BETTY MCGOHAN
Hancher Award

Betty McGohan, A4, Mount Pleasant, received the Hancher Award at the Mother's Day luncheon held Saturday in the Union Main Lounge.

Miss Helen Focht, counselor to women, was also honored at the luncheon for her services as faculty adviser to Associated Women Students (AWS).

The Hancher Award was established last year by AWS in honor of Mrs. Virgil M. Hancher, widow of the late University president. It is presented to the coed who most exemplifies Mrs. Hancher's personal qualities of dignity, warmth and sincerity and who has contributed to the University.

Miss Focht received an engraved desk set and a book of letters of appreciation from past presidents of AWS.

She has been a member of the U of I staff since 1935 when she became assistant to the dean of women. She was named counselor to women in 1947.

Tryouts To Be Held For Pom-pon Posts

Girls who want to become pom-pon girls and lead the cheering at University athletic events are to attend a meeting at 4:30 today in the Union River Room.

Dave Kyner, A3, Waterloo, president of the Pep Club, and Mary K. Hawkins, A4, Galesburg, Ill., a former pom-pon girl, will attend the meeting to explain the tryouts. James Rhatigan, Pep Club adviser, will talk to those present.

Tryouts will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday in the North Gym in the Field House.

Sharon Dirks, Pep Club publicity chairman, said judges for the tryouts are Norman R. Holzapfel, University gymnastics coach; Kenneth E.

Cook, adviser in the Office of Student Affairs; and Annie Clement, women's physical education instructor.

There are six pom-pon girl positions and one alternate position open for next year. Any girl in good academic standing is eligible to try out.

Pom-pon girls perform and lead yells at home, at out of town football games and at home basketball games.

Miss Dirks said that the pom-pon girls will perform at the annual intra-squad football game May 15.

Persons unable to attend today's meeting may send a substitute.

Johnson Remains Firm In Dominican Conflict

Specialists To Answer Queries on Viet Policy

Four United States Government representatives will meet with University faculty members and students today to give background information on U.S. policy in Viet Nam and to answer questions about that policy.

Headed by the Department of State officer who served nearly three years in Viet Nam, the party of specialists will meet with faculty members at 3:30 p.m. in the Senate Chamber of Old Capitol. At 8 p.m. a public meeting will be held in the same place.

The leader of the group is Thomas F. Conlon, 40-year-old native of Illinois. He is now officer-in-charge, Australia, New Zealand and Pacific Island Affairs, Office of Southwest Pacific Affairs, U.S. Department of State. In 1963 he was deputy director, Interdepartmental Working Group, Viet Nam, Office of Southeast Asian Affairs, and in 1961 was attached to the U.S. embassy in Saigon. Conlon speaks Vietnamese and Indonesian.

One member has been added to the group since U of I officials announced the visit last week. Other members of the party are:

Earl J. Young, special assistant to the director of Viet Nam affairs, Agency for International Development; Lt. Col. Thomas W. Waitt, operations adviser to the First Vietnamese Corps and a 22-year veteran of U.S. Army service; and Lt. Col. Frank A. Shook Jr., a Marine Corps officer now stationed at the Command and Staff College, Marine Corps School, Quantico, Va.

Public Hearing Set Tonight On Downtown Rezoning Plan

A public hearing on the controversial proposal to rezone the two half blocks on Burlington Street between Linn and Clinton streets is scheduled for tonight when the Iowa City City Council meets at 7:30.

In a strongly worded letter to council members, the Planning and Zoning Commission last Tuesday urged the council to turn down the request to rezone the two half blocks from commercial to central business.

The commission said in the letter that "The rezoning would have the effect of substantially increasing the value of the property."

The letter added, "This means that the city in any urban renewal program would be forced to pay these land owners a price far above that which could be obtained were the commercial zone retained."

A PLACE of business of two or more stories in a central business district does not have to provide parking facilities, Allan D. Vestal, chairman of the commission said Monday.

On the other hand, a business in a commercial district usually must allot about one-third of its lot for parking.

Businessmen and property owners in the area have been asking for a rezoning over a period of years, according to an Iowa City Press Citizen article.

The council will also hold a third hearing and take final action on a proposed amendment to the zoning ordinance that would permit high-rise apartment construction.

GIs Advance As Fighting Continues

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson said Monday night he will not pull U.S. troops out of the Dominican Republic until this country achieves its aims of protecting its citizens and preventing a Communist seizure of power there.

"We don't propose to sit here in our rocking chairs on our folded hands and let the Communists set up any government in the Western Hemisphere," Johnson said.

IN SANTO DOMINGO, U.S. Marines and paratroopers boxed in the rebel stronghold Monday and left the insurgents with their backs to the sea. One marine was killed and three rebels were reported slain in diminished fighting on the ninth day of the Dominican revolt.

A nonconfirmed report said a U.S. paratrooper was killed when a hand grenade accidentally exploded.

Meanwhile, a special inter-American conference recessed Monday night without acting on the U.S. request to Latin American republics to send military forces into the Dominican Republic.

Another session was set for 3 p.m. EDT Tuesday.

Heated opposition developed to the U.S. proposal, especially from Mexico, Chile, Ecuador, Uruguay, and one or two other countries.

One conference observer said it appeared there were about 12 votes in favor of the U.S. proposal. It needs 14 for approval.

JOHNSON spoke at a meeting of the Legislative Council of the AFL-CIO Building Trades Department.

He said the bodies of 1,000 to 1,500 victims of the Dominican revolution are lying in the streets of the capital of Santo Domingo, and U.S. forces are setting up measures to prevent an epidemic there.

The Organization of American States delayed a decision on the request for an inter-American military force after a closed meeting of the general committee repre-

State Postpones Expressway Meet

A public hearing on the proposed expressway southwest of Iowa City has been postponed by the state highway commission. The hearing was scheduled for May 20 and no new date has been set.

The hearing will give local citizens a chance to express views on the expressway and its proposed location.

The expressway would tie into a proposed highway connecting Iowa City and Cedar Rapids that is now being studied by the highway commission.

Oakdale transfer

A BILL INCREASING THE responsibilities of the University was passed Thursday by the Iowa House with-out a vote in opposition.

The bill puts the state sanatorium at Oakdale (a few miles northwest of Iowa City) under the administration of the University. If the Iowa Senate is anything like the House, the bill will soon be an accomplished fact.

The sanatorium has always been under the Board of Regents as a separate institution from the University, but the declining need for tuberculosis treatment has left sanatorium facilities underused in recent years. The pending bill would make the sanatorium part of the University Hospitals system and allow vacant beds to be put to all sorts of uses.

The many acres of land at the Oakdale site provide unlimited opportunity for University expansion. Although there are no plans for the land now, there are several ideas.

For one thing, some sort of small liberal arts campus under the University, or maybe just a department complex. In any event, the Oakdale package will assure the University there'll be plenty of land close at hand for future expansion.

Before Thursday's passage, there was some talk in Des Moines of using part of the Oakdale site for an alcoholic rehabilitation center. There was also talk of putting the sanatorium under the supervision of the state Board of Control rather than the Board of Regents.

Some of the land at Oakdale could be used for an alcohol center in the future, but the House action putting the sanatorium under the University and therefore keeping it under the Regents was a sound one.

The current bill puts Oakdale facilities to their fullest use, gives the University an excellent path to expansion, yet doesn't close the door on an alcohol center in the future.

'Charlotte' a poor flick

By WILLIAM TEUNIS
Iowan Reviewer

Robert Aldrich is a remarkably uneven director. When he's good, he's very, very good, and when he's bad, the result is something like "Hush... Hush, Sweet Charlotte," now at the Englert.

The first Robert Aldrich movie I saw was "Vera Cruz," in 1954, the best color western I've seen except possibly for "Shane." Aldrich had an all-star cast for "Vera Cruz," including Burt Lancaster and Gary Cooper, and such a rich assortment of bad guys that he could afford to use the imitably villainous Jack Elam in a throwaway role.

In his more recent success, "Whatever Happened to Baby Jane?," Aldrich also had a first-rate cast, headed, of course, by Bette Davis and Joan Crawford.

"Four for Texas," though, had a less expert cast, with Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, and Anita Ekberg. Sinatra and Martin hardly bothered to learn their cues - after all, they were financing the picture (as I recall); why should they bother to work too?

I'M NOW inclined to put the blame for "Four for Texas" less on the film and more on Aldrich, after seeing "Hush... Hush, Sweet Charlotte," which Aldrich not only directed but produced.

"Charlotte" is in the "Baby Jane" tradition, which can be succinctly described as "Psycho" with Bette Davis. Instead of Joan Crawford to play against, this time, Miss Davis has Olivia de Havilland.

All the roles are well-acted. Aldrich gets an A for his casting.

The film falls down, though, in the plot and in the camera-work.

A YOUNG man named John has his hand and head cut off one night in the summer-house of a Louisiana estate. We see everything of the murder except who did it.

Immediately afterward, Bette Davis comes into the mansion from the garden. A ball is in progress, in that interminable shocked silence while her father and everyone else stares at her, and at the huge patch of blood staining the front of her dress. I couldn't help thinking of Shel Silverstein's "Teevee Jeebies" in "Playboy," in which suggestive stills from old films are given absurdly erotic captions.

Anyway, the moviegoer immediately suspects it wasn't Charlotte who killed John. Ever since "Psycho," Grand Guignol films like this have had someone else, someone unsuspected, commit the murder.

So who did it? Father Victor Buono? Cousin Olivia de Havilland? Doctor Joseph Cotton? Maid Agnes Moorehead? John's wife Mary Astor?

I was rooting for Mary Astor, partly she was old, sick, and the least suspicious-looking person, and partly because the last movie I'd seen her in was a reissue of "The Maltese Falcon," that Humphrey Bogart classic, where she was a lot younger, and I kept seeing the outlines of her face as they were 25 years ago, as she pleaded with Sam Spade.

BUT THEN I thought: that old device is too trite for Aldrich to use now. What if he really pulls a switch, and we learn that Charlotte did the murder after all? Now there would be something new (to me, anyway), and it would make poor Charlotte much more poignant. As the movie went on, this seemed to be the only aesthetically satisfactory solution. Any other revelation would be a sleazy, hackneyed trick.

But I should have been warned by the way Aldrich used his camera that he is not averse to sleazy hackneyed tricks.

When Aldrich wishes to suggest that something's important, such as a gun or a bottle of medicine, he uses his camera with an infantile crudity: swoops down on the object in a sudden close-up, and holds the close-up until he's sure all the slow readers in the theatre have Got His Point.

The film is full of gratuitous arty shots from above or below, when there's no logical or aesthetic reason for the camera to be up or down there.

WE ALSO get innumerable shots of opening doors, blowing drapes, and all the paraphernalia of gruesome suspense that has pretty well lost its power to frighten. I should think, except in conjunction with characters who are plausible enough for us to identify with.

The meretricious camera-work complements the labored plot-shifts and character-revelations, which any moviegoer who's seen this sort of movie before will have anticipated.

I don't intend to reveal the climax, but I will warn anyone who sees "Charlotte" that if you find yourself staying just to see John's missing hand and head turn up, don't bother: they never do turn up.

The one terrific cliché that could still have the power to titillate, Aldrich avoids.

Last-Ditch Stand

Save our mayors

By ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON - The Honorable Rep. William Dickinson of Alabama has just put in the Congressional Record his charges of sexual orgies in the march from Selma to Montgomery. While everyone is concerned about these, the main problem at the moment seems to be what's happening in Washington, D.C., when a Southern Mayor visits this town.

Last week another Southern Mayor, this time from Arkansas, was bilked in a filmmaking game in Washington, D.C. As with the Mayor of Selma, Ala., the victim was out on the town looking for fun and games. Instead his guide left him holding a brown envelope with newspaper clippings in it in what has now become known as the "Murphy" game.

"Put your money in this envelope mister, so it will be safe." Many public-spirited citizens in Washington have become deeply disturbed by what is happening to our Southern Mayors when they come to the nation's capital.

They've decided something has to be done about it, not only to protect their good names, but also to protect the good name of the city.

THE TROUBLE seems to be that when a small town Southern Mayor comes to Washington he doesn't have enough to do at night. He's left more or less to his own devices and, not knowing the ways of a big city, he's bound to get into difficulty.

Therefore, a group of citizens have decided to start a sort of USO for small town Mayors, where they could come in the evening and play ping-pong and get hot dogs and hamburgers and meet nice girls from good homes instead of the type they're bound to run into if they're left on their own.

The UMO (United Mayor's Organization) as it would be called, would advise Mayors on where they could get clean rooms, what there was to see in Washington, and how to avoid being cheated by undesirable elements in the city.

"Why do you think Mayors are so susceptible to the filmmaking game?" I asked a spokesman for the UMO.

HE REPLIED, "We have Mayors coming in all the time, many from small Southern towns, homesick and far from their families.

"If they had a decent place to go in the evenings, they wouldn't be tempted by all the debauchery in Washington. We owe it to them to see they have someone to talk to, a friendly

Letters to the editor - War intellects revisited

To the Editor:

From his article "Intellectuals and the War," we must assume that Mr. Cunningham ranks himself as an "intellectual," i.e., one of those "able to see the real meaning of the war." Presumably his words are directed to others who consider themselves men of words and ideas, formers of thought and opinion.

As an intellectual, Mr. Cunningham sees many things beyond the vision of those who are not intellectuals. There is something called "the press" (he might have called it the rack on the iron maiden) which has a two-part role in the great moral battle now going on: to keep protests against the war atomized, and to keep the American people ignorant of the true aims of the war.

And as an intellectual, Mr. Cunningham feels a responsibility to inform his readers of the true nature of the war. He calls it "a classic imperialist war... to maintain our Far-East colonies."

For evidence he quotes none other than our President. To some this might seem a little like the tactics of the White Citizens' Councils last year when they ran advertisements quoting Abraham Lincoln as an advocate of segregation. But this is the work of an intellectual, calculated to show that the President really knows better - or did 10 years ago.

ARE WE to assume that power has corrupted Lyndon Johnson? Has he fallen victim to the conspiracy of munitions makers, Air Force generals, Texas millionaires and other super-patriots who really rule the country?

Absurd? Perhaps, but not so outlandish as the lengthy quotation from a budding Yale professor who likens our plight to that of the German people under Hitler.

I can only suppose that Prof. Lynd has been silenced, gassed no doubt, another martyr to freedom in the Ivy League.

Perhaps after the revolution, Mr. Cunningham should see that a suitable tablet be placed over this unsung hero's grave, inscribed: "He spoke of the dilemma facing Americans who attempt to interject moral, humane and reasonable issues into the United States dealings (sic) with other nations and peoples, and the inability of those who feel such issues are paramount to this nation as a condition of its future continuance as a democratic society to communicate their feelings to an aggressive and hostile Administration."

Rest in peace. Thus always with victims of the press, those brave Yale professors: death by verbiage.

FORTUNATELY Mr. Cunningham sees a way out: the great road of manifestos paved by the King of Words himself, Jean-Paul Sartre. Characteristic of all such existential dilemmas, there are only two ways out, "the German road" and "the French road."

We know that the German road is really no exit. The French road leads to jail, away from a foul beast called "the war machine" (brother to "national disaster," mother to "escalation"), and Mr. Cunningham suggests the intellectuals may have to go this way.

I suppose so. As long as we have righteous people who knight themselves with the title "intellectual" so they can go forth and do battle in an allegorized dream-world of evil warlocks, sinning dragons, and innocent Yale professors, we are doomed. Indeed we will go down that road to national disaster, ignored by the sadistic press, forsaken by a duped President, victims of that cruel war machine. Our chain will be "Pull a halt to the accelerating war machine!" And America will quicken to the sound of our resolute Words as we tumble into the jail of Marxist cliché.

Reader relates dream

To the Editor:

A bulletin to all card-carrying students of SUI - THE GOLD FEATHER IS WILTING. Yes, wilting, and soon the downy barbs will shed like hopeless tears from their hallowed shaft. Will the diseased fin spread its infection throughout the breadth of Herky's plumage until his plucked body gives the American Bald Eagle something to be thankful for?

Will the students who have the privilege of stamping their Little Diner's Club cards in the Union Gold Feather Room day after day after day survive with the finest of their dorm-fed fellows?

Or are they shriveling victims of the U.M.M.R.I.F. (University Machine to Make Room for Incoming Freshmen) and is their fate, like that of our canonized Herky, to be the desert-strewn prey of drooling vultures?

LET ME tell you about a dream that bothered me the other night. I was strolling, by chance, through the Gold Feather Room when I became aware of the most nauseous odor circling the atmosphere, so heavy and airborn that it finally had to make a three-point landing in an elderly custodian's nostrils (May he rest in peace).

Investigating the cause of the stench, which was singular only to burning diesel fuel, I discovered a boiling cauldron of french fries. Its slaggy surface spate greasy globules that popped into blackened ashes which the grill cooks had to fan from their noses.

Resting my elbow on the counter for a closer look at this institutional kitchen, I thought it strange that the grill seemed a guilt of yellow patches.

Managing to pass this off, I saw one of the helpers breathing halved slices of bacon over and over until they were about the thickness of a piece of bread. He threw these paddies onto a tray labeled Pork Tenderloins. A woman was engaged in rolling out a ball of dough - no, it was hamburger - as thin as possible and then using the lid of a jar of olives (the slender kind) to cut out the wafers.

Another lady was using a Personna blade to skim off slices of cheese, which she'd then toss on the grill. Detained by a customer, she returned to find the cheese had disappeared in a yellow cloud of smoke. Now I knew where the patches came from.

RAISING TO look at the menu, I discovered my elbow was stuck; actually pucker in the grease on the counter. I managed, with the help of the Campus Police, to free my arm but leave my sleeve. The menu was the most astonishing thing, however. Not only its balanced nature, but the fees attached to such items as hamburgers.

In keeping with the times, I suppose, but not until I slid out the back door on a broken egg yoke did I become suspicious, for a large white truck with yellow arches bearing the slogan "We've Sold Over A Billion Hamburgers" drove up to the Cafeteria Receiving Entrance. Funny things, dreams.

Thinking the matter over in my more rational awakenedness, I began to see it in a less adulterated light. Perhaps it's not the best food, I thought, but you can charge it to your U-bill. Oh yes, failure to pay the same bill results in cancellation of one's registration. Well, fellow students, I guess we're left with but two alternatives to halt the enveloping arms of devastation, the well-greased wheels of the U.M.M.R.I.F. Pay your bill or take a pill.

'Margotte' missed boat

To the Editor:

It is interesting to speculate whether the DI's failure to review "The Legend of Margotte" until Saturday, the play's last day, was an act of mercy or forgetfulness. After suffering through Friday night's performance, I strongly suspect the former. This play, by graduate student Blake Leach, is unquestionably the worst I've seen in four years of playgoing at Iowa.

"The Legend of Margotte" is pure silent-film melodrama - only unfortunately it isn't silent. The actors speak lines like: (jealous abess to lustful priest) "There's another woman, isn't there, Cleetus?"

This is how the Bad Guys (all the church representatives) speak. The Good Guys, or peasants, on the other hand, sound more like the Beverly Hillsites - nice, folksy proto-Ozark: "Thur ain't nobody gonna git Margot."

BAD AS the dialogue was, however, there were even more serious flaws. The fragmentary nature of the plot, which DI reviewer William Teunis rightly criticized, was further intensified by a series of static, preachy little speeches and overemotional monologues.

As a result, in the first act, Leach's peasantry seemed to be petulantly complaining because medieval Christianity did not provide them with Medicare or birth control clinics.

In the second act there was interminable chatter about Robin Goodfellow that had little or no dramatic purpose.

Act three was a Witches' Sabbath, staged with abominable lack of taste and imagination: ear-splitting kettle drums, hokey red lights, and a bunch of unkempt witches doing the Watusi.

THE characterizations, alas, were no better realized. Despite the acting talents of Fred Blais and Holly Michaels, no personage in the play progressed past the caricature level.

Thus, any real confrontation or conflict was nonexistent. The most noxious of all Leach's puppets was "The Wind's Wife," who emerged as a kind of shaggy Ann Landers, always available for the dispensing of good, solid, American common sense about life, love and health (use moss as a contraceptive), and who could even play a mean alto recorder on the side.

The most unfortunate of all the author's miscalculations, however, was his choice of the Middle Ages as the setting of the play. His understanding of this period seems confined to a bad high school textbook and several old Protestant jokes of the voluptuous non-lascivious priest-secrecy of the confessional type.

(A type, incidentally, which was recently trotted out with all seriousness by Congressman Dickinson of Alabama in his "sex orgy" charges against civil rights marchers.)

It is perhaps not surprising, then, that Mr. Leach is consistently wrong in his portrayal of medieval life, from details of religious ritual to basic social distinctions. His view of the period, like the long-discredited epithet, "The Dark Ages," is so naive as to be laughable in an academic community.

IN THE plethora of pretentious statements that preceded the play, director Jean Scharf-enberg was quoted in the DI as saying that the play "definitely has a message," while author Leach suggested in all modesty that it be used "as a discussion topic for religious groups." He said that the play was not anti-religious, but "against the blind acceptance of such a religion."

Fine. It's pretty hard to find anyone who isn't against the blind acceptance of anything. The trouble is that most people have

What's the difference?

To the Editor:

Perhaps you or one of your readers could point out to me some important differences between the crushing by Russian troops of Hungary's 1956 revolution and present United States intervention in the Dominican Republic.

For I can think of none.

U Heights Town Marshall To Appear on TV Show

Mrs. Esther Winders, town marshal of University Heights, will appear on "To Tell the Truth" Wednesday as a result of a story two journalism students wrote about her for a class assignment before Christmas.

James Ingram, A3, Bettendorf, and Fred McCormack, G, Quincy, Mass., wrote the story which their instructor, Dr. James W. Markham, professor of journalism, sent to the Cedar Rapids Gazette for publication. The Gazette used the story in December and the Des Moines Register reprinted it later.

CBS-Television then invited Mrs. Winders to appear on "To Tell the Truth." She and her husband, a retired Iowa City clothier, were flown to New York for the taping of the show last week. Mrs. Winders has been marshal of University Heights for 15 years. She carries a pearl-handled .38 pistol, rides a motorcycle, and owns a 115-pound bloodhound named Fortia. Her duties as marshal have included nabbing traffic violators, halting occasional family arguments and, with Fortia, tracking prowlers and lost children.

It takes two factories to build one Volkswagen convertible

Life would be much easier if the VW convertible were built in one factory. But it's not. Two factories do the job better. The same plant that builds the VW Sedan also builds the VW convertible chassis. They put the engine together, by hand, install the torsion bar suspension system, etc. The rest of the job is finished in Osnabruck where the famed Karmann coachmakers live. The way they build convertible tops is not to be believed. Everything is hand-sewn. Hand-fitted. Hand-formed. And the finished top looks it. You won't find a visible strut or crossbar. The top is leakproof and airtight. It has a real glass window in back. It's upholstered better than almost any sedan you can name. It's as snug as almost any sedan you can name. Ours, included.

Big 10 Track Meet Loaded with Talent

Despite the scarcity of defending champions, the abundance of place-winners returning from the 1964 meet provides a clue that the 1965 Big Ten outdoor track and field championships here may become a tight battle for individual honors.

The 65th annual meet is scheduled for the Iowa track stadium May 21 and 22, marking the second time since 1961 that Hawkeyes are hosts.

WITH OLYMPIC sprinter Trenton Jackson of Illinois passing up defense of his 100- and 220-yard dash titles since he is running bases for the Illinois baseball team, only Michigan's Ken Bernard in the 440 and Illinois' Dave Becker in the 600-yard run are expected to defend their championships. Bernard ran on the Trinidad-Tobago 1600-meter relay team which was under the world's and Olympic record in placing third at Tokyo.

With 33 of the 69 place-winners scheduled for competition, close finishes are forecast in almost all of the 14 individual events.

In the dashes, Iowa's Steve Goldson returned from his third place finish in the 100 with a :09.8 clocking and his fifth place in the 220 with :22.2. The only other dash finisher returning is Al Washington of Purdue, fourth in the 220.

THE 660-YARD run boasts the top number of returnees with four. The finishers include Becker, 1:20.3; Wisconsin's Al Montalbano, 1:20.8; Northwestern's Jim Harris, 1:21.3 and Wisconsin's Bill Heuer, 1:21.4.

Rumors-up of 1964 who want titles this year include Norris Peterson, Minnesota, two mile; Tom Dakin, Wisconsin, high jump; Jerry Beatty, Wisconsin, intermediate hurdles; Jim Garrett, Michigan State, broad jump; Bob Densham, Michigan, high jump; and Jim Albrecht, Northwestern, pole vault.

In the field events there will be at least two finishers returning in each event. The top battle appears to be in the pole vault with at least eight men who are capable of 15 feet or better.

12 Events in Iowa Sports This Weekend

A dozen sports events are on the University of Iowa's schedule from next Friday through Monday, but none is scheduled for Iowa City.

The baseball team, tied for third in the Big Ten standing with four other teams at 2-2, takes on Michigan State at East Lansing and then plays a Saturday double-header with league-leading Michigan which has a 6-0 record.

Golfers, who yet are unbeaten, have dual meets with Minnesota and Wisconsin at Minneapolis Saturday and Wisconsin at Madison Monday. These mark the first consecutive competition for the Hawkeyes.

The tennis team, 1-4, meets Illinois, Indiana and Minnesota at Champaign Friday and Saturday and the track team enters another triangular meet Saturday at Evans-ton facing Northwestern and Ohio State.

Baseball Team To Play Coe Today

By CURT SYLVESTER
Staff Writer

Iowa baseball coach Dick Schultz said Monday he was "well satisfied" with his Hawks after they won two of the three games played with the defending NCAA champion Minnesota Gophers over the past weekend. The Hawks split a double header Saturday, losing 1-0 and winning the second game 3-2, after defeating the Gophers 4-3 Friday.

"YOU'VE GOT TO BE satisfied winning two out of three from a good team like Minnesota," Schultz said. "Of course we did make mistakes and will have iron some things out but except for about one inning in each game we played some terrific baseball. The pitching was real good. We kept them (Minnesota hitters) under control most of the time."

Minnesota's only earned runs in the entire series were the two runs off Bob Gebhard in the first inning of the second game Saturday. Schultz said he felt that the only reason Gebhard gave up the runs was that he hadn't warmed up well enough before the game. The big right-hander had played the entire first game in the outfield and on a hot day he didn't want to tire himself too much before starting to pitch in the game. Consequently he may not have warmed up enough.

Iowa lost the first game Saturday as Minnesota's ace hurler, Joe Pollock won a pitcher's duel from Bob Schaubert, 1-0, on the strength of an unearned run in the second inning.

With one out in that inning, Gerry Fuchs singled. Fred DeGriegoire followed with another single into center which Iowa's Larry Rathje momentarily lost control of. That slight bobble, however, gave Fuchs time to go to third base, from where he scored on Ron Roalstad's sacrifice fly.

SCHAUBERT scattered five Minnesota hits over the rest of the game and struck out six but the lone run was enough for Joe Pollock to win his fourth game of the year against a single loss.

Iowa's only two hits in the game were a scratch single down the third base line by Rathje in the seventh inning and a single into right field in the ninth by Lee Endsley.

The Hawks came back to win the second game 3-2 although it took an extra inning to do it.

Minnesota took a 2-0 lead in the first inning of that game on a walk, an error, a sacrifice fly, another walk and a double. Iowa scored once in the third as Rog Wallenstein walked, went to third on Endsley's single and scored on a double play.

IN THE FIFTH INNING, through the efforts of four sophomores, the Hawks tied the score without the aid of a hit. Russ Sumka, Wallenstein and Endsley were given walks and Sumka scored on Rathje's sacrifice fly.

Finally in the eighth inning of the regulation seven-inning game, the Hawks were able to put the game away. Rathje was hit by a pitch and was sent to second on Gebhard's sacrifice bunt. Then with two outs, sophomore Larry McDowell lined a single into right field to score Rathje and end the game.

The games Saturday left Iowa with a 2-2 mark in the Big Ten and 6-9 for the season. Minnesota is 3-3 in the Big Ten and 15-8 for all games.

THE HAWKS will face the Coe College nine on the Iowa Field this afternoon in a tune-up for the coming weekend's crucial road games with Michigan State and league leading Michigan. Joe Madden will be Iowa's starting pitcher today and sophomore left-hander Frank Renner may pitch some if he recovers from a knee injury sustained when he was struck by a hit ball in practice Monday.

National Academy Honors Sport Stars

NEW YORK (AP) — Don Schollander was honored as amateur athlete of 1964, Donna deVarona as amateur female athlete, and Jimmy Brown as professional athlete Monday night at the National Academy of Sports second annual awards dinner.

Schollander and Miss DeVarona, heavy gold medal winners at the Tokyo Olympics, and Brown, star halfback of the Cleveland Browns of the National Football League, were on hand in the grand ballroom of the New York Hilton for the awards.

THE UNITED STATES Olympic swimming team was chosen team of the year, with Lyman Bingham, executive director of the U.S. Olympic Committee, accepting the trophy: The St. Louis Cardinals, winners of the 1964 World Series, were named professional team of the year with August A. Busch Jr., president, receiving the award and the 1964 Olympics in Tokyo were named the sports event of the year. Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, accepted the award on behalf of Tokyo.

The Academy comprises sports editors from more than 100 of the nation's largest newspapers.

Academy members were given lunch by Mayor Robert Wagner at his official residence, Gracie Mansion, at which time Charles O. Finley, owner of the Kansas City Athletics, expounded on baseball's problems.

"We all know baseball has slipped in the last few years," he said. "Whether it has reached the point of no return I don't know but if I thought it had I'd sell my club."

2 Iowa Football Games To Be Telecast This Fall

The first game to be televised will be the second game of the season against Oregon State from Portland. It will be carried on the national network.

The second game to be televised by N.B.C. will be a home contest against Michigan State on November 6. That one will be a regional telecast only.

Causey, Allen Lead Leagues in Hitting

NEW YORK (AP) — There evidently is no limit to Felix Mantilla's ambition.

A relatively weak hitter early in his major league career with the Milwaukee Braves and New York Mets, Mantilla surprised most baseball people last season by slugging 30 home runs and batting .289.

This year, the 30-year-old Boston Red Sox infielder is off to an excellent start. He is in second place in the American League batting race with a .375 average and is a runner-up in the RBI competition with 14.

Mantilla trails only Wayne Causey in batting. The Kansas City infielder lifted his average from .318 to .390 in last week's games, collecting nine hits in 19 tries, a .474 pace.

Hawks Place 2nd In Track Meet

LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Iowa won only three of 15 events, but stayed close to victorious Wisconsin most of the way in a triangular meet here Saturday. The Hawkeyes finally lost by a score of 79 to 55. Purdue placed third in the triangular meet with 28 points.

Iowa hurler Al Randolph set the only track record of the day. With no help from the heavy wind, the junior from East St. Louis, Ill., ran the 330-yard intermediate hurdles in 38.4 seconds. The old track mark was :38.8.

After 12 events Wisconsin's lead was only 52-46 over Iowa. Then the Badgers pulled away by scoring high in the shot put, the two-mile run and the mile relay.

Top Prep Coaches To Attend Grid Clinic

Two of the state's best high school football coaches, Herb Cormack of Keokuk and Rich Koolbeck of Belmond, will have roles in the University of Iowa's annual spring coaches' clinic here May 14 and 15.

Both are known as outstanding offensive coaches. Koolbeck will speak on the passing game and Cormack on offense in the opening session Friday, May 14.

Koolbeck has developed teams which compiled a 34-5-1 record, with his 1963 and 1964 teams being unbeaten at 8-0. Cormack, former Iowa high school coach of the year, first coached in Kansas and at Iowa City high school had a 65-10-4 mark in nine years. His Keokuk team last fall won its conference title.

PITCHER CLAIMED — CLEVELAND (AP) — The Cleveland Indians announced that pitcher Jim Rittwage was claimed Monday by the Kansas City Athletics on irrevocable waivers.

Ask Golfers To Reserve Starting Times

Golfers in the Iowa City area who play the University of Iowa South Finkbine course now may reserve starting times effective at once, Iowa Athletic Director Forest Evashevski announced Monday.

He believes this method, also used last year, will release some of the congestion and therefore will be beneficial to all concerned. To reserve a starting time, a call should be made to the clubhouse on the South Finkbine course, x2026.

Straight from the bottle?

Some people say they like their beer right from the bottle or can. No glass, please.

Well, that's okay for a fishing trip or something... when carrying along a glass is pretty clumsy. But when a glass is convenient, we think it's a shame not to use it. Keeping Budweiser inside that brown bottle is missing half the fun.

See for yourself. Open a bottle of Bud and let it go tumbling into a glass. The natural carbonation will kick up a clean, white head of foam. And notice the lively bubbles as they keep streaming up to the top. They let that famous King-of-Beers aroma get through to you.

Now hold your glass up to the light. See how clear and brilliant it is? Our exclusive Beechwood Ageing has a lot to do with that. We go to a lot of trouble to brew a beer that performs like this. So you can't really blame us for wanting you to get it at its best, can you?

Just for fun, pour your next four or five bottles of Bud into a glass. If you don't agree that the extra taste, clarity and aroma make a big difference, go back to the bottle.

We won't say another word.

it's worth it... it's Bud.

— Drug Addiction Increases —

Solution Clouded by Fears

By MALIN SWOPE
Staff Writer
(Second in a series)

Drug addiction claims a few new victims every day — and today there are more addicts in the United States than federal, state, and medical authorities can count.

No one knows for sure just how many addicts there are in America. Official sources place the number between 40,000 and 60,000. Unofficial estimates put the number in the hundreds of thousands.

The problem of finding and treating drug addicts is clouded by misconceptions and misinformation about "the perils of dope" and the viciousness of "the fiend" and "the pusher."

Misbeliefs range from the notion that a single dose of heroin can cause addiction, to the notion that "once a 'junkie' (drug addict), always a 'junkie.'"

Medical records show that, after proper medical treatment, many former addicts are able to return to society and lead normal, productive lives.

However, the swelling ranks of drug addicts give strength to the argument that an enlightened educational campaign is needed to inform the public on the hazards of drug abuse (use of drugs for illicit, non-medical purposes).

Those who oppose educating the public (and teenagers, in particular) on the dangers of drug abuse argue that such education will only lead to more experimentation and ultimately to more addiction.

The President's Advisory Commission of Narcotic and Drug Abuse rejects this view, arguing that drug abuse is contagious in the social sense, and that most drug abusers are introduced to drugs by persons already "hooked."

The Commission believes that education is the best weapon to combat the misinformation concerning drug abuse.

The findings and recommendations of the Commission, the American Medical Association's Department of Mental Health, and information and opinion offered by medical authorities in and around the University community shed some light on the problems of drug abuse.

Most authorities state that there are several factors, involved in drug addiction including socioeconomic, psychological and pharmacological.

Current concern about addiction is almost entirely limited to the "opiates" (opium medicines which dull the senses) and similar drugs. Drugs such as marijuana are the first step to opiate addiction.

The chief drug of addiction in the United States is heroin. It is more potent than morphine; hence, more doses can be smuggled in less bulk.

Drug addiction embraces what medical authorities term "tolerance" and "dependence." Dependence is further subdivided into physical and emotional dependence.

Tolerance is defined as "a diminishing effect on the repetition of the same dose of the drug" or, conversely, as "a need to increase the dose in order to obtain the original degree of effect."

Emotional dependence refers to the psychological meanings of the use of drugs and their effect. Psychological dependence is related to the effects that opiates have on a person's central nervous system and mind.

Addictive drugs depress "primary" drives. They diminish hunger, thirst fear of pain, and sexual urges.

These drugs also tend to relieve anxiety, create a sense of euphoria and enable the user of the drugs to engage in fantasy.

According to medical authorities, the development of physical dependence on drugs creates a new biological need, the satisfaction of which is directly pleasurable just as is the satisfaction of hunger or thirst.

Physical dependence on drugs, authorities state, tends to cause the addict to discard the usual methods of adaptation to life situations.

Taking the drug also becomes the answer for all of life's problems.

When an addict says he has a "habit," he means he is physically dependent on a drug.

When he says one drug is addictive and another is habit-forming, he means physical dependence can be developed with the first drug but not with the second.

Heroin and morphine, both addictive drugs, lead to physical dependence. Marijuana, on the other hand, involves no physical dependence but is habit-forming.

The President's Commission defines drug addiction as "a state of periodic or chronic intoxication produced by the repeated consumption of a drug." Addiction is characterized by:

- "An overpowering desire or need to continue taking the drug and to obtain it by any means;
- "A tendency to increase the dose;
- "A physical and psychological dependence on the effects of the drug;
- "An effect detrimental to the individual and to society."

Some drug authorities argue that if a person who possesses the psychological traits of an addict is exposed to the socioeconomic factors related to addiction, he is very likely to try drugs and to become addicted.

However, most authorities believe association with addicts, curiosity, thrill seeking and pressure from peers in juvenile groups are more important factors leading to addiction.

The longer an addict uses the drug, authorities state, the less chance he has of "kicking" the habit.

Through proper medical care, he can lose his physical dependence on drugs. But there is no guarantee that the deep-rooted, psychological causes of his use of drugs have been removed.

Services Set For Retired Music Prof

WILLIAM GOWER SR.
Services Wednesday

Funeral services for William Gower Sr., professor emeritus of music who died Monday morning, will be held at 2 p.m. Wednesday at Beckman's Funeral Home.

Gower, 70, a native of Rolla, Mo., died at Greenwood Acres Nursing Home in Iowa City, where he had been a patient since February. He had been hospitalized following surgery in December.

Gower was head of brass instrument and instrumental techniques in the School of Music when he retired in 1963. He had also been assistant director of the University Symphony Orchestra. He was director of instrumental music in Iowa City High School from 1939 until 1946, when he joined the faculty.

Dr. Himie Voxman, Director of the School of Music, said, "Professor Gower has left a deep and enduring imprint on American wind instrument instruction. In the course of his long teaching career he trained a large number of outstanding instrumentalists, many of whom hold major teaching positions. Others followed successful performing careers. His dedication to musical excellence and his concern for the welfare of his students earned for him an unusually high degree of respect and affection from a generation of those privileged to study with him."

Gower was director of the Centerville High School Band from 1931 to 1939 and served as director of the Centerville Municipal Band for 15 years. During World War I, he was an assistant bandmaster in the Army, serving in Europe.

The musician had served as chairman of the committee on brass solo literature of the Music Educators National Conference and as chairman of the North Central Division of the National Association of College Wind and Percussion Instructors. He was a member of Kappa Kappa Psi, honorary band fraternity; the Iowa Bandmasters Association, and the Music Educators National Advisory Board.

Gower was the author of the Rubank method series books for wind instruments and was co-author with Professor Himie Voxman, director of the U of I School of Music, of "Modern Method for Clarinet." He wrote several other books and composed a number of works for wind instruments.

Survivors include his widow, three children, Professor William Gower Jr., head of the Music Education Department and director of the Symphony Orchestra at Mississippi Southern College, Hattiesburg, Miss.; Helen Louise (Mrs. Richard) Chadima, Cedar Rapids; and John Robert Gower, director of the Charles City High School Band, and nine grandchildren.

Police Recruits Learn Crime Science During Two-Week Session Here

Rookie cops are learning how to handle sawed-off shotguns, complaints about stray dogs, and many other aspects of police work on campus this week.

Police department recruits from all over the state are participating in a two-week school sponsored by the University Bureau of Police Science.

Each afternoon the recruits receive instruction at the shooting range at the fairgrounds. Last week they studied sawed-off shotguns and this week pistols.

The topic of "Common Complaints" includes how to handle calls about stray dogs, family fights, and rescuing cats.

The officers also study laws dealing with traffic. They learn how to interview witnesses and complainants, direct traffic, and investigate accidents.

Other areas of study include juvenile offenders, probation and parole, police duties at crime scenes, criminal procedure, report writing, testifying in court, mental illness, police and the public, and police communications.

"It's too much to cover in two weeks, but we do the best we can do," said Richard L. Holcomb, director of the bureau.

Holcomb said the officers spend six hours a day in class, six days a week. They are tested at the end of each week and must maintain a satisfactory notebook to receive a certificate for completing the course.

"We try to equip them for anything they'll run into as patrolmen," said Holcomb. "The first thing they get when they reach home will probably be something we didn't cover, but at least we give them a background."

Besides class work and practical demonstrations the 40 officers are required to live at the continuation center and must be there from 7 to 9 each night to study.

"This gives them an opportunity to talk to officers from other parts of the state and exchange ideas on how to handle common problems," said Holcomb.

A discussion of handling people suffering from mental illness has been part of the program here for years, but other schools are just beginning to include it.

"Since a policeman is often the first official to come in contact with these people it is important that he be able to handle them, for their good as well as making his job easier," said Holcomb.

The school is one of a series of five that are held at the University. Schools in general police work, traffic, command, and investigation are held during the year.

University Prof. Writes 'Bedside' Medical Book

A new book titled "Bedside Diagnostic Examination" written by Dr. Elmer L. DeGowin, professor of internal medicine at The University of Iowa, has been published by the Macmillan Company.

The 772-page volume is of a size that will fit easily in the student or physician's medical bag so that it may serve conveniently as a diagnostic aid.

The book brings together in one volume the methods of examination and diagnostic findings in the clinical specialties of internal medicine, general surgery, ophthalmology, dermatology, neurology, urology, orthopedics, and gynecology. Because diagnostic procedures may cross and recross the borders of all the specialties, the book is expected to be of particular value to physicians examining patients and teaching the art of medicine.

The book is illustrated with 490 line drawings done by Dr. DeGowin. Dr. DeGowin's son, Dr. Richard L. DeGowin, a faculty member of the University of Chicago, assisted in preparation of the book. Specialists from the College of Medicine in the various fields covered, reviewed parts of the book pertaining to their specialties.
