Go To Style Show And Win A Date

One male from the audience of Friday night's Profile Previews show will leave with a date with the 1965 Miss Perfect Profile. This is the first year the date has been offered in connection with the Associated Women Students' sponsored show. Miss Nancy Moore, last year's Miss Perfect Profile, will draw the number of the winning program at the second intermission.

The Carousel Restaurant will give Miss Perfect Profile and her date a dinner for two.

THE SHOW, which starts at 7:30 p.m. in the Union Ballroom, will be moderated by Becky Harris, A4, Bloomington, and will include competition of 97 semi-finalists.

This year's theme is "My Fair Lady." Admission is free. Each freshman or transfer student will be judged by modeling an outfit from her own wardrobe in one of six categories: sportswear, slacks or bermuda outfits; campus wear, skirt and sweaters, jumpers, or casual dresses; suits; coats; semi-dresswear; and formal and cocktail dresses.

Judges are Jeanne Nelson, of the J. D. Van Allen Store in Clinton; Corrine Shover, director and owner of a modeling school in Cedar Rapids; and Stephanie Barton Noonan, a former Miss Perfect Profile.

Candidates will be narrowed to 15 and presented after the first intermission. First and second runners-up and Miss Perfect Profile will be announced after the second intermission.

OPENING THE SHOW will be a medley from "Gypsy" by Ann Wayner, A1, Iowa City, and Rob Wiltshire, A3, Omaha, Neb., accompanied by Pat Thoma, A3, Fairfield.

At the first intermission entertainment are Lorraine, City High School, and Linda Roth, A1, Iowa City, folk singing sisters playing the banjo and guitar; Mike Barry, A3, Davenport, singing "Thank Heaven for Little Girls"; and Gayle Mashaw, A2, Iowa City, in a comedy routine.

During the second intermission entertainers are Ba Hall, A3, Waterloo, Brian Tabach, A4, Des Moines, and Doug Jones, A1, Moline, a folk singing group; Kathy Dunn, A1, Elk Grove, Ill., in a poetry interpretation; Ann Willis, A1, singing and playing the ukulele; and Ann Wayner and Bob Wiltshire in a medley from "My Fair Lady."

Viet Cong Suicide Squads Hit Marine Helicopter Air Bases

SAIGON (AP) — Viet Cong suicide squads took a heavy toll of American helicopters in raids just before midnight Wednesday on U.S. Marine air installations at Da Nang and Chu Lai, in central Viet Nam.

U.S. spokesmen at Da Nang said 19 helicopters were destroyed and 21 damaged at Marble Mountain, an air strip across the Da Nang River from the Da Nang air base.

Two AD4 Skyhawk jet bombers were destroyed at Chu Lai, 52 miles south of Da Nang.

THE MARINES reported they killed 39 of the enemy and suffered only light casualties themselves in the simultaneous attack. It was the third sabotage assault on the sprawling Marine air and infantry complex on the South China Sea.

Seabees at Marble Mountain also suffered light casualties from mortar shells.

About 60 helicopters were at Marble Mountain when the Viet Cong struck. The Communists plastered both Marble Mountain and Chu Lai with intense mortar fire before the suicide squads dashed in and ripped into the aircraft with demolition charges and rifle fire.

The main Da Nang air base was not attacked.

WHEN THE MAIN action was over, Marine patrols began sweeping the two areas in search of any remaining Viet Cong.

In other fighting Wednesday, Vietnamese rangers and U.S. warplanes wrecked a heavy guerrilla assault on a ranger camp only 20 miles northwest of Saigon.

American troops were out in force at the same time, hunting Viet Cong in the Plei Me and Qui Nonh sectors farther north.

Dictatorial Power Taken By Branco In Brazil Dispute

Action To Ensure 'Peace, Security'

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — The Brazilian government decreed itself almost dictatorial powers Wednesday after leftists in Congress blocked the president's internal security program.

"We need tranquility for the nation's economic development," President Huberto Castello Branco told the people on television after an institutional act overriding parts of the constitution was issued.

The act abolished political parties, empowered Castello Branco to declare a state of siege and to rule by decree up to 180 days, enlarged the supreme court, gave military courts broad powers, and provided for indirect election of the president by Congress, not the people.

ALL THESE hard-hitting measures had faced tough sledding and probable defeat in Congress. The government was unable to get a majority Tuesday night for its amendment authorizing it to intervene in states and combat subversion. This triggered Wednesday's decree.

Mustering a majority against the amendment were backers of ex-president Joao Goulart, the leftist booted out by the military-civilian uprising of April 1964, and ex-president Juscelino Kubitschek. Castello Branco took over the presidency after Goulart's ouster.

Kubitschek returned from self-exile Oct. 4 after his Social Democrats won important victories in state elections, which angered the government and the military.

KUBITSCHKEK has been undergoing questioning by military boards since his return. The boards are investigating charges of corruption and Communist infiltration while he was president from 1956 to 1961. Goulart was vice president during this time.

The president told the people his regime faces danger from backers of Goulart who "threaten and dare revolutionary action." Goulart last was reported in neighboring Uruguay.

"Revolution is alive," Castello Branco said, "and does not retreat."

Therefore, Castello Branco transferred to military courts all crimes "against national security and military institutions."

THE SUPREME COURT violently opposed the government's program to expand its membership from 11 to 16 justices.

The move was advocated by the military to encounter what it considered the court's antigovernment attitude. Most of the members were appointed under the administrations of Kubitschek, Janie Quadres and Goulart, all bitter enemies of the present regime.

The institutional act provides that the president will set the date for the next presidential election in Congress, which must be held no later than Oct. 3, 1966. Castello Branco cannot run then.

Coed Sought Across U.S.

A nation-wide allpoints bulletin on the disappearance of Patricia Ann Madden, A1, Iowa City, was issued Wednesday by the Johnson County Sheriff's Office.

Deputy Sheriff Francis Seuppel Jr., asked Wednesday night that anyone who has seen Miss Madden or knows her whereabouts to contact the Johnson County Sheriff's Office. The phone number is 338-2711.

Miss Madden, a blue-eyed blond, was last seen in Iowa City at 11 a.m. on Oct. 8. She was wearing a white blouse and a brown skirt when she disappeared.

She is the daughter of Iowa City Public Works Director Lawrence Madden, 1605 Rochester Ave.

Douglas Cites Interaction Of Individuals, Government

The individual today has to face increasing helplessness in the face of Government power, associate justice of the U.S. Supreme Court William O. Douglas said Wednesday night.

"If the Government gets on your back, you're dead," said Douglas in the second lecture sponsored by the University Lecture Series. "Those of us in government must make sure government plays fairly and squarely."

Douglas attributed this feeling of helplessness to the fact that there is no longer a frontier where a man can go to start life over.

THE GOVERNMENT seems to have a dossier on everyone, said Douglas. He went on to say that in many instances security hearings have caused many tragic miscarriages of justice even in today's America.

Douglas told the audience, which numbered over 1,800, that the greatest strength in America today is the diversity we produce among us.

Leaning back from the podium at the beginning of his lecture, he said tongue-in-cheek, he was happy to talk about the Supreme Court because it was "a non-controversial subject."

"Our people were concerned with the things government should not do to them when the Constitution was set up. They wanted to guarantee the individual his liberty against intrusions by the state," Douglas said.

He contrasted this idea with the paternalistic constitutions being adopted in many countries stating what the Government should do for them.

"A FEDERAL system needs a referee," Douglas said in telling why the Supreme Court is needed. "The court has no power to issue rules and regulations. Its power is that of moral persuasion rather than legal impact."

Outlining the history of the Supreme Court, he said it was active in shaping four periods, an economic one from 1801 to 1835, one in which civil rights were dominant and culminated with the Dred Scott decision, the period of great westward expansion from 1882 to 1937, and the current period which is concerned with not only the rights of the Negroes, but of civil rights in general.

Douglas said we are calm today, but should not be, about the fact that the period from 1801 to 1835 laid the basis for the creation in this country of the greatest common market known in the world.

One thing many persons forget, he said, is that the corporations, rather than the Negro, were the first beneficiaries of the 14th Amendment passed during the second period.

Wilson Meets Banned Leader During Rhodesian Conference

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Chanting Africans swarmed through Salisbury Wednesday while British Prime Minister Harold Wilson engaged in talks with banned African nationalist leader Joshua Nkomo on Rhodesia's future.

Wilson, in his meeting with Nkomo, sought to discover what the African nationalists would accept as a basis for negotiation in the dispute over Rhodesia's bid for independence. But details of what the two men said were not disclosed.

Throughout the day, Wilson met opponents and supporters of Prime Minister Ian Smith's white minority Rhodesian regime.

Some were brought from places of detention to see the British leader.

Garfield Todd, former prime minister of Southern Rhodesia and vigorous opponent of Smith's regime, also arrived for talks with Wilson.

Todd was allowed to come to Salisbury from his cattle ranch in the southern part of the country where he was placed in restriction nine days ago for allegedly associating with a banned African nationalist party. He has appealed against the restriction.

Nkomo, leader of the banned Zimbabwe African People's Union, was brought to his meeting with Wilson by an elaborate arrangement.

He was first taken from his detention camp at Gonakudzingwa near the Mozambique border by plane to Salisbury. Then he and his party were transferred to two helicopters and flown to the spacious grounds of Government House.

Rhodesian authorities thought this method would prevent disorders that might occur if he had been allowed to drive through the city.

Deutsch Relates East, West

By MORRY ALTER Staff Writer

The Western and Eastern nations today face similar problems and have had little success in solving them, said Karl W. Deutsch Wednesday in his second Shambaugh Lecture. His first lecture, "The West European Experience," was given Tuesday.

Two of the key problems, as Deutsch saw them, are poverty and the conflicts brought about by nationalism. Only in a small portion of the world, he said, has any progress toward their solution been made.

The danger is that the peoples of the world could become "victims of a clash between two forms of ignorance," said the Yale professor of political science.

DEUTSCH, WHO SPOKE in the Senate Chamber of Old Capitol, continued his treatment of the theme "Nationalism and Internationalism" by tracing the experience of the countries of Eastern Europe with both nationalism and Communism.

Before these nations were formed, said Deutsch, Eastern Europe resembled "a polka-dot pattern gone crazy," in which minorities lived next to each other yet remained very much apart.

"The process of historical assimilation is not well understood," Deutsch said, "but we do understand its results."

He said the results were that Eastern Europe became characterized by social isolation, numerous dialects and a layer cake type of social structure. When skilled merchants, artisans, and soldiers were needed, he added, they were imported from other nations.

SUPERIMPOSED UPON this layer cake social structure were the Hapsburg Monarchy, the Ottoman and the Russian Empires, Deutsch said.

Then came social mobility, Deutsch said, with the resulting destruction of the empires and the rise of modern nation-states. The movement toward the nation-state he said included more than just the middle class in a struggle by men to obtain a form of government that would "give them a share in controlling their own fate."

Unfortunately, according to Deutsch, the rise of nationalism brought with it the destruction of the concepts of property and human rights.

Turning to Communism and the Eastern European state, Deutsch said that Communism had encountered two major problems in all these countries.

First, he said, was the problem of the instability of the administrator torn between loyalty to his constituents and loyalty to the central government. He must inevitably become alienated from one or the other, said Deutsch.

Secondly, he said, changes in policy in the communist state leave the administrators with a dilemma.

Angry Youth Burns Paper

For a few moments Wednesday Soapbox Soundoff observers thought they were seeing a reenactment of last week's draft card burning. A youth, shaking with anger over information being passed out by the Committee for the Defense of Iowa Students, folded one of the information sheets and burned it.

The youth said he was a student but the Daily Iowan could not verify his name and classification.

FOR THE next two hours students debated the sensibility of burning draft cards and of escalating the war in Viet Nam. The original topic for the day, the role of the United Nations in Viet Nam, was seldom mentioned.

According to Sally Stage, A4, Davenport, chairman of Soapbox

Soundoff, the crowd at Soundoff today was the largest crowd Soundoff has ever drawn.

After defending the Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) Paul Clark, A4, Des Moines, president of SDS, said that SDS has no policy on the draft. Clark also said that he did not favor U.S. intervention in Viet Nam.

RON ZOBEL, A2, Oelwein, accused Clark of wanting the Viet Cong to win, because Clark said if the United States withdrew the Viet Cong would win the war.

The discussion on Viet Nam was summed up by Bob Lehneu, G, Danville, Ill., who said that two basic questions were being asked.

First, he said, there was a question of policy in Viet Nam. Lehneu said that people confused value judgments and actual facts. "WE JUST don't know the facts," he said, "and so we let emotional value judgments sway us."

The basic mistake with the policymakers, according to Lehneu, is that they believe that social change equals communism.

The second question, he said, was how far freedom of speech should be carried.

THE COMPLEXITY of values today does not tell us what to do about unjust laws, Lehneu said.

A citizen should support laws, he continued, but the problem was what to do when an unjust law is passed.

Lehneu said that opinions on draft card burning and the U.S. role in Viet Nam were merely a question of a person's values.

Busy week for politicians

THIS HAS BEEN a busy week for the politically aware. Not only are there protesters, causes and issues galore to attract one's attention, but there are also a number of worthwhile lectures to attend.

Karl Deutsch, a Yale professor of political science, has been doing a brilliant job of discussing nationalism on a level understandable even to freshmen. One of his three lectures (the last is tonight at 8 p.m. in the Senate Chamber of Old Capitol) was held in the afternoon so as not to conflict with another famous speaker — Justice William O. Douglas.

On top of everything else, the departmental and mid-term examination season is upon us.

The life of a politically-interested student is a busy one. So much so we often wonder how so many persons find time to write letters-to-the-editor. We've received more letters in the past two weeks than during any single month in the recent history of this newspaper.

We don't know how the readers do it, but we're glad they do since our "letters" feature is one of the most interesting and well read parts of the editorial page. To those letter writers whose works haven't appeared, we can only say we're sorry that space doesn't permit us to publish everything and urge you to write again some time in the future.

The many letters and other signs of political activity on campus along with the excellent lectures are all signs of an alive and interested campus. This is as it should be.

Monkey business

DR. JOHN BUETTNER JANUSCH of Duke University, as he prepared to embark on a long-term study of prosimians said:

"I enjoy working with baboons and lemurs because the baboons remind me of my colleagues on university faculties and the lemurs remind me of undergraduates. Lemurs are bright-eyed, bushy-tailed and can't believe the world is the way it is.

"Baboons, on the other hand, are intelligent, sociable, clever, untidy and you can't trust them."

There's a man who should be working with the Macbride Museum.

Protest critics miss the point

By JACK O'NEILL
for The Iowan

We are currently witnessing something of a wave of reaction against those who have been protesting our policy in Viet Nam.

This reaction is taking two forms: 1. Attacks directed against the protesters themselves ("beatniks," "disloyal dupes,"); 2. Attacks directed against the means used to protest (teach-ins, marching, draft-card burning). In each type of attack on the protesters, serious shortcomings are readily apparent.

It is obvious, for example, that the best way to defeat an argument is to meet it head-on and debate it on its own merits, rather than avoid the issue and attack the man. And while this may be only good advice for some societies, it is an absolute command to those with democratic pretensions. For if you would seek to destroy a man's arguments by reading him out of society ("he is not American; he is only a bearded fool of doubtful loyalty") you have not so much destroyed the man's arguments as the democratic society you claim to have.

Better, then, to confront the arguments than the man presenting them. Better, that is, to permit criticisms of our Viet Nam policy and debate them on their own merits than to tear down the pillars of a democratic society by ostracizing its dissenters.

THE SECOND line of attack against our protesters is directed not at the individuals themselves, but their tactics. While it is quite legitimate to criticize such means as teach-ins and picketing, some errors of logic are being made in the process. For example it is frequently being assumed that opposition to the protesters' means must lead to opposition to their ends and to acceptance of our present Viet Nam policy. Such reasoning does not make sense.

It is somewhat like saying, "We oppose cutting off the hands of pickpockets as a means of deterring them, therefore we favor pickpocketing."

Obviously one can oppose cutting off pickpockets' hands as a means of deterrence while still favoring the end, viz., deterrence of pickpocketing.

Similarly, one can oppose the means used by protesters to obtain a change in our Viet Nam policy while still favoring a change in that policy.

One more point must be raised: Why have the protesters chosen the means they have? Why march in protest, hold mass rallies and the like? To treat this line of questioning we must look at the alternative means available — something critics of our protesters have failed to do.

In our political system, the normal means of opposing government policy is through support of the political party out of power. But one of the ironies of bi-partisanship is that it all but closes off this alternative.

For bi-partisanship means, in this instance, that both parties support our present Viet Nam policy. Indeed, the only difference between the two parties is that while the Democrats favor the hard line, the Republicans favor the harder line.

WITH THE NORMAL channels of opposition closed, those who doubt the wisdom of our present Viet Nam policy must either sit idly by doing nothing, or take part of such anomalous behavior as marching and picketing.

To sum up, a democratic society must, by definition, permit opposition. When such opposition does not or cannot manifest itself via normal channels, such as political parties, it is likely to occur in some other way. And though we may question such tactics as picketing or draft-card burning as a means of effectively opposing government policy in Viet Nam, we may still support the goals being espoused — a basic change in our Viet Nam policy.

'Let's trade,' reader says

To the Editor:

In the past weeks many University of Iowa students have expressed their dissatisfaction with the United States Government. There are also many Cubans who are dissatisfied with their Government. I propose that an exchange be made. All dissatisfied students could go to Cuba and those dissatisfied Cubans could come to the United States.

Besides allowing these students to cultivate their political ideas and beards in a more fertile climate it would relieve the overcrowding at the University.

If this agreement is not satisfactory perhaps these students could go to North Viet Nam in trade for the American prisoners of war. I am certain the prisoners would be quite willing to return to the United States.

Unjust government policies breed card burnings

By FRAN SEARS
For the Iowa Socialist League

It is not an easy task to arrive at a balanced and reasonable judgment of the recent acts of draft card burning on the part of University of Iowa students Steve Smith and Stan Witkowski.

Some would attribute their acts as well as those of other protesters against government policy to cowardice, lack of patriotism or lack of concern for the American people. Such allegations are both false and irrelevant; as an attempt at a political analysis of a significant social phenomenon it is beyond intellectual contempt.

Most men of good will would grant, we believe, that there arise occasions in man's history when a person has, if not the obligation, at least the moral right to engage in unlawful activity. It might even be agreed that the progress of human culture has typically been achieved at least in part by what is formally illegal conduct. In our own history one thinks of the American Revolution itself, the struggles for trade unionism and progressive social legislation and, more recently, for civil rights.

Such reflections should at least move one to question the hasty, ill-conceived and ahistorical condemnations which always abound in circumstances such as those now before us. We, at least, do not condemn illegal acts as such, and the only possible grounds for "condemning" Smith's and Witkowski's actions would be that they were in a position to perceive that their acts would very likely do more harm than good to the cause of peace and sanity. We doubt that they were, or that anyone can reasonably claim to be, in such a position.

If perchance one does judge their acts to be unwise, still their lack of wisdom would be more than dwarfed by the stupidity, insanity and criminality of the acts of the Government which they were protesting. And it is to the actions of our Government and not themselves to which in the end they wished to call attention by burning their draft cards.

Thus it is fitting to conclude these remarks with the observation that it is unjust and repressive acts of Government perhaps which give rise to the more militant and sometimes illegal acts of their protesters and that rather than ill-informed, spontaneous condemnation of such activity, one's energies are better spent in investigating the conditions of its emergence.

Ho-hum, he says 'peace creeps' are out again

To the Editor:

Ho-hum! It looks like these peace creeps have come up with an even bigger gimmick for the promotion of their maudlin notoriety and supposed martyrdom! Yep, it looks like the draft card-burning craze is next up.

But, who knows, maybe doing a little time in Fort Leavenworth may turn out to be a bigger kick than getting beat up in Mississippi. However, someone who gets sent up for a lousy rap like burning up his draft card might not find life pleasant among the fellow cons he would have to live with for years. Some of those characters are doing time for big time stuff, and they may tend to have the same regard for a card burner as they would for any other kind of pervert.

So if anyone else is contemplating pulling off the same kind of cute little stunt that this Smith character has, he had better stop and think while he has the chance — which is the noblest way of serving one's country, in a federal penitentiary, or where one should be serving it, where the real enemies of society are, in Viet Nam?

Sports attacked

To the Editor:

It's a shame sports editor Bill Pierrot had to lose 10 beers betting on Iowa!

Judging from the quality of his "Over the Sports Desk" column of Oct. 26, he lost about 10 times the salary anyone in the newspaper business would have paid him to write it.

Lost draft card? Well, blow me down

By JON VAN
Editor

"This draft card burning business is getting out of hand!" cried a student who came running into our offices Wednesday.

The student wept sadly as he told his tale of woe for all to hear.

"With all the draft card burnings going on at the University, I began to become interested in what they looked like," he said. "I got out my wallet and began looking through it to get my draft card out. I couldn't find it. I don't know what happened to it. I haven't looked at the thing for years, but always assumed it was in there with my social security card, my fraternity card and my Captain Kangeroo Breakfast Klub card. I just don't know where it is.

"I know I'm supposed to have a card, so all this bothered me. I made a special trip to my draft board office in Davenport to get a new one.

"When the clerk there found out I was from the University of Iowa, he refused to believe I had simply lost my draft card."

"Don't put me on," he said. "I know about you guys in Iowa City. Why, the sky has been so bright with the fires of flaming draft cards the past few days, we in Davenport thought Daylight Time was catching up with us and the sun was rising in the West."

"THE GUY noticed that I'd cut myself shaving," the student went on, "and he swore up and down I was a bearded beatnik. He told me that taking a bath and getting a shave and haircut wouldn't help. I ought to just turn myself in and take my medicine, he told me.

"When I tried to explain that I would never burn my draft card and didn't even care about the war in Viet Nam, he said, 'Okay, then enlist, and we won't say anything about it.'

"I told him I was going to school and didn't want to join the Army, and he said I was just a pinko coward.

"Now I'm being investigated by the FBI. The told me I ought to just confess and make it easier all around. Otherwise, it might take forever to settle this — they have so many card burnings to investigate now, they've rented an office building just to store the ashes.

"What am I gonna do?" the distraught student asked.

"You'll just have to wait in that line over there," we told him. "They're all card burners who got here before you to give us their stories."

"But I'm not a card burner!" the student screamed.

"Hmmm, well, that IS novel," we mused and put a special feature writer on the story. It was really a new twist.

"I'M GETTING awfully tired of all these card burnings," our managing editor sighed. "They sure are a lot of work."

"Ah, don't be a party-pooper," a sports writer replied. "Iowa is now leading the nation in card burnings. Rumor has it next year's Homecoming Monument will be a giant draft card."

"Why?" we asked. "That hasn't anything to do with football."

"No, but think how much fun it would be to burn," came the reply. "It would really give the team something to fight for."

Letters to the editor —

DI story defended

To the Editor:

As an individual, a voting citizen, and University of Iowa student, I can remain silent no longer. In the Oct. 26 Daily Iowan Mr. William Tucker rather inclusively accused the DI and its staff of "shirking your duty" in connection with the recent publicity given Steve Smith and other university dissenters to the current United States involvement in Viet Nam. Mr. Tucker specifically objected to the DI coverage of last Thursday's SDS meeting, in comparison with the "shining example of the free press" he found in the Des Moines Register of Oct. 22. To this,

Mr. Tucker, I say hogwash. You write that the DI reporter "should have attended the meeting in person." I saw the reporter there, but did not see you Mr. Tucker.

The people of Iowa City are fortunate that they have both the DI and the DM Register available to them. I only hope that not many made the prejudiced mistaken choice that Mr. Tucker did. The people of Iowa and the nation are not, on the whole, afforded the choice that we in Iowa City are.

To explain: (1) the Register stringer reported that the meeting was held in the Yale Room of the Memorial Union whereas the DI reporter correctly identified the meeting place as the Illinois Room. As he didn't even know where he (or the meeting) was, how reputable could the rest of the Register reporter's story have been?

(2) the Register stated that the Special Forces sergeant walked out, taking half the audience with him — when finished speaking, he wandered out. Sitting in the back of the room, I was curious to see how many would leave with the soldier. My estimate would be closer to 15 than 150.

Several curiosity seekers straggled out after the sergeant left, but the majority of those that did leave before the meeting ended left after a unanimous vote was taken to support Steve Smith and his courageous, selfless action;

(3) "the obviously irrelevant questions" which were asked of the soldier followed his statement that "no one has the right to take a stand against what the Government believes is right."

To questions resulting from this statement the soldier said that he would have accepted the law of Nazi Germany. How relevant is this? In conclusion, I seriously question the condition of a society in which a "leading citizen" of the community blindly refutes and accuses the only newspaper that factually reported an important and widely discussed event.

This is especially frightening when one recalls that less than a year ago the press and public often spoke of the Viet Nam disgrace as "McNamara's War."

Where are the conscientious newsmen and columnists today? Have they all (except Jon Van and his DI staff) been swept up in the steamrolling consensus sought by the Johnson Administration?

Witness calls Smith 'sincere'

To the Editor:

As one who was witness to the burning of the draft card at Soapbox Soundoff, I should like to say a word on Steve Smith's behalf. Before doing so, I want to make it clear that, A. I support the stand of the United States Government in regards to Viet Nam, and B. I do not generally support the view that an individual may break a law when it does not coincide with his own beliefs.

In this case, however, there is something other than political and legal overtones to be considered, and that is moral commitment — the "right" of personal integrity. It should have been apparent to anyone present that Steve was not acting impetuously nor was he merely trying to back up his words with an overly-dramatic gesture. And although I do not agree with what he did, I do believe that he acted in accord with what was right for him personally.

Innumerable arguments can be raised in opposition to what Steve did. My intent is not to argue either for or against this particular act. But amidst the cheers from his supporters on the left and the cries of "Treason!" from his opponents on the right, let us not lose sight of the underlying moral principle involved — the right of the individual to live with himself. To label this act "courageous" depends upon the sincerity with which it was rendered.

I believe that Steve Smith acted in all sincerity.

Draft cards more than paper

To the Editor:

This letter concerns the Students for a Democratic Society's support for Steve Smith. As was printed in the Oct. 21 issue of The Daily Iowan, the Students for a Democratic Society base their allegiance to Steve Smith on two factors. One is his moral courage to defend his beliefs against the United States Government the other reason is that they cannot possibly understand how the burning of a draft card can possibly lead to a five year jail sentence.

Oh, I give Steve Smith some credit for having the nerve to take on the United States Government, but I cannot see how the Students for a Democratic Society can say that the burning of a draft, as they put it a "piece of scrap paper," has no significance. This small card, however must have some importance, or why would the United States Government pass a law to prevent such an incident as Steve's.

But if everyone in the United States were around burning pieces of paper which they thought worthless or unimportant, could society in the United States possibly exist. The thing you know someone will burn the Constitution of the United States, and then what? Will the Students for a Democratic Society advocate that person because they do not understand why the Constitution of the United States is important?

Warren Displays Pencil Drawings In One Man Show

By DALLAS MURPHY
Managing Editor

Sometimes they are empty, angry, bizarre; sometimes erotic, inviting, sensual. They are exciting, yet somehow frightening. They are the people of Peter Whitson Warren.

Warren, a graduate assistant in art from Barrington, N.H., is displaying his people in a "one man exhibition of sorts" on the second floor of the Art Building. The exhibit opened Monday and will continue for about two weeks.

ALL THE WORKS on exhibit are done in dark pencil smudged and shaded from white to charcoal in an attempt to "get the feeling of a photograph."

Nearly all the drawings, especially the most recent, were adapted from magazine advertisements. Warren said in an interview that his favorite sources of inspiration were women's fashion magazines which "put women in the most ridiculous positions."

A single figure set in a landscape dominates each drawing. "IF IT WORKS, the figure is placed meaningfully in the landscape, and the landscape meaningfully affects the total work," Warren said.

These natural elements — flowers are most frequently used — often are out of proportion to the rest of the objects in the drawing. A girl, a car and a lily are the compositional elements in one drawing — the lily in the background the largest object. This out-of-scale representation is done to emphasize not only composition, but also significance, Warren said.

Warren, who said self portraits are easier to begin than are other works, has included several such drawings in the exhibit.

"SELF-PORTRAITS," he said, "are almost a formula for expression. I usually begin them when feeling elation or depression."

The Peter Whitson Warren who appears in the drawings has sharp, angular features, thinning hair, and a devilish expression. Why?

"Well, I guess that's just the image I have of myself," Warren said.

Though he uses what he calls "pop art subject matter," it is chosen for personal reasons — "sentimental or otherwise." Except for one or two pictures, Warren said his technique is not pop.

"THE POP TECHNIQUE" is anti-technique. It is often intentionally sloppy.

One of the drawings he considered "possible pop" is a portrait of himself peering around a poster. The other is of a girl in a space suit backgrounded by two large intertwining circles. Within the upper circle is an eye, and within the lower circle is a mouth — both belong to Beatle Ringo Starr.

Why Ringo's eyes and mouth? "I really couldn't tell you. They're just there."

CURVES, SWIRLS, and stars are patterns used throughout Warren's works. These designs, particularly the stars, were suggested by Jasper Johns, the leading exponent of pop art, according to Warren. Johns has used the American flag in many of his works.

Another recurring image is Warren's "Pop God" — a lugubrious being coiffed in a Louis XIV wig and usually found peering in windows.

Often the artist complements his drawing with poetry. He has been enrolled in the Writers Workshop, and he said he may enroll for another semester.

Warren, who is working toward an MFA degree, said he expects to teach art. He is now an assistant in life drawing under James Lechay, resident professor of art. Lechay suggested that Warren exhibit his drawings and helped select the works for display.

HE'S NO PIGEON—

He came home one day to find all of them gone. He scoured the city until he discovered what he claimed were his pigeons in a bird shop. Not so, the shopkeeper insisted. The boy took the case to court.

CSL Probes Greek Bias; Report Due In November

Possible discriminatory practices of sororities and fraternities at the University are being investigated by a subcommittee of the Committee on Student Life (CSL). Allan D. Vestal, professor of law and chairman of CSL, said Wednesday.

The subcommittee will report its findings to the full CSL committee at its next meeting, Nov. 11, Vestal said.

The CSL ruling, which states that Greek housing units must show free choice of membership without discrimination according to race, color or creed, went into effect Oct. 1.

Milton E. Rosenbaum, associate professor of psychology, chairman of the subcommittee, said Wednesday that his committee had met with Sigma Chi fraternity once and would probably meet with them again. Sigma Chi is not the only group involved, he added.

Monday night the Sigma Chi chapter at Brown University at Providence, R.I., was directed by that university to sever its ties with the national fraternity. Brown University officials maintained that the national constitution of Sigma Chi permits discriminatory practices.

Door Fire Trial Delayed

Eighteen Alpha Tau Omega fraternity students who were charged with "setting fires near a building" in connection with the Oct. 16 burning of the Beta Theta Pi house front door were given a one week's continuance in police court Wednesday morning.

Freshman Cage Squad Cut

Assistant basketball coach Lanny Van Eman is facing one of the same problems with the freshman squad as coach Ralph Miller is with the varsity, what to do with everybody.

There were 22 candidates on hand Monday afternoon when practice began. By Wednesday Van Eman had cut the number to 15, but that was still too many.

Even though he dislikes cutting the squad, it will probably be reduced to 12.

Of the 12 most likely candidates none is under six feet tall. The shortest is Larry Johnson from Dartmouth, Mass. He stands exactly six feet.

The tallest man on the squad is 6-8 Vic Rogers who hails from Antioch, Ill.

Rogers is also one of four freshmen on scholarship. The others are Fred Crum, 6-4, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Chris Phillips, 6-3, Sac City; and Ron Norman, 6-3, Freeport, Ill.

Phillips was on the Iowa all-state team last year, while Norman made the all-Illinois squad. Van Eman reports that no regular schedule has been planned for the freshmen, but they will play preliminary games when the Hawkeyes are home.

This would mean that the frosh could have a 12 game schedule. At present the most likely opponents for these games will be the bottom half of the varsity squad.

Miller has about seven players on the varsity who will not dress for games and these players will form the equivalent of a junior varsity team.

Food Poisoning Hits ISU Foes

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — More than half of Oklahoma State's traveling football squad was out of action a day or two this week and it was believed they had a virus, but it was announced Wednesday the gridders definitely had suffered food poisoning.

Coach Phil Cutchin said 24 had been affected but all are now "very satisfactory" and worked out Wednesday for next Saturday's Big Eight game at Iowa State. Their symptoms had been headaches and vomiting.

William Tells

By BILL ZORTMAN

Move over Mets. . . . They said it couldn't be done — they said even the Cardinals couldn't do it but son-of-a-gun if they didn't.

In 1964 the high-flying Birds not only were World Champions but they had the starting infield for the National League in the all-star game.

At that time St. Louis general manager Bing Devine said that his infield was not only worth a million dollars but the greatest ever assembled on the diamond. What an infield on defense with Bill White at first, Julian Javier at second, Ken Boyer playing third, and Dick Groat at short.

On October 27th $750,000 worth of that infield is playing for different beer drinking fans.

In the first trade last week the National League's most valuable player of 1964, Boyer, was sent to the Mets for hard-throwing southpaw Al Jackson and third-baseman Charlie Smith.

But why not trade the third-baseman who was given the Golden Glove by Rawlings Sporting Company. After all they're getting Jackson who will win with good hitting support behind him.

Seems that Bingie pulled a dingle with the same thought on hard-luck Roger Craig a while back, figuring he'd win with the Cards. Well, he did win, granted, but he was nothing but a sixth starter or an early inning relief man.

Before going any farther though lets tell you what the Birds flipped on to the Phils.

White, Groat, and reserve catcher Bob Uecker move to the city of brotherly love for southpaw (oh no, not another one) Art Mahaffey, outfielder Alex Johnson, and second string catcher Pat Corrales.

Card manager Red Schoendienst described White as "having an off year in '65." Well, Red, how many years did you hit .289, while driving in 73 runs and walloping 24 homers?

Then there's Groat who came to the Cardinals from the Pirates in 1962, after he had been the scape goat for Pittsburgh's downfall following a world championship club.

Dick led the Cards to the flag last year but sure as the world, he stumbles and get's out the bag to please other fans. There's a good chance he'll lead the Phils to pennant within two seasons.

But fans look at what the Cards got in return. Troublesome Mahaffey, who blazed his way to glory the past season with a 2-5 record and an earned run average of 6.21. Now there's an asset to any club.

Oh yes, they got 22-year-old Johnson, who in his rookie year hit .294 while hammering eight homers in the full season with half of the games being played in the crackerbox called Connie Mack Stadium.

With power hitters like that the pitcher could well bat clean-up. What can we say but, could be the Mets won't finish last next year.

Washington State Stunned Both Hawkeyes, Hoosiers

By STEU BETTERTON Staff Writer

When Iowa coach Jerry Burns gets to Indiana this weekend he can swap horror stories with the Hoosiers' John Pont.

Forgetting that both clubs have identical 1-5 marks, the monster to both teams has been Washington State.

Iowa got a taste of the west coast club in the season opener, and were shocked in the last minute of play with the only score of the game.

Indiana was shocked even worse last Saturday. Leading 7-0 with just 10 seconds remaining the Hoosiers intercepted a Cougar pass in the end zone and everyone prepared to go home.

However the Hoosiers were off side on the play and Washington got one more chance with six seconds remaining. Quarterback Tom Roth rolled out and fired another pass. Everyone in Indiana and Iowa knows the pass was good. The touchdown was actually scored after the clock had run out.

Then while the stunned Indiana team watched in horror the Cougars threw another pass for the two point conversion and won the game.

Arch Kodros, Iowa's chief scout, watched this drama unfold, and he says that if Indiana gets over their shock they will battle the Hawks all the way.

Kodros saw the Hoosiers earlier in the season against Minnesota, and commented that they looked like a completely different club last week.

Pont, in his first season at Indiana, has been experimenting with every game, and Kodros says it looks like he is starting to find the right combination. Last week was their best game.

Even then, there were three switches in the Hoosier backfield against Washington State. One of the changes moved 210 pound fullback Terry Cole to halfback.

Despite his size Cole is one of the fastest men on the team and the move left the fullback spot open for 202 pound Jim Smith.

Smith picked up 75 yards last week in his first start and Kodros compares him with Northwestern's fullback Bob McElvey. The other change last week moved Gary Toft to a starting role at the quarterback spot.

It is possible now that another backfield change may be necessary this week. Reports out of Bloomington indicate that John Ginter, a season long starter at left half, will miss this game with an injury.

In the meantime Burns has been holding closed practices and is presumably shuffling his lineup to try to provide better blocking by the offensive line.

Michigan State Mobs All-America Board

CHICAGO (AP) — It is getting to be a Michigan State mob scene when Midwest All-America football candidates are inspected.

Seven stars from the top-ranked Spartans were cited in the latest report of The Associated Press regional board screening candidates for the AP's honor team.

The list was headed by MSU's rover back, George Webster, halfback Clint Jones and quarterback Steve Juddy.

Also lauded were fullback Bob Apisa, receiver Gene Washington and tackle Jerry West from the Spartan offensive array, plus defensive center Ron Goovert.

Before Michigan State's 14-10 comeback victory over Purdue last Saturday, such other Spartan defensive stars as 268-pound end Bubba Smith and 286-pound middle guard Harold Lucas were commended by the board.

Holding their own on the All-America checklist are such standouts as two-way lineman Dick Arrington and Safety Nick Rassas of fourth-ranked Notre Dame; quarterback Bob Griese, defensive tackle Jerry Shay and offensive tackle Karl Singer of No. 6 Purdue; linebacker Ike Kelley and fullback Tom Barrington of Ohio State; and fullback Jim Grabowski of Illinois.

Nelson Goes To Celtics

Don Nelson, former Iowa basketball star, was acquired by the Boston Celtics from the Los Angeles Lakers for $1,000.

Nelson comes originally from Rock Island, Ill., and joined the National Basketball Association with Chicago, then moved to Baltimore with the franchise. He was traded to Los Angeles in 1963.

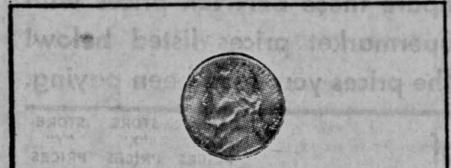

Nelson is 25 years old, 6'6" tall, and weighs 210 pounds. He will play corner man for the Celtics, whom he joins Friday. He started at center for two years for Iowa.

Iowa State Drills On Fundamentals

AMES (AP) — Iowa State Coach Clay Stapleton doled out a heavy diet of fundamentals, including blocking and tackling, Wednesday as the Cyclones got ready for their Big 8 homecoming football game with Oklahoma State Saturday.

The 90-minute drill included a lengthy no contact scrimmage for the defense working against freshmen and reserves running Cowboy plays, and work on pass protection for quarterback Tim Van Galder.

This will be the eighth homecoming game for the Cyclones under Stapleton.

DARN RIGHT YOU NEED THIS JOB... YOU'VE GOT OVER 1,000,000,000 MOUTHS TO FEED!!

That's right — 1.3 billion to be exact. By 1980 it is predicted that world population will have increased to at least that many.

And, as usual, the U.S. farmer will fall heir to the burden of feeding a lot of these people. Each day there are fewer farmers, with less workable land, to do this job.

That's where we enter the picture. We're in the chemical business. Agricultural chemicals. It's a big business and it's growing every day. More and more the American farmer, as he faces his new challenge, is relying on agricultural chemicals and the dealer who supplies them to help him raise his crops.

We need men who can sell—not just products, but new ideas and innovations as well—to these dealers. If your qualifications are right, there's both room and opportunity for you in this booming and ever-changing agri-business world.

Meaningful work? You bet! The quality and abundance of food and vegetables available in our grocery stores is evidence of that. American farming has thus met its challenge. Success in your job will be a further contribution toward keeping American agriculture leading the world.

This is more than just a job; it's a responsibility, a career that offers growth, variety, challenge, and pay based on performance. They're pretty big shoes, and we're looking for men to fill them.

Science of Tomorrow. That's right! Farming will be one of the most important sciences of tomorrow. The agricultural chemical industry is vital to American agriculture in helping to meet the challenge of a rapidly expanding population and an ever-dwindling farmable land area.

But you don't have to be a scientist. Whatever your major, if you can work well and successfully with people toward a mutually beneficial program—and if you want to be a part of a challenging and changing industry—we would like to hear from you. (We are an equal opportunity employer.)

Start at "GO"! Training for a career in agricultural chemical sales takes get-up-and-go on your part. To prepare for your role in agri-business, you receive six months' formal training—the first five weeks at the San Francisco Home Office. This includes company familiarization, product orientation and general study of entomology, agronomy, accounting, and salesmanship. Then you are assigned to one of nine sales regions for five months of on-the-job training in all of these aspects of ag-chemical marketing.

After successful completion of training, you are assigned to a territory of your own as one of a 5-8 man team reporting to a Branch Sales Manager. His job is to see that his men—particularly the new men—get all the training and help they need to be successful in their career.

On the Job: In addition to your salary, you are provided with a car and business expense account. The company's employee benefits plan provides a comprehensive package ranging from paid vacations and holidays to life insurance, medical care, and retirement. The company's educational refund plan encourages further self-development in employees who desire it.

Quarterback Is Strong Spot On Frosh Football Squad

As the college football kindergarten season rolls on for the Iowa freshman team their coach, Gary Fletcher, says they are making good progress.

Freshman football is not basically for playing, it is a learning period, and now evidence is appearing that the lessons are taking.

Right now Fletcher feels that the quarterback spot is the strongest. Four capable candidates are learning the intricacies of the Iowa offense.

The four are Dave Smith, Steve Wilson, Denny Noe, and Ed Podalak.

Smith, at 6-3 and 215, is also being tried at the fullback spot and Wilson has been impressive as a defensive back.

Another player getting a good look at two spots is Al Bream. Bream is basically an end, but because of his speed he has been learning the left halfback slot.

Two other ends are also standouts. Sterling Lavaag has impressed on defense, and Duane Grant is a possible two way performer.

The tackle spot is another position deep in talent. Four prospects have impressed Fletcher and his assistants.

Ken White, a defensive tackle, is possibly the best bet on the freshman team to make it quick with the varsity. He weighs 270 pounds, has surprising speed, and is strong as an ox.

The only thing which prevents rave notices is a history of knee trouble.

Three other promising tackles are Bob Tripanier, Tom Haugo, and John Evenden.

At the guard spot two former stars who played for Iowa coach Pin Ryan in Royal Oak, Michigan, are making their presence known.

Bill Roberts and Craig Irwin are the two boys who followed Ryan to Iowa City.

Two other pleasant surprises have been Rich Miller and Jan Willard. They differ from the rest of the prospects because they are out for the team on their own.

Nobody asked them to come out, and no one offered them a scholarship. However, they could earn one if things work out. Place Kicker Bob Anderson proved it could be done.

Miller is a fireplug guard from Hawaii who stands 5-7 and weighs 200 pounds. Willard is a hard hitting linebacker from Minnesota.

Practice ends for the frosh around November 12.

Big Ten Leaders Best On Offense

CHICAGO — Michigan State and Minnesota, deadlocked for the lead in the Big Ten football race, also are tied as top offensive teams in conference statistics posted Wednesday.

Northwestern, which tests Michigan State Saturday, surprisingly is the Big Ten's No. 1 defensive club. Michigan State is second and Minnesota fourth.

Both offensive and defense departments are gauged on comparative grading of points, first downs and yards per play.

Minnesota has averaged 23.3 points in fashioning its 3-0 won-lost record, compared with Michigan State's 23 in swinging to 4-0.

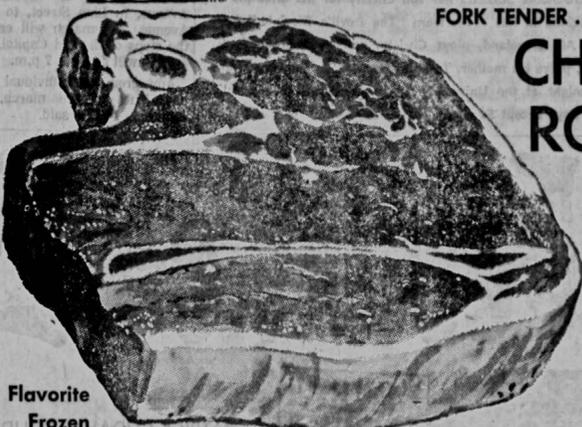

Over-all, Michigan State has such impressive statistics as most net yards rushing, 226.5 per game; over-all average gain 348.8; and a yield of only 1.2 yards per enemy rushing play.

Give Students Moral Support, Alum Director Tells Optimists

Loren Hickerson, executive director of the University Alumni Association, said that an attitude of non-involvement by adults toward spirited displays of feeling about their country by young people can be a greater threat to American solidarity than the activities of protest groups.

Hickerson told a luncheon meeting of the Iowa City Optimists club that, "If we are to keep the convictions of young people strong about American concepts of freedom as most adults see them, certainly adults need to support and strengthen young people who not only hold those same beliefs, but who display them in word and deed.

"If we stand on the sidelines as quietly when a student proudly proclaims himself a 'card-carrying American,' as most of us do when an anti-Viet Nam picket line is marching, we give little leadership to young people in general who want to believe that adult American convictions are strong and solid.

"If we allow the complexity of society to dissuade us from making even our moral support known to young people, who are in the public eye as examples of contemporary patriotism, we do our country a disservice.

"But the most painful disservice is to the young patriot who is fighting our battle where it matters most: among our young people, whose majority convictions inevitably will shape this country's attitudes and strengths a generation from now."

Douglas Answers Students' Queries

By PAT ASLESON
Staff Writer

The severity of a law is a measure for Congress to decide, Associate Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court William O. Douglas said Wednesday when asked if he felt the punishment for burning a draft card is too severe.

"The Supreme Court has nothing to do with the nature of punishment," he said, pointing out that the only restriction on Congress in determining punishment is the Constitutional phrase forbidding "cruel and unusual punishment" such as physical torture.

Douglas answered questions submitted in advance at a press conference at 4 p.m. Wednesday in the Union Board Room. STAN WITKOWSKI, G. Rockford, Ill., burned his draft card last Friday in protest to the law. In a statement to The Daily Iowan, Witkowski said, "The punishment is absurdly out of proportion to the offense. I feel the punishment violates Amendment Eight of the U.S. Constitution which forbids cruel and unusual punishment."

No action has yet been taken against Witkowski. Stephen Smith, A2, Marion, was charged Friday with burning his draft card a week ago. His case has been continued until Monday to allow him time to obtain counsel. Smith's reason for burning his card was to protest U.S. policy in Viet Nam.

Douglas said he believes acts of civil disobedience are in keeping with the American tradition.

"IN AMERICAN theory and constitutional law the citizen need not obey an unconstitutional command," he said. However, he added that the individual is not the ultimate judge and that in committing an act of disobedience he takes a "grave risk" that he may be found wrong.

Another question asked if Douglas believed the freedom of the country was being endangered by beliefs that made it great.

"This is supposed to be a society of dialogue. Freedom of the press and speech are supposed to reign. The whole spectrum of ideas should have validity as far as expression goes," replied Douglas. "I don't say all objectors are right, but they strengthen rather than destroy the American system of government."

ASKED ABOUT the acquittal of Collie Leroy Wilkins, Jr., charged in the slaying of a civil rights worker, Douglas said he did not know much about the particulars of the case. He said, "The jury is a human institution. It goes wrong sometimes, but by and large, over the span of time it has served us well."

Other questions touched on liberalism versus conservatism in the Supreme Court today, the criticism that the court is acting as a legislative body and the allowing of photos to be taken of trial proceedings.

Douglas said he found the terms liberal and conservative very hard to define and understand.

"POLITICAL DIFFERENCES between men disappear at the level of the court," he said.

Movement Buoying Negro

By SHEILA LUNIN
Staff Writer

The civil rights movement is making the Negro feel more of a citizen of the United States and teaching him to look upon himself and others as individuals rather than members of a particular group, said Frank E. Moorer, G, a faculty member of Rust College, Holly Springs, Miss., who is now attending the University.

As a teacher in the South, Moorer said he found his students much more concerned about learning and to have higher ambitions and goals than ever before.

These attitudes, which Moorer attributed to the work of the civil rights movement, extend into the community and the older people who are also more interested in education and in government, he said.

Moorer, who attended Oakwood College, Huntsville, Ala., and earned his degree from Rust College, finds that all education in the South is of a lower quality than in the North; but the level of Negro education is even lower there.

"What we need most are libraries. Children must start reading early, or they won't read later," Moorer said. "Ninety per cent of the Negro schools in Mississippi do not have a library."

Part of the problem of Negro education, Moorer said, is the teachers themselves who have been educated in poor schools and so cannot give the students the rigorous education necessary.

"We need teachers who will set the students on fire," he said.

There is a slow change for the better, he said, but in 1962 there were only 10 accredited schools for Negroes in 82 Mississippi counties in comparison with more than 60 for whites, Moorer said.

Only within the last two years have the Negro schools been evaluated fairly on the lists of accredited schools in the South, Moorer said. Before 1964, Negro schools were listed as "approved" and white schools as "accredited."

Moorer, who worked with voter registration drives and with SNCC, said although some of the people in the civil rights movement were permanent revolutionaries who needed a cause, many of them were dedicated individuals. "Personally," he said, "I resent only those few people who approach me with condescension. Some seem to feel that Mississippi is living in the Middle Ages and that the North is the promised land."

Moorer said although he had planned to attend Washington University, he came to Iowa City because he talked with John Huntley, assistant professor of English and member of MSP.

Moorer is working toward his masters degree in American studies and plans to return to Rust College to teach.

Moorer said he was surprised by the way in which "Iowa City seemed to arise suddenly from the cornfields like an oasis." Since his arrival, he has found the city and the University friendly.

MSP, which brought four students to study here this semester, is "helping the communication between campuses and between individuals; and, for this reason, is valuable," he said.

Moorer said he would like to see more faculty members of Rust brought to Iowa City so they could learn new methods of teaching and new insights into education.

Registration for the meeting is from 3 to 5 and 6:30 to 8 p.m. today, 8 to 9:30 a.m. Friday, and 8 to 9:30 a.m. Saturday.

The three-day conference features a number of distinguished poets and critics, among them Elizabeth Sewall, British writer and critic.

The public may attend, and the conference is free to all University students.

Air Force ROTC Will Host Meeting Of Society Units

Air Force ROTC Billy Mitchell Squadron will host an area Commander's Call for Midwestern Arnold Air Society units in the Union Saturday.

A social organization of Air Force ROTC cadets, the society is divided into several districts, or areas. Iowa City is the headquarters for Area F-2, which includes eight universities in five midwestern states.

Cadet Col. Kerry Alberti, B4, Lake Forest, Ill., is the area commander, and will be in charge of Saturday's meeting.

The AAS Squadron commander of each school and a member of his staff will attend.

OSWALD PLAY PLANNED—ROME (AP)—One of Italy's most prominent theater companies plans to do a play on Lee Harvey Oswald, assassin of President John F. Kennedy.

The play by Franco Brusati does not show the assassination, but ends with a scene showing Oswald at the window of the Dallas book warehouse from where the fatal shots were fired.

GENERAL WARNS CHINA—The vice chief of staff of the Army, Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, said in a speech that the Red Chinese marshal who referred to the United States as a paper tiger should remember the words of a Chinese ancestor: "He who seeks to ride the tiger does not dare to dismount."

Sampling Theory Gains Noted

Courts are admitting more evidence based on psychological tests of attitude and recognition than they were 20 years ago, said Norman C. Meier, professor emeritus of psychology.

Speaking at the Kiwanis Club luncheon Tuesday noon, Meier said courts were more and more inclined to accept or at least give judicial notice to surveys, as one form of evidence.

Meier said this was the result of steady advances in sampling theory and survey technology cases involving alleged confusion between an established trademark product and a copy.

In addition, courts may now be guided by a recent report of the Committee of Federal Court Judges on "Rules and Regulations for the Trial of Protracted Cases."

Federal Court cases since 1944 involving the validity of sampling procedures and techniques used to establish confusion.

In reviewing the cases that have occurred throughout the country, Meier told Kiwanians that the most interesting case was the Campbell-Carnation Company seeking to enjoin Armour & Company from marketing competing products in equally divided red and white containers.

21 Receive Health Unit Fellowships

Twenty-one students have been named National Institutes of Health (NIH) fellows for the 1965-66 academic year.

The fellowship program, sponsored by the U.S. Public Health Service, annually awards approximately 2,000 predoctoral fellowships for the research training of students in health and related areas.

The NIH fellows were selected on the basis of their academic records, letters of reference from professors, and the degree of interest shown in research. They were evaluated by a panel of consultants from the academic community and were given final approval by the Public Health Service.

The stipend for the predoctoral fellowships ranges from $1,800 to $2,200 annually, depending on the year of graduate study. In addition, fellows also receive an annual allowance of $500 per dependent and a travel allowance. All tuition and fees are paid by the Public Health Service.

The NIH program was begun to raise the level of competence and to increase the number of qualified research investigators, teachers and administrators in the biological, physical and behavioral sciences. Students working toward a D.D.S. or M.D. degree are ineligible.

NIH Fellows at the University this year are studying in sociology, psychology, microbiology, pharmacology, civil engineering, zoology, child behavior, biochemistry, chemistry and botany.

Youths Sentenced For Vandal Acts

CEDAR RAPIDS (AP)—Two brothers, arrested in connection with an estimated $10,000 in damage done to the Concrete Materials Co. sand plant, received jail sentences Wednesday.

David Gaal, 19, was sentenced to a total of 90 days on charges of possession of beer as a minor, failure to have his car under control and striking a fixture on a street.

Gary Gaal, 17, received a 30-day jail sentence on a charge of possession of beer as a minor.

A charge of breaking and entering against Gary and a charge of contributing to the delinquency of a minor against David are pending.

The brothers, a 16-year-old youth and a 13-year-old girl were arrested Tuesday in connection with the vandalism. The cases of the two younger persons were referred to juvenile court.

Iowa Monograph Available Today

"Rhetoric and Poetic," a University of Iowa Monograph Series publication, will be available at Iowa City book stores beginning today according to John E. Simmons, director of publications.

The publication is a 96-page, soft-cover collection of papers on the relevance of rhetoric in interpretation and criticism of literature, edited by Donald C. Bryant, professor of speech.

The papers were presented at an invitational conference held last November at the University.

The collection includes an essay, "Contextualism and the Relegation of Rhetoric," by Murray Krieger, who will give the opening lecture tonight for the opening conference, "The Poet as Critic," sponsored by the Iowa Center for Modern Letters.

Union Debate To Discuss Renewal

"Urban Renewal in Iowa City: How Will It Affect the University Student?" will be the topic for the Union Board Issues and Answers session at 3:45 p.m. today in the Union Yale Room.

This will be the first of the Issues and Answers series for the year.

Guest speakers will be Barry Lundberg, director of planning and urban renewal; Art Westerback, assistant to Lundberg; and Dale Erickson and Richard Feddersen, Iowa City businessmen.

The purpose of the discussion, according to Joan Wells, A4, Clinton, chairman, is to acquaint students and residents with controversies now being debated in the proposed urban renewal program.

"Urban renewal is a new concept," Miss Wells added, "which is in the experimental stage throughout the country. The program that is finally adopted will affect the student, non-student, and University-connected resident. A special invitation is extended to all Iowa City residents, since urban renewal is an important campaign issue in this year's election.

Coffee will be served during the discussion.

FORMER PRESIDENT Dwight D. Eisenhower, left, U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations Arthur J. Goldberg, center, and Thurgood Marshall, solicitor general of the U.S., answer questions of students in Mexico City, Belgrade, London and Paris universities during taping earlier of this week of the Town Meeting of the World television program. The interview was transmitted via Early Bird Satellite and was taped by the Columbia Broadcasting System for telecast last Tuesday.

Mountaineer Film Features Ancient World: Athens-Cairo

"The Ancient World: Athens to Cairo," a color film-lecture by Gene Wiancko, will be presented Sunday at the University.

The program, sponsored by the Iowa Mountaineers, will begin at 2:30 p.m. in Macbride Auditorium.

Tickets may be purchased at the door.

Wiancko, a graduate of the University of California, was a radio narrator, producer, writer and explorer before entering the motion picture field.

In the lecture he will take the audience through cities of today — Athens, Istanbul, Beirut and Alexandria — and through important cities of the past — Mycenae, Corinth, Delos, Knossos, and Damascus.

Wiancko will present the ways of life of the people in the area, including southern Greece, Turkey, Syria, Lebanon, northern Egypt and the islands of Rhodes, Crete, Cyprus, Hydra and Mikonos.

A member of the Society of Exploration Geophysicists, he worked in the field for 12 years. He was in charge of the 30-man exploration party whose work with subsurface seismic waves during a 40-degree-below zero Arctic winter led to the discovery of the world's northernmost gas field at Point Barrow, Alaska. Further information on the Iowa Mountaineers Film-Lectures series may be obtained by writing P.O. Box 163, Iowa City.

Pamphlet Gives University Males Coed Information

It's out at last. It's something many of the male members on campus have been waiting for. The pictures, majors, years, addresses, hometowns and phone numbers of all this fall's sorority pledge classes.

Sigma Delta Chi (SDX), national professional journalistic society, has compiled this information into a book called "Peticoat Pamphlet."

"Peticoat Pamphlet" appears this year for the first time, but members expect it will become an annual money-making project. Pictures for the booklets were taken earlier this fall at the Pledge Prom by Mike Toner, A4, Humboldt, and Lawrence P. Felstein, A4, White Plains, N.Y.

SDX members and members of Theta Sigma Phi, national professional journalism fraternity for women, will call on residents of University housing units to sell the 50-cent booklet. Copies may also be purchased from any of the groups' members.

Ron Schlecta, A4, Denison, editor of the publication and president of SDX, says he hopes the pamphlet will become a tradition on campus.

Schlecta says many of the booklets have been sold to the girls featured in it. It's a good way to remember the pledge classes, he says.

Estate Dispute Raised

The Iowa State Bank and Trust Co. of Iowa City, administrator of the estate of Phillip Stephen McLaughlin, filed suit in district court Tuesday asking $26,496 in damages from Thomas F. Hayne Jr. and Phillip A. Lefk, administrators of the estate of Frederic J. Cooke, as a result of an automobile accident April 11.

Both McLaughlin, 23, and Cooke, 39, were killed when the vehicles collided. The suit alleges that Cooke drove in a negligent manner.

Ford Motor Company is:

challenge

Dale Anderson
B.A., Wittenberg University

At many companies the opportunity to work on challenging projects comes after many years of apprenticeship and a few grey hairs. Not so at Ford Motor Company where your twenties can be a stimulating period. There are opportunities to prove your worth early in your career. Dale Anderson's experience is a case in point.

After receiving his B.A. in Physics in June, 1962, Dale joined our College Graduate Program and was assigned to our Research Laboratories. Recently he was given the responsibility for correcting cab vibration occurring on a particular type of truck. His studies showed that tire eccentricity was the cause of the trouble. Since little change could be effected in tire compliance, his solution lay in redesigning the suspension system. Tests of this experimental system show the problem to be reduced to an insignificant level.

That's typical of the kind of meaningful assignments given to employees while still in the College Graduate Program—regardless of their career interest. No "make work" superficial jobs. And, besides offering the opportunity to work on important problems demanding fresh solutions, we offer good salaries, a highly professional atmosphere and the proximity to leading universities.

Discover the rewarding opportunity Ford Motor Company may have for you. How? Simply schedule an interview with our representative when he visits your campus. Let your twenties be a challenging and rewarding time.

Bloodmobile To Be Here Next Month

DUBUQUE (AP) — A center to receive mass blood donations for U.S. casualties in Viet Nam being planned by Loras College students.

The program, sponsored by the Veterans Club at Loras, will consist of blood donations for wounded U.S. servicemen. Sponsors said Wednesday it is aimed at a slap at demonstrations against the war by other college students across the nation.

Thomas J. Rhombert, chairman of "Operation Blood Brothers," said: "We are hoping for a chain reaction among American college students to show the boys in Viet Nam that we are behind them."

No date for the operation has been set by the club, still waiting clearance of proposed dates from the American Red Cross which would help on the project.

Red Cross personnel would set up blood tests to type the donors, help fill out donor information cards and collect the blood. Students would donate their blood at the college. Invitations to participate have been sent to all Dubuque colleges and institutions of higher learning.

Residents of the city who wish to participate in the program could register at a booth the club hopes to set up in downtown Dubuque.

Specific plans for public involvement in the program will be announced later. Club officials said they hope the public can participate in Veterans Day Nov. 11.

Ozark Promises Improved Flights To Windy City

Starting Sunday, Ozark Air Lines will be using Martin 404s instead of the smaller, less modern DC-3s on the morning flights from Iowa City to Chicago and the evening flights from Chicago. Company representatives said Tuesday that Ozark planned to have all propeller planes replaced by jets and prop-jets within two years if financing now being negotiated can be completed successfully.

Ozark suggested the lengthening of runways at the Municipal Airport so that the airport could handle all flights on a full-load basis. According to Henry W. Louis, chairman of the Airport Commission, "Iowa City may be faced with three alternatives. We could find that it isn't necessary to lengthen the runways. We could lengthen them, or we could lose our airline service."

DAVID L. MCKINNEY
 Advice available for fraternity men.

New Man Offers Advice For Greeks

By JOYCE OLSON
 Staff Writer

Fraternity members in search of help on personal and fraternity matters can meet with a new adviser this year. He is David L. McKinney, a former military man with a friendly and business-like manner.

McKinney, who was appointed adviser of fraternity affairs in July, came to the University after earning a master's degree in business administration last June from Harvard University's Graduate School of Business Administration.

"I ENTERED the field of educational administration because of the importance of guiding young people," said McKinney during a recent interview.

"This is a challenging profession because one is attempting to influence the lives of people who in 20 years will be leaders of society and perhaps influencing the world," he said.

McKinney said his career plans were also influenced by experiences in the military service. He is a 1959 graduate of the United States Military Academy at West Point and spent three years in Hawaii while serving in the Corps of Engineers from 1959 to 1963.

AS THE ADVISER of the University's 19 social fraternities, McKinney counsels the groups on financial operations, social programs, scholastic performance and rush activities. He said his office also keeps books for several sororities and professional fraternities.

When asked about his job, McKinney said, "I think the chief responsibility of a fraternity adviser is to provide leadership and guidance. I hope to work closely with individual fraternity house problems and members as well as with the Inter-Fraternity Council and house leaders this year."

BECAUSE he is new to this campus, McKinney prefers not to comment on the University of Iowa Greek system.

McKinney, who succeeds former fraternity adviser Eldridge Roark, is a native of Woodbine.

He attended Iowa State University before going to West Point. At ISU, he was treasurer and president of Sigma Phi Epsilon social fraternity.

The University of Iowa Libraries

"SOMNAMBULIST" IS THE TITLE of this sculpture in wood, cloth, metal and plaster by Robert Cremean, California artist whose works will be shown in the main gallery of the Art Building beginning Sunday. This work will be among 37 sculptures in the Cremean exhibition.

'Unique' Sculpture Exhibit Opens Sunday

Sculptured figures suggesting human activity will comprise the University's second major art exhibition of 1965-66 which opens Sunday in the Art Building Main Gallery.

Thirty-seven works by Robert Cremean, a young California sculptor, are placed on pedestals suggesting chairs, tables, beds, and hobby-horses to create a human environment.

THE CREMEAN figures range in height from a few inches to more than six feet and are made of laminated wood, bronze, metal, cloth and plaster. The figures were created by Cremean in the last ten years.

Humbert Albrizio, professor of art, who arranged the Cremean show in the Main Gallery, has called the exhibition "provocative and unique" and Cremean's form and material "intriguing."

The show will be interesting to all art lovers, Albrizio says, and should have special value for students of sculpture.

CREMEAN USES varied themes including several from literature, according to Miss Rosalin Wholden, visiting lecturer in art.

She said that both negative tragic feelings and positive joyful concepts might be seen in Cremean's works.

Cremean presents some figures in stocks reminiscent of Puritan days. Other sculptures such as "Jumping," "Running," and "Flying," suggest a joyful mood.

Many of Cremean's sculptures appear to have been through disaster, yet they seem very polished, said Miss Wholden, a former Los Angeles art critic.

VIEWERS can sometimes see the beginning phase of Cremean's works in exposed armatures or parts of wooden masses left in the early stages of carving. However, Miss Wholden said, the works do not seem unfinished.

Some critics have considered Cremean a surrealist because his sculptures may have a strange character and show surprising combinations of material in the same piece, according to Miss Wholden.

Miss Wholden also sees evidence of a strong social conscience in Cremean's sculptures. Cremean presents an "other worldly" feeling in the midst of modern dilemmas, she said.

A NATIVE of Toledo, Ohio, Cremean earned the B.A. and M.F.A. degrees from the Cranbrook Academy of Art. During 1965 he held a Fulbright Scholarship in Italy. Cremean has taught at the Detroit Institute of Art, University of California, Los Angeles and the La Jolla Art Center, La Jolla, Calif.

Cremean's sculptures have appeared in the Schneider Galleries and La Fontanella Gallery, both in Rome, Italy, and in numerous American museums and art galleries. Cremean was represented at the University's 1964 art exhibition, "Drawing and the Human Figure."

The Cremean exhibition will continue through November in the Main Gallery from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. through Saturday, and 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday.

Organized by the Esther Robles Gallery, Los Angeles, the exhibition is a traveling exhibit sponsored by the Western Association of Art Museums.

DO YOU HAVE TO BE RICH TO OWN 'BLUE CHIP' INSURANCE? and it's low in net cost too!

Not at all. Matter of fact, many Connecticut Mutual Life policyholders are tycoons-in-the-making who still have to make every dollar count.

Which may be the very reason they gave the nod to CML. Men who analyze and compare policies and companies find telling advantages in 'Blue Chip' insurance. Money-saving benefits. For example, Connecticut Mutual's higher dividends to policyholders result in low net cost insurance. Connecticut Mutual's agents are career men, professionally trained to recommend the insurance plan that best fits the client's needs and income. And Connecticut Mutual's unusually wide choice of policies (over 50) and range of benefits (over 90) snugly fit the coverage to the need.

You'll find—if you look—you don't have to be rich to own 'Blue Chip' insurance. Just astute.
