

Final Exam Week Tries Poor Soul

Dear Tom,
 "These are the times that try men's souls. The summer soldier and the sunshine patriot will, in time of crisis. . . . Don't tell us your problems, Tom Paine, we University students have a crisis of our own. Hand us your rifle and we'll hand you a No. 2 lead pencil from University Examination Service and let you go through a University Final Week.

It's not far off either, you know, or perhaps you didn't. I suppose it has been a long time since you were in college. Well, to bring you up to date, we have only eight class days until the end of the eight-week summer school session and we have to take all our tests within the next eight days. Bad, huh?

And in this heat, wow! It's 102 degrees right now. Have you got a soldier to stand this summer heat?

You wrote The American Crisis, didn't you? Well any Iowa student can tell you that a final week is a real crisis in his life!

We remember you telling of the old muskets, firing rams, powder horns, and low-slung hats. And that food you ate. Ugh! You can have your fowl, squash, and cornmeal.

We arm ourselves with different things for a final week. We use typewriters, pens, paper, notebooks, textbooks, and magic markers.

The clothes here consist of shorts for everyone, sleeveless shirts, and a pair of old sneakers that we never change.

Oh, and we eat too. But the food isn't the same. We drink quarts of coffee, and swallow buckets of No Doz. And then come the cheese, crackers, cookies, sandwiches, carrots, and celery.

"Panics, in some cases, have their uses; they produce as much good as hurt. Their duration is always short; the mind soon grows through them, and acquires a firmer habit than before."

You've got a point there, Tom. And panic is just what everyone does. We panic for at least two days before the examination and read all the material once over and skim our notes.

And you can be sure that we hope their duration will be short, but two hours can be an awfully long time for an examination when you haven't slept for two days and the mind does soon grow through them, you can be sure.

"What we obtain too cheap, we esteem too lightly. . . . We know all this too well. And after four straight days of two hours of sleep per day, grubby clothes all that time, and no breaks, we esteem that GPA any way but lightly.

Now I hope that you can understand our problem the way we see yours. It's not that we don't sympathize with you, Tom, it's not that at all! It's just that we have a crisis to solve of our own before we can worry about you.

It's just a week until it's over, and then we can be patriotic in the sunshine with you. How about that?

Mercury Hits 100 at Algona As Iowa Melts

However, Forecasts Say Relief in Sight; Cool Front Arriving

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
 The mercury climbed to 100 degrees at Algona Friday and Iowans elsewhere sweltered in middle and upper 90-degree readings, but forecasters said relief was on the way.

A cool front was expected to push into the northwest corner of the state Friday evening, spreading across the rest of Iowa during the night.

A few scattered showers or thunderstorms were expected to accompany the front, but they will be ending in the southeast Saturday morning, the weather bureau said.

SATURDAY'S HIGHS were expected to be about 15 degrees cooler with the highs mostly in the 80s under partly sunny skies. It will be cool and clear Saturday night when the lows will be from the 50s north to the 60s south.

Mostly fair skies and seasonable temperatures were expected Sunday.

Elsewhere in the nation, a cloud-burst and a clobbering wind hit two areas in Ohio on Friday, damaging roads, crops and buildings.

A thunderstorm dumped more than seven inches of rain in seven hours on Hillsboro in southwestern Ohio. A Baltimore & Ohio Railroad freight train was derailed by a washout and two crewmen were injured in the accident near New Vienna.

The deluge ruined the Hillsboro municipal baseball field. A swollen creek flooded a pumping plant in Leesboro, north of Hillsboro.

THE STORM TORE down wires and damaged crops and roads and washed away small bridges. Some roads were closed temporarily.

Winds of close-to-tornado force struck near Mount Vernon in central Ohio. They toppled trees, raised roofs, knocked down utility lines and nudged barns from their foundations.

More than three inches of rain doused Zanesville, Ohio, and more than two inches fell near Columbus.

The hottest weather of the summer pestered many cities in a heat belt that stretched from the desert Southwest to Pennsylvania.

What made it harder for millions to endure was the hot, humid, sleep-robbing night. Chicago's overnight low was 78, the highest minimum ever recorded there on July 23. Kansas City had a bottom of 79.

More than 3,500 turkeys perished in Iowa. They smothered when they piled up around drinking troughs or sought relief from the 98-degree temperature in the shade of shelters.

WALTER MARCKS lost more than 2,500 turkeys on his farm near St. Ansgar. They average 15 pounds in weight. The Chaplin farm near Arnolds Park lost an estimated 1,000. Firemen sprayed water on the turkeys and Boy Scouts walked among them in an attempt to spread them out.

The mercury zoomed to 100 in Enid, Okla., at mid-afternoon and vaulted to the 90s in many cities in the nation's interior.

Some relief was on the way. Rapid City, S.D., enjoyed a drop to 58 Friday from a peak of 102 Thursday.

A turn to cooler weather was forecast for the area from the Upper Great Lakes to the Central Plains region.

Udall Involved In Key Mix-up in Visit to Davenport

DAVENPORT (AP) — Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall was presented the key to the city of Waterloo as he stepped off a plane at the Quad-Cities airport for a speaking engagement here Friday night.

It wasn't a mix-up; it was simply a case of a lost key.

The key originally was given to Udall by Waterloo officials when he stepped off there last fall on a Democratic campaign tour of Iowa.

When Udall continued the tour he asked a Mason City Globe-Gazette reporter to hold the key as they flew in a private plane to their next stop.

The reporter forgot all about the key, and didn't find it until it dropped out of his notebook when he returned to the office at Mason City.

The key eventually was transferred to Davenport when a Globe-Gazette employee, Marty Rickert, moved to the Times-Democrat.

Friday Rickert gave the key to a Times-Democrat reporter, who gave it back to Udall as he stepped from the plane.

He praised freshman Rep. John R. Schmidhauser (D-Iowa) Friday as "a working conservationist" who is "doing a topflight job" in Washington.

LBJ, Advisors Study Possible Draft Boost

More Discussions Slated Next Week

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson, conferring with his top strategy advisers for the third straight day, focused Friday on possible increases in draft calls to support the expected buildup of U.S. forces in Viet Nam.

Bill D. Moyers, White House press secretary, said, however,

"No decision has yet been made of any of the subjects which are under discussion and deliberation." He added that he does not know when any decision will be made.

Moyers said additional studies are expected to be completed by Monday or Tuesday and before decisions are nailed down there will be further "meetings as well as consultations with congressional leaders of both parties."

IT WAS DISCLOSED that former President Dwight D. Eisenhower telephoned Johnson from Gettysburg, Pa., on another matter at midday and the two talked about the deliberations going on over Viet Nam.

Moyers said the question of calling up Reserves to meet the manpower needs for Viet Nam was discussed Thursday and was not brought up Friday. But he indicated this does not mean this possibility is being ruled out.

After discussing the possible need to increase draft quotas, Moyers said, the President asked the service chiefs for more information and told them to make "further intensive examination of this question" over the weekend.

HE ASKED THAT "special studies be made over the weekend on the additional strength that each military service may need in South Viet Nam," Moyers added.

There has been talk of putting in about 100,000 more U.S. military men in addition to the 75,000 already there.

Moyers said Johnson would spend the weekend at Camp David, Md., but would keep in touch with his advisers.

As the White House talks centered on the draft, the Pentagon issued a routine call for 17,000 men — all for the Army — for September, which is only 500 over August. The September quota compares with 17,100 for July and 17,000 for June.

Those attending Friday's session included Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, Secretary of State Dean Rusk and his undersecretary, George W. Ball.

ALSO ON HAND was Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and McGeorge Bundy, presidential assistant for national security affairs.

Among the subjects discussed, Moyers said, were additional requirements for more equipment as indicated by evidence McNamara brought back Wednesday from his five-day visit in South Viet Nam.

An indication that Johnson still hasn't reached firm decisions on how to deal with what Moyers called "continuing and increasing aggression and infiltration from North Viet Nam" came after Senate leaders emerged from a morning White House meeting with the President.

"Unquestionably," Moyers added, "when the time for decision nears, the President will consult with the leaders of Congress if it is necessary."

Band To Present Summer Show At 4 p.m. Sunday

The Iowa City Community Band will present its fourth concert of the summer in College Hill Park 4 p.m. Sunday.

Guest conductor will be Mark Kelly, director of bands at Centerville. He has recently accepted an appointment as assistant to the acting director of University Bands, Thomas L. Davis, for the second semester of the coming school year.

In Centerville Kelly has charge of a high school band which has a long history of excellence in Iowa music.

Sunday's programs are distinguished by their variety and popularity. There will be music by Leonard Bernstein, ballet music, and selections from the Academy Award winning movie, "Mary Poppins."

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — A funeral march of more than 150,000 left-wing demonstrators surged through Athens in a show of support Friday for ousted Premier George Papandreu in his test with the Greek monarchy.

The government of Premier Athanasiadis Novas responded with a tough show of strength of its own, packing the city with riot police and ordering the armed forces to stand by in case of disorder.

The funeral was for a student killed in the wild street fighting that tore through Athens Wednesday night when Papandreu followers clashed with police. That was the first fatality in the disorders that broke out after King Constantine dumped Papandreu in a showdown July 15.

There was no rioting at the funeral. Under the threat of military intervention, the left-wing organizers of the demonstration clearly were under orders to avoid disturbances. Young leftist activists wearing armbands marched with the crowds to keep them under control.

The demonstration had the look of a perfectly coordinated show. This raised speculation that experienced leftist organizers were on the streets now, using the crowds as a flexible weapon in the political struggle that had this nation in its worst crisis since the Communist war, 1947-49.

In the morning, 2,000 demonstrators got the mass march under way, moving past the guarded Parliament building to the Athens Orthodox Cathedral where the body lay. The crowd swelled to more than 150,000 persons.

Papandreu attended the church service, then left for a news conference as the cortege moved on to the cemetery.

Two Youths Get Suspended Terms For Bombings

Two North Liberty youths Thursday were given 10-days suspended sentences in Police Court, and orders were given for the boys to pay all costs incurred from their destruction of mailboxes in the Iowa City area.

Though the law provides severe penalties for mailbox vandalism, the two boys, Dean Brown and Larry Cogan, both 18, were not given stiff sentences providing they would do no further vandalism. Maynard E. Schneider, Johnson County Sheriff, said.

More than a dozen mailboxes have been ripped apart since the July 4th weekend. A Lone Tree man was fined Tuesday for selling the fire crackers in his barber shop.

Schneider said that investigations into the vandalisms would continue.

Services Set For Dick Jones

Johnson County Recorder Richard J. (Dick) Jones, 69, of 107 Grove St., died after a brief illness Thursday in his home about 4:45 p.m.

His funeral will be at 10 a.m. Monday at the Oathout Funeral Home. The Johnson County Courthouse will be closed Monday morning for the funeral.

The Rev. John Craig of the Congregational Church will deliver the funeral oration. Burial will be in the Welch Cemetery.

Jones is survived by his wife, two sons, Richard and Robert, and a sister, Mrs. Maurine Jackson.

City Social Panel Picks 3 Chairmen

Robert Ray, dean of Extension and University Services, and Philip Hubbard, professor of engineering, were named along with David J. Noonan, administrative assistant at Mercy Hospital, Friday as chairmen of the Citizen's Advisory Committee on Social Action Programs.

In a joint statement issued Friday, the three co-chairmen said the talents of a large number of Iowa City citizens will be necessary because a multitude of social problems exist today in all municipalities.

The co-chairmen requested that everyone interested in social activities of the community contact John Adamson, Iowa City administrative assistant, so that they may begin forming sub-committees.

Co-chairmen of the Citizen's Advisory Committee are Fred Doderer and Ben E. Summerwill. The committee was reorganized on March 16, 1965, in a resolution passed by the Iowa City City Council.

The Citizen's Advisory Committee's executive board consists of two co-chairmen of five main committees. These committees are Community Housing, Community Renewal Program, Community Social Action Program, City-University Urban Renewal Project and Traffic and Transportation.

New Students Advised Dorm Space Vanishing

On the basis of applications already at hand, all available space in women's dormitories at the University will be taken by Aug. 6, and there will be no more rooms for men by the latter part of that month, prospective U of I students are being advised.

Women students who have been admitted to the University and whose $50 advance payments have been received by Aug. 6 will be assured of dormitory space, says Director of Admissions W. A. Cox. But women admitted after Aug. 1, or those from whom applications and advance payments are not received until after Aug. 6, will be unable to secure dormitory housing, he says.

THE SUPPLY OF men's dormitory rooms is expected to be exhausted by approximately Aug. 25. Cox is writing prospective students. Men whose contracts and advance payments are received by then will similarly be assured of dormitory housing, he says.

Women who are just now applying for admission to the University are being told by Cox that there is "no hope" of providing dormitory housing for them this fall, and that their prospects of finding approved housing in the community are not very bright.

In his letter to these prospective women students, Cox suggests that they may wish to consider enrolling next February, by which time a new women's dormitory, Carrie Stanley Hall, will be in use, and there will be a plentiful supply of women's housing for the remainder of the 1965-66 year.

Since men's housing is slightly more plentiful at the moment, prospective male students are not yet being urged to consider February enrollment, but will probably begin to receive such advice within the next few weeks, Cox said.

DURING THE PAST several weeks all new students have been advised by letter to make sure that they have firm arrangements for housing this fall.

Unless they are assured of housing by means of a dormitory contract, residence in a fraternity or sorority house, lease or confirmation of a University apartment or an off-campus room or apartment, Dean of Admissions Donald E. Rhoades wrote them, all such students should "seek out a place to live and make firm arrangements for it," as soon as possible.

"Please don't wait until you get here in September to start hunting for a place to live — if you do, you stand a very good chance of not finding it," Dean Rhoades wrote.

News in Brief

Odd Object Seen over Pittsburgh

A BRILLIANT OBJECT, traveling at a high speed and displaying various hues, streaked across the skies above Pittsburgh, Pa., Thursday night, triggering a flood of calls to police, airport towers, military bases, radio stations and newspapers.

Residents of Pittsburgh and surrounding area who saw the object described it variously as a white hot light, a silver circle with an orange tail or silver triangle.

The Greater Pittsburgh Airport said the phenomenon probably was a meteor or meteorite shower.

U.S. Aide Shot in Viet Nam

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Police said Saturday they were hunting an American police adviser suspected of fatally shooting his boss, Jack E. Ryan, and a Vietnamese woman.

Police sources said the shooting apparently was motivated by personal revenge.

Ryan, 44, was chief here of the U.S. aid mission's public safety division, which is responsible for advising the Vietnamese police force.

The Vietnamese woman, Mrs. Nguyen Thi Hai, was an employee of Ryan's department. The man police were hunting also worked in Ryan's department.

Senate Confirms Goldberg

THE SENATE PUT ON A BURST of speed Friday to confirm Arthur J. Goldberg as America's new ambassador to the United Nations.

Goldberg went before the Foreign Relations Committee to declare his belief in strengthening the United Nations to help wipe out war and poverty and promote human rights and social justice.

"If I believed war was inevitable I would not be before you today," the 56-year-old Supreme Court justice, former secretary of labor and union lawyer told the senators.

Committee Republicans and Democrats alike praised President Johnson's choice to succeed the late Adlai E. Stevenson in the nation's top ambassadorship.

Plane Guttled in Crash

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — An Allegheny Airlines plane, one of its two engines afire, made a belly landing in a narrow clearing in a grove of pine trees Friday. It was destroyed by fire, but not before the 37 reported aboard scrambled to safety.

State police said no one was killed, but most of those aboard were treated at Williamsport hospitals.

At least seven, among them the pilot, Capt. Allen Lauber, were admitted for more extensive care.

Hot, hot, warm

BOY IS IT HOT. There must be some issues we should be discussing here, but right now the only thing we can think of is the weather.

We notice that someone at Iowa State Bank & Trust chickened out a few months ago and removed their time and temperature sign. Obviously they had some inside information on what to expect towards the end of July, and they didn't want to appear to be oracles of such disheartening news.

Without a weather sign to aid us - First National's sign is too far away - we have taken to asking folks about the weather.

"How come it's so darned hot?" we asked a professor. "It's the Republicans," he answered, "if we'd have elected Goldwater it wouldn't be this hot - they're just out for revenge." Pinko professors.

Willard Boyd, vice president of faculties, doesn't need to worry much about the heat since his office is air conditioned, but this is not to say he doesn't have his problems. When he came to work Friday morning, he found the place was crawling with house-flies.

Apparently they had decided to hold a meeting and naturally picked the coolest spot on campus. Only it doesn't seem right - finding house-flies in an office. After all, a house-fly's place is in the home.

But this heat isn't all bad. It has produced some new milestones in office efficiency. For example, workers in the front office of the School of Journalism found that by turning out the lights they could lower the temperature by about four degrees.

This operation does leave the office girls a bit in the dark, but for cooler air it's certainly worth it. And with President Johnson's policy on electric lights, what could be more vogue?

Anyway, it is hot, and today that's the basic issue. In fact, it's the only issue

"Well, I just hope I can be as persuasive as he is."

No biz like show biz except real business

By STEVE DEWOLF
Staff Writer

In 1952 Nicholas Darvas and his half-sister Julia were the highest paid dance team in the history of show business. Darvas was earning $3,500 a week.

By the middle of 1959, after 18 months of hot and heavy trading in the stock market, Nicholas Darvas had parlayed his weekly income into a cool $2 million fortune.

The story of how this king of the speculators did it is perhaps one of the most fantastic tales of high finance and speculation since the days of Morgan, Fisk and Gould.

It may have been chance which showed Darvas into the stock market. Late in November, 1952, he received an offer to appear at a Toronto night club. His payment was to be in shares of a Canadian mining stock named Brillund, instead of cash. Unable to keep the engagement, Darvas felt obligated to buy some of the stock and finally did buy 6,000 shares of it at 50 cents a share.

TWO MONTHS later, Darvas found his stock had rocketed to $1.90 per share. He sold. His profit was $8,000. He rocketed to the top of the market. He decided to make money in the market it was necessary to get into the big time. He went to New York and Wall Street.

After getting established with a broker he began to trade in earnest, most on the advice of his broker. No dice. He continued to lose money.

But the beatings he took in the market taught him several valuable lessons he was never to forget. First, the tip-off on what stock to buy was in the market, not on the broker's tongue. Second, the importance of timing - buying the right stock at the right time. He watched and bought only stocks which moved upward on big volume.

AT THIS TIME he developed his now-famous Box Theory: stocks fluctuate within certain price ranges or "boxes". The time to buy a stock is when it is getting ready to move into a new and higher box.

As added insurance against disastrous losses, Darvas worked out a system of trailing stop-loss orders. After buying a stock he would place a stop-loss order at a predetermined point below the price of the stock. Thus, if his stock went down, he would take only a small loss. But if it went up, he would simply keep raising the stop-loss proportionately.

Eventually, Darvas found that there was more to the price movement of a stock than he had realized. He began to see that the movements of stocks were tied closely to the potential, expected earning power of the stock. He decided to buy only when he could give increased earning power as his reason.

Combining these principles, he arrived at a techno-fundamentalist approach which allowed him to enter the Big Casino of finance and walk out a winner. He made $2.25 million from a stake of $37,000 in 18 months.

Repertory 'Rehearsal' called intensely moving

By WILLIAM CROZIER
Iowan Reviewer

(During the first week of summer Repertory Theatre productions, The Iowan ran reviews on each of the plays. Beginning today another reviewer will comment on the plays during their final week.—Ed.)

In The Rehearsal, Director David Knauf has presented an intensely moving theatrical experience that combines a consciousness of the facades obscuring social life (the division of truth and reality from the exigencies of community living) and a trip along some of the more torturous paths in the human psyche.

To follow this complex pattern, the production is shaped roughly like a pyramid, the apex coming at the final curtain. Here the qualities of the dichotomized culture are embodied in one character - Hero.

Unfortunately, the quantity of necessary background information makes laying the foundation of this pyramid in the first scene a rather tedious chore. With actors who have little interest in these long speeches and convey their disinterest to the audience by faulty diction and too-rapid speech, the unpleasantness is emphasized. Miss Hazel Hall and Martin Bennisson were most at fault in this.

AFTER THE FIRST scene the actors' interest picked up, and their unification into an interrelated stage group became quite apparent.

However, the company in general could not reach the level of involvement of Lucille and Hero (played respectively by Miss JoAnne Belanger and Jerry Mayer). These two carried the last act through a wide gamut of emotions, culminating in Mayer's brilliantly played final scene. Indispensable to this scene is Miss Belanger's fine work in the attic bedroom scene, where she is happily able to move emotionally from a joyful girl newly in love to a heartbroken and betrayed woman.

BUT ONE MUST also recognize the contributions of the other actors to the powerful climax. Craig Kuehl as Villebosse provides just the right amount of pomposity, slowness, and yet a certain sensitivity, to play against Mr. Mayer's wrenching agony. Donald Schulte as the Count has established a dualism in his characterization, necessary for Hero's final scene, though without showing fire or profound insight. Miss Hall as the Countess and Miss Cathie Chandler as Hortensia, adequately portrayed the unscrupulous defenders of the status quo, while Bennisson as M. Damiani certainly conveyed the stock lawyer type - stuffy, cold, and grasping.

On the negative side, one must remark several acting faults that detracted from the production. Most annoying was a general inability to handle spoken language, excepting Miss Belanger. She should be especially commended for her clear diction and her ability to separate a line into meaningful and understandable segments. This ability has been conspicuously absent from most actors at the University, a lack that should be forcefully remedied.

A tendency to florid gesturing was displayed, especially by Schulte (who overworked one gesture) and by Kuehl (whose stomping and bellowing around the stage detracted from the poignant sensitivity he showed at the end of the Act I curtain call). At the other extreme was Bennisson, whose restraint was so great that he didn't put sufficient life into his portrayal.

MISS CHANDLER fitted in and out of her character as the sometime mistress, sadly losing much of the life of her portrayal in the process. The Count's valet, portrayed by James Spigener, was ineffective. This is primarily a directing problem, as his relative prominence early in the play leads one to expect dramatic significance from him - something that isn't in the play.

Miss Belanger's performance was fine, with the single exception of her attempted heartbroken sobs in the bedroom scene. This is hard, at best, on a boumy bed, but her voice as well as her posture looked contrived at this point. Her disillusion and grief were much more poignant before the attempted sobs.

Mayer turned in by far the best performance of the evening. The only fault in it was a directorial one, where greater prominence of Hero in the earlier scenes would have produced a better interaction of ideas and emotions later on.

In general, The Rehearsal was an effective production, bordering on, if not achieving, the stature of tragedy. For this the Repertory Theatre should receive many resounding plaudits.

'In Harm's Way' - pleasing pictorially

By NICK MEYER
Iowan Reviewer

I can't remember Otto Preminger ever having made a good film. Controversial, yes; good, no. I can remember a great deal of publicity revolving about "The Great Man" and whatever clumsily handled projects his tyrannical fingers are in.

I'm not questioning Mr. Preminger's courage; he was one of the first directors to challenge the puritanical production code, and was instrumental in getting it modified, then lifted. He dared to make films dealing with dope ("The Man With the Golden Arm"), and his actors were the first to use the sizzling word, "virgin" on the screen ("The Moon is Blue").

But a controversial picture does not necessarily mean a good one. Mr. Preminger is a sort of Cecil B. DeMille, filming epics of a sprawling nature, handling his characters with complete unreality, but putting them in gorgeous costumes and settings, and letting them go on for hours.

HIS EPICS ARE not taken from the Bible, but modern times. His picture, "The Cardinal" spanned three decades of the 20th century, and dealt with everything from Catholicism to the KKK. His latest effort is also a sprawling affair.

First and foremost a visual director, Preminger has made "In Harm's Way" a superb film pictorially. Its authenticity and accuracy cannot be questioned, and the overall result is as graphically convincing of the times in which it is supposed to have taken place as a documentary on the subject.

Pearl Harbor, the Navy, the war on the islands of the South Pacific, the improvised headquarters in quonset huts, the mass operating theaters, officers' parties, the battles, the heartbeat of a huge ship, the conferences among white-uniformed admirals, the cars, the signs, the ads of that period and place are all exactly as they were then; you were there, and all that stuff.

WITH ONE EXCEPTION - the sound. Mr. Preminger, I am convinced would have made wonderful silent films. He has a real feeling for the picturization of a scene, but unfortunately no ear for dialogue, and no eye for characterizations.

If "In Harm's Way" were merely a slam-bang adventure film, the banal people in it might be condoned. But because it aspires to be taken seriously as a film about people as well as large scale events, the hackneyed personal dilemmas and two-dimensional characterizations are inexcusable.

As a matter of fact, "Harm's Way" is one of the less melodramatic and foolish Preminger scripts, but here, too, an occasional impossible action or unbelievable line sticks out like a sore thumb.

AS FOR THE actors, big names are all over the place; the typical Otto style. John Wayne is excellent, playing his usual he-man part with minor variations. Kirk Douglas creates a character out of virtually nothing, and Patricia Neal is convincing, but basically wasted.

Paula Prentiss proves she can act a serious role and Tom (the Cardinal) Tryon proves he can't. Other big names are sprinkled liberally over three hours of footage, including Burgess Meredith, Frankot Tone, Henry Fonda, Brandon de Wilde, (who has almost grown up!) James Mitchum - a spitting image of his old man, - and Preminger's left over "discovery" from "Exodus," Jill Haworth, who is still terrible, but has been given a part to match her talents.

Slim Pickens appears briefly, as does Hugh O'Brian, who dies in an excellently filmed car crash. The celebrated and much discussed nude beach scene, in which he figures - (the one which Preminger insisted remain in the film, the one he explained to magazines and censors was intrinsic and essential to the plot and character development) - yeah, well, it's been cut.

THE PICTURE WAS made in black and white, a sensible move, and the battle scenes, except for the climactic one, obviously made with model ships, were exciting and pulsating. Preminger has caught the marvelous thrill of watching hundreds of white-suited sailors streaming out of hatches and up ladders for battle stations.

There is an intense aura of immediacy and "bigness" about the entire film, mainly in the visual aspect, but sometimes in the auditory and personalized sections of the film as well, when the actors rise above their parts, or happen to have good ones.

The love of the tough commander (Wayne) and the nurse (Patricia Neal), is told in an unaffected and sincere fashion.

"In Harm's Way" the viewer is served up with some wonderfully authentic-looking scenes, which add up to an atmosphere so potent that it tells you exactly what it must have been like then and there.

Sheriff's Office Breaks up Party At Reservoir

A group of men and women of college age were drinking, swimming in the nude, and creating a general disturbance for people camping in the Coralville Reservoir area late Thursday evening, Johnson County Sheriff's office said Friday.

The noisy bunch was dispersed after a warning from Bud Suelpe, deputy sheriff. Suelpe said that as far as he could tell there were no minors drinking alcohol.

We are patrolling the area more carefully now, said Suelpe, in an effort to prevent any recurrence of such actions.

Viet Policy Gets Praise

CHICAGO — Donald E. Johnson, national commander of the American Legion, said Friday the war in Viet Nam is "a real invasion" and praised American efforts there.

He spoke to the delegates of the 47th Illinois American Legion convention.

Johnson of West Branch, Iowa, spent three days in mid-May touring Viet Nam as part of a journey through Southeast Asia.

He said he does not claim to be an expert, but had obtained much information from high-level military and civilian briefings.

The commander said that while he could feel nothing but pride at the courage and optimism of the Americans in the fighting, he deplored the "increasing" protests against our Viet Nam policy from some "young intellectuals."

COMPUTER MIXUP

Reporters are not always as accurate as computers.

Because of a mixup in tabulation procedure seven users who recorded more than 10 hours of computer time during the last fiscal year were omitted from a story in the Thursday issue of The Daily Iowan.

Other departments who used the computers for more than 10 hours are Political Science, 29; Business and Industrial Placement Office, 26; Civil Engineering, 19½; Mechanical Engineering, 19; Speech, 18; English, 14½; and the College of Law, 12½.

Twenty-five users recorded more than 10 hours of computer time during 1964-65.

Russians Sentence Briton to 4 Years In Prison as Spy

MOSCOW — A civilian court sentenced Gerald Brooke, a British teacher, Friday to a year in prison and four years in a labor camp for engaging in anti-Soviet subversive activities.

The London college instructor, 23, was sentenced after a two-day trial. He confessed that he had tried to pass out anti-Soviet propaganda provided by an anti-Communist Russian emigre group in London.

Prosecutor Gennady Terekhov had demanded a seven-year sentence.

In pleading guilty Thursday, Brooke said he acted as an agent of the Russian emigre organization NTS, the popular labor alliance.

The prosecutor charged that this alliance, which has headquarters in Frankfurt, is now financed almost entirely by western intelligence agencies. He charged that the emigres worked for the Nazis in World War II, later switched allegiance to reactionary circles in the West.

Since the war, he said, the alliance has been trying to collect information about the Soviet Union with funds supplied by U.S. and British intelligence services.

He said alliance literature printed for distribution on Soviet territory calls for all types of "wrecking activity," including subversion in the armed forces and sabotage.

County Board Names Committee

The Johnson County Conservation Board Thursday night appointed a three-member committee headed by Mrs. Martin Schwegler to begin negotiations for the acquisition of two tracts of land in Johnson County to be developed as park facilities.

One land tract is known as the Old Scott Church site at the intersection of old Highway 6 and new Highway 6 about three miles east of Iowa City. The other tract was not identified, but according to Board Chairman Russell Mann, 2600 E. Court St., it lies south of Iowa City near the Iowa River.

Planned facilities for the second tract include a boat access site, and camping, trailer and picnic facilities.

Market Closes Ahead In Moderate Trading

NEW YORK — The stock market closed with a gain today although it was below its best level of the session.

Trading was moderate as aerospace issues and autos served as pacemakers.

Ford provided leadership to other autos and was up more than a point in late trading.

Aerospace stocks were ahead all day, with such issues as United Aircraft up more than a point.

McKesson & Robbins erased about all of an early gain.

Liggett & Myers had a fit of late weakness, losing 2.

Two Students Have—

Unusual Jobs This Summer

"River rat" is a nickname most college students would balk at, but it's familiar to James L. Spielbauer, A3, Gutesberg.

Spielbauer spends his summers earning his board and tuition as a deckhand on the Dan C, a towboat on the Mississippi river.

"It's not that you make that much money," Spielbauer said. "It's that you don't have time to spend it." He often works for weeks without a day off, he said, and then gets a week or so of complete freedom. But he is always "on call" during the summer, since "I have to give them a number where I can always be reached."

The seventh son in a family of fourteen children, Spielbauer spent a year at Loras College in Dubuque considering the priesthood as a vocation. After leaving Loras, he came to the University, where he has maintained about a 3.0 average. He has taken several courses in American literature and folklore.

Last semester Spielbauer took courses in the Writer's Workshop. He has had several articles published in "The Defender."

Spielbauer finds a peace and calm in life on the river, he said. "It's a world that is very much removed from the atmosphere of the University," he said. "The people are different, the responsibilities are different, the personal demands are different. On the river you prove yourself in different ways than you do on a college campus. The overwhelming simplicity of the life makes it very fulfilling."

What about the myth of the degenerate river man, always looking for a fight, always drinking, always belligerent?

"Most of the men I've met on the river are lost, discontented, perpetually in search of something. Most of them have been married two or three times. Within their code of ethics, they're relatively decent, honest men. As for the people who call river men wild and rowdy — how would you feel if you'd been working all day, every day, for three weeks, seeing the same faces, walking the deck of the same boat? When you get on land, it's like being let out of prison!"

Spielbauer intends to keep working summers and going to school from September to June until he gets his B.A. He wants to write, but "Who knows what I'll do? There's so much I've got to do and see. This is just the beginning."

Another University student Alex L. Eftimoff, G, of Whitby, Ontario, Canada, is working this summer with the Canadian Puppeteers.

Eftimoff is emcee for the show and one of the five puppeteers. He also sings several songs during the performance.

The show consists of a number of scenes including a puppet rock and roll group called the Keogh Trio; an under sea production; a drama about a dragon; and a Russian ballet danced to a folk song by Eftimoff.

Critic Nancy White said: "The puppeteers obviously have a good knowledge of child behavior for they made their show just the right length and didn't give fidgetiness time to set in." The show lasts one hour.

Eftimoff is working on his M.A. in French and was a teaching assistant in the French Department. He had previously taught high school in Toronto and taught English in Paris.

He had one of the leads in the Iowa City Community Theater production "See How They Run," presented last winter.

Former Prof. Is Assigned To Burma

The Department of the Air Force has assigned Lt. Col. Carl W. Stucki, former associate professor of air science at the University, to the American Embassy at Rangoon, Burma as the senior adviser to the Burmese Air Force.

Stucki will provide guidance in matters concerning military grant-aid, sales of aeronautical equipment, and selection of Burmese Air Force personnel for courses of training in the United States as well as guidance to the Burmese in operating and maintaining their military aircraft.

Since departure from Iowa City last year, Stucki has undergone preparatory studies for the Burma assignment. He studied at the Air War College at Montgomery, Ala. and completed requirements for an M.S. degree in International Affairs from George Washington University.

Stucki received his B.S. in history from the University of Iowa in 1959. He will fill the vacancy left by Charles Gibson, professor and chairman of history, who resigned June 4 to take a position as professor of history at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor.

Aydelotte received his A.B. from Harvard College and his Ph.D. from the University of Cambridge, England.

His major field of interest is modern European history. In 1953 Aydelotte received the Rockefeller Foundation grant of $4,000 for study of the way in which social and economic backgrounds of the members of the British Parliament of 1841-1847 affected their political behavior.

In 1961 he was awarded the Order of the British Empire by Queen Elizabeth II.

Christopher Laseh, associate professor of history, is serving as temporary chairman for the summer. Aydelotte will begin his duties as chairman September 1. He is vacationing this summer in New Haven, Conn.

Aydelotte To Head History Studies

William O. Aydelotte, professor of history, has been named chairman of the department of history. Aydelotte was previously chairman of the department from 1947 to 1959.

He will fill the vacancy left by Charles Gibson, professor and chairman of history, who resigned June 4 to take a position as professor of history at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor.

Aydelotte received his A.B. from Harvard College and his Ph.D. from the University of Cambridge, England.

YMCA Sale Termed Successful

Beer mugs from Heidelberg, Germany, John Gunther's noted book "Inside the U.S.A." and antique vases were some of the low-priced offerings at the bric-a-brac sale sponsored by the University YMCA. The sale was held in the YMCA office in the Union, Friday.

Articles were donated by persons interested in raising funds for furthering the aims of Y.W.C.A. campus programs. The sale was "rather successful," said Mrs. Max Oppenheimer, president of the advisory board of the YMCA at Iowa.

Citing an example of one especially pleased buyer, Mrs. Oppenheimer said, "A writer needed a book covering the medical practices of the 1930's. He was very pleased when he found a book on that subject here," said Mrs. Oppenheimer.

The programs carried on by the YMCA throughout the year are partially financed by the sales.

"The sales are increasing in size gradually. The addition of some antiques and rugs has aroused interest. We'll probably have two sales during the coming school year," said Mrs. Oppenheimer.

YMCA members donate their time to hospital work. The members sponsor parties and provide entertainment for the patients at the University's Children's Hospital and the Oakdale Sanatorium.

The distant hope of the YMCA chapter, a residence hall and social center, may be partially aided by activities such as sales in the future, Mrs. Oppenheimer said.

The educators met with cadets from their respective institutions, observed tactical training and watched a firepower demonstration.

The group participated in a discussion of ROTC training with Major General Jonathan O. Searman and General Randolph Dickens, commanding general and assistant division commander, respectively, of the First Infantry Division.

2 Families To Adopt Students

Yale Lary Retires From Pro Football

By MIKE COCHRAN

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Yale Lary, reflecting on 11 lively years in the National Football League, announced Friday his retirement as the Detroit Lions' punting and defensive specialist.

"When the coaches are younger than you are, it's time to quit," quipped Lary, 34, at what was designed to be a news conference prior to the official announcement.

The conference actually resembled a fraternity bull session with Lary, his tie asked, recalling incidents during the frequently turbulent years of the NFL.

Asked to elaborate on his experiences with Bobby Layne, one of the league's all-time great and stormy quarterbacks, Lary replied: "You can't print them." Then he added:

"No, all those stories you hear about Bobby Layne — well — they're all true. On and off the field, he's the greatest."

"He was the Chief. Everybody else was an Indian."

THE FORMER Texas A&M star said Layne classified his companions during his off-field antics as "stayers or leavers — I was a stay-er."

On the field, he recalled, Layne demanded excellent protection from his blockers.

"If somebody didn't block for him, he'd send them off the field. He wouldn't let them play. He'd tell the coach, 'don't send that so and so (or something similar) in any more'."

"If he told you to block . . . you blocked. If he told you to drink . . . you drank . . ."

He said former Detroit Coach Buddy Parker and Layne, both individualists of the highest order, got along marvelously because they thought exactly alike.

LARY LED the league in punting in 1959, 1961, and 1963. He was selected to the All-Pro team four times and played in the Pro Bowl nine times.

He intercepted 50 passes during his career and returned 126 punts for 752 yards.

Lary said he reached his decision to retire with great reluctance and with mixed emotions, adding:

"It's not easy to retire, but I had a good year last season and I prefer to leave with a good record. I owe it to my wife and children to establish a permanent home."

He plans to devote full time to a new automobile dealership he and Bobby Helm, a close friend, recently opened in suburban Hurst.

Player Shoots 63 To Lead Challenge

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Open champion Gary Player shot an eight-under-par 63 Friday and turned the six-man National Challenge Golf Match into a one-man show.

After 36 holes of the 72-hole match, in which $50,000 in prize money is at stake, Player was 10 under par and had a 10-stroke lead over amateur Deane Beman of Bethesda, Md., who shot 70 for 142.

Arnold Palmer and U.S. Amateur champion Bill Campbell of Huntington, W.Va., were tied for third at 143, with Jack Nicklaus, the Masters champion, 16 strokes behind Player at 148 after shooting 76 Friday.

LEADS BUCKEYE TOURNEY—CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Susie Maxwell, who said she found the heat and the excessive humidity "just like Oklahoma," took a three-stroke lead Friday in the first round of the 54-hole-$10,000 Buckeye Savings Association Ladies Pro Golf Tournament.

Central States Amateur Opens on S. Finkbine

The Central States Amateur Golf Tournament opens here today on South Finkbine course. Some of the state's best golfers, plus a few from surrounding states, will be competing.

Golfers will shoot an 18-hole qualifying round today, and the low 32 scorers, plus ties, will play 36 holes Sunday for the championship.

Defending champion Jim Jamieson of Moline, Ill., is not expected to compete. Also absent will be two other previous winners, Steve Spray and John Liechty, making it a wide open race for the top spot.

Two top Iowa golfers entered are Rod Bliss III of Des Moines, who won the Iowa Amateur at Mason City two weeks ago, and Floren DiPaglia of Des Moines, who won the Iowa Masters title at Ames last week.

Two members of the Iowa golf team will be competing, Jim Scheppele of Waterloo and Gary Gottschalk of Dubuque.

Another top entry is Jim Carney of Centerville, the 1964 state junior champion.

Tournament chairman M. O. Dugger said he expects a final field of between 180 and 200 golfers. Prizes consist of gift certificates redeemable at any golf pro shop.

The meet is sponsored by the Iowa Shrine club through the courtesy of the Iowa athletic department.

Brown Found Not Guilty Of Assault

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP)—Jim Brown is ready to play football again after being found innocent Friday of assault and battery against an 18-year-old girl.

The 230-pound all-pro fullback for the Cleveland Browns said he was completely happy and ready to report to Coach Blanton Collier at the club's training camp at nearby Hiram.

Brown, the National Football League's leading ground gainer for seven of his eight years, has missed more than a week of practice. The NFL champions meet the Chicago All-Stars Aug. 6 in Chicago.

THE JURY of seven women and five men deliberated only an hour and 20 minutes, a fact which Brown called significant.

The 29-year-old father of three had been charged by Brenda Ayres with assault and battery. She testified he beat her in his motel room the night of June 19 and forced her into sexual relations. Both Brown and Miss Ayres are Negroes.

Brown, who testified he never had sexual relations with the 100-pound high school dropout, said, "The evidence proved it was a preposterous accusation."

HIS WIFE, SUE, clutched hands with Brown's mother, Mrs. Theresa Brown, when the verdict was read. Mrs. Brown wept when Municipal Judge Blanche Krupansky read "not guilty."

Sue Brown said "I'm very happy it's all over."

After the judge left the courtroom, people rushed to shake hands with Brown and slap him on the back. Brown commented on the effect of his 10-day trial on his image as a popular football player.

"I HAVE BEEN proven innocent. I hope the general public will accept this. I leave it to their judgment."

Pirates 6, Cubs 0

CHICAGO (AP) — Bob Friend allowed only one hit — an infield single by Chicago's Don Landrum in the fourth — while pitching his 34th major league shutout for Pittsburgh Friday 6-0 with the help of two homers by Jim Pagliaroni and one by Donn Clendenon.

Friend, shutout leader among active right-handed pitchers in the National League, lost his chance at a no-hitter when Landrum's ground ball into the hole at short-stop was reached by Gene Alley, who never had a chance to make a play on the ball.

Pagliaroni hit his 10th and 11th homers on successive turns at bat in the second and fourth innings, each time with the bases empty. Clendenon lined his 10th homer into the vacant center field seats in the third. This combination of power was enough to snap Dick Ellsworth's seven-game winning streak at Wrigley Field.

Friend had one previous one-hitter, broken up by the Cubs' Frankie Baumholtz on an infield hit in the eighth inning, Sept. 7, 1955.

Fregosi led off the fifth with his ninth homer in helping send the ninth-place Red Sox down to their fifth straight defeat and 19th in their last 23 outings.

Tiant, now 9-3, allowed only four hits before the Yankees touched him for three more and a run in the eighth inning. Sonny Siebert came on and ended the rally.

Sims lined his fourth homer off Jim Bouton, 4-4, over the right-field fence in the second, scoring Fred Whitfield, who had singled.

Tiant added his homer in the third. His only other major league homer last season also was off Bouton.

The second-place Orioles, handing Jim Perry his first defeat after seven victories, had gotten only three hits when they struck in the ninth.

Charley Lau drew a walk, opening the inning, and Luis Aparicio went in to run. One out later Aparicio raced around to third on a single by Bob Johnson. Bill Pleis came in to pitch and issued a walk to Norm Siebern before Robinson stroked his game-winning hit off Johnny Klippstein.
