journalism Education," at the national convention of the Association for Education in Journalism at the University of Texas August 28.

Panel members are being asked to provide comments on the current state of professional education for journalism, and to make suggestions as to important future lines of action.

Two Boys Drown At Clear Lake

CLEAR LAKE (AP) — Two Bradford youths drowned Wednesday while canoeing on Clear Lake. Searchers recovered the bodies of Donald Swanson Jr., 6, son of Donald Swanson, and Marlin Furman, 11, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Furman.

The search for the boys began when a canoe they had rented was found floating about 800 feet from shore. Paddles and lifejackets were in the canoe.

A spectator said he saw the boys swimming toward shore, but when he looked again, the youths had disappeared.

Convention Is Big News for British Press

LONDON (AP) — The Republican convention has received unprecedented news coverage in Britain.

Sen. Barry Goldwater has been a controversial figure for Europeans from the moment he emerged as a serious candidate for the nomination. Much of the European press has been critical of him.

This criticism grew severe in some newspapers as editors envisioned prospects of a sharpening of United States foreign policy.

All this week European networks have been showing films of daily convention activities. Radio correspondents have been broadcasting direct from Cow Palace studios.

Most major newspapers have one or more correspondents in San Francisco and some have sent cartoonists. Pages of newspaper space have been devoted to explaining how Goldwater rolled up his strength and presenting the people who supported him.

The British press has published sharp criticism of Goldwater.

Gizenga Released From 'Detention'

LEOPOLDVILLE, the Congo (AP) — Antoine Gizenga, Communist-backed leader of the 1961 Stanleyville separatist government, has been freed after two and a half years of "administrative detention" on Bula-Bumba Island in the mouth of the Congo River.

The liberation was announced Wednesday night in a statement issued by the office of the new Prime Minister Moise Tshombe.

Tshombe also announced he and the Congo president, Joseph Kasavubu, would boycott the summit meeting of African heads of state and government opening Friday in Cairo.

Some African leaders had said they would not sit at the table with Tshombe, who earned their bitter enmity during copper-rich Katanga's bid for independence from the rest of the Congo while he was provincial president there.

SUI's Dr. Long Receives $21,750 Grant for Study

Dr. John Paul Long, professor of pharmacology, has received $21,750 to study the effects of nicotine on the nervous system. Long learned of the grant in a phone call a week ago, although he has not been officially informed.

Long, who has been doing research on the nervous system for the past four years, applied for the grant last month. He plans to experiment with the heart and vascular system of cats and turtles.

LONG EXPLAINED that he will isolate the auricles (upper part) of the heart and remove the sympathetic and parasympathetic nerves for study. Another heart will continue to beat in an artificial solution, as a control to Long's study.

In the next step of his experiment, Long will add nicotine to the solution and observe its effect on the rate of contraction. He hopes to determine what part of the heart and veins is directly affected by the nicotine.

A cat is used for the experiments because it is easy to isolate the nerves of the animal. The turtle is also being used, because experimenters can vary the ion content of the artificial solution, and the turtle's heart will go on beating. (An ion is an electrically charged atomic particle.)

"Nicotine produces stimulating action on the heart and veins," Long said. "We want to know how."

HIS RESEARCH is not directly connected with cancer, Long said. It is part of a larger grant sponsored by the tobacco industry. He knows of no one else at SUI who is working on a similar project.

Each year, the tobacco industry collectively spends $20 million on research. Of this amount, $10 million goes to the American Medical Association (AMA) where it is divided for individual projects. Long received his grant directly from the AMA.

"The money," Long said, "is not restricted. The only condition is that I must report my results in a reputable journal."

Public Health Nursing Understaffed in Iowa

DES MOINES (AP) — Iowa has only 59 public health nurses in 44 of the state's 99 counties, a joint conference of county officials and officials from the Iowa Board of Health was told Wednesday.

Mattie Brass, head of public health nursing in the State Health Department, said Iowa needs one nurse for each 5,000 persons. Iowa's population was 2.76 million in 1960.

Another fact brought out at the conference: One of each seven Iowans is more than 65 years old, and the figure is as high as one of five in some counties. This is one of the highest percentages in the nation.

Child Who Fell 20 Feet Released from Hospital

The twenty-month-old Iowa City boy who fell out of a second story window Tuesday left Mercy Hospital Wednesday where he was being treated for minor cuts and bruises.

The baby, Jimmy Murray, son of Mrs. Perdilla Murray, climbed out of his crib and on to the window ledge, then fell 20 feet to a sidewalk at 223 1/2 S. Dubuque St.

Johnson Greeted Tourists, Chats With Reporters

WASHINGTON (AP) — It was like old times at the White House on Wednesday — President Johnson spent 90 minutes greeting tourists, hiking around the back lawn and chatting with newsmen.

Johnson used to do such things quite regularly, but for the past couple of months has shied away from this type of breezy informality.

The President invited all newsmen staffing the White House — about 20 of them — into his office for coffee and an off-the-record chat shortly before noon.

This session was followed by a group hike of two laps around the circular drive at the rear of the White House.

On the first lap, Johnson went to a locked iron gate to greet several dozen tourists who had been looking through the bars at the hikers.

On the second lap, the President encountered his pet beagles, Him and Her, who were being given an outing by a White House employee who held them on two long chains.

The President posed for pictures with the two dogs and held them up on their hind legs.

Brezhnev Gets New Position From Nikita

MOSCOW (AP) — Leonid I. Brezhnev took a long step forward Wednesday as Premier Khrushchev's heir apparent as he relinquished his figurehead role as president of the Soviet Union to concentrate on work in the Communist party, the real source of power in Moscow.

Anastas I. Milkoyan, a close confidant of the premier who went on many a delicate mission abroad for Khrushchev, became the new president. At 68, he is reported to have asked for the easier job of president after recent illness. Brezhnev is 57, Khrushchev 70.

KHRUSHCHEV proposed the moves in the clearest political indication yet that he considers Brezhnev to be his successor to Soviet power.

The Supreme Soviet (or Parliament) gave unanimous approval for Khrushchev's resignation and long applause to the changes after Khrushchev had explained his reasons.

The premier said Brezhnev had done fruitful work as president for the last four years, but that now he is needed for full-time work as a secretary of the Communist party's Central Committee. Khrushchev is first secretary.

The stocky, heavy-browed Brezhnev is known to Western diplomats as a man with a sharp mind and a friendly, but reserved, manner.

BREZHNEV GAVE up his post as one of about a dozen party secretaries after he succeeded Marshal Kliment Voroshilov as president on May 7, 1960. At that time, Frok Kozlov was generally regarded as Khrushchev's political heir.

But two heart attacks and a stroke beginning in April 1963 removed Kozlov from the picture, although he still retains top posts.

In June 1963, Brezhnev returned to a secretaryship and lately he has been too busy for most protocol demands of the presidency.

Lutheran Pastors Study Theology at SUI Institute

Lutheran pastors from Iowa and Nebraska are studying theology this week at SUI to enrich their ministry. The SUI institute is one of 18 such study sessions held in the United States this summer.

The Lutheran Pastors Institute is being held at the SUI Continuation Study Center through July 23. It is sponsored by the Board of Theological Education of the Lutheran Church of America.

The CENTRAL Lutheran Theological Seminary of Fremont, Neb., and the Nebraska and Iowa synods of the Lutheran Church are cooperating with the Theological Board to make the institute possible.

Twenty-one Lutheran pastors from Iowa and Nebraska are enrolled in the institute, according to Gerhard Gieschen, institute director and professor of theology at Central Seminary. They are attending lectures and taking part in discussion groups.

Two subjects offered visiting pastors are Old Testament Theology and the Doctrine of Theology. George Forell, professor of religion, is one of the lecturers. He will talk on "The Problem of Method in Theology."

OTHER FACULTY members are Gieschen, director and chaplain; Ralph E. Peterson, executive director of the Department of Ministry, National Council of Churches of Christ; Robert E. Bornemann, associate professor of Old Testament and Hebrew at Dropsie College, Philadelphia; and Beryl B. Maurer, associate secretary for Town and Country, Board of American Missions.

On Sunday, members of the institute will attend Gloria Dei Lutheran Church. After the regular church service, they will join in a discussion with Rev. Roy Wingate, pastor of Gloria Dei, and members of the congregation. The discussion Sunday will deal with the responsibility of worship and preaching in church.

Gieschen said the purpose of the institute was to "enrich our ministry and ministers with advance courses and discussions."

STOCK PROMOTED—Kenneth L. Stock, 1707 Morning-side Drive, has been promoted to sergeant in the Iowa City police force. A member of the police force for the past seven years, Stock worked for the city Street Department from 1952-57.

His appointment brings the number of sergeants to four in the 22-man police force.

Ike Deplores Way Convention Trims All Amendments

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower deplored Wednesday the way the Republican convention mowed down all amendments to the party platform, saying "that is really not the democratic method, as I see it."

"This is like you have got to vote yes or no, and that is very bad," he declared.

Eisenhower, interviewed on an ABC television program on which he is a political consultant, described platform amendments offered by Gov. George Romney of Michigan as "quite good" and said he thinks they "could have been accepted without any difficulty."

He said Romney's amendment to condemn radicalism without naming any groups was exactly what he himself had done in addressing the convention Wednesday night before the floor fight over the platform.

"I thought that a really self-respecting party ought to disassociate itself from people that are known radicals," he said.

Eisenhower said he thinks the second amendment, dealing with the party's stand on civil rights, might really have added something to the platform, which was framed by a Goldwater-controlled committee.

Highway Commissioners Approve Low Road Bids

AMES (AP) — The Iowa Highway Commission Wednesday approved apparent low bids on $7.54 million worth of road construction. Nearly half of the total amount is for interstate highway projects.

Low bids on two Interstate 235 grading and paving projects in Des Moines total about a quarter of a million dollars below the commission estimates of the cost. The apparent low bids were by Arthur H. Neumann & Bros., Inc., of Des Moines.

E. M. Duesenberg, Inc., of Mason City was nearly half a million dollars below commission estimates on 5.7 miles of Interstate 80 grading in Pottawattamie County. Its apparent low bid was $963,172.

All bids on projects where federal funds are involved must be approved by the U.S. Bureau of Public Roads.

Electricians Burned Installing Equipment

Two men sustained electrical burns Wednesday when they were installing wiring equipment at the Iowa City Procter and Gamble plant. They are Ed Klosterman, 27, Forest View Trailer Court, and Leonard Smith, 57, Newton.

Klosterman received first and second degree burns on the arms and legs. Smith was treated at Mercy Hospital for minor burns on his left arm.

Both men are employed by Fandel Electric Co. of Cedar Rapids. The accident resulted from a short circuit in the installation of new equipment.

Urban Planning Goals Outdated Says Professor

Many urban planning goals are outdated because they reflect conditions of the past rather than opportunities of the future, says an SUI professor.

Writing in the June issue of the "Iowa Business Digest," Ronald R. Boyce, associate professor of geography, says that planners need a better acquaintance with cities, economic, social and geographic aspects.

Cities cannot be improved without urban planning, Boyce says, but they can be improved much more by better trained planners. Urban communities are so complex that they require the serious attention of all urban scholars. They have not received this attention. Urban planning, he says, is necessary and is here to stay; nevertheless, it is in drastic need of major revision.

To be done well, urban planning must use the talents of many people and many disciplines, says Boyce, and must not become the private domain of any one profession or group. Many practicing planners, he feels, have not had the necessary training or inclination to know how cities really work. Nevertheless, some planners, particularly those in colleges and universities, are making outstanding contributions, the SUI professor states.

The author says there are good reasons why practicing planners have not undertaken more penetrating urban studies. First, most planners are in practice and almost totally involved with current projects. Second, planning is a relatively new field and has not yet developed a research arm. Third, urban problems are difficult and require the attention of someone with broader training than a graduate planner usually has.

One of the concepts that must be taken into account in contemporary planning, says Boyce, is "spatial choice." This simply means that, because of the automobile, persons engaged in urban activity have greater choice in selecting their location.

Resuscitator Used on Girl At City Pool

Lifeguards used an artificial resuscitator Wednesday night at city pool to revive a young girl who lost consciousness after being under water about 7:30 p.m.

The girl was revived shortly after lifeguards pulled her from the water. A physician at the pool checked her and said she was not injured.

Garl J. McLaughlin, pool manager, said that incidents of this type are routine and happen several times during an ordinary summer. The Fire Department was summoned as a precautionary measure, he said.

Authorities did not record the girl's name.

North Dubuque St. Being Improved To Interstate 80

North Dubuque Street is being raised and surfaced, and a new stretch of pavement is being added to improve Iowa City access to Interstate 80.

The construction will provide a four lane highway from Interstate 80 to Iowa Avenue. The project will cost $82,000 and should be completed in four weeks.

A two-lane roadway from Kimball Road to Foster Road is being added, a distance of 3,200 feet. North Dubuque is being raised and surfaced for a distance of 800 feet from Kimball Road north.

It was Everett M. Dirksen, fluent suave-tongued senator from Illinois, who offered Goldwater to the convention as the grandson of an immigrant peddler and man of blazing courage.

AND IT WAS Dr. Milton Eisenhower, brother of former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, who took an opposite approach and an obvious poke at Goldwater by proposing that the GOP select Scran-

Barry: Johnson Is A Phony

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The names of leading Barry Goldwater and trailing William Scranton were put in nomination, and a Republican convention with minds made up rolled on Wednesday night to pick a Presidential candidate.

His turn at being placed in nomination came along later on the program — along with a string of favorite sons, and Maine's favorite daughter, Sen. Margaret Chase Smith.

DOWN THE LINE, Maryland's Dr. Milton Eisenhower, brother of the former president, waited to nominate Scranton as a man who would not lead the party to defeat next November.

The Pennsylvania governor had been fighting Goldwater down to the zero hour of the convention. At the end, Scranon was almost as much a token candidate as the favorite sons.

AS DIRKSEN rolled along, a balloon on the side of the auditorium hauled aloft a long streamer bearing the name of Goldwater's chief challenger, "Scranon" — Gov. William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania.

It was Sen. Kenneth B. Keating of New York who put up Rockefeller's name.

Neighboring Sen. George D. Aiken from Vermont did the honors in nominating Sen. Margaret Chase Smith of Maine — the first woman ever so honored by a major party.

The second name offered to the convention was that of Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York, who was jeered and booed loudly Tuesday night in a fight over the party platform — a fight in which Goldwater forces smashed Scranon and all but guaranteed the presidential nomination for the Arizona senator.

Gov. George W. Romney's name was put before the delegates by Michigan's Rep. Gerald R. Ford Jr., who called the governor "a tremendously successful person in every job that he has ever tackled — a fighter — this man is a winner — a man who has put Michigan on the road."

WISCONSIN MADE the outlook even sunnier for Goldwater. It voted to give its 30 votes to the senator on the first ballot.

At that point, The Associated Press scoreboard indicated that Goldwater could expect 845 votes on the first roll call — 190 more than the 655 needed. The Scranon total was 172, or 483 votes short.

The senator already was campaigning against President Johnson.

"THE BIGGEST FAKER in the United States," Goldwater called him. "He's the phoniest individual who ever came along."

The statements came in answer to a reporter's question on civil rights.

Goldwater was asked whether he expects the Democrats to make a big issue of the omission from the GOP platform of any language upholding the constitutionality of the new rights law.

New Job for Carver

SAN FRANCISCO, July 13 — Mike Carver, former SUI Student Senate president, extends a forbidding hand to block entrance to three Goldwater girls to the Cow Palace Convention floor. Wednesday Was Goldwater's Day

By JOHN ROBERTS
News Editor

Wednesday was obviously Barry Goldwater's day from the time of the close of Tuesday's marathon session at 1:30 A.M. Wednesday.

Goldwater forces had easily prevailed in voting Tuesday on the efforts of moderate forces to amend the party's proposed platform. Voting on each of the five amendment proposals apparently went almost completely according to the delegates' preferences for candidates.

One veteran observer said the delegates obviously did not consider the merits of the amendments. Both Goldwater and Scranon delegates generally voted only in support of or against candidates, not the amendments, he said.

There were notable exceptions, however, within the Iowa delegation. Only one of the proposed amendments did the majority of those who voted for Gov. Scranon Wednesday vote for approval of the amendments.

Nine Iowa delegates, including Senator Jack Miller, Atty. Gen. Evan Hultman, and State GOP Chairman Robert Ray, voted for the Romney amendment which would have repudiated extremists who attempt to infiltrate and subvert the ranks of the Republican party. Others voting for the Romney extremist amendment were Harold Goldman of Des Moines, George Nagle of Iowa City, Ben Webster Jr. of Des Moines, Ralph W. Bastian of Fort Dodge, John McDonald of Dallas Center and Francis Braley of Shenandoah.

Goldman and Webster, two avowed Scranon supporters who have said they will not vote for Barry Goldwater at any time during the convention, voted for approval of all of the amendments.

George Nagle, another Scranon supporter, voted against all but the Romney extremist amendment. Nagle said he thought the majority of the amendments were proposed to create dissension on the floor. If successful this might aid one of the candidates.

Ray and the three other GOP delegates (as yet unnamed) were chosen by Sanders and his crew after week-long observations of the delegates to this convention.

The crew has been filming Ray during his many activities on the convention floor, and Wednesday morning tape recorded a 30-minute interview in which Ray explained how the Iowa delegates were chosen and discussed their activities before and during the convention.

According to Terry Sanders of Los Angeles, producer-director of the film, the potential audience for this documentary is more than 600 million persons.

THE CIRCULAR-SHAPED lounge is located on the second floor at the north end of the building. From the glassed-in room you will be able to see the outlying areas of the course to the north and west.

Also circular in shape, the pro shop will be housed in the south end of the clubhouse. Women's showers, lockers and the storage room will comprise the rest of the building, connecting the lounge and the pro shop. The men's showers are located on the first floor below the lounge.

Golfers finishing rounds on either the 9th or 18th greens will now be less than 50 yards from the clubhouse. Distance from No. 1 and No. 10 is about the same.

STILL TO BE installed are lockers and 160 for women. These may be rented on a casual or seasonal basis.

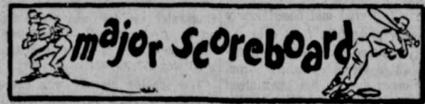

The floors are composed of vinyl tile which will permit golfers to wear cleated shoes in any part of the clubhouse. The building will also have a public address system which can be used either to permit golfers to await announcement for tee off in the clubhouse.

The general contractor for the building was Frantz Construction Co. of Iowa City.

LEADS TOURNEY—COUNCIL BLUFFS (AP) — Joe Burden, 13, of Clinton fired a one-over-par 73 Wednesday to win the Iowa Jaycee Junior golf tournament.

Burden, who will be an eighth grader next fall, had a 36-hole total of 147 on the Dodge Park course.

Field of 165 To Begin Play In PGA Today

COLUMBUS (AP) — Jack Nicklaus opens defense of his PGA golf championship today, bolstered by home cooking and apparently unshaken by the threat of the game's two newest rockets, Tony Lama and Ken Venturi.

"They have their hot streaks, and I have mine," said the 210-pound powerhouse with a shrug of his massive shoulders. "To me, they are just two other guys in the field. I play my game. I win some. I lose some. If I'm lucky, I win a big one."

At 24, Nicklaus already has joined Gene Sarazen, Byron Nelson and Ben Hogan as the only players to win the three major American championships — the Masters, Open and PGA.

He is seeking to become the first since Denny Shute in 1936-37 to put PGA titles back to back. Nicklaus, playing before a home town gallery, is the favorite at 4-1.

Arnold Palmer, the Masters champion, and Lama, winner of the British Open, last weekend at St. Andrews, are 6-1, with Venturi, the reigning Open king, listed at 8-1.

The field of 165 begins teeing off at 7 a.m. (GDT) over the short and spry Columbus Country Club, where par is 70.

Pirates' Friend Scatters 7 Hits, Blanks Phils, 3-0

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Jerry Lynch slammed a three-run homer and Bob Friend scattered seven singles as Pittsburgh defeated Philadelphia 3-0 Wednesday night, handing the second place Phillies their sixth loss in the last seven games.

Lynch, a left-handed swinger, hit a Jim Bunning pitch far over the left center field wall with Manny Mota and Roberto Clemente on base in the fourth inning.

Mota had singled and gone to second when third baseman Richie Allen let Clemente's grounder get by him for an error. Both runners advanced when shortstop Ruben Amaro, backing up Allen, threw badly to second.

Friend pitched a complete game, scattering seven singles and striking out seven batters. He pitched a perfect 9th inning.

Friend's record is 11-10 with a 3.00 ERA. He has pitched 127 innings for the Pirates this season.

Ford Gives 3 Singles, Brings Record to 12-2

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees wrested first place from Baltimore Wednesday defeating the Orioles 2-0 behind the three-hit pitching of Whitey Ford. Joe Pepitone drove in the Yankee runs with a second inning single.

The victory was the second in succession over the Orioles and increased the Yankees' winning streak to six straight. The three-game series will be concluded today with right-hander Jim Bouton of the Yankees opposing Oriole southpaw Steve Barber.

Ford treated the crowd of 26,476 to one of his finest pitching performances of the year. He struck out five to take over the league's strikeout leadership with 110. Ford did not issue a walk as he outpitched his rival, Dave McNally, and recorded his 12th triumph of the campaign against only two losses.

The veteran left-hander did not permit a runner beyond first base. Sam Bowers, the Baltimore left-fielder, singled to center with one out in the second but Ford disposed of Gino Cimoli on a fly to Roger Maris and Jerry Adair grounded out. Adair singled to center with two out in the eighth but John Orsino grounded to third, ending the inning.

Jackie Brandt singled with one out in the ninth but Luis Aparicio lined to Tony Kubek and Bobby Richardson threw out Boog Powell to end the game. Pinch hitter Bob Johnson made the first out of the inning, ending a league record string of six consecutive pinch hits.

Cubs' Burdette Homers To Defeat Mets, 3-2

CHICAGO (AP) — Lew Burdette, who earns his living on the mound, paid extra dividends Wednesday with a home run that enabled the Chicago Cubs to defeat the New York Mets 3-2.

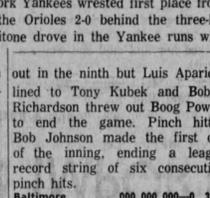

The Mets, going down to their second straight defeat since their surprising doubleheader sweep of the Cincinnati Reds Sunday, helped the Chicago cause with some shoddy fielding.

A passed ball by catcher Jesse Gonder in the first inning set up the first Cub run.

Barry Vows 'We Will Win Together,' He Tells Group

COW PALACE, San Francisco (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater accepted the Republican Presidential nomination Thursday night vowing to wrest the White House from Democrats he said "who have distorted and lost" freedom's vision.

He counseled against Republicanism "made fuzzy and futile by unthinkable a beliefs. Goldwater declared in a speech prepared for his triumphant appearance before the Republican National Convention. "Moderation in the pursuit of justice is not virtue."

"I promise you that every fiber of my being is consecrated to our cause — that nothing will be lacking in the struggle that can be brought to it by enthusiasm and devotion and hard work," he said.

"Together we will win," Goldwater said.

Goldwater declared: "The good Lord raised up this mighty republic to be a home for the brave and flourish as the land of the free — not to stagnate in the swampland of collectivism —
