

Soap Gets In Your Eyes

The latest weapon to control riots — a bubble-blowing machine — was demonstrated to the nation's sheriffs Tuesday during their annual convention in Atlantic City, N.J. A non-toxic soap and water are pumped into the front of a motor-driven fan and out come the bubbles.

Retired Army Col. Rex Applegate, author and lecturer on riot control who held the demonstration, said the machine is the "ultimate weapon in using minimum force to disperse a mob." Sheriffs, deputy sheriffs and their ladies look on.

Engle Gets Research Grant

Nine Months in Europe To Complete New Book

Nine months of studying and writing are in store for Paul Engle, director of the Writers Workshop.

The Board of Regents has approved a one semester special research grant for Engle to give him time to finish a book he is writing. Engle also wants to study recent poetry in Eastern Europe and work on languages. He will finance the second semester himself.

Engle plans to use the poetry for his poetry workshop, where the students do a great deal of translating poetry from different countries. Engle said that in Europe he will be with the people who can help him most with the languages.

He will leave from New York in September. He will stop in Iceland to make a speech at the University in Reykjavik. From there he will go to Copenhagen and then to Paris, where he plans to spend most of his time. He also wants to spend part of his leave in Germany.

Cities Engle hopes to visit include Warsaw, Prague, Bucharest, Belgrade, Cairo, and Istanbul.

Engle plans to visit Edmund Blunden, an English poet who was his tutor when Engle was a Rhodes scholar at Merton College, Oxford University from 1933-1936. Blunden and Engle have corresponded for 30 years.

Engle has just returned from a reunion of Rhodes scholars at

Swarthmore College in Pennsylvania, where he spoke on "The Internationalization of Culture."

Two other members of the University staff, Robert Muir, professor of botany, and Rhodes Dunlap, professor of English, also attended the reunion. Altogether, 350 Rhodes scholars were present.

While returning from the reunion, Engle stopped in Washington to discuss the international aspects of his workshop program with officials in the State Department.

Students come from Europe, Asia and Africa to study at the Writers Workshop. All prospective students for the workshop must submit samples of their work. Many applicants are turned down to maintain the high standards of the workshop.

"The test is talent, not grade point, for admittance to the workshop," said Engle. "We have turned down Phi Betas and people who have published to keep our standards high."

In 1937, Engle joined the University staff as an assistant to Wilbur Schramm, director of the fiction workshop. Two years later Engle became the director. As a result of his suggestions, the writers program has expanded to include a poetry as well as a fiction workshop.

For his M.A. thesis, Engle presented an original book of poems, "Worn Earth," which won the Yale Series of Younger Poets prize in 1932. Since then, he has published nine volumes of poetry and one novel.

During Engle's absence, Donald Justice, associate professor in English, will be in charge of the poetry workshop. Eugene Garber, assistant professor in English, will handle administration of the fiction workshop.

Engle will return in June, 1966.

Lands Blazing Jet; Pilot Named Hero

HONOLULU (AP) — The calm-voiced pilot of a Pan American jet transport was acclaimed Tuesday as a hero of 24 frightening minutes for 143 passengers who watched a flaming engine and 20 feet of burning wing fall away over the densely populated San Francisco area.

No one was hurt either aboard the four-jet Boeing 707 or on the ground.

Central figure in Monday's air drama from takeoff at San Francisco Airport to the emergency landing 50 miles away at Travis Air Force Base was Capt. Charles H. Kimes, 44, Danville, Calif.

This is how the drama unfolded: "The engine caught fire when we were 700 feet up after takeoff," said Kimes. It later dropped to the ground.

"We have a little minor problem — well, maybe it's not so minor," said Kimes carefully over the plane's intercom system.

Kimes' calmness was catching. Each passenger put on a life jacket and held a pillow in front for a crash landing.

A six-foot section of cowling fell on Holy Cross Cemetery near San Francisco. Grass fires brought fire engines' sirens wailing. The California highway patrol radioed all peninsula communities to prepare for a crash.

Aloft, Kimes came to a quick decision. Instead of circling back, he flew north to Travis with its 11,000-foot runway and crash equipment.

"After the engine dropped, I lost almost immediately radio contact with San Francisco Airport," he said.

"In seconds, a Coast Guard rescue plane was alongside me. I talked to the pilot and he relayed my conversation to San Francisco and led me into Travis."

"One of the landing gears had to be operated manually. "But he came down like nothing happened," said a Travis spokesman in praise of Kimes.

Drowned Man's Body Recovered

The body of James Ashlock, 26, of Cedar Rapids, was recovered Tuesday noon in the Coralville Reservoir. Ashlock drowned Sunday evening while swimming with friends near the Lake MacBride spillway.

The Johnson County Sheriff's Office said the body was spotted by two members of a dragging and recovery crew about 300 feet from the spot where he disappeared.

Ashlock had been a foreman at Collins Radio in Cedar Rapids.

Tickets for Two Performances Still Available

The only tickets left for the Summer Repertory Theatre plays are for the July 6 and 14 performances of "The Rehearsal."

The tickets at $1.50 each or free to summer session students with their I.D. cards and certificates of registration. Tickets may be picked up at the Union east lobby information desk.

Rights Units Tied to Reds

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — A special legislative committee charged Tuesday that two civil rights organizations are Communist-inspired and that Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. is "actively engaged in promoting the Communist line."

King and another spokesman called the accusations witch hunting and typical Southern reaction.

The five-member Commission to Preserve the Peace made the allegations in a 39-page report to the Alabama legislature — the body which created it two years ago after Birmingham's bloody racial demonstrations.

King, his Southern Christian Leadership Conference, the Congress of Racial Equality, and the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, were accused of promoting the Communist cause and being a threat to state and national sovereignty.

An SNCC official, Julian Bond of Atlanta, brushed off the charges as typical of a Southern legislature. Bond, public information director for SNCC and newly elected state representative, said:

"It is a typical response from a typical Southern legislature that knows if the Negroes in Alabama could register to vote freely then they wouldn't be sitting in their seats today."

Iowa's Trade Mission Back From Europe

Gov. Hughes Sees Trip As Good Will For Trade, Foreign Contacts

DES MOINES (AP) — Gov. Harold Hughes, carrying a Swiss mountain hat, returned to Des Moines Tuesday evening with about 60 other Iowans from a three-week tour of Europe designed to boost foreign sales of state products.

"I've seen some beautiful country," said the governor, "but this is the greatest area of the world I have been in so far."

Hughes told about 100 persons waiting at the airport to greet the Iowans that it is estimated that the tour will result in at least $5 million additional foreign trade for Iowa in the next two years, and could lead to increased sales of more than $23 million.

Hughes said that during the tour Iowans made 544 business contacts. He said that on the trip home the Iowans agreed that at least $5 million in foreign trade will be added to Iowa sales in the next two years.

The governor, speaking briefly to the welcoming crowd, said he believes the trip also resulted in a better understanding of Western Europe and its trade situation "and I think we also contributed something toward peace."

The governor admitted he was a little tired "because it is 1:30 a.m. in London, which we left this morning." The group arrived in Des Moines about 7:15 p.m., Iowa time.

The governor, asked whether he planned to veto a bill that repeals many restrictions on trucks operating in Iowa, said he would decide that after he has time to be briefed on developments and study the bill.

Among state officials on hand to greet the governor were State Treasurer Paul Franzenburg, Secretary of State Gary Cameron, State Auditor Lorne Worthington, Secretary of Agriculture Kenneth Owen, and State Banking Superintendent John Chrystal.

Four Marines Die in Clash With Reds Near Da Nang

Survey Says U.S. Male Still Lagging Behind

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even with her girdle on, the average American woman has a broader "seat breadth" — that is, she's broader across the derriere — than the average male, a new government survey shows.

The average difference is only four-tenths of an inch, girls — with women averaging 14.4 inches across the beam as compared with the 14 inches for men — but there it is.

The truth came out Tuesday with the release of results of a new survey of weight, height and "selected body dimensions" of American civilian adults ranging in age from 18 through 79 years. Almost 7,000 persons, representing a cross-section of the population, were surveyed.

In general, the survey — conducted under the auspices of the U.S. Public Health Service — left open the question whether the average American civilian is heavier and taller than his counterpart of a generation or so ago.

But the researchers said various other studies, of selected groups — including successive generations of Harvard College men — indicate this may be true.

The survey did bring out that on the average American men and women are a few pounds heavier and a mite taller than their counterparts across the Canadian border.

Kosygin Sees Viet Victory

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Alexei Kosygin boasted Tuesday that Communist forces are closer to victory in Viet Nam than ever before.

The Soviet leader repeated stiff Communist demands, including an American withdrawal, as the only basis for peace in Viet Nam.

Addressing a Kremlin rally, he ridiculed American peace proposals as maneuvers designed to delude world public opinion.

"For about four months American aircraft have attacked the Democratic Republic of North Viet Nam," Kosygin said. "But the imperialists of the United States failed and they will continue to fail to break the heroic spirit of the Vietnamese people."

Kosygin pledged further military aid to North Viet Nam if the war expands, but did not spell out what kind of aid.

Kosygin reiterated the Communist position that a Vietnamese peace settlement must include these terms:

—An end to American raids in North Vietnam.

—Strict adherence to the Geneva agreements of 1954.

—Withdrawal of all forces of the United States and its allies.

—Withdrawal of all U.S. weapons.

—Political settlement reached by the Vietnamese people themselves without outside interference.

SHASTRI TO VISIT TITO — NEW DELHI (AP) — Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri will visit Yugoslavia as guest of President Tito four days beginning July 28, official sources report.

Joint Force Fails In Jungle Search

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Communist mortars pounded U.S. and Australian artillery positions Tuesday night after the Viet Cong played a day-long jungle game of hide-and-seek near Saigon with the first international combat assault force against the guerrillas.

One American was killed in the sweep and other casualties were reported in the barrage.

Far to the north, the U.S. Marines suffered four dead Tuesday in a sharp clash with the guerrillas 63 miles south of the strategic Da Nang air force base.

Four other Marines were wounded, two seriously, in one of the Leatherneck's bloodiest engagements with the Viet Cong since their arrival to defend the U.S.-Vietnamese base.

For most of the day the joint task force of more than 2,000 U.S. and Vietnamese paratroopers and Australian infantrymen hunted futilely for the Reds in a Communist-infested jungle "D-zone," 30 miles north of Saigon. It was the first such joint operation against the guerrillas.

U.S. bombers and artillery pounded the jungle, near the big Bien Hoa air base, throughout the day, while the joint task force tried vainly to flush out the Reds.

As in past strikes against the "D-zone" by Vietnamese units, the opposition was largely sniper fire. But after nightfall, the Red mortars suddenly opened up on U.S. and Australian artillery positions.

Four Americans and Australians were reported wounded.

The guerrillas laid down the mortar barrage as the Australian and U.S. units camped for the night along a road in the jungles of the "D zone" — which is regarded as enemy controlled.

HELICOPTERS lifted the Matas into the Red-infested area from the strategic air base at Da Nang, 380 miles northeast of Saigon, after intelligence reports of a Communist buildup. Marine Corps Phantom jets and artillery fire supported the Leathernecks in the strike, in an area between the South China Sea and the Song Tra Bong River.

A U.S. spokesman said 14 Viet Cong died and 43 suspected Reds were detained during the day-long sweep.

Two of the four wounded Marines were reported in serious condition.

THE OPERATION near Saigon also cost an American life. A Viet Cong grenade killed a youth of Bravo Company, 1st Battalion of the U.S. Army's 173rd Airborne Brigade as he groped his way down a jungle path. This was the first combat death of the war for the brigade, which arrived in Viet Nam two months ago.

Nothing is sacred in GOP Headquarters

By ART BUCHWALD

James Bond kissed the delectable Miss Money on the forehead and walked into M's office. M lit up his pipe and then said, "007, I sending you on the most dangerous assignment you've ever tackled. I want you to go to the Republican National Headquarters in Washington, D.C., and get a copy of the list of people who contributed more than $1,000 to the Barry Goldwater campaign in 1964. I can't impress on you how important this mission is. If the list falls into the wrong hands it will mean the end of the two-party system in America."

Bond took the next plane out and landed at Dulles Airport at 10:30 in the evening. A tall brunette in a "Sting Ray" met him and drove him into town. "Daddy couldn't meet you," she said. "He had to go to San Francisco to address the United Nations."

Bond smirked as they got into the car and then he leaned over as if to kiss her. But just as he got his arms around her a Secret Service man popped up from the back and said, "Easy, Charlie, you're not fooling around with Tiffany Case."

"Oh, phooey," said the brunette and then she angrily put the car into gear. The Sting Ray dropped Bond off at the Republican National Headquarters. It was dark as 007 climbed the fire escape behind the building.

He jimmied open the window, parted the curtains, and jumped into the office of the Republican Treasurer. As he walked towards the desk he was struck over the head and went down on the carpet. When he came to he was looking into the business end of a .45. "Who are you with?" the man behind the .45 said.

"I'm just a volunteer for William Buckley," Bond said. "And who are you?" "I'm with the American Conservatives for a Conservative America," the man said. "And I think you're after what I'm after."

Suddenly the door was thrown open and a man said, "Drop it." He was carrying an Italian semi-automatic Berretta. The ACPCA man dropped his .45. The Berretta man said, "Where's the list?"

"We don't know. Who are you with?" "I'm with the Young Republicans for a Young Republic and once we get that list we're going to take over the party."

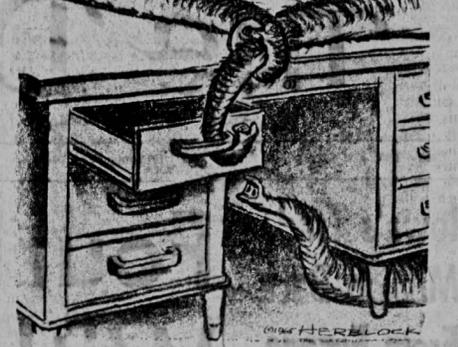

"Not while we're alive," said a man holding a Thompson sub-machine gun at the window. "Drop that Berretta."

"Who is he?" Bond asked the ACPCA man. "He's with the Free Society For a Free Society. One of Barry's boys."

The FSES man didn't see someone come from behind him and knock the machine gun out of his hand. "I've got a hand grenade here and I'll pull the pin if anyone moves."

"It's the Moderate Republicans For Moderation," someone gasped. Bond thought fast. "Before blood is shed, did any of you know there is a copy of 'Choice,' the film made by the Mothers For a Moral America?" he asked.

"Yes, Goldtrunk, It's Special Agent GOO7!"

Political spectrum -

The 'have-nots' - are they exploited?

By JAMES MICHAEL CALLAHAN for the Iowa Socialist League

It is sometimes interesting to read conservative magazines for the insight they provide into how the capitalist-imperialist mentality views the world and the sorts of things that unconsciously motivate our less extreme policy makers.

For instance, "U.S. News and World Report" recently gave the following reasons for the Administration's position on the war in Viet Nam:

"One of the world's richest areas is open to the winner in Indo-China. That's behind the growing U.S. concern... Tin, rubber, rice, key strategic materials are what the war is really about. The U.S. sees it as a place to hold-at any cost."

THAT READS like part of a Marxist analysis of the conflict. But the people of "U.S. News" didn't really mean it that way. At other times they utter the old shibboleths about protecting freedom from communism. Moreover, they really support the policy of protecting and extending our foreign investments at any cost.

In an editorial entitled "Thou Shalt Not Steal," David Lawrence, editor of "U.S. News," offers a tirade against the nations (especially Cuba) which have nationalized property owned by U.S. companies without giving "adequate" compensation.

"U.S. News" had, just the week before, called for U.S. invasion of Cuba.

IN ADDITION to purely religious and legalistic arguments against such nationalization of U.S. property, Mr. Lawrence also

"Where?" everyone wanted to know. "In the filing cabinet over there."

They all rushed to the cabinet. "There's a projector over here," someone yelled.

While everyone was watching the salacious movie, Bond managed to break open the desk drawer of the Republican Treasurer and grab the list. Then, while the others watched a girl in a topless bathing suit, Bond dashed out of the door. They didn't even realize he was gone.

Later Bond delivered the list to the brunette in the Sting Ray. "Give it to your daddy to give to Sen. Dirksen."

"Oh, 007, you saved the two-party system. How can we ever thank you?" the brunette said. Bond looked back at the Secret Serviceman and shrugged his shoulders.

"Third is good enough, don't you think?"

I agreed. "What we discussed at this so-called secret meeting was how to raise cash to substitute enough blue grass for crab grass to put us back in third place."

"My friend shook his head. 'What can we do? Everybody walks on the grass. But if we raise everybody's tuition to buy blue grass...' He shuddered."

"What we think we'll do," he whispered, with a smile sneaking across his face, "is raise the tuition of non-residents. What can they do? They don't vote—they have no say-so."

I said I didn't know, but asked if this might violate their civil rights.

He paled and slapped his hand across my mouth. "Quiet! Besides, it's just an emergency measure to put Iowa's crab grass rate in line with other Midwest states."

"We've just got to get back into third place."

Passing out goodies

READERS OF THE Sunday Register may have been amazed to discover the University of Iowa doesn't get as much money from the Federal Government as other Big Ten universities. They shouldn't have been.

There are a number of reasons for this, as the Register article pointed out - Iowa State gets a lot of money from Uncle Sam, Iowa is smaller than other Big Ten schools - things like that.

The Democratic party has been running this country for the last 30 years or more. It's true they lost the White House for a couple of terms to a war hero who'd convinced most voters he wasn't really a Republican, but even then Democrats retained control of Congress most of the time.

On the other hand, who's been in control of Iowa for the past 30 years or so? The Republicans have had a set back here and there and lost a gubernatorial race once in a while, but until the last election, they've been in the driver's seat in this state with few worries.

So the Democrats have controlled the country (and the Federal allocations) while Republicans have run Iowa. GOP congressmen and senators have gone to Federal Democrats and asked for funds to send back to Iowa. Is it any wonder they have less luck than Democratic congressmen and senators seeking money for their states?

Iowans should realize that a big reason why Federal office buildings, research centers and defense contracts go to Massachusetts, Texas and California is purely political. Uncle Sam - controlled by one party - spends his money where it's likely to bring a few votes in return.

Although state resources, educational facilities, etc. have some bearing on who gets what Federal project, the political leanings of a state are certainly just as important, if not more so.

This should always be kept in mind when discussing the amounts of Federal money Iowa's institutions are receiving and the reasons why.

Sounds familiar

IOWA STATE STUDENTS AND FACULTY will probably be moaning and groaning a bit next fall - and not just over higher out-of-state tuition.

Parking is getting to be a big problem at ole ISU - in the club.

Faculty will have to pay $15 a quarter to park - ah, but this buys a named stall, always open and waiting.

The staff folks not eligible for reserved spaces must park in lots and take their chances (sound familiar?) - oh, yes, they'll pay $10 a year.

Short course registrants may pay $1 fee to park. Student parking permits are $3 a quarter.

Students who have cars, but are ineligible for parking permits must pay $1 a year for an identification sticker.

All this does sound like a lot to take right off the bat, but compared to the parking permit maze in Iowa City, it would be fine, jes' fine.

It's a riot

A CALIFORNIA JUDGE has been convicting students from Berkeley's Free Speech Movement demonstrations so fast he must be borrowing the University of California's IBM bureaucracy to keep track of them all.

But maybe that's the sort of thing we need here in Iowa City. If we had a big riot demonstration about our Natural Rights or something, and a judge could sentence about 500 students to a year in jail, it would certainly be an aid to the University's problems of rapid expansion.

Of course, even though mass jailings would alleviate the housing shortage a bit, the town would have one heck of a 500 jail birds.

Viet Author Is Guest

Ex-Freedom Fighter Talks About Country's Problems

When you first meet Thu Van, you are impressed with the honesty, charm and intensity which this South Vietnamese author seems to possess.

As you talk with her, and perhaps sip a cup of Jasmine tea with her, you become convinced that the things that are part of her Oriental outlook on life are, "We look for man's inner nature," and her deep belief in Buddhism — "We see God everywhere."

Thu Van (the pen name of Mrs. Le Thi Anh) is now in Iowa City, continuing the work which she began as a teenage underground fighter against the French rule in her homeland. Now she is doing it "with the pen, instead of the sword." She is writing her second novel — one which she hopes "will better understanding between her people and the United States."

Paul Engle, professor of English, has arranged for her to attend one of his workshops as a guest.

This slim woman is clad in the traditional Vietnamese ao dai. The ankle-length, tunic-type dress of pale green is slit at the sides to the waist, the billowing satin pants, are black.

Fingering the textured silk, she says candidly, "You like it? I had it hand made in Saigon for $4."

She is always gesturing with her hands. Sometimes the movements are fast, and intricate other times, slow; but always graceful as a Balinese dancer's.

"People think that I was originally a dancer, but this is not true," she explains.

Her jet-black hair is styled in an intricate knot on the top of her head. Her jewelry, a ring and teardrop pendant, are jade.

IT IS HARD to imagine this petite, fragile-looking woman as a member of the underground. Yet she went from village to village, making speeches to stir up support for Viet Nam's independence.

"I was in danger many times," she said, thoughtfully fingering the square-cut ring she was wearing.

While she was a member of the underground, her son was born.

"I was sick and starving at the time," she explained calmly. Her husband, an ardent underground member, was killed because of his activities in the cause of his country's independence.

Yet, talking to Thu Van, you sense that these things would have been easier to bear if they would have truly helped her people. She admits that she and so many other idealistic Vietnamese had been duped and used by the Communists in the struggle for control of her country.

"MANY STUDENTS were active in the struggle. Some set fires to the landowners' houses so the French would not be able to use them. At least, that is what we were told. But this is not the true reason. The Communists lied to us."

"We were patriots who did not know about politics. We followed blindly."

Thu Van told how some of the leaders in the nationalistic movement died.

"The Communists killed them or sold them out to the French," she said. "The Communists would tell the French where the leaders could be found. The French would then capture and execute them. I would not be here."

THU VAN was not long deceived by the Communists. She realized they were not helping the Vietnamese become free, but were planning to take over after the defeat of the French.

"I didn't let them know that I was becoming intelligent," Thu Van said. "I had to get away quickly when I discovered the truth."

Thu Van's feelings about the problems Viet Nam faces today are just as intense as those feelings which first involved her in underground work 20 years ago.

"I believe the mess in Viet Nam came about because of a misunderstanding between America and Viet Nam." Pausing for a moment, she continued, "Americans do not understand the Chinese culture and pattern of civilization. As Buddhists we see God everywhere. Our beliefs center on a compassion for all humanity and charity."

"American civilization is materialistic; the true Vietnamese civilization is spiritual. This causes the basic misunderstanding."

SHE WAS QUICK to add, "It is really the pattern of American society that is materialistic. The people themselves are idealistic."

Tapping her typewriter with a slim finger, she added, "The most amazing thing I have seen since I have been here is that American civilization is so different from what nature intended."

Discussing this further, she said, "In South Viet Nam, to know a man, we look for his inner nature — his essence. We use the creative, direct approach. To know a flower, you become a flower. To know the Vietnamese, you become Vietnamese."

ACCORDING TO Thu Van, Americans use the opposite technique—the scientific approach.

"You say that you know a man when you know all the facts about him — where he went to school, what degrees he holds, his salary," she said.

This, she believes, is Undersecretary of State McGeorge Bundy's trouble as he attempts to aid her country.

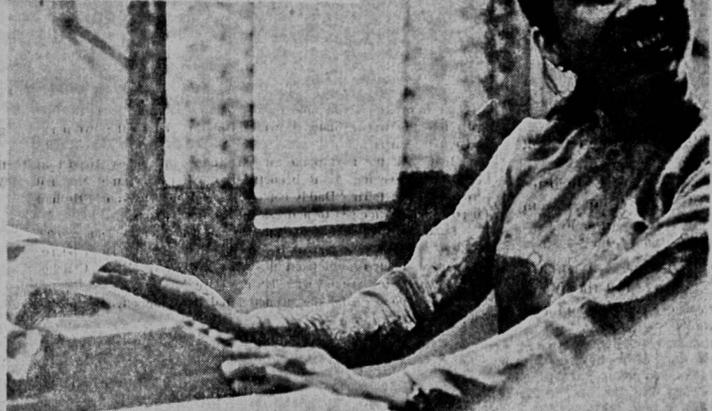

"He is using the scientific approach, but it does not apply here," she explained.

"I am absolutely convinced of the good intentions of the American people and their naturally loving nature," she continued. She said she wanted to "... take this opportunity to thank the American people on behalf of the Vietnamese and herself ..." for helping in the crisis.

The Vietnamese author backs President Johnson's present policy and agrees with Mr. Bundy that this is the best way in a bad situation.

A Pause . . .

She believes that the United States must understand her people, "if South Viet Nam is to be saved from the Communists." She points out that the Russians are ahead of us in this technique of international politics.

She said that the director of a U.S. language institute has only two texts on Vietnamese language (a complicated language composed of monosyllables whose meaning is changed by the use of a different tone). These books were printed by the Russians.

LOOKING AT A newspaper headline, she said strongly, "It says that the United States is waiting for the Viet Cong to come of the conference table. Let me tell you this moral: You can get people who want money to come to you."

Speaking of the situation, Thu Van said that the Vietnamese believed Americans had colonialist interests. The years of struggle against the French are too recent to be forgotten. The Vietnamese are still suspicious of anyone who might be associated with colonialism.

SHE STATED another part of the problem in terms familiar to most Americans.

"Ten years ago the American people wanted to sell us democracy," she said, "but they did not investigate the market. It worked well in America, so they thought it would be good in Viet Nam. We were not ready for democracy."

The writer believes that the answer to her country's problems will come through understanding.

"This does not mean that we will give up our culture and take on another," she said. "It does mean that nations will accept and stop trying to change cultures different from their own."

"My novel — which is about war — is my own attempt to further this understanding."

SHE HAS not decided how long she will remain here. She would like to see her 18-year-old son, Tran-quoc Te, who is now living in Saigon.

"He might come here and go to school, but travel is so expensive," she commented.

When she came to America last year, Thu Van received a UNESCO grant. Now she is supporting herself by writing. Life Magazine will print one of her short stories which has been translated from French. However, she considers herself a poet.

Coincidentally, it was another U.S. magazine, Look, which caused her to come to Iowa.

"I read about Paul Engle. I liked his spiritual outlook and so I wrote

Senate Group Plans Final Baker Probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Rules Committee plans to issue Friday what it hopes will be the final chapter in its politically stormy investigation of Bobby Baker.

The report of the Democratic majority, and the dissenting views of the Republicans, will set forth the committee's findings and also recommend legislation to guard against conflicts of interest.

Chairman B. Everett Jordan (D-N.C.) has called a closed meeting of the committee for this morning for a last look at the document before it is made public.

Baker resigned Oct. 7, 1963, as secretary to the Senate's Democratic majority just before the Senate ordered the committee to investigate his outside business and financial dealings.

The committee received testimony that Baker had built up a fortune of over $2 million while on the Senate payroll at $19,600 a year. In two appearances before the committee he refused to answer questions, invoking his 5th amendment protection against possible self-incrimination.

Prof To Compare 2 Types of Love

Norimoto Iino, visiting professor of Japanese studies, will talk on "Zen and Christian Love" at 8 p.m. Thursday in Shambaugh Auditorium.

The lecture is in connection with the U of I's Summer Institute on the Far East and is the third event in a series of lectures and films throughout the summer. The series is free and open to the public.

Iino received his Ph.D. degree from Boston University and his Litt.D. from Tokyo Imperial University. He has published widely in both English and Japanese, including "Ways to Peace," "Thought Seeing in Japan" and a book of sermons titled "A New Culture." He served as a Fulbright lecturer at Coe College during the 1964-65 academic year.

He will join the U of I department of Chinese and Oriental Studies in September as visiting professor for 1965-66. Iino is currently on leave from International Christian University in Japan where he has been a member of the faculty since 1951.

Iowa To Join Researchers

The University of Iowa is among thirty-four universities that have been invited to participate in Universities Research Association, Inc., a new corporation formed as a result of a meeting of university presidents at the National Academy of Sciences in Washington, D.C. in June. The corporation will offer its services to the Federal Government as manager of a proposed high-energy proton accelerator, if Congress approves its construction.

The corporation will function under the authority of a Council of Presidents, in which each member institution will be represented by its president. Operations of the corporation will be managed by a board of trustees, composed of six trustees-at-large to represent a broad section of public interest, and fifteen distinguished scientists and senior university administrators elected by the Council of Presidents from nominees recommended by member institutions.

Other institutions invited to participate in the corporation are: California Institute of Technology, University of California (Berkeley), U.C.L.A., University of Chicago, Cornell, Duke, Harvard, University of Illinois, Johns Hopkins University, Maryland, M.I.T., Michigan, Minnesota, North Carolina, Northwestern, Notre Dame, Pennsylvania, Purdue, Rice, University of Rochester, Stanford, University of Texas, Tulane, Washington University (St. Louis), University of Washington, and Yale.

Treasurer's Delight

Mrs. Ivy Baker Priest, treasurer of the United States during the Eisenhower Administration, wore an appropriate hat to throw into the California treasurer election ring when she announced her candidacy for that office in a Los Angeles announcement Tuesday.

Mrs. Priest thus became the first woman to seek the office in California.

She became well-known when she was selected by former President Eisenhower as the first woman to hold the office of United States Treasurer. In that position, her signature appeared on the paper money issued during that Administration.

Sports Anti-trust Bill Wins 1st Round

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill to exempt the sports aspects of professional baseball, football, basketball and hockey from the antitrust laws came successfully through its first round in Congress Tuesday but its eventual prospects remained uncertain.

The Senate Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee unanimously approved the bill, which strips from baseball its present exemption on business activities but extends to the other three sports baseball's protection on its sports dealings. A similar bill died last year in the Senate.

The subcommittee, in passing the team sports measure on to the full Judiciary Committee, also sent along — but without approval or disapproval — a bill to police professional boxing by setting up the office of national boxing commissioner with broad powers.

Sen. Philip A. Hart (D-Mich.), subcommittee chairman and chief sponsor of both bills, told a reporter he thought the team sports exemption bill had a better chance this year. Among the factors he cited was the acquisition last year of the New York Yankees baseball team by the Columbia Broadcasting System.

The Supreme Court has declared that baseball is exempt from antitrust laws but has refused to extend this protection to other sports. Witnesses told the subcommittee that the present exemption on baseball's business dealings forestalled possible antitrust action against CBS' purchase of the Yankees.

The bill would exempt in all four team sports such things as player agreements, territorial rights, employment of commissioners to administer their leagues, team and player conduct and the clubs' rights to sell or trade player contracts. Business dealings, however, would be subject to antitrust action.

The boxing bill, which Hart said is designed to drive underworld elements out of the sport, would give the commissioner broad powers to license and revoke or suspend licenses of boxers, managers, matchmakers and promoters.

Billie Jean Moffit Moves Into Wimbledon Semifinal Round

By JOHN FARROW
Associated Press Writer

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Billie Jean Moffit served, volleyed and drove her way into the women's singles semifinals at the Wimbledon Tennis Championships Tuesday — a day that ended with the upset defeat of America's top-ranked Nancy Richey by Britain's Christine Truman.

Billie Jean, from Long Beach, Calif., produced some of the best tennis seen from a woman player this week in hustling third seed Lesley Turner of Australia out of the championships 6-2, 6-1.

Earlier, Christine, the 24-year-old darling of British tennis, had pulled off an upset 6-4, 1-6, 7-5 victory over Nancy Richey of Dallas, seeded fourth here, before a partisan center court crowd of 16,000.

Miss Moffitt's opponent Thursday will be defending champion Maria Bueno of Brazil, seeded No. 1, who crushed Jane Albert of Pebble Beach, Calif., 6-2, 6-2. Miss Truman faces Australia's powerful Margaret Smith, winner over Justina Bricka of St. Louis 6-3, 6-3.

The United States sends its No. 1 ranking man, Dennis Ralston of Bakersfield, Calif., against defending titleholder and heavily favored Roy Emerson of Australia in the men's semifinals Wednesday. The other match involves Fred Stolle of Australia, runner-up the last two years, and unseeded Cliff Drysdale of South Africa.

The men's final is scheduled Friday, with the women's final Saturday.

Miss Turner was completely overwhelmed by the savage power and speed of the Little Californian game. It was the sixth time the two have met, and the fifth victory for Billie Jean.

This was the second American seed Miss Truman had knocked out this year. In the second round she defeated Mrs. Carole Graebner, of Beachwood, Ohio, in three sets.

Billie Jean Moffit of the United States won her way into the semifinal round of the women's singles at Wimbledon Tuesday by crushing Australia's Lesley Turner 6-2, 6-1. Miss Moffitt will meet Maria Bueno of Brazil today. Miss Bueno is the defending champion.

Sarazen Ridicules Today's Power Golf

By WILL GRIMSLEY

NEW YORK (AP) — Gene Sarazen says the tendency toward big courses and large greens in golf is turning the sport into a boring contest apt to lull spectators to sleep.

"I think we are just going through a phase — we'll all soon get a belly full of this power golf," added the bouncy, 63-year-old Germantown, N.Y., squire, one of three men to win every major pro championship.

Sarazen said Tuesday that he got back from a State Department trip to Burma just in time to watch the final phases of the 85th National Open Championship at St. Louis.

"It was my first look at the so-called monster," he added, referring to the 7,191-yard Bellerive Country Club course, longest in Open history, where Gary Player of South Africa beat Ken Nagle of Australia in a playoff.

"I was appalled and disappointed at what I saw. It was a drive and an approach on every hole. I got so tired of watching the guys approach putt that I almost went to sleep."

Sarazen said large greens, such as the 10,000 to 13,000 square foot carpets at Bellerive, slowed the game to an exasperating snail's pace.

"The rule that permits players to pick up and clean the ball on the green only adds to the boredom," the dark-haired pro, whose playing career has spanned three eras, said.

Sarazen said the new, giant courses had taken much of the science out of the game and had opened the door to a breed of sluggers without style or purpose.

Sarazen said Player's victory at Bellerive was a triumph for heady, position golf as opposed to the power golf made popular by such men as Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer.

"I have a suggestion," Gentleman Gene said. "Let's cut all our golf courses in half, fix it so you can play a round in 2 1/2 instead of five hours and give the game some new zip. It needs it."

NCAA Plans No Action In Defiant Runner Case

HAMILTON, N.Y. (AP) — The mystery of "what's going to happen to Gerry Lindgren?" heightened Tuesday — with no solution immediately in sight.

Everett D. Barnes, athletic director of Colgate University and president of the NCAA, issued a statement which he said was intended to clarify the situation.

On Monday, Barnes told The Associated Press that he expected penalties to be meted out to Lindgren, the Washington State freshman who defied an NCAA order and competed in the AAU championships Sunday in San Diego, Calif.

Tuesday, Barnes in a formal statement said there had been no change in the NCAA position.

The NCAA makes rules, he said. The member colleges must enforce them or face penalty. It's up to the college, not the NCAA, to take action against athletes who don't follow the rules.

The NCAA, involved in a bitter dispute with the AAU over sanctioning of track and field events, has ruled that its member schools cannot participate in AAU meets unless certified by the colleges' U.S. Track and Field Federation.

Lindgren, insisting he felt his duty to try to represent his country, defied the order and competed in the AAU championships.

He and Olympic gold medalist Billy Mills both bettered the world six-mile record with a clocking of 27 minutes, 11.6 seconds. Mills won the event by one-twentieth of a second but Lindgren was named on the team which meets Russia at Kiev July 31-Aug. 1.

Speculation immediately arose over what would be the punishment for Lindgren and other college athletes who might defy the NCAA.

Stan Bates, athletic director at Washington State, said in Pullman, Wash., that he was waiting to see who would take the first step. Lindgren meanwhile took off for Europe.

Jack Mara, President of the NFL Giants, Dies of Cancer

NEW YORK (AP) — John V. (Jack) Mara, president of the New York Giants of the National Football League, died Tuesday of cancer at the age of 57.

Mara was made president of the Giants at 22 by his father, Timothy, who bought the NFL franchise for New York in 1925 for $500. The enterprise is now a multi-million dollar operation.

Mara's brother, Wellington, is vice president of the club and his son, Timothy, is secretary-treasurer.

In addition to the widow, Helen, and son, Tim, a daughter, Mrs. Richard Concannon, survives.

The Mara family has been a power in the National Football League since its early days. Old Tim Mara who died in 1939, was a bookmaker who gambled on the league and it paid off — but only after some near misses.

Jack Mara was a graduate of Fordham and that university's law school, but he never practiced law. The Giants were his profession.

He was the administrative head of the club, handling the top echelon business, while Wellington was in charge of the more human side — personnel, scouting, player negotiations.

Jack Mara, an avid golfer and devoted sports fan, became ill two months ago. He died at Memorial Hospital.

SEATTLE (AP) — Frail and wan but filled with determination, and given new hope by use of an experimental drug, Brian Sternberg still looks forward to recovery and a life of Christian work with young people.

Accident Anniversary Brings Sternberg Hope

The former world record University of Washington pole vaulter has been receiving daily treatments of DMSO (dimethyl sulfoxide) since last October. Friday will be the second anniversary of the trampoline accident which snuffed out his athletic career.

Sternberg, now 22, has been paralyzed since then from the neck down.

"DMSO or not, I believe in my complete recovery," he said Tuesday.

Eagles Stadium Dispute Settled by Compromise

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A compromise has been reached in the dispute between the Philadelphia Eagles football team and city officials for exclusive rights to the city's proposed stadium.

The compromise was reached Monday after an hour-long meeting between Eagles officers and an advisory committee of prominent Philadelphians.

It was reported after the meeting that the agreement calls for an exclusive 10-year lease to the stadium for the Eagles, with two 10-year options for the city.

Many Support Ike's Ideas

NEW YORK (AP) — Many Americans agreed wholeheartedly with former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, who criticized presidential nominating conventions. Eisenhower on Monday called the conventions confusing and horrifying and urged procedural changes that included reducing the number of delegates, limiting demonstrations to five minutes, and getting newsmen off the convention floor.

The former President's comments drew mixed reaction from television network news executives, who felt generally that newsmen should be allowed on the convention floor even if, as one spokesman put it, they're "properly policed."

An informed Associated Press survey of citizens in various localities showed many of them agreed that convention procedures could take some streamlining.

Among the television networks, Columbia Broadcasting System reserved judgment. Fred W. Friendly, head of CBS News, commented that Eisenhower had touched on "a very interesting subject, and some of these days, CBS News might do a broadcast on it."

There was speculation that Friendly's reserve was in reference to Walter Cronkite, CBS newscaster, who said last February that television newsmen should be barred from the floor. Cronkite suggested in a television discussion program on Feb. 17, aired locally in New York, that the television industry could use booths off the floor to which delegates or others could be invited for interviews.

Two other newsmen on the February program disagreed with Cronkite. They were Edwin Newman of National Broadcasting Co.,

An NBC spokesman said the network had no comment. Other suggestions for straightening out the quadrennial confusion included one from Mrs. Martin

Ceramics, China Now On Display at Library

Ceramics, china, silverware and oriental rugs can be found in a special collection of books at the exhibit lobby of the University Library.

The exhibit now on display is from the Ranney collection donated to the library by Mrs. Mark Ranney.

"The collection will be shown until Aug. 15," according to Francis Paluka, head of Special Collections at the library. "and each week there will be a new set of illustrations from the collection."

Lee Editors Will Arrive Here Monday

Editors of 16 newspapers and their wives will arrive in Iowa City Monday for the annual Lee Editors Conference.

The Lee Syndicate owns papers in Iowa, Wisconsin, Illinois, Missouri, Nebraska and Montana and each paper will be represented at the Iowa City conference.

The group is the first to use the new Iowa Guest House at the Union.

Editors will be addressed by several School of Journalism personnel, including Malcolm MacLean, Richard W. Budd, and Jon Van, editor of The Daily Iowan.

James Van Allen, head of the University's Department of Physics and Astronomy will address the group at a luncheon.

Problems of interest to the editors will be explored. Arthur M. Sanderson, head of the news-editorial sequence at the School of Journalism will discuss "Tin Cup Journalism," an investigation of the space given to "charity" or "fund-raising" news in the modern paper.

Budd will speak on "Computers and the Newspaper," discussing an area which is of increasing significance to editors today.

The conference will end Wednesday.

Midterms Here Again

Some lucky students will have completed their mid-term tests by this weekend. However, the majority of students will be spending the Fourth of July studying for their up-coming exams.

There is no official listing for mid-terms during the summer session and mid-term grades need not be turned in, so the instructors are on their own.

In fact, there are some students who do not even have mid-term tests; although they usually have a number of quizzes during the session to keep them on their toes.

Crosby Takes Pounding At British Racetrack

LONDON (AP) — Bing Crosby admitted Tuesday he'd been out manuevered by a British ticket scalper at Wimbledon.

Crosby went out to the tennis championships Monday and was immediately surrounded by scalpers, who asked 10 pounds ($28) for a 27 shilling 6 pence ($3.78) ticket. He refused. Finally, Crosby said "O.K. fellows you win."

Hand handed over a 10-pound bill to the scalper and got back two pounds change. That meant the $3.78 ticket cost him $22.40.

Stocks Jump Like Yo-yos On Tuesday

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market danced like a yo-yo Tuesday, soaring to a big gain at the start, slumping around midday and coming back for the biggest advance of the year.

A broker called it "a volatile market I can remember." Volume was the sixth highest in the history of the New York Stock Exchange.

Wall Streeters were puzzled by the gyrations. One broker said the market seemed to be afflicted "with a case of the measles that has to run its course."

The advance came after four sessions of sharp losses. Most of the gain was concentrated in the blue chips while 452 stocks hit new 1963 lows and none reached a high.

Volume soared to 10.49 million shares against 7.66 million Tuesday, when the market took its worst loss since Nov. 22, 1963, when President Kennedy was assassinated.

The New York Stock Exchange's high speed ticker tape lagged six minutes behind floor transactions during the morning buying rush.

Iowa Expands Program —

Russian Linguist Need is Growing

The second most important world power — the Soviet Union — is becoming a more important field of study here because of the great demand for persons who can translate, speak, write, or teach Russian.

The biggest need for Russian linguists, says Prof. Max Oppenheimer, Jr., head of the Department of Russian, is in the field of science. Twenty per cent of the technical information published today is in the Russian language, Professor Oppenheimer pointed out.

"Since World War II, the USSR has emerged as the second most important world power," Oppenheimer noted. He said the Soviet Union is becoming more liberal every day and is "evidently destined to play an ever more active role in world affairs, not just in the field of rocketry, but in other scientific, economic, and cultural endeavors."

TO MEET the increasing demand for teachers of Russian, and others skilled in Russian language and culture, the University will offer a master's degree in Russian starting next fall. The University has offered Russian language and culture in an undergraduate degree curriculum for several years.

Presently the department faculty is unable to keep up with the demand for translation work that is generated on the U of I campus. Departments such as chemistry, microbiology, psychology, and physical education are constantly in need of Russian linguists because much of the important work in these fields is being done in the Soviet Union.

Professor Oppenheimer is collaborating at this time with Professor Louis Landweber, of the U of I Institute of Hydraulic Research, in the translation of a book on the theory of ship wave resistance. The translation is being done under a grant from the Office of Naval Research.

"SCIENTIFIC translation, once you are familiar with the lingo, is much easier than translating works of art," said Oppenheimer. Scientific writing can be translated literally but literary pieces must also be interpreted for the proper shades of meaning. They become original creations and are very time consuming, he added.

Although the need for translation work in other areas is great, Russian linguists are also needed to teach the language, especially on the high school level.

IN IOWA, there are two high schools — in Des Moines and Waterloo — that offer Russian to their students. "Russian is such an important language in our contemporary world that the number of teachers must be increased," Oppenheimer said.

With a graduate program in Russian, Professor Oppenheimer hopes his department can provide an expanded translation service for various departments on campus.

There are 215 students enrolled in Russian courses at the University during spring semester. In addition, there are 16 undergraduate students majoring in the subject. There are four full-time staff members and three teaching assistants. TO ENCOURAGE proficiency in Russian, the faculty and students meet twice a month to discuss the Soviet Union and matters pertaining to Russian courses. To encourage scholarship, the department is affiliated with Dobro Slavo, national Slavic honor society.

Among the most interested students in Russian courses this summer are several members of the Symphony Band. The band is scheduled to spend eight to 10 weeks in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe next year in a cultural exchange sponsored by the U.S. Department of State.

Looking for Virus

Making a microscopic examination for use in the isolation and identification of viruses is Judy Switzer, Solon, a technician in the new virus laboratory which will go into full-scale operation Thursday at the State Hygienic Laboratory here.

Special Virus Lab Will Open Here Thursday

A new virus laboratory providing specialized services for Iowa physicians will go into operation Thursday at the State Hygienic Laboratory here.

"The new laboratory will fill a gap which has existed in the public health services of the state," said William J. Hausler, director of the State Hygienic Laboratory. Iowa is one of the few states in the Midwest which has not had a state virus laboratory.

FULLY EQUIPPED and staffed to isolate and identify the most common viruses, the new facility will help pinpoint outbreaks of communicable diseases and give physicians time to prevent possible epidemics, Dr. Hausler said.

"While the State Hygienic Laboratory, collaborating with the State Department of Health has done considerable investigative work in various disease outbreaks in the state, the lack of a virus laboratory has severely hampered these studies," he said.

Prior to July, 1963, it has been possible to send a limited number of specimens, usually in epidemic situations, to U.S. Public Health Service Laboratories outside the state for virus isolation and identification. When these special federal services were ended, Iowa was left without resources for broad viral investigations for public health purposes, Hausler said.

"Without special techniques, facilities, and specially trained personnel it is extremely difficult to identify many viral diseases, including those of the central nervous system such as polio, encephalitis, and aseptic meningitis.

"FOR EXAMPLE, a few years ago more than 70 Iowans were hospitalized with an illness first diagnosed as polio and which, after laboratory tests outside the state, turned out to be a disease caused by an entirely different virus.

"Because it is estimated that the average person has about four viral infections a year, it is easy to see the importance of the addition of this new virus laboratory to the health of all Iowans," Hausler said.

Development of a virus laboratory in Iowa has been delayed primarily because of a lack of funds and a lack of space at the State Hygienic Laboratory.

HAUSLER EMPHASIZED that tests will not be run on individual cases, but if a physician has three, four or more patients with an illness suspected of being caused by a virus, he should contact the laboratory.

The laboratory will send the physician information and special containers for collecting and shipping specimens. The physician will enclose clinical histories of the patients to be used as aids in beginning the search for the virus. Reports on the outcome of the tests will be provided as soon as available to the physician and to the State Department of Health.

Virologist in charge of the laboratory is Yau Wai Wong, a virologist with the Kansas State Board of Health Laboratory for 15 years and later with the Haver-Lockhart Laboratories in Kansas City.

Wong joined the staff in June, 1964, and has taken part in all phases of the planning and training of personnel for the laboratory. Senior staff virologists are Donald Dorsey and Donna Gilpin. Technicians are Judith Switzer, Phyllis Milder and Joan Hill.

Officials Confident Of Federal Cash Rise

"The University is much smaller than the other members of the Big Ten in students, faculty, buildings and facilities. Because there are fewer research workers, there are fewer grants," said Pres. Howard R. Bowen Tuesday.

The University received $8.6 million last year in research and development grants from the five principal scientific-oriented federal agencies — Defense, National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Atomic Energy Commission, Health, Education and Welfare, and the National Science Foundation. Only Purdue and Michigan State received less among the Big Ten schools.

However, Bowen cited the amount of federal funds that enter the state when Iowa's two state universities are taken together. Iowa State University at Ames received $5.7 million in research and development funds in 1964 and an estimated $12.9 million in total federal support.

THE TWO IOWA institutions together outrank all the Big Ten schools except Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

University sources said the Des Moines Register story on federal grants to the University on June 27 "carried a very misleading headline and lead sentence. The rest of the story was accurate." The headline read, "U. of I. Lags In Race for U.S. Dollar."

The funds are important to universities because many American scientists are interested in teaching where ample funds are available for research projects and top salaries.

INDUSTRY IS INTERESTED in getting federal funds into Iowa on a greater level than the present because new scientific industries tend to locate where university projects and scientific minds are located.

A partial explanation of California's recent claim that it is the "new center of academia" lies in the fact that, as a single state, it has received more federal research and development funds than all of the Big Ten universities taken together.

Officials at Iowa are confident that the University's funds will gradually increase.

"IN THE NEAR FUTURE there will be more attention given to this matter. For instance, the new basic science building on the west campus will provide more facilities," said Phil E. Connell, assistant to the president.

Other innovations of major importance cited by Connell include an addition to the Zoology building, a new Physics and Mathematics building and an accelerator tower.

Gordon B. Strayer, director of public information, said, "The University doesn't go after the dollars from the government on the basis that we want our share. The important thing is that funds made available to us increase as our facilities expand."

Eight Students Awarded Health Traineeships

Eight students in the Graduate Program in Hospital and Health Administration have been awarded traineeships from the U.S. Public Health Service Training Resources Branch of the Division of Community Health Services.

The total amount of the awards to U of I students in Hospital and Health Administration is $38,870. In addition to a monthly stipend, the awards cover tuition and fees plus a dependency allowance. The purpose of the awards is to increase the number of professional health personnel and to prepare the recipients for leadership positions.

The selection was competitive. Many factors, such as plans for using the training, scholastic achievement, shortage of personnel in the candidate's field, and the educational program in which the candidate plans to enroll, were considered.

The students are: Joseph M. Myers, Cedar Falls; Fredric R. Hedinger, Des Moines; Robert H.

ACQUITTED—

LEOPOLDVILLE, The Congo — A German-born South African mercenary was acquitted in Leopoldville Monday of a charge of stealing 54 million Congolese francs ($960,000) from Lt. Col. Michael Hoare's 5th Commando payroll.

Gerd-Johann Bloch von Blotnitz, 29, was the paymaster of the unit in Faradje. On June 4 he left there for Stanleyville carrying the payroll in a suitcase.

He gave as a reason: "It is not safe to leave money unattended in the Congo. I went to Stanleyville on my own authority and took the money with me for safekeeping."

Union Board Sponsors Family Fun on Fridays

Weekly family night activities, sponsored by Union Board, are held every Friday in the Union. There is an evening meal at special prices, a movie for children, the opening of the Union recreation area, with free instruction available, adult entertainment and free coffee or lemonade for everyone.

The children's movies at 7 p.m. are: July 9, "Alacazam the Great"; July 16, "The Dog of Flanders"; July 23, "The Three Stooges in 'Have Rocket Will Travel'"; and July 30, "Happily Goes to Town."

THE ADULT program for July 9 will feature a hootenanny. Also included will be several musicals, a dance, and a Thieves' Market.

The Thieves' Market is an outlet for University art students to sell their works. The Union Board handles the sales so that all the students have to do is bring their work and keep an eye on it.

There were several Thieves' Markets during the past school year and Union Board members said that they were successful.

The Union Board also sponsors a film series held at 8 p.m. Sundays. The movies for July 1 are "Member of the Wedding" and "The Overcoat." The movies will be shown in the old Chemistry Auditorium.

"MEMBER OF THE Wedding" is based on the novel by Carson McCuller. "The Overcoat" is a German movie starring Marcel Marceau and company.

The Sunday night movies beginning July 8 will be in the New Union Ballroom at 7:30 p.m. They are: July 8, "Cleopatra 5 to 7" and "Fragments of Seeking"; July 15, "Blood of a Poet" and "Wedlock"; July 22, "White Shiek"; July 29, "Closed Vision" and "The Interview."

Union Board also provides hosts and hostesses for the freshman orientation, July 6, and for other events held in the Union.

Members of the summer Union Board are: Rick Davis, Fort Dodge president; Janet Pease, AA, Moline, Ill.; John Fink, A3, Cedar Falls; Rick Petersen, A3, Council Bluffs; Bryan Clemons, D3, Iowa City; Carl Fackler, M2, Indianola; Joe McCabe, L1, Taylorville, Ill.; John Gleysteen, M3, Sioux City.

Emmy Picks Announced

HOLLYWOOD — The Television Academy announced its newly streamlined nominations for Emmys and Tuesday listed its nominations for the TV awards.

Long publicized for the multiplicity of its awards, the academy introduced a new system for its 1964-65 Emmys, which will be presented Sept. 12. Instead of numerous categories, nominations are lumped into two large groups of programs and performers. One or more Emmys may be presented in the groups; the standard is excellence, not competition, said the academy.

Nominated for "outstanding individual achievements in entertainment":

Alfred Lunt, "The Magnificent Yankee"; Barbra Streisand, "My Name is Barbra"; Bob Hope, Bob Hope Specials; Danny Kaye, Danny Kaye Show; David McCallum, "The Man from U.N.C.L.E."; Dean Jagger, "Mr. Novak"; Dick Van Dyke, the Dick Van Dyke Show; Gladys Cooper, "The Rogues"; Johnny Carson, "Tonight Show"; Julie Andrews, Andy Williams Show; Julie Harris, "The Holy Terror"; Leonard Bernstein, New York Philharmonic Young People's Concert; Lynn Fontanne, "The Magnificent Yankee"; Red Skelton, the Red Skelton Show; Richard Crenna, "Slatery's People"; Robert Coote, "The Rogues."

Nominated for "outstanding program achievements in entertainment":

"Andy Williams Show"; Bob Hope Presents the Chrysler Theater; "Dick Van Dyke Show"; Hallmark Hall of Fame; "The Man from U.N.C.L.E."; "Mr. Novak"; "My Name is Barbra"; "Profiles in Courage"; "The Defenders"; "The Magnificent Yankee"; Walt Disney's "Wonderful World of Color"; "What Is a Sonata?" New York Philharmonic Young People's Concert; "Wonderful World of Burlesque"; Danny Thomas Special; Xerox specials on the United Nations.

Pleasure Cruiser Founders; Girl Is Lone Survivor

EL ROSARIO, Mex. — A 15-year-old girl, just out of a cast she wore four years for curvature of the spine, apparently is the sole survivor of a family of five that tried to swim ashore from a foundering pleasure cruiser.

After struggling to the beach, Denise Winter wandered tired and hungry along the lonely Baja California coast for a day and a half before Mexican fishermen found her.

Her stepfather, real estate man Warren Winter, 40, of Murrieta, Calif., bought the 45-foot cabin cruiser a year ago. On June 23 they left Oceanside, Calif., to cruise around the tip of the Baja California peninsula to La Paz on a vacation.

As Denise tells it: "We got to a place called Point Canoa, about 50 miles south of El Rosario. Something went wrong with the motor. When the steering cable broke, we decided to turn back."

Twenty-five miles south of here, Winter decided to abandon ship.
