India-Pakistan Talks Resume

TASHKENT, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin got the stalled India-Pakistan conference back in motion Friday but a solution to the smoldering quarrel still was elusive.

President Ayub Khan of Pakistan and Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri of India conferred privately twice for a total of about one and one-half hours for the first time since Wednesday.

They were still deadlocked on Kashmir, the heart of 18 years of strife and bloodshed, but were authoritatively reported considering minor issues in an attempt to reduce tension.

India and Pakistan twice went to war over Kashmir, a garden spot of mountains and lakes high in the Himalayas, and a continual fear of escalation to a third round surrounds the Tashkent conference.

Kosygin, who formed the sole link between Ayub and Shastri on Thursday, spent more than three hours with the Indian leader Friday. There was no explanation why he did not meet Ayub.

Shastri insists Kashmir is part of India and that he will not negotiate its status. Pakistan, which holds two-fifths of Kashmir, demands a plebiscite.

Kosygin, despite five days on the job, does not appear to have budged either Shastri or Ayub.

There were reports Shastri and Ayub had sidestepped the issue and were talking about exchange of prisoners taken in the three-week war between India and Pakistan in September last year. They also discussed the return of ships and cargo seized by both nations.

Peace Hopes Slim, Senate Team Says

No Quick Answer To Viet War Seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Mike Mansfield and his fact-finding team said Saturday the fighting in Viet Nam will escalate toward "general war on the Asian mainland" if peace efforts fail. They said chances of a just, negotiated settlement are very slim.

The panel of five senators, led by Mansfield of Montana, the Senate Democratic leader, said whatever the course — battlefield or peace conference — "a rapid solution . . . is not in an immediate prospect."

DESPITE the massive U.S. troop buildup of the past seven months, the bipartisan team reported, the over-all situation in South Viet Nam stands much as it did a year ago.

"What was controlled then by the Viet Cong is still controlled by the Viet Cong," their report said.

Their grim report on a 35-day, 30,000-mile mission — a journey President Johnson urged Mansfield to undertake — came as the administration pressed its publicized peace offensive.

The report did not mention the globe-circling diplomatic missions nor the lull in bombing of North Viet Nam targets ordered by Johnson. The senators returned to the United States Dec. 18, before the current peace offensive began.

But it did include this comment on peace overtures aimed at Hanoi through other capitals:

"Even though other nations . . . may be willing to play a third-party role in bringing about negotiations, any prospect for effective negotiations at this time, and they are slim, are likely to be largely dependent on the initiative and efforts of the combatants."

JOHNSON HAS been described as confident that his peace offensive messages to capitals around the world are being relayed to the Communist regime in Hanoi.

In addition to Mansfield, the traveling senators included Democrats Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, and Republicans George D. Aiken of Vermont and J. Caleb Boggs of Delaware.

While they journeyed to 13 capitals in Europe and Asia, the report they made in public dealt only with the war in Viet Nam. It was titled: "The Viet Nam Conflict: The Substance and the Shadow."

The senators said there is no reason to think that the Soviet Union is anxious to play a significant role in peace efforts.

RUSSIAN troubleshooter Alexander Shelepin went to Hanoi Thursday, and some Western governments are hopeful he will encourage the Communist regime to negotiate for peace. But Shelepin took with him Soviet experts on military production and rocketry.

The Senate panel discussed Viet Nam with Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin on Nov. 19. Their report had this to say of any possible Soviet role in the peace effort:

"They have emphasized repeatedly in public statements as well as in other ways that they have no intention of taking an initiative for peace in Viet Nam at this time."

And they said that as the war escalates, North Viet Nam becomes more dependent on Red Chinese support — and the likelihood increases that Hanoi will not be able to negotiate a settlement without at least the tacit consent of China.

"IN FACT," the report said, "that point may already have been reached."

Johnson wrote Mansfield Nov. 7 that "it would be helpful to have the firsthand observations" of Mansfield and other lawmakers on a mission abroad. "I do hope you will see your way clear to undertake this mission," Johnson said then.

However, the White House insisted "it was not a presidential mission."

Peace Effort Shows Promise, Schmidhauser Tells Group

By MORRY ALTER, Staff Writer

Rep. John Schmidhauser (D-Iowa) said Friday he believes the current administration peace offensive has begun to yield some small but promising results.

The first district congressman conveyed his opinion at two appearances Friday, first at a meeting that had been billed to discuss the accomplishments and future work of the 89th Congress, and later at the Viet Nam peace vigil being conducted at the Unitarian Universalist Library.

AT SCHMIDHAUSER'S first appearance, sponsored by the Young Democrats and the Political Science Discussion Club (PSCD), he said two factors indicated the United States was serious in its efforts for peace and other nations were beginning to recognize its sincerity.

One of the factors, Schmidhauser said, was Arthur Goldberg's decision to leave the Supreme Court to devote himself to the United Nations and the search for peace.

"And concerning outside reaction to our efforts," said Schmidhauser, "there is a group of African nations that are no longer aligned with Peking."

Schmidhauser said he was not implying that because these countries were no longer "pro-Peking," they were automatically "pro-United States."

"I AM SAYING," he said, "the signs are hopeful."

He told PSCD and Young Democrat listeners that the amount of domestic legislation to be handled by the coming session of Congress would depend on the outcome of the present efforts at achieving peace in Viet Nam.

Later in the peace vigil, one participant questioned the methods employed in the administration's peace offensive, referring to the policy of "placing diplomats on jetliners and dispatching them with all the world watching various points on the globe."

SCHMIDHAUSER replied, "In view of some of the recent rebuffs we have experienced through normal diplomatic channels, I feel the present policy reflects that those efforts have not born fruit."

"I just can't imagine Arthur Goldberg and the people involved in the offensive doing this for effect."

During Friday's one hour vigil, the group agreed to send telegrams at regular intervals to President Johnson asking for his continued effort to achieve peace in Viet Nam and informing him of the participants' intention to stand vigil until such a peace is achieved.

Schmidhauser was asked if he thought such a telegram was a good idea.

THE CONGRESSMAN replied soberly, "Yes, I'm sure that the bulk of mail being received in Washington may be in a somewhat different direction. Schmidhauser signed the telegram."

The peace vigil, which meets daily from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m., concluded its first week Friday. Today the vigil moved to its new headquarters at Wesley House, 120 N. Dubuque St.

Fire Precaution On Campus Is Regents' Job, Says Bebee

Fire precautions in University buildings are the responsibility of the Board of Regents and the construction firms, according to Iowa City Fire Chief Dean Bebee.

A recent report revealed that the University classroom and office buildings do not have fire alarm systems, fire escape ladders or evacuation plans.

"State fire laws do not affect colleges or universities under the Board of Regents," Bebee said Friday. "I also do not have control of the state buildings. I can only make recommendations after my two inspections during the year."

BEBEE SAID that although he could inspect private building plans he could not see University construction drawings. Some firms will build safety precautions into new University buildings, he said, but other just want to improve the beauty of the buildings.

However, a citizen may bring suit against the state if the lack of precautions within a building is responsible for some injury to him, said Bebee.

"I didn't make any recommendations for alarm systems during my last inspection trip," said Bebee. "The Board of Regents needs all the money it can get."

"IT'S ALSO NOT feasible to have an evacuation plan," the chief said. "How many people would remember all their different plans for their week's classes? In fact, how many people know where they're supposed to go for an aid raid drill? The signs placed in a building usually tell you whom to call to find out if you can evacuate the building."

Bebee said that he could see improvement in the attitude towards fire prevention at the University. He cited the establishment of the office of University Fire Inspector about a year and a half ago as one indication of the growing University concern for fire precautions.

Another indication, he said, was that in the few buildings that have them, sprinklers are being tested for the first time. In many instances the treads on the sprinkler standpipes had been painted over, he said.

"AT LEAST IT'S a start," said Bebee. "It's a great improvement because now we have someone with which we can directly cooperate in the University."

The cause of U.S. actions immediately after the surrender of Germany in World War II, and the results of those actions was the subject of the discussion at the second session of the Colloquia on the Cold War Friday afternoon in the House Chamber of Old Chapel.

Methods of analyzing the actions of the United States and the subsequent results of those actions usually reduce the actions to a theory, Alan B. Spitzer, professor of history, said in opening the discussion. The facts of the case then become mere illustrations of the theory, he added.

ANOTHER method of analysis, he said, depends upon detailed examination of the documentary evidence which leads to the formation of a theory of blame. The result is nearly the same as the first method, he said.

"We must remember that the statesmen were acting under the influence of conditions existing at the time and that asking them to act on events six months in the future is impossible," Spitzer said.

A detailed explanation of United States actions from the time of the Yalta Conference to the Potsdam Conference with regard to Eastern Europe was made by David S. Gross, G. Orono, Maine.

THE PURPOSE of the United States actions and the reasons for the actions of the principal men, especially Pres. Truman, were the main topics of the general discussion which followed.

"Political views of people in the United States are often defined in terms of their attitude toward communism," Spitzer said.

This attitude, he said, distorts the objectivity with which United States policy in the Cold War should be analyzed.

Police Report

STABBING

Two 14-year-old Iowa City youths were involved in a stabbing across from the Iowa City Recreation Center Friday night. One youth was taken to University Hospital; his condition was not available.

The second was still being held for questioning by the Iowa City Police Department at 11:30 p.m. Names of the two minors are being withheld pending completion of the investigation.

BOMB SCARES

Three bomb scares, one at the Zeta Tau Alpha sorority, and two at downtown movie theaters, were reported to the Iowa City police Friday by anonymous callers.

About 8:47 p.m. a man called the sorority, according to police, and said that during the afternoon he had placed a bomb scheduled to go off at midnight in the sorority.

A bomb threat at the Varsity theater came about 9:40 p.m. and at the Strand theater about 9:55 p.m.

POWER LINE DOWN

Electrical power service in the area of Prairie Du Chien Road and the Forest View Trailer Park was disrupted Friday night when an electrical wire in the north end of town fell to the ground.

The downed line, which started burning when it hit the ground, was reported about 9:40 p.m. Repairmen of the Iowa-Illinois Gas & Electric Company were still working on it at 11 p.m.

In addition to Mansfield, the traveling senators included Democrats Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, and Republicans George D. Aiken of Vermont and J. Caleb Boggs of Delaware.

Group Views U.S. Actions After VE Day

On one stage?

IT IS IRONIC that Mike O'Hanlon, who describes himself as a "nonstudent" from Berkeley (he might just as well be called a "nonworker"), is going to debate Donald Johnson, past national commander of the American Legion, next Thursday on this campus.

O'Hanlon is the closest thing Iowa City has seen to an "outside agitator" all year. The local agitators have generally been considered adequate; (Iowa leads the nation in draft card burnings).

Johnson, on the other hand, has often been a self-proclaimed critic of the nation's universities since he took office as national commander in 1964. (He may have been just as critical before then, but no one listened.) Most problems which have attracted Johnson's attention he has laid to outside trouble-makers. This was especially true of last year's Berkeley shenanigans, according to him.

Up to now most Iowa students have been out of the mainstream of things. That is, more of us have seen American Legionnaires than outside agitators, although neither species is particularly prevalent around Iowa City.

Thursday we'll be able to see both of them live on one stage for free. What a glorious opportunity it is. And the whole thing is sponsored by the Young Extremists; the sponsorship may be significant.

Quest for peace

PRESIDENT JOHNSON, as we have written, deserves tremendous credit for his present efforts on behalf of world peace.

Tuesday we stated that Johnson was willing to negotiate anytime, anywhere with anyone — including the National Liberation Front. We have received inquiries about this statement and will clarify it.

Administration sources have said publicly that the United States will negotiate with any team North Viet Nam sends to the table. This includes members of the Viet Cong. Some news correspondents with "inside" channels in Washington have said the Administration is willing to talk with a Viet Cong team which openly identifies itself as such.

Further evidence which points to Administration willingness to talk directly to the Viet Cong comes from the U. S. position presented to the United Nations. The only condition which President Johnson is holding back is the territorial integrity of South Viet Nam.

He even hints that complete withdrawal of U. S. troops would not be difficult to negotiate and that a neutral Viet Nam would be acceptable. He also insists upon the right of the Vietnamese people to choose their own type of government. This hints at an eventual Communist government in South Viet Nam — if the people there were to vote for it in a free election.

The President has made many mistakes in handling Viet Nam policy in the past, but he now appears to be acting moderately, wisely and honorably. He deserves the support of all who desire peace as he now actively pursues that cherished goal.

Commercializing

FRIDAY WAS QUITE A DAY for patrons of the arts. A show made up of nothing but commercials was shown at Shambaugh Auditorium.

On the face of it, this may sound a bit odd. But people who only watch television occasionally — as we do — can see this is the trend of the future.

With every season the regular shows become less interesting and more ridiculous while the commercials become more clever and sparkling. They are also becoming more numerous. Indeed, commercials are obviously the trend of the future.

B.C.

By DALLAS MURPHY

On a very windy day one year about 3,000 B.C., a group of poor Japanese fishermen in a small boat set about their daily business. Sadly for the fishermen, the Pacific Ocean became angry when it was plagued by a mighty typhoon.

The fishermen in the small boat on the angry ocean did not know a way to escape their predicament. They knew an ill wind would blow them no good, and so they let Nature take over.

And Nature did take over — she took them over the ocean. When all was calm again, the poor fishermen peeked from tear-logged eyes through brine-covered fingers and beheld the New World land of Ecuador. (It had no name then, however.)

Their boat was not in very good condition by this time, and so the fishermen (who were tired of riding anyway) embarked. They had no flag with which to claim the land for Japan. (Since they had only planned to fish, they had only brought nets.) They felt most unattractive.

AND SO THE POOR unattractive fishermen rescued their nets from the leaky boat. They also rescued some clay pots in which they stored the fish they caught. In order to protect the nets and pots from the natives, the poor fishermen buried their only valuables.

After years of considering the problem, the fishermen became resigned to American food. They could leave no records of their discontent

After years of considering the problem, the fishermen became resigned to American food. They could leave no records of their discontent because no one had yet discovered how to write Japanese. The poor fishermen died eventually, as all poor fishermen must do, and they were quite forgotten. Until this week when some anthropologists from the Smithsonian Institution unearthed those old pots in Ecuador.

The story of the poor fishermen was told in every newspaper, and suddenly they were famous. They made headlines. They had beat Christopher Columbus and even Leif Ericson to the New World.

OR HAD THEY? Nobody knew for sure. Chris and Leif had a large following. Some skeptical people didn't believe those pots were really Japanese. The burden of the proof falls on the Universities consider birth control pills

By DAVE POLLEN
Editorial Assistant

The big question facing college health services this past semester has been what to do about birth control information. At Purdue University, birth control information and pills are distributed, but each case is handled on an individual basis. A course in physical hygiene taught at Purdue explains basic birth control methods, and personal counseling is given to any girl who seeks it.

The health service says that it will prescribe pills, but added that the same pills may be prescribed for purposes other than birth control.

The University of Minnesota health service claims it has been distributing information and prescriptions "for years" without arousing attention. A coed must be married or furnish the date of a planned marriage, however, before the information is given.

AT UCLA, there is no standard policy on birth control information. The health service there maintains that it is strictly a matter of doctor-patient business. On other campuses of the University of California, similar policies are followed. In many cases, the health service will work with the parents and family physician.

In Massachusetts, the question of birth control is answered by a state law which prohibits the distribution of contraceptives. At the University of Pennsylvania, health officials say that a health service should be largely an outpatient clinic, and that matters such as birth control should be handled by private doctors.

A study of the "illiterate student" is being undertaken at the University of Illinois by the student newspaper, the Daily Illini. The purpose of the study is to find out where all the people who are flunking rhetoric are coming from.

ENGINEERING STUDENTS are traditionally considered the group most likely to fail rhetoric. But instructors in the University of Illinois' writing lab say this really isn't so. All else being equal, engineering students are no different than the average liberal arts student. The study maintains that the only difference is one of culture.

"Engineering draws students from limited cultural background, and from families where money is a prime consideration," said the researchers. "Liberal Arts gets people from a cultural background that isn't as motivated by vocational needs as the engineering student's."

The field found to be contributing the largest percentage of students to the Writing Clinic was law. According to the study, half the students in the Writing Clinic were referred there by the College of Law.

The largest class of students who fail Illinois' English Qualifying Examination are transfer students. Of these, the study has found that those having the most trouble with rhetoric at Illinois are the ones who have transferred from junior colleges.

All in all, the chairman of the rhetoric program estimates that 85 per cent of the University's graduates can "write at a competent level." He then added, however, "I may be optimistic."

OFFENSIVE PEACE

While the United States is asking "Who discovered America?" many other nations are asking, "Why did they bother?"

The airways of the world have been crowded this week with planes flocking to the world's capitals. Aboard the planes were American emissaries carrying a message of peace. (This is named a peace offensive.)

Hubert Humphrey, W. Averell Harriman, Arthur Goldberg and McGeorge Bundy were among those conducting the peace offensive on behalf of Uncle Sam and LBJ.

But, some countries — China, North Viet Nam, Russia — were of rude reaction, and the United States was more sinned against than sinning.

THE CHINESE official newspaper said it was "obvious to all clear-sighted people" that the United States was up to no good and was putting up a "smoke screen to conceal preparation for war expansion."

Moscow's Pravda reported that the United States plans to expand the war to Laos and Cambodia, and Hanoi called the peace offensive a "large scale deceptive peace campaign coupled with the trick of temporary suspension of air attack on North Viet Nam as a sign of good will."

Reports have it, however, that LBJ is not discouraged by the pessimistic reports and plans to continue his bid for negotiations.

LEAVE DRIVING TO US

The high-flying American emissaries apparently discovered the secret of travel this week. Though they may not have been totally successful in their missions, at least they got there.

New Yorkers were much less fortunate as the Transit Workers Union and the Amalgamated Transit Union went on strike, effectively strangling transportation in the nation's largest city.

WALKING, BICYCLING and skating became the order of the day for the millions of New Yorkers who ignored Mayor John Lindsay's plea to stay home. While busses and subways gathered dust, only an estimated 25 per cent of New York travelers reached their destinations.

TWU president Michael Quill added to the drama when he was stricken ill in jail. He was arrested for refusing to heed an injunction ordering a halt to the strike. Quill, who has a history of heart ailments, improved as the week wore on.

The transportation situation, however, didn't improve at all. Mayor Lindsay, who Quill has called a "juvenile" and a "pipsqueak," is said to be ready to offer the union a $32 million settlement. Earlier in the week he asked the union to call a temporary halt to the strike while negotiations were conducted. It was no dice in the union corner.

As of Friday, New Yorker's were still collecting unions.

Pianist Is Really Physician Who Started In Psychology

By JING-HAI WU Staff Writer

Attracted to beautiful melodies, a University graduate student changed his major from psychology to music. Then, after getting an M.A., he took music as a hobby rather than a profession, and became a doctor.

This is the story of Dr. Richard M. Caplan, associate professor of dermatology.

"Psychology is a thing of the past, music makes a marvelous avocation, and dermatology is my profession," Caplan said Friday. "I have enjoyed all three."

CAPLAN ENTERED the University in 1949 as a graduate student in psychology after he had received a B.S. in psychology from Iowa State College (now Iowa State University) at Ames.

Most of his classes were in East Hall, he said, and the tunes and sounds from the neighboring Music Building seemed to call him. Encouraged by the melodious voices, he changed his major to music after two weeks.

While in the School of Music, Caplan devoted himself to composition and piano. He wrote several songs, sonatas, and a trio for flute, clarinet, and piano. His master's thesis was a string quartet.

Instead of joining the professional field of music, he entered the University's College of Medicine after he earned an M.A. Caplan received an M.D. in 1955.

From 1955 to 1958 he was a captain in the U.S. Air Force. He began teaching at the University in 1961, after three years in specialty training in dermatology at the University of Michigan.

CAPLAN RECALLED that he started playing piano when he was seven. He earned some money by playing with dance bands when he was in high school and college, and occasionally still does.

He gave a piano recital in Des Moines at the age of 13. During his two years at the School of Music, he presented two piano recitals and often accompanied others at the piano.

Even while studying medicine, he wrote some musical comedy songs and presented them at "Panacea," an annual original musical comedy by students.

Caplan, as an amateur musician, is still active in music. Last fall he was the musical director of the Iowa City Community Theatre production "The Fantasticks."

After serving four years on the board of the Iowa City Friends of Music, he is now president of the group.

HE WILL accompany at the piano at a bassoon recital to be presented Sunday evening in North Music Hall by Patricia L. Carney, A4, Iowa City.

On Jan. 17, he will play piano in a sextet (with piano and woodwind quintet) at the Union. The performance will be in connection with the opening of an art show given by faculty members not belonging to the Schools of Fine Art and Music.

Caplan has four boys ranging from three to 10 years of age. His wife, Ellen, played flute in the University's Symphony Orchestra when she was a history student at the University.

85 Girls To Move Into Top 3 Floors Of New Dormitory

Eighty-five girls will move today into the rooms on the eighth, ninth and tenth floors of Carrie Stanley Hall, Miss Dorothy M. Leslie, assistant director of women's residence halls, said Friday.

The other floors of the 10-story women's dormitory will be opened as they are finished and furnished by the house-keeping staff, she said.

The dormitory, which could house up to 335 girls, is connected to Currier Hall by a ground level passage. Carrie Stanley Hall will have its own lobby, information desk and mailboxes when it is completed, but the rooms will be in Currier dining rooms.

THE GIRLS moving in are those who applied for Carrie Stanley on their original application forms plus 29 girls still living in overflow housing.

Other girls will be assigned rooms according to when they were recommended by their counselors and when they applied for room changes, Miss Leslie said.

For this semester, triple rooms will house two girls, she said and double rooms will be singles.

EACH ROOM has a closet with folding doors and about eight feet of space for each girl, a bookshelf with about three feet of room, a bulletin board, desks, beds and built-in bureaus.

A sink and a phone are in each room. A new addition in the rooms is a tack strip near the medicine chest for hanging pictures.

The study lounges on the north end of each corridor have windows on three sides and views of the Iowa River and the city.

EACH FLOOR will also have a kitchenette in the lounge and a separate pressing room.

Laundry and recreation facilities will be provided on the first floor when the building is completed. Television rooms will be on the second floor, which is one level below the lobby and, just off the main lobby on the ground floor.

Since the dormitory is not finished and workmen will be on lower levels, Miss Leslie said, the girls living in Carrie Stanley are asked to stay out of the unfinished portion.

"This is both for the convenience of the workmen and the safety of the girls," she said.

Johnson Heads Goodwill Week Fund Campaign

Workers in the Goodwill Industries sheltered workshop campaign will meet at 11 a.m. today in the Gloria Dei Lutheran Church to receive instruction and materials.

The campaign for individual contributions will begin Sunday, which has been designated Goodwill Sunday by churches in Iowa City, Coralville, University Heights and surrounding towns. The following week has been proclaimed Goodwill Week.

Col. Brooks Booker, chairman of the voluntary board of directors of the Goodwill Industries of Southeast Iowa, and the Rev. John E. Moore, director of the advisory board on the spiritual matters of the project, will speak at 8:15 a.m. today on WSUI.

General chairman of the fund drive is former American Legion national Commander Donald Johnson of West Branch. The goal of the fund drive is $75,000, which will be matched by state and federal funds available through the Hill-Burton Act and the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Viet Nam Debate Set For Thursday In Union

Michael O'Hanlon, who spoke against the U.S. involvement in Viet Nam at Soapbox Soundoff Wednesday, will debate the subject with former American Legion National Commander Donald Johnson of West Branch at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Union ballroom.

The debate is sponsored by the University of Iowa Young Extremists Club.

O'Hanlon, who is a member of the Berkeley Viet Nam Day Committee, will oppose Johnson's support of American involvement in the Viet Nam war.

Ads Entertain While Selling, Are Oasis In Vast Wasteland

By ALAN KOTOK Advertising Manager

Amidst that "vast wasteland" known as television, there exists a faint glimmer of creative imagination from the ulcer-ridden, traffic-snarled mass of glass and steel known as Madison Avenue, New York.

The advertising industry's showcase of television commercial achievement is a 40-minute film of the winners of the 1965 American TV Commercials Festival. The film, presented Friday in Shambaugh Auditorium, is proof that advertising can be stimulating, provocative, humorous, even soul-searching, and still be a powerful selling tool.

MORE THAN 1,500 entries were judged by the industry on consumer acceptability and salesmanship. The awards were presented according to product category, and special citations were presented to outstanding effect, such as film editing and musical score.

The film begins with candid interviews of suburban shoppers to get their opinions of advertising. This 10-minute segment is humorously and tastefully presented.

With the mood established, the viewer is led into the Wonderful World of TV Commercials. THE OVER-ALL Outstanding Awards were given to Polaroid Corporation's presentation of "An Afternoon at the Park." Others were Cole's "Scandal Suit," Alka-Seltzer's "Tummy," Good-year Tire's "When There's No Man Around," and Salada Tea's "Motor Cycle Gang."

The best political commercial award went to the Democratic National Committee's "Sawed-off," used in the 1964 campaign. The heavy emotional appeal used in this and other commercials produced in the campaign will quite probably develop into a trend in political advertising.

THE MAIN critics of advertising will be quick to point out that these commercials are not representative of the sometimes ill-natured, sometimes misleading advertising industry. I believe, however, that even though these are only a minority of the commercials, advertising has come a long way to be "ready for people," and the vast majority of the advertising industry is "stronger than dirt."

WEEKEND WANDERINGS

By SUE RICKEL Staff Writer

Many students experience a let down during the first weekend after Christmas vacation. And for others it is too early to begin studying for finals, which are still a month away.

So one way to fill the idle hours between Friday and Monday is to see "King Rat," a drama about a Southeast Asian prison camp during World War II.

It's the story of a con man who rules over and manipulates the other prisoners ruthlessly to his own advantage. An exciting film, "King Rat" is currently showing at the Englert theater.

An intractable goose is the scene stealer in "Friendly Persuasion," the Union Broad movie this week. The light, romantic comedy will be shown Saturday and Sunday at 4, 7, and 9 p.m. in the Union Illinois Room.

WORKS BY TELEMANN, Handel and Couperin will be presented by a group of 22 student vocalists and instrumentalists in MacBride Auditorium at 8 p.m. Saturday. The students, all members of the University's Collegium Musicum, have been meeting weekly since September to prepare this program. The Collegium Musicum is an organization devoted to the practice of old or unusual music.

Slides of Ecuador and Nepal will be shown Saturday night at 7:30 at the International Center.

As a child, Ogdin "Oggie" Frazier was a recalcitrant youngster who had better things to do than practicing the piano. After six months of formal training, Oggie dropped piano lessons, presumably to fall into the ranks of numberless adults who one day reminisce: "Well, I started lessons once, but I didn't keep up with them. I wish I had it to do over again."

That was 35 years ago. Today Oggie Frazier is one of the most popular and well-established musicians in the Iowa City area. Every Tuesday and Friday night he plays piano at the 19th Hole on American Legion Road and every Wednesday and Saturday he plays at the Coral Lounge in Coralville. In addition, he holds a full-time job as an eye photographer at University Hospital.

"I'VE ALWAYS wanted to do every job I do well," Oggie said in an interview Thursday. "That's the whole idea behind it. What exactly do you want to know about what I do or how I do it?"

Well, for example, he was asked what's it like to play rhythm piano in a night club till two in the morning, knowing that on three or four hours of sleep he's going to have to do precision camera work the next day?

"I've always had a tremendous amount of drive," Oggie reflected. "I'm so used to this gamut, I don't even stop to think about it anymore."

At the 19th Hole, the piano is up against a wall and Oggie sits with his back to the people who cluster around him. With his hearty, substantial appearance and a cigar hanging out of his mouth, a garter on his arm is all Oggie needs to complete the picture of the honky-tonk piano player of the 1920's.

OGGIE'S PLAYING is bouncy and lively, whether he's playing "Danny Boy" or "When the Saints Go Marching In." And when Oggie starts to sing, sooner or later nearly everyone in the place, even the fraternity-sorority couples sitting primly around the fireplace, start to join in. There is something about Oggie's grating, gravel voice that makes singing along with him irresistible.

"I think I like the sing-alongs the best," Oggie said. "The people really seem to get in the spirit of it and enjoy it."

Oggie doesn't even look at the piano. He carries on conversations and cracks jokes when he's not singing, and somehow, the piano keeps going strong all the time.

A few years ago Oggie was offered a position in the studio band of a motion picture company in Hollywood. However, he turned down this and another offer.

"I was born in Iowa City and I grew up here. This is where my roots are," Oggie remarked. "I've never had aspirations to make the 'big time'."

OGGIE GRADUATED from University High School in 1937. He didn't go on to college because "my parents didn't believe in it." While Oggie was a Seabee in New Guinea during World War II, he picked up some pointers on chords from a buddy who was an accordion player. From 1946 until last Dec. 20, Oggie had his own band. He finds solo work much less trouble and more enjoyable, he said.

He is a past president of the American Federation of Musicians, Local 450, here in Iowa City.

Lynn, Oggie's 23-year-old son, is a trombonist and is currently attending college in Los Angeles. Oggie lives in Iowa City with his wife, Karleen, and daughter Sandy, a senior in high school.

Group Art Exhibit To Open At Studio Gallery Sunday

The second show at the Studio Art Gallery, 119½ E. College St., will open at 1 p.m. Sunday.

The show, a group exhibit of work by Joseph and Genie Patrick and by David and Diane MacDermott, will continue for two months. It replaces a six-man show now on exhibit.

Patrick, instructor in art, and his wife will each show three paintings and six drawings. MacDermott and his wife, both graduate students, will show paintings, drawings and books of prints and poetry.

The Studio Art Gallery, operated by Geraldine Bishop, opened in November. It is a professional gallery exhibiting local artists' works for sale. The gallery is connected with The Little Studio school, where Miss Bishop is an instructor.

"I opened the Little Studio to earn money to allow me to paint. I have no skills besides art, and it was either the gallery or a factory job," Miss Bishop said.

Miss Bishop has shown work at the Chicago Art Institute; the Nevada Art Gallery, Reno; the Denver Art Museum and the Rubenstein-Serkes Gallery, Denver. She studied at the Chouinard Art Institute, the Chicago Art Institute and the University of Nevada and has taught in public schools for two years.

The show now in the gallery, opened Nov. 21, and is a collection of work by six artists ranging in style from representational drawings of heads to abstract paintings.

Catherine Tuminaro is the business manager of the studio and gallery and assistant to Miss Bishop.

Course Begins Monday For Secretarial Exams

The fifth of a six-unit course to prepare persons for the Certified Professional Secretary examinations will be offered by the University beginning Monday in 315 Phillips Hall at 7 p.m.

The course will be taught by Edith Ennis, assistant professor, department of office management-business education of the College of Business Administration.

Enrollment fees for the eight-week course are $25. Enrollment in previous units is not a prerequisite for participation.

Dance Group Will Perform Next Friday

The University Dance Theatre will present its fifth annual winter concert, "Discovery V," at 8 p.m. Jan. 14 and 15 in MacBride Auditorium.

Tickets are $1 and are on sale now at Campus Record Shop, the Women's Gym and Whetstone's. They may also be purchased at the door.

The Dance Theatre, directed by Marcia Thayer, instructor of women's physical education, has 40 members, who will all perform.

A Greek myth and lyrical and medieval music are some of the themes around which the 14 dances have been created.

A change of pace will be provided by 6 pantomimes, under the direction of Evelyn Stanske, 213 S. Madison St.

The concert has been choreographed by nine of the dancers. They are Ann E. Flora, A4, Iowa City; Nancy D. Johnson, G, Iowa City; Judy L. Strait, A4, Colorado Springs, Colo.; Sally A. Cox, A4, Iowa City; Sally S. Garfield, A3, Iowa City; Linda M. Musgrove, A2, Wichita, Kan.; Karen A. Pederson, instructor of women's physical education; Pat Anderson, Route 2, Iowa City; and Kathy M. Anderson, A2, Cedar Rapids.

Hawks Vs. Badgers Today, Northwestern On Monday

Badgers at 1:30 p.m. today and then return to Iowa City for a game with Northwestern Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Field House.

Since today's game will be Iowa's first conference game and is on the Badgers' home court, past records can be thrown out the window. Wisconsin is 4-6 so far, but has won three of its last four games, including a 73-72 victory over a fine Marquette team Monday night.

THE GAME is a key one for Wisconsin, according to assistant coach Lanny Van Eman. The Badgers could figure in the Big 10 standings, but are at a hump right now. If they beat Iowa they could be in the thick of things, but if they lose they might keep on losing all season.

"They don't have the power to win the conference race," said Van Eman, "but they're definitely a first division ball club."
Van Eman said Wisconsin was a better club than last year and they're playing a lot of new faces, basically sophomores.

He said their team speed was only average, but their rebounding was some of the best Iowa has seen. Wisconsin plays a rough, tough style of ball that concentrates on muscle rather than finesse.

pressure defense would be the big factors in the game, according to Van Eman.

"If we can play the game we want to, we'll be okay, but if we have an off night, then their rebounding can whip us," he said.
Van Eman rated the personnel on the two teams even. He said the key to Wisconsin's attack was Ken Barnes, a three year regular who lost his starting job a couple of games ago.

Barnes was second in both rebounding and scoring for Wisconsin last year and was called Wisconsin's biggest threat by Van Eman.

He scored 27 points against Pennsylvania, 25 in the second half. Against Marquette he scored 14 clutch points although his play was limited by an attack of flu.

BARNES IS A Pervall-type player, according to Van Eman, but is a much better rebounder.

Barnes was removed from the lineup when Ken Gustafson, the team's leading scorer, moved from guard to forward to make way for the playmaking of Dennis Sweeney and Paul Mornen.

Gustafson was the team's leading scorer and rebounder two years ago as a sophomore.
Joe Franklin will start at forward opposite Gustafson. Franklin is a slender sophomore and leads the Badgers in rebounding.

Franklin will be good, according to Van Eman, but he is a typical sophomore now.

THE BADGERS' center is Mark Zubor, 6'6", who led the team's scoring last year and was second two years ago. Zubor is not the best center in the Big 10, Van Eman said, but he's not the worst. He's smart and consistent and takes advantage of any errors the opposing post man makes.

When Iowa returns home to face the Northwestern Wildcats Monday, it will meet a veteran team that rates the dark horse title in the Big 10.

NORTHWESTERN has only 10 men on its squad, but eight of them are letterwinners and four were starters a year ago.

Last year Iowa managed to beat Northwestern 78-72, but only after four of the Wildcat starters had fouled out and Iowa had 36 free throws.

The Wildcats were second only to Michigan in rebounding last year. Assistant Coach Dick Shultz said their physical strength and willingness to mix under the boards will make them hard to handle.

Northwestern has been inconsistent to date and has a 5-5 record, but they held third ranked Vanderbilt to a 59-58 victory.

JIM PITTS, Northwestern's 6'8" center, makes the Wildcats tough under the boards. Pitts has led the team in rebounding for three years and led the Big 10 last year until he was injured with three games left in the season.
Pitts is brilliant on defense and blocks many shots and has developed into a scoring threat.

Last year's leading scorer, Jim Burns, is back, too. Burns averaged 21 points a game in the Big 10 last year as a sophomore. He has a good outside shot and is very effective driving the baselines.

After Iowa finishes with Northwestern it will have a week to prepare for a game with Indiana at Bloomington.

Colts' Boyd Will Pray For Matte, Himself

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Every time Baltimore's Tom Matte handles the ball against Dallas in the National Football League's Playoff Bowl Sunday, there will be a man on the Colts' bench chewing his nails and perhaps saying a silent prayer.
He is Bobby Boyd, the Colts' all-pro defensive corner back who will be thrown into the quarterback slot should anything happen to Matte, himself an improvised desperation signal-caller.

"It's been seven years since I played quarterback," the balding six-year veteran from Oklahoma said Friday. "I've never thrown a pass or called a signal as a pro."
"I don't think Matte's going to get hurt. I sure hope not. I'd do my best, of course, but I'd be much happier playing my regular position."

Matte, a halfback with negligible experience as a pro quarterback, had to step into the breach when the Colts' Johnny Unitas and his sub. Gary Cuozzo, were lost for the final two weeks of the season.

The rugged six-footer from Ohio State responded well, guiding the Colts to a 20-17 triumph over Los Angeles and a near-victory over the Green Bay Packers, who won the Western Conference playoff 13-10 in overtime. However, he stuck mostly to a running game, throwing only 19 passes.

NFL rules forbade the bringing in of a quarterback replacement in postseason games, so the job against the Cowboys is up to Matte — with Boyd in the wings.
