

Viet Cong Attacks in Force

COMMUNIST TROOPS ESTIMATED AT regimental strength — perhaps 1,200 men — fought on against government forces at Song Be Tuesday night in what a U.S. adviser said "may be the beginning of the Viet Cong's monsoon season offensive."

Three government battalions skirmished with the Red forces that had been driven from Song Be, a provincial center 74 miles north of Saigon, after a seven-hour occupation in which they killed five U.S. Army advisers and 20 Vietnamese soldiers and wounded 13 Americans and 50 Vietnamese.

Another American — a U.S. Marine — was killed and six were injured in a seize-and-hold operation by a Marine company that secured a row of troublesome hamlets eight miles west of the Da Nang airbase.

Oklahoma Teachers Vote To Boycott

OKLAHOMA TEACHERS, BOLSTERED by nationwide sanctions against the state's educational system, voted in Oklahoma City Tuesday to boycott state schools next fall.

In turn, Gov. Henry Bellmon boycotted the meeting of more than 8,000 teachers after learning that the National Education Association in Washington had imposed sanctions against the state.

Bellmon demanded an immediate retraction of the sanctions, which he called "disgusting, distasteful and disgraceful." Teachers voted on whether to withhold all services in the next school year unless their demands for higher salaries and better working conditions are met.

France Abandons NATO Squeeze

FRANCE GAVE UP TUESDAY its attempt to squeeze the United States out of an ultimate settlement of the German problem.

The development brought relief to the whole North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Secretary of State Dean Rusk arranged an overnight flight to London to seek unity in two other vital areas — Vietnam and Dominican.

Rusk hoped to still fears among some NATO members that President Johnson is risking a head-on clash with the Communist world.

The German question high-lighted the opening of the three-day NATO spring meeting of foreign ministers.

The U.S. delegation, with Undersecretary RUSK George W. Ball sitting in for Rusk, won an initial victory in the series of World policy arguments Washington is conducting with Paris.

U.S. Diplomat Booted from Moscow

THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT TUESDAY expelled an American diplomat on charges of whipping up racial discontent among African students with gifts of food and liquor.

"I deny the charges," said the diplomat, Norris D. Garnett, 33, a Negro cultural attache, was expected to leave within a week.

The expulsion followed public complaints of African students that they had suffered racial discrimination in the Soviet Union.

Izvestia, the government paper, accused Garnett of bribing African students "to make slanderous statements" against the Soviet Union.

House Passes Auto Tag Measure

AUTO AND TRUCK LICENSE PLATES would be more clearly visible at night if a bill passed Tuesday by the Iowa House becomes law.

The bill provides that all Iowa motor vehicle license plates be coated over their entire surface with reflective material. The House passed the measure 106-1 and sent it to the Senate.

Reps. Keith Dunton (D-Thornburg) and William Scherle (R-Henderson) said experience has shown that fully reflectorized license plates are more clearly visible at night than Iowa's present plates, which have reflective coating only on the numerals and border.

Board Backs Bypass Proposal

The Iowa City Board of Education Tuesday night threw its support behind a proposal by Mayor Richard W. Burger to build a highway bypass around the southwest section of Iowa City to encourage the "future growth of the city and the University."

Burger made his plea before a special meeting of the board. "The City and the University are growing at a very rapid rate and this expressway is needed for the future development, as well as our growing industrial complex in the southeast section of Iowa City," Burger said.

Russians Predict Moon Landing

RUSSIA'S LUNIK 5 WILL REACH the moon Wednesday and it carries equipment for a soft landing, the official news agency Tass reported in Moscow.

Tass said the arrival will be at about 3:15 p.m. EST. It added: "The automatic station Lunik 5 carries for the first time equipment for a soft landing."

A soft landing would enable the Lunik to transmit information back to earth after it has reached the moon.

Miss Hopson Gets Homemaker Award

Jeanine Hopson, A4, Corpus Christi, Tex., received the Myrna Lee Sprengler Memorial Award for 1965 at the annual Senior Banquet of the U of I chapter of the American Home Economics Association (AHEA) Tuesday evening at the Iowa Memorial Union.

Mabel H. Parsons, assistant professor of home economics and chairman of the award committee, presented the $100 award to Miss Hopson, and Sue Updegraff, G, Iowa City, recipient of the award in 1964, gave her the Betty Lamp Pin, symbol of the AHEA, which is worn by the current holder of the Sprengler Award. Mrs. Updegraff is a graduate student in home economics.

Nominees for the award are selected by a committee of home economics students and faculty members from home economics seniors in the highest ten per cent of their class academically, and the recipient is chosen from these nominees by vote of the home economics faculty. Selection is based on professional attitude, excellence of character and esteem of co-workers.

A THIRD problem is the street cleaning, snow removal and garbage schedule. Ross said University Heights did not want to be on the tail end of the Iowa City public works schedule.

The Batmen struck and left their mark during the wee hours of Tuesday morning.

The mark was an 8 by 17 foot flag, with a bat painted on it, stretched between the twin smokestacks of the University Power Plant.

WITH COILS OF rope hung over their shoulders, the Batmen crept up softly to the base of the smokestack. Two of them began the 180-foot climb to the top. The third climbed to the top of the power plant.

When the Batmen neared the top of the stacks, they threw ropes down to their accomplice on the roof of the Power Plant. He tied the ropes together, and they pulled the single rope up.

One of the Batmen on the tower paid out the rope with the flag furled on it while the other took up the slack. When the flag was centered, the Batmen tied the bottom ropes to the smokestack ladders and hurried down.

Then they stole away to their respective bat-caves, somewhere in the men's dorms.

Tuesday morning, when the strike of the Batmen came to light, one of the Power Plant employees was heard to say, "I don't know how the damn thing got up there, but I know I ain't gonna climb up there to take it down!"

ANOTHER EMPLOYEE said he thought it would probably stay up there until it rotted.

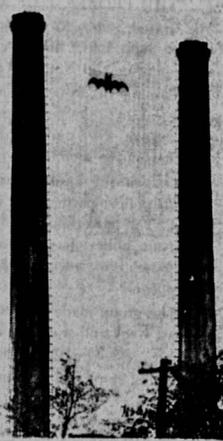

In an interview, one of the Batmen said they had been planning the strike since last November, when they had put up a smaller flag which fell down a couple of days later.

Another said it had become a challenge to put up a big flag which would stay there long enough for everyone to see it.

The Batmen said the strike wasn't especially planned for Governor's Day; it just happened that way.

The strike was planned so no one would be offended, they said. The Batmen just hoped everyone would get a smile out of it.

You ask who the Batmen were? It was impossible to tell; they wouldn't take their masks off.

Flying High

After six months of preparation and seven trials on the smoke stacks, Batman has placed his mark above the U of I Power Plant. With the semester quickly nearing its end, the work had to be done on a clear night with flood lights revealing the deed.

Spring Concert Will Feature Czech Conductor

The University Symphony Band will present its spring concert in the Union Main Lounge at 8 tonight. Guest conductor will be Vaclav Nelhybel, award-winning Czech composer and conductor.

Frederick Ebbs, professor of music and director of University bands, will conduct the first half of the program.

Included in the first half will be "Overture to the Opera 'The Improvisator'" by D'Albert and Hindsley; "Siegfried's Rhine Journey from 'Die Gotterdammerung'" by Wagner; "Lincolnshire Posy" by Grainger; and "Somersault" by Hale Smith.

Professor Ebbs will be assisted by Thomas L. Davis, assistant professor of music and director of the percussion ensemble.

Nelhybel will conduct the second half of the program, which will consist of three of his own works and two by him and Smetana.

The numbers on the second half are "Marcia Dorica," "Trittico," and "Adagio and Allegro," all by Nelhybel. "March of the Revolutionary Guard" and "March of Freedom" by Nelhybel and Smetana. Tonight's performance will be the first for "Adagio and Allegro."

Merger Plan Wins Favor Of Group

By SUZANNE ANDERSON Staff Writer

Members of the Iowa City-University Heights Merger Commission gave their personal approval for a proposed merger between Iowa City and University Heights.

But the members of the Commission, consisting of three Iowa City Councilmen and three University Heights Councilmen, voiced caution when considering the proper time for a merger.

RUSSELL ROSS, Mayor of University Heights, was elected chairman of the Commission which also discussed facts and information that needed to be gathered before a merger vote could be brought before the people of both communities.

William Hubbard, Iowa City Councilman, said, "I am very definitely in favor of a merger and feel it is inevitable. I don't know when the timing would be proper but the two communities are too closely linked not to be joined sometime in the future."

James Bradbury, University Heights Councilman, said he thought the merger was coming but was anxious that good timing be considered. He said that a large majority would be needed on the vote since a premature election would only stir up trouble.

THE RESPONSIBILITY of the Commission was to develop a promotional program for the merger if the commission felt the time was right, according to Iowa City Councilman William Maas.

One question raised by University Heights was the problem of zoning. The Commission will ask the Iowa City Planning and Zoning Commission to give their policy on the type of zoning they would give University Heights if it were merged with Iowa City.

An evaluation of levies both with and without a merger is needed from the Iowa City and Johnson County Assessor's Offices. University Heights is especially concerned about the rise of its taxes that might occur with the merger.

A THIRD problem is the street cleaning, snow removal and garbage schedule. Ross said University Heights did not want to be on the tail end of the Iowa City public works schedule.

Senate Says No To Poll Tax Ban

Leaders Unite In Defeating Kennedy Plan

Vote Supports Version By Dirksen, Mansfield To Hit Existing Levies

WASHINGTON (AP)

— Backing its Democratic and Republican leaders, the Senate refused Tuesday to write a ban on state poll taxes into President Johnson's voting rights bill.

The 49-45 decision was built upon alliances which saw friend and foe of the Johnson bill stand together.

With it, the Senate rejected an amendment first proposed by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.) to rule out the poll tax as a qualification for voters in state and local elections.

INSTEAD, it stuck to the version proposed by Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana and Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois.

Their measure would arm the attorney general with a congressional declaration that there is evidence that poll taxes are used in some areas to deny voting rights, and send him to court to challenge the levies still imposed in Alabama, Mississippi, Virginia and Texas.

Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach helped write that measure. He joined himself in arguing that an outright ban would be a constitutional gamble.

"The choice," Mansfield told the Senate, "is between the course of risk and the course of sureness, the course of speed and the course of possible delay."

MANSFIELD said the leaders' proposal would put the poll tax issue before the Supreme Court more swiftly than the Kennedy amendment.

Kennedy insisted his version would better arm the attorney general for a court battle over poll taxes. Dirksen disagreed.

"Let's resolve this matter as it ought to be resolved, with a proper respect for our states and our federal-state system," Dirksen said. "If you can tell the states 'You can't impose a poll tax,' why can't you tell them 'You can't impose a cigarette tax' or any other tax?"

"I SAY that we ought to do the job if we're going to do it, and do it right now," Kennedy countered. "Why are we asking the Supreme Court to make this declaration unless we are willing to assume this responsibility?" he asked.

While the two floor leaders opposed the amendment, both of the assistant leaders voted for Kennedy's proposal. They are Sens. Russell B. Long (D-La.) and Thomas Kuchel (R-Calif.).

Thirty-nine Democrats and six Republicans voted for the amendment. Twenty-four Democrats and 25 Republicans against it.

ROBERT F. KENNEDY (D-N.Y.) who once was attorney general, voted with his brother.

The showdown aligned the Kennedys against Johnson, for the administration was firmly opposed to the poll tax ban.

Hughes Says Campus, Capital Should Link

Gov. Harold Hughes called for a bridging of the gap that exists between educators and politicians at the Governor's Day luncheon Tuesday.

"The University, through its general creative influence, has a crucial role to play as a stimulating force for the communication of new ideas and as a cohesive force for the easing of old prejudices," Hughes said.

ABOUT 460 ROTC cadets, parents and guests attended the luncheon in the Union Main Lounge and heard Hughes discuss the role of the University in supplying intellectual leadership and technical assistance for the coming era of government reform.

"It is more important that we in Iowa change our attitudes than our laws," he said.

Hughes outlined five measures he said he considered important for governmental reorganization:

- Elimination of secrecy from legislative processes.
- Provision for item veto — which would allow the governor to veto unacceptable facets of a bill, rather than the whole bill.
- Provision for annual sessions of the legislature.
- Adoption of the short ballot — which would allow the governor to appoint administrative officers rather than having them elected.
- Provision for four-year terms for the governor and lieutenant governor.

"THE UNIVERSITY," he said, "has had an active part in recommending these reforms to the people of Iowa through the years."

"As we invest in education and believe in it, so shall we grow and prosper. Although I'll admit it may seem like a paradox when I fight appropriations in the budget requested by the Board of Regents," he said.

HUGHES REPEATED the main points of his luncheon speech at an afternoon address to about 300 faculty members. He said University personnel could be valuable in helping to change the structure of Iowa government and the present legislative system.

Other activities included in the Governor's Day schedule were presentation of awards to ROTC cadets, review of ROTC cadets, and recognition of senior cadets.

Local Sheriff Warns — Illegal Drink Crackdown

By BILL NEWBROUGH Staff Writer

State drinking laws will be more strictly enforced here than they have been in the past, Maynard E. Schneider, Johnson County sheriff, said Tuesday night.

Schneider, in an interview, said although such drinking may have been tolerated in the past, pressure from state authorities had forced him to crack down.

Gov. Harold E. Hughes is especially perturbed about liquor law violations by minors in Johnson County, Schneider said.

Schneider's concern about the problem is being shown by the increasing number of age checks at beer parties.

Last Saturday night, Schneider and his men, with the aid of state agents, the Iowa Highway Patrol and University Police, broke up a large beer party at the Coralville Reservoir.

Schneider said the party was attended by hundreds of University students, many from Sigma Chi fraternity and Hillcrest. A band and portable electric system were used at this party.

Schneider made no arrests at the party, but has a list of names of many of those involved.

A deputy of Schneider and a state agent investigated a party sponsored by the Delta Chi fraternity at the reservoir Friday afternoon. At this party, Patrick G. McEnany, A3, Cedar Rapids, was charged with making beer available to minors.

McEnany was identified by Schneider as the treasurer of Delta Chi. Schneider said the charge was made against McEnany because he had signed the check used to purchase beer for the party.

Bruce K. Barghahn, A1, Knoxville, was charged with consuming beer as a minor at the same party. He is free under $100 bond. McEnany was freed after he posted $300 bond.

Schneider said he was concerned about the misuse of the reservoir area for beer parties. He said discarded beer cans spoil the area for campers and picnickers.

"We can't be everywhere at the same time," said Schneider, "but we will be checking all areas of the county for illegal drinking. Again last night (Monday) I found some minors drinking, but didn't file any charges. I have their names, though, and may take action if necessary."

"I hate to pick on University students," Schneider said, "but I have to start somewhere. I have been surprised by the lack of illegal drinking by those of high school age."

Schneider was elected Johnson County sheriff last November. He said he plans to meet with University officials at 3 p.m. today to discuss the drinking problem.

Four Groups Get Approval From Senate

The Student Senate recognized four new campus organizations Tuesday night, after some discussion on the proposed University Socialist League.

The Senate recommendations will be sent to the Office of Student Affairs, which grants the final approval.

Dick Mundy, A3, Manchester, questioned whether any group would be allowed on campus if it met the constitutional requirements for an organization.

DAN NICOL, A2, Milford, chairman of the General Standing Committee that considered the proposed constitutions, replied that was correct.

Dick Pundt, A3, Homestead, objected to the Socialist League constitution on the grounds that it was ambiguous. Pundt pointed out that, for one thing, the constitution didn't specify if the league's actions would be nonviolent.

Pundt said, however, that he believed the socialists were entitled to have their own official organization.

THE OTHER organizations recognized were the Sky Diving Club; New Prospectives, a male social club that will help raise money for social functions; and Epsilon Phi, a women's social club.

In other action, Pres. Bill Parisi, A3, Chicago Heights, Ill., appointed the Senate members of a committee that will survey how women feel about women's hours. The committee was set up by the Committee on Student Life.

The senators appointed were Sue Curtis, A2, Cherokee; Elizabeth Edison, A2, Storm Lake; and Julie Walters, A2, Iowa City. Three other members will be appointed from the judicial committee of the Associated Women Students.

The Senate voted to rescind a directive it had issued to the Pep Club last year. The club had reported that it was complying with the provision to distribute season tickets in the spring and by identification numbers. Other parts of the directive, it said, were impractical.

The Senate also passed a resolution setting up an all-University committee to have charge of all future spring festivals.

Who's telling whom?

THE PROBLEM OF COMMUNICATION between the United States government and its people is becoming a very lively issue, due in great part to this country's involvement in Viet Nam and the Dominican Republic.

Perhaps because the fundamentals of both issues are not clear to the people or perhaps because these issues are in themselves questionable, "news" is taking on more of a persuasive tone.

One of the most critical groups of late of the U.S. foreign policy, particularly in Viet Nam, is the academic world. The government, in response to criticism of its Viet Nam policy, has sent a team of three State Department officials to several Midwest universities to explain the U.S. position.

The group made its first stop of the tour at this campus last week and was not particularly convincing.

An article in The New York Times, describing the team's first stop, said it came up with a "no sale" from the professors.

The main objection of the audience was that the State Department officials, who had all served in Viet Nam, were not telling them anything new, nor were they interested in what the audience seemed to think.

That such a team of "explainers" is even necessary is indication that something is wrong somewhere.

As the Dominican Republic crisis built up and reports about the U.S. involvement were first denied and then confirmed, thinking people naturally became suspicious of absolute statements. Was the landing of the Marines the only and the best way of dealing with the situation, if we must have an active part in it at all?

If the government would make clear its objectives initially, within the framework of national security, then it would not have to spend time running around the country trying to convince the dissenters — who are still not convinced by the same old line that made them originally suspicious.

This country can survive mistakes, such as we survived the Bay of Pigs, but only with honest information, not spoon-fed propaganda that no one cares to swallow.

An important job

GOV. HAROLD HUGHES took care of some important business for the University last week when he completed the appointments of new members of the Board of Regents.

Three Regents will retire from the Board next month, and the governor has lined up three capable citizens to replace them. Regent members, like the citizens on local school boards, serve on the Board in order to aid the cause of education — not to make money as they might in a full time job.

Regents must spend at least two days a month in attending Board meetings. At that time they make several policy decisions which direct the action of their employees in the Regent Office and in the state's institutions of higher education.

These decisions are many and varied, each takes considerable time and study outside of monthly meetings. In an average month each Board member must spend at least a few days reading reports and papers to prepare for the decisions to be made at the meeting.

Regents also donate time during the year to attend ceremonies at state institutions and to attend region and national meetings. They sometimes visit campuses in other states in order to compare different institutions to Iowa's.

Although Regents are appointed on a political basis reflecting party strength in the State House, the Board members never make decisions on partisan grounds.

To the fine citizens soon to retire from the Board, A. W. Nöhren, Maurice Crabbe and Mrs. Robert Lubetkin, we say "thank you" for your fine service to the University and the state.

To the new appointees to the Board, Thomas Loudon, William Quarton, and Casey Loss, we extend a warm welcome and best wishes.

Narcotics addicts seek status, an identity through drugs

By GARY SMITH
Staff Writer
(Last in a series)

"The main problem in drug addiction is the lower socio-economic person because he wishes to set himself apart from the rest of society," according to John Stratton, assistant professor of sociology. The person in the low economic situation wants an identity and a status he is unable to obtain except by taking drugs, Stratton said. In this way the person creates a sub-world of his own.

IN THIS WAY the drug addicts become insiders, sharing the knowledge of the pleasure of taking narcotics, he said.

The addict doesn't have to worry about competing in the world, because he retreats from the world and its ways.

Stratton said the addict sets up his own world near people who understand him.

"By addicts, of course, we can only mean those known by the police to be using the drugs," he said. "There is no way of counting those that hide their addiction from those around them."

According to Stratton, drug usage is centered among the lower economic classes in large urban centers. Then it is generally found in specific neighborhoods of the city, he said; most often among lower class Negroes.

TAKING DOPE also offers distinction to the group of addicts, Stratton said. Part of the status in being a drug addict is that the narcotics are much more expensive and harder to obtain than alcohol. Anyone, he said, can be an alcoholic.

"People on addictive drugs tend to withdraw from the world and become less interested in what is going on around them," he said. "They tend to be introspective."

THE POPULAR IMAGE of an addict as a beast, an animal or a fiend is incorrect, according to Dr. Stratton, because the drugs do not speed the addict, but slow his reactions.

"Under the influence of the drug, one is not a rapist or a homicidal murderer," he said.

Most Americans have a negative attitude toward addicts, and the addicts must exist in a situation where the supply is available and where their actions are accepted, Stratton said.

THE NEED for supply and support is the reason for the concentration of addicts in the urban centers, he said. The live-and-let-live attitude and the supply cannot be found in the small town.

Stratton explained that addiction might also occur in medical patients who used the drug to treat an illness or professional people who had easy access to drugs.

"The doctors give it to you while you are sick, tell you what it is, and when the pain comes you know why," he said. "So you seek out the drug and ease the withdrawal pains."

"Just because you have problems doesn't mean you will become an addict," he said. "It has to be available to you first and you have to be introduced to it."

CRIME COMES into addiction when the addict needs money to buy the drugs that cost him more as his body creates a tolerance and demands larger quantities of the drugs, according to Dr. Stratton.

Since the addict breaks the law in possessing the drug, he said, there is even greater pressure on him to break the law to get money to buy it. Stratton said that the drug is bought on the black market and the price will be what the trade will bear.

"The public has an image of the pusher as the one who creates the drug addiction in the world," said Dr. Stratton. "It is usually introduced to non-users by close friends who are addicts or by relatives.

"Sometimes a non-user becomes interested simply because the source is available in his neighborhood."

According to Dr. Stratton, most of the known addicts are over 21. He said there are very few teenage addicts. In 1965 only 10 per cent of the known addicts were under 21, he said.

SOCIOLOGISTS have been doing research in the area of addiction, he explained, and do not look on addiction as a legal problem as do law enforcement agencies.

Instead, the sociologist sees addiction as a medical problem needing medical solution rather than a judicial one, he said.

John Clancy, associate professor of psychiatry, said one must differentiate between narcotics and non-narcotics when talking about drugs.

Narcotics are generally of the opiate family and their synthetic derivatives, Dr. Clancy said, while non-narcotics are drugs which include amphetamines and barbiturates.

GENERALLY the opiates do not excite a person, but tend to cause a person to withdraw into a state of temporary solitude. Dr. Clancy said opiates provide brief escape from troublesome feelings.

"Non-narcotics, on the other hand, cause a person to become confused, uncoordinated and given to errors of judgment," he said. "The amphetamines are used by many people for a variety of reasons, and if taken in excess of the proper dosage cause excitement and confusion."

According to Clancy, narcotic addiction is centered in a few main cities such as New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, and Washington, D.C.

EXCEPT FOR THE FEW isolated cases of medical addicts, most addicts migrated to the big cities, close to the supply of the drug, he said. The limited supply was the reason for so few addicts in the state of Iowa, according to Clancy.

"In some of the larger cities, drugs are taken simply because it is an anti-social act," said Clancy. "Just like thieving, speeding and other acts outside the law, it is done for kicks."

Clancy said narcotics had no permanent effect on the brain. However, in order to support the habit many addicts would do without food, clothing and medicine to provide himself with funds to buy drugs.

Consequently, the addict's health might suffer from undernourishment.

"THE ADDICT wants something that will help him escape the problems of this world," Clancy said, "and taking the drug seems to be the easiest way out of the situation."

Dr. Clancy said many drugs are habit-forming but did not produce a degree of dependence comparable to narcotics.

"One of the main problems with the non-narcotics is that they are easily obtained," Clancy said. "They can be procured in a drug-store by prescription."

VARIOUS COMBINATIONS of non-narcotic drugs, some stimulant, some tranquilizing, some sedative in effect, are compounded, Clancy said, and these combinations are known as speedballs or goofballs.

"These are very dangerous, since the effects are unpredictable," he said. "Parents should be careful of what they keep in their bathroom cabinets since the ingredients of goofballs are readily available in the home."

Editorial viewed as 'overdone' Adolescence revisited— With chains and pins, coeds are securely committed

To the Editor: Your tirade Tuesday May 11 on the hoodlumism of the frats on the row, excluding Sigma Chi, seems a little overdone. Perhaps this isn't too hard to figure out since John Van, a Sigma Chi, may be feeling a little maternalistic toward his frat. Linda Weiner (not being present) may be slightly misinformed about the episode. Perhaps I can paint my slanted version to match yours.

As a background the Derby Day put on by the Sigma Chi's is not a Sunday school social as the editors would have you believe. It is a bawdy, often gross, series of games competed in by the various girl housing units. No, the girls didn't even wear their finest outfits but instead wore grubby cut-offs and sweatshirts. To set the mood even more, the girls were loaded into trucks like cattle for their "parade" down frat row.

The nasty frat rats on both sides of the row scathfully (sic) waited between the grass blades for this splendid "parade" in order to mercilessly attack it with... water? (I'm sorry I can't say garbage or firecrackers but I didn't see any.)

Ah! a messenger from the west side of the row says the girls will arrive in five minutes. What? Can it be a Sigma Chi that told the nasty frat boys this? Oh, shades of Benedict Arnold!

The vanguard of this "parade," the hated University cops, with unbelievable perception saw all the terrible machinations of the frat rats. Could it be that in a moment of insanity the cops thought a spring-time soaking of a rival frat or of those finely dressed damsels was just a form of harmless fun?

Ah yes, there was damage (two windshields totaled and a hazardous street to drive on) and looking at it objectively, could it be the ruin was not planned in secret meeting by the terrible frats but instead something that hindsight could show to be the fatal flaw in the fun? Yes, hindsight does show this aerial bombing to be dangerous but really, Jon, does it call for your hypocritical outburst?

True love—springing about the college campus—rests upon an everlasting foundation of lavaliers, pins and chains. It's not enough to date a coed regularly and develop the acquaintance into a more personal and romantic relationship.

Now, everyone must make specific and periodic declarations of their union with some metallic bond of fidelity, such as lavalier, fraternity pin or chain. All are devised to proclaim publicly the seriousness of the relationship.

This "collegiate" institution is merely added proof that the college student is still basically the same teenage high school student that descended on the college campus yesterday.

NOT ONLY has Harry High School carried his adolescent passion for rock 'n' roll music to college but also he has brought with him that noble teenage institution of "going steady."

The class ring has been traded in for other jewelry which has the tremendous advantage of a more smooth transfer to new ownership. No longer is the girl required to spend hours taping up the ring so it will fit, her finger or encircling it with the proper shade of angora so that it will match that night's outfit.

It is easy to just pin it on that sweater. Actually, these symbols are simply manifestations of laziness and insecurity. She can't go out with anyone else if she is committed, so why not give her something he never wears anyway — Joe College reasons. She won't have to worry about dates every week and, besides, she needs some more jewelry, so why not take it — Cathy Coed muses.

After a friendly conversation over the phone some Tuesday night, Joe asks Cathy for a date for Saturday night.

"Oh, gee, Joe, I'm sorry, but I'm pinned to Al," replies Cathy.

"Pinned? Well, grats, but who's Al?" Joe questions.

"Why surely you know Al, he's active in seventeen different organizations," Cathy explains.

"Of course, Cathy, I remember. He's a member of about the most representative house on campus. Nice talking with you. Bye."

Joe has hung up, realizing he was refused not because he isn't cool, collegiate, and handsome, but because Cathy is pinned.

Cathy returns to her room, seriously interested in each other, this would be enough to insure the relationship. They would neither need some exorbitantly priced piece of jewelry to guarantee their fidelity nor would they care if the curious public knew just how intent they were about each other.

The only time this collegiate fad has any justification is when the coed is so beautiful, personable and popular that she needs a preliminary obstacle to discourage the less ardent suitors.

I am sure there are not enough such ideal coeds on this campus to merit a weekly true love column. More people are using crutches these days than ever before.

The real story can now be told about mothers

By ART BUCHWALD

Last week President Johnson issued a Mother's Day proclamation, urging all people to express their love and gratitude for their mothers. The story behind this decision can now be told.

For weeks rumors had been rampant in Washington that the President would declare May 9 But no high official was willing to confirm it.

All queries were referred to the White House.

At his press briefing George Reedy said he knew nothing about the President's making a BUCHWALD Mother's Day proclamation and to his knowledge the President had no plans to declare it an official holiday. When reporters persisted in questioning Mr. Reedy on the subject, he was quoted as stating, "That's all I have to say on the matter at this time."

In the meantime, the President was meeting with National Security Advisor McGeorge Bundy and Secretary of Defense McNamara to discuss the various possibilities. While Secretary of State Rusk was not at the meeting, he was kept informed as to what was going on.

McNairra and Bundy both argued that something had to be done about Mother's Day before May 9 and that the President should be the one to explain it to the American people.

The first thing the President did was to call Congressional leaders to the White House and inform them of his decision. Both Sen. Mike Mansfield and Everett Dirksen pledged their support to the President as did Congressman Carl Albert and Gerry Ford.

Sen. Dirksen was quoted as telling the President, "It's the only thing you can do under the circumstances."

Sen. Mansfield said, "Except for Sen. Wayne Morse, I believe the Democratic majority will back you."

After the Congressional leaders left the White House, President Johnson telephoned former President Eisenhower and told him what he was going to do about Mother's Day.

President Eisenhower said, "If I was in your position, Mr. President, I would do exactly the same thing. I will issue a statement giving my whole hearted approval."

The President then telephoned former President Truman, who said, "It's about blankety-blank time! If anybody says anything about your decision, I'll tell them where to go."

The next call the President made was to former Sen. Barry Goldwater. Mr. Goldwater pointed out that during his campaign he had always advocated a strong Mother's Day policy, and he was glad to see the President was finally following it. Mr. Goldwater said the President could count on him.

During the next week the President had Lou Harris, Sam Lubell, and George Gallup take polls to see what the consensus of the American people was in regard to a Mother's Day proclamation. Seventy-five per cent of the people said they believed in Mother's Day, five per cent were against it, and twenty per cent said that they had no opinion.

Encouraged by the polls, the President decided to act.

He alerted two airborne divisions, four Marine brigades, and the Atlantic Fleet in case there would be any trouble. He then arranged for Secretary McNamara, Under Secretary of State George Ball, and McGeorge Bundy to appear on television before him to explain his Mother's Day policy.

Then he made the announcement himself at a hurriedly-called press conference. At this writing the reaction in the United States has been very good, though there is still some question as to whether our allies will support the Mother's Day proclamation. So far both France and the Soviet Union said they would not.

Art Profs Produce Text for Teachers

An illustrated handbook on the teaching of art in elementary schools, written by two art professors, has been designed as a guide for the classroom teacher, a textbook for college students preparing to teach art, and an aid to art supervisors.

The book was written by Professors Frank Wachowiak and Theodore Ramsay. It is titled "Emphasis: Art, A Qualitative Program for the Elementary School."

Based on research conducted by the authors during the last five years, the book has been in production since 1963, during which time, the authors took color photos of work by students in the University Elementary School, to illustrate the text and assembled information for the many special aids they have provided for teachers.

MOST OF THE illustrations are by children in the University Elementary School. All of the color photos are by the authors, and black and white photography is by James Kent, manager of the Photographic Service. The layout and cover design for the text were also done by the authors.

Diagnostic drawings by boys and girls in the six grades of the schools have been reproduced on the inside of the front and back covers of the book. Asked at the beginning of each year to make a drawing of themselves combing hair, brushing their teeth, playing ball, or engaged in a similar activity, the children make the drawings in pencil or black crayon. Teachers use the drawings to determine how well the children are applying art principles being taught.

150 To Attend Psychology Institute Here

The Fifth Institute on Preventive Psychiatry will be held on campus Friday and Saturday.

The institute will consider ways in which the schools and community health facilities can aid in the prevention of mental illness and the promotion of mental health. Procedures suggested by research to date will be presented by five in a program planned by the Committee on Preventive Psychiatry at the U of I. Ralph H. Ojemann, professor of child behavior development, is chairman of the committee.

Assistance in sponsoring the program has been provided by the Grant Foundation, Inc., the Maytag Company Foundation, Inc., the Iowa Mental Health Authority, and the U of I Graduate College.

Among 150 persons registered in advance for the Fifth Institute on Preventive Psychiatry are school administrators, mental health workers, social workers, psychiatrists, public health workers, nurses, physicians, public and private school teachers, and college professors in education and the behavioral sciences.

Iowa Baseball Team Tops Cornell College in 6-2 Win

By CURT SYLVESTER
Staff Writer

The Iowa Hawkeyes, sparked by four extra base hits, beat Cornell College 6-2 in a game played on the Iowa Field Tuesday afternoon.

Bob Gebhard, Ron Shudes and Jim Koehn led the hitting with two hits apiece. Joe Madden and Frank Renner again combined to hold Cornell to three hits and only one earned run.

CORNELL took the lead in the first inning on a walk to Jim Lawler, a two-base error by Iowa's first baseman Shudes and a sacrifice fly by Kendall Meyer.

But the Hawks came back to score what proved to be enough runs for the victory in their half of the first. Lee Endsley went to first on an error by Jim Liehr, stole second and went to third on another error before scoring on Larry Rathje's sacrifice fly. Gebhard then singled as did Ken Banaszek and Ron Shudes, to give Iowa a 3-1 lead.

In the third two more runs were produced on consecutive triples by Gebhard and Mickey Moses followed by a walk to Banaszek and a double steal which saw Moses cross the plate with Iowa's fifth run of the game.

Shudes doubled to open the sixth inning, went to third on an infield error and scored on a throwing error for the final run.

AFTER GIVING up the unearned run in the first inning, Iowa hurler Joe Madden kept Cornell's hitting throttled, giving up only two hits while striking out eight and walking three. Frank Renner came on to pitch in the sixth and didn't give up a hit until the ninth when Cornell threatened to get back in the game.

Cornell's Jim Sifcos worked Renner for a walk and scored on Kendall Meyer's double into left. The threat increased as Bruce Sandman walked, Rick Schimmel got on via a fielder's choice and Jim Liehr walked to fill the bases. However, Renner got the next two hitters to end the game.

The Hawks will carry a 9-1 record into this weekend's home games. Ohio State, currently second in the Big Ten, will be here for a single game Friday and In-

Iowa will be in town for a twin-bill Saturday.

Cornell's season record is now 3-5.

Officials Named for Track Meet Here

Top officials have been appointed for the Big Ten outdoor track and field championships here May 21 and 22. They include Tom Deckard, former Indiana Olympian, referee; Pat Holmes of Wisconsin, head starter; Dr. Gene Asprey of Iowa, head finish judge; L. R. (Pat) Beals of Iowa, head timer; Tom Bennett of Wisconsin, head field judge; and Bill Kelly of Minneapolis, head inspector.

Bert McGrane, retired Des Moines Register sports writer who covered many Big Ten meets, is honorary referee.

Iowa Is 3-4 in Big Ten

Iowa now has a 3-4 record in Big Ten baseball play. Three of the four losses were by one run and two of the wins were by the same margin. Iowa lost to Michigan and Michigan State, 4-3, in the final inning and to Minnesota, 1-0. A 2-1 victory over Michigan, the first 3-2 triumph over Minnesota were Wolverine conference loss; and a close wins.

Burns is Pleased with Drills; Looking Forward to Game Sat.

Looking forward to Saturday's intrasquad scrimmage in the Stadium, Iowa Coach Jerry Burns Monday afternoon said all aspects of the game have been worked on more in this spring's sessions than in any other season when he's been head coach.

"For instance, we have worked more on our kicking game this spring than in most seasons," he said. "This part of our game should be a little better Saturday, although our top two punters, Larry McDowell and Mickey Moses, will not be in the game because of the baseball doubleheader here against Indiana the same day," he said.

COACH BURNS especially praised the fine work of some of the senior members of the squad who are very enthusiastic, even though it's pretty apparent that they have their starting positions won. Burns mentioned the leadership and hustle displayed by Cliff

Wilder, Dave Long, Bill Briggs, Gary Snook, Leo Miller, Karl Noonan, Butch Ryan, Dalton Kimble, Ivory McDowell and John Niland.

"As for some of the individuals at various positions, Snook, of course, is still our No. 1 quarterback," he said. "I'd rate Phil Schooley just a little bit ahead of Chuck Roland as a backup man for Snook because he has been hitting the ball a little better. Roland is still the best scrambler of the three," he added.

The coaching staff has moved John Fieeli, a 218-pound junior from Grand Rapids, Mich., from offensive tackle to offensive center. He has impressed the coaches so much with his blocking for pass protection that he's been moved ahead of veteran Jim Cmejer, who has been hampered in the spring drills with a knee injury.

"At offensive tackle, there seems to be a standoff between Roger Lamont and John Hendricks," said Burns. "Defensively, Tony Williams came up from his defensive spot in the secondary backfield during our scrimmage last Saturday and really rocked the ball carrier a couple of times. These are the kind of things we like to see," he said.

WITH VETERAN defensive men such as Al Randolph, Dick Gibbs and Tom Knutson participating with the spring track team, young sophomores such as Davenport's

Tony Williams are being given more of a chance to prove themselves this spring.

Coach Burns also praised the work of sophomore linebacker Terry Huff, another Davenport boy who is constantly hustling on the practice field.

"We've never had a practice session or a scrimmage yet in which Terry hasn't intercepted at least one pass," said Burns.

Several Hawkeyes suffered minor injuries in last Saturday's practice scrimmage. They are Bill Restelli, who injured an ankle; John Diehl, who suffered a hip pointer; and Dave Long, who injured a few ribs.

"I'm hoping we didn't come up with two many nuisance injuries which would hamper practice this week as they did with practice a week ago," said Burns. "There were a couple of days last week when we had no fullbacks at all, since Cornelius Patterson injured an ankle, Silas McKinnie had a bad shoulder, Larry McDowell was with the baseball team and Gary Simpson had some tests in the late afternoon, he said.

PLAYERS who will definitely miss Saturday's final scrimmage are John Niland, Gary Larsen, Larry McDowell and Al Randolph. Dick Gibbs and Tom Knutson of the track squad will take part in the game since the track meet here with Minnesota has been moved up from 1:30 in the afternoon until 10:30 a.m.
