Gemini 9 Pilots Again Set For 3-Day Trip Into Space

CAPE KENNEY (AP) — The Gemini 9 pilots, veterans of launch day frustration, will try again today for three days in space and a 2½-hour walk in the skies. A late electrical problem was solved Tuesday.

It was an electrical abnormality that stood between the Atlas rocket and flight certification. It was traced to a loose connection, and was remedied.

The abnormality was the only element wrong in the flight check at 10 a.m. CDT today.

The astronauts themselves are ready to roar off aboard a Titan 2 rocket an hour and 38 minutes later.

Launch officials began their midcount checkout Tuesday afternoon — testing out all the Gemini systems.

Gemini pilots Thomas P. Stafford and Eugene A. Cernan crammed the last afternoon before their space adventure with mission reviews and flight rehearsals in a simulator spacecraft.

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — In their second free election in more than 40 years, Dominicans will elect a president today in the hope he can give them a government capable of solving their political ills and putting the nation on the road to economic salvation.

Hector Garcia-Godoy, the provisional president, said Tuesday that because of the election, efforts are underway to remove the

"There will be no trouble if the troops leave," he told a news conference, "because the Dominican people are ready to prove to the world they can handle their own affairs."

UNDER present procedures, the person could be committed to Mount Pleasant or receive a 30-day sentence in the Johnson County jail.

$6 Million Improvement Of Sports Facilities Asked

Students Would Bear Cost In Fees, Tickets

Students will have to pay cash for tickets to University football and basketball games next year if a new proposal to remodel the Field House and build a Sports and Recreation Center is approved by the Board of Regents in June.

The building and remodeling program, which would cost about $6 million, would be financed by a long-term loan to be repaid from student building fees, was announced Tuesday by Hugh E. Kelso, chairman of the University Board in Control of Athletics. No tax funds would be involved.

A PROPOSED new building fee would come from that part of the student activity fee — $5 a semester — now credited to the Department of Intercollegiate Athletics, Kelso said.

If the activity fee is converted into a building fee, students will have to pay directly for tickets to University athletic events, probably $10 for season football tickets, $5 for individual football game tickets, and $1 for each basketball ticket, President Howard R. Bowen said.

A second source of building funds for the recreation unit,

Bowen said, would be the plus part of the $10 a semester building fee that students have been paying for nearly two years to finance a new University auditorium.

OBSERVATIONS

Ironic Freedom

THE MEMORIAL DAY WEEKEND was filled with irony. A rookie won the Indianapolis 500. Hundreds died on the nation's highways while the automobile industry talked about improving car safety.

The most ironic of all was President Johnson's Memorial Day speech in which he said that South Viet Nam was moving toward a government that would increasingly reflect the true will of the people; yet Monday night a Buddhist nun set herself afire — the latest of five such immolations in two days — to protest the persistent military regime of Premier Ky.

While the nation patted itself on the back for preserving world freedom throughout the world, it continued to support an unpopular dictatorship that has refused to acknowledge more numerous pleas for a civilian government. While adhering to the principle of halting communist aggression we condone the fanatic actions of fascist rule.

The United States tends to overlook the atrocities of that fascist regime and to regard the Viet Cong and the overexaggerated force of North Vietnamese regulars as the total cause of oppression in South Viet Nam. If Premier Ky does not believe constitutional government should come to Viet Nam when the population wants it, we don't question his motives. When the population protests his authoritarian tactics, we don't see anything wrong with Ky's use of troops to smash the protests.

President Johnson refuses to pressure Ky into accepting Buddhist demands for constitutional government even when our country operates on the premise that the majority shall rule, and when it is known that the Buddhists make up 85 per cent of South Viet Nam's population.

The U. S. soldier serving his country in Viet Nam cannot be discredited because he is fighting for a just cause, and if he does not believe it, then he jolly well must keep quiet or face a court martial by his superiors or ostracism by his fellow soldiers. The American serviceman preserved freedom in both World Wars and Korea. He believes he is called on to do the same in Viet Nam. Patriotism is as strong as ever, but the government seems to corrupt the cause of patriotism, just as Nazi Germany did.

In his Memorial Day speech, President Johnson said the conflict in Viet Nam was confusing to many Americans.

You bet it's confusing. We are trying to figure out which is worse, a left-wing dictatorship or a right-wing fascist dictatorship. The critic wonders just what we mean when we seek freedom in Viet Nam while condoning the latter to defeat the former.

Fire danger

THE FIRE ALARMS AT THE MEN'S dorms Friday night created a dangerous situation, but the danger wasn't from fire.

When more than a thousand angry men are milling around at 2 a.m. for as long as they were Friday night, the chances for trouble are pretty good. While firemen checked every corner of both Quad and Hillcrest for the fire they knew didn't exist, thoughts of raids on the girl's dorms began breeding in the crowds outside.

A panty raid can easily become more disastrous than most of the men are going to realize. And the number of police on duty at 2 a.m. are not prepared to handle crowds that size. It doesn't take much for such a situation to lead from shouting to fist fights to a big bloody riot.

Police and fire officials should see to it that the men are allowed back into the dorms as soon as possible. The time spent searching the buildings is unnecessary; a fire too small to be discovered by the time the fire trucks arrive is potentially less dangerous than the men burning outside.

Built-in mediocrity

By DAVE POLLEN
Editorial Page Ed.

We heard some complaints recently from employees at High Away U about their wages, so we decided to ask the personnel manager there, Humphrey Applepolish, just why the employees were complaining.

"It's really quite simple," Applepolish said. "We just don't pay them enough."

"Why is that?" we asked, rather startled by his frankness.

"It's because our employees on the whole never bother to do a full day's work," Applepolish explained. "So we have to hire more employees to get a job done, or pay our employees over time, and this costs us so much that we have to lower wages all around."

"Why don't your employees bother to do the work they're supposed to do?" we inquired.

"Well, since they're all underpaid, a lot of them have to take two jobs to earn enough to support themselves," Applepolish continued. "So they're careful that they don't exert themselves so much that they'll be tired by the time they have to report to their second job. Besides, they know they'll get their hourly wage whether they do their job fully or not."

Somehow this all seemed awfully circular to us. "Why don't you have some system that would control your employees, and see to it that they were doing an honest day's work? Then you could afford to pay them better wages, which would discourage them further from wasting working time. That's the way all private companies work it."

But old Applepolish was ready for that. "I thought of that a long time ago. I wasn't born yesterday, you know."

"Yes, we know," we admitted.

"As a matter of fact," Applepolish went on. "High Away has a very elaborate system of control. One of the most complicated in the country, next to that of the federal government."

"Well, if it's so good, then why the problem?" we asked.

"I never said it was good. I said it was elaborate," Applepolish said. "It seems the people who are supposed to be keeping an eye on our employees don't really do the job. So we have to hire more employee-watchers, which cuts down their wages and just gives them more of a reason to work under par."

"So what High Away really needs is people to keep an eye on the employee-watchers, huh?" we asked, hoping to end this nonsense as soon as possible.

"But you have to get up mighty early in the morning to get the best of old Applepolish. 'Well I've thought of that too,'" he said. "And I even have inspectors to inspect the overseers who oversee the employee-watchers who watch the employees. But none of them do their jobs right either."

"Well you're in charge here, aren't you?" we asked. "Why don't you put a stop to all this?"

"I haven't got time to mess with all that. For what I get paid, it isn't worth my effort."

"Thanks a lot, Mr. Applepolish," we said, as we put away our pencils.

"Oh, just call me Hump."

Can't win

Everybody knows that dead men don't make good husbands, so Stefano Makridakes of Genoa, Italy, won't be allowed to marry until he proves he's alive.

According to The Insider's Newsletter, Makridakes' problems began with a wartime marriage in 1942 which soon ended in separation.

Later, he discovered that his wife, in order that she could remarry, had bribed four witnesses to tell a court that Stefano had been shot by the Nazis, because divorce in Italy, as everyone knows, is illegal.

Two years ago Stefano's former wife died, and he thought at last he was free to marry again. After winning a new love, he went to arrange for his marriage, only to discover that the action brought by his ex-wife proving him dead had never been annulled and, as far as the authorities were concerned, he is still dead.

U.S.-Aided Public Schooling Advocated For 4-Year-Olds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The extension of universal public education to all 4- and 5-year-olds, with broad federal support, was advocated Tuesday by a leading education commission.

"If such education were universalized, most children would reach 6 years of age with a level of development strikingly different from that which they bring to school today," said the Education Policies Commission.

"Most of them would probably resemble in general development and learning ability the children who come to school today from the most-favored homes. These are not necessarily the wealthiest homes. Rather they are those in which parents take the most responsible, rational and appropriate roles in the rearing of their children," it said.

The commission is sponsored by the American Association of School Administrators and by the National Education Association.

Although it said it was speaking for itself, the commission's prestige is such that its pronouncements carry considerable weight in the education community.

The National Education Association, its cosponsor and the largest education group in the country, is expected to consider at its annual meeting in June a resolution embodying the policy commission's proposal.

Graduate Student Gets NSF Grant For Dissertation

Ronald D. Hedlund, G. Iowa City, has received an $8,800 grant from the National Science Foundation (NSF) for support of his doctoral dissertation in political science at the University.

Hedlund is the first University graduate student to receive a grant in the new NSF program to help improve the scientific quality of dissertations.

The grant will be used to finance a study of public attitudes toward state legislators and will involve a survey of a cross-section of the adult population of Iowa. Work will start in June.

psychological data gathered by colleges and universities from 45,000 students established a definite relationship between records and students' later health.

Questions asked of the former students were mostly related to heart diseases and social habits. These were the results of the study:

Heavy cigaret smoking is the strongest single influence on health in later years. Smoking half a pack daily in young adulthood is associated with a 60 per cent higher heart disease mortality for all age groups.

Other factors affecting later health that were noted in the records were high blood pressure, obesity, short stature, early parental death, absence of brothers and sisters, low levels of physical activity, anxiety and depression, and scarlet fever in childhood.

An inverse relationship exists between participation in varsity sports and coronary death. The doctors have concluded that an athlete needs a strong cardiovascular system to participate successfully in sports in the first place.

Smoking Clinic's Work Is Reviewed

By ROBERT MURPHY
Staff Writer

Iowa City has several dozen fewer smokers today as a result of the Five-Day Plan to Stop Smoking, which ended last week at Mercy Hospital.

More than sixty people registered during the smoking clinic which was sponsored by the City Seventh-Day Adventist Church.

Elder Robert Goransson, pastor of the church and director of the plan, said 90 per cent of the smokers who attended the five group therapy sessions had broken the tobacco habit. About half of them stopped smoking after the first meeting May 22. Others stopped during the first or second day, he said.

According to studies made on past Five-Day Plans, 60 per cent of the group will still be nonsmokers after three years, he added.

THE AGE group of those who registered for the plan ranged from 20 to 65 years. Some in the group had smoked for only four years in comparison to some who had smoked for 35 years. More than half of the people who attended had been smokers for more than 10 years. The heaviest smoker who registered averaged three packs of cigarettes a day.

The five sessions featured filmed demonstrations and lectures by Dr. J. Wayne McFarland and E. J. Folkenberg, founders of the six-year-old Five-Day Plan. A local physician, Dr. Oscar C. Beasley, was a guest lecturer during the program.

The smokers participated in a planned physical fitness program that also included deep rhythmic breathing and a daily high intake of liquids.

SOME OF the participants said their food tasted better since they stopped smoking. Others said

Safety Head Asks $1 Billion To Aid Traffic

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The president of the National Safety Council said Tuesday that the number of traffic deaths in the nation could be cut in half, at least, by the expenditure of $1 billion more a year on traffic safety.

Howard Pyle said that if this money had been spent in the past year, the highway death toll would have been nowhere near the record figure of the Memorial Day holiday weekend just ended.

A total of 542 persons lost their lives in traffic accidents during the 78-hour period from 6 p.m. Friday to midnight Monday. This surpassed the previous record Memorial Day death total of 525 in 1963, which was a four-day weekend.

Pyle said the extra money could be used for "better management of the traffic flow and the principal elements in the system."

Specifically, he added, the money would go for such things as more traffic police, traffic engineers, improved traffic court systems, driver education, driver licensing and motor vehicle inspections.

Pyle said the $800 million a year now spent for these programs was "woefully inadequate" in view of the increased traffic flow the past few years.
