Resident Parking Banned In Dormitory Lot Next Fall

News in Brief

STATE REP. LaMAR FOSTER, (D-West Branch) sent his $10 ticket to a Democratic champagne dance and breakfast back to Democratic State Chairman Lex Hawkins Wednesday. Foster, who has announced for re-election, told Hawkins in a letter he "never had any use for champagne" and that breakfast at 2 a.m. is "pretty early for us country folks." The dance and breakfast in the wee hours Saturday morning, with each ticket purchased entitled to a glass of champagne, is planned as part of the Democratic state convention.

NEGRO LEADERS MET with Waterloo Mayor Lloyd Turner and the city council Wednesday and reached what a Negro spokesman called a "100 per cent agreement" on a statement of aims. One of the points of the statement was a promise of a complete investigation into the death of Eddie Sallis, 23, a Negro whose suicide in the city jail last week triggered racial unrest.

THE HOUSE VOTED 198 to 165 Wednesday to raise the ceiling on the national debt to $330 billion — $2 billion more than the present ceiling but $2 billion less than the Department of Treasury had asked. The action was taken over the almost solid opposition of Republicans.

DR. MARTIN LUTHER KING JR. and about 200 followers marched six miles Wednesday along a Mississippi highway on their way to the state capitol in Jackson. The march, which is scheduled to resume today, was organized following the ambush shooting of James H. Meredith Monday. No incidents occurred.

Council Accepts, Rejects Bids For 4 City Projects

The Iowa City Council accepted bids on two public works projects and rejected bids on two others in a special session in the Civic Center Wednesday.

L. L. Pelling Construction Company, Iowa City, was awarded the asphalt resurfacing contract for 47 streets. The company's bid was $205,500.32, just under the estimated cost of $206,700.

THE CONTRACT for paving 27 streets went to Metro Pavers, Inc., Iowa City, which submitted a bid of $285,860.01. This was well under the estimated cost of $299,000. However, the council directed the Engineering Department to determine the company's paving capabilities since the company was just formed.

Bids on a sanitary sewer improvements program and a culvert improvement program were rejected because they were above estimated costs of the programs. John W. Sammons Construction Company, Keokuk, submitted both of the bids.

A DELEGATION from the League of Women voters also met with the council to offer its view on urban renewal in Iowa City. The delegation presented a written "consensus" of the League that supported the use of federal funds on urban renewal as "the most feasible way to accomplish a long-range planned redevelopment of the central business district (CBD)."

The report continued, "The pressing need for more retail and office space; the need to relieve congested traffic flow and provide better access to the CBD; the need to alleviate saturated parking facilities; the unsound or substandard condition of 40 per cent of the public amenities; and the possibility that decentralized shopping facilities would de-emphasize the importance of the CBD were all important considerations in our decision."

NATO Ministers Set Compromise On French Troops

BRUSSELS, Belg. (AP) — NATO foreign ministers worked out a last-minute compromise Wednesday on keeping French troops in Germany after President Charles de Gaulle pulls his forces out of the Atlantic Alliance.

Then they ended their stormy two-day session with a communique saying the North Atlantic Treaty Organization "is as necessary today as ever" to preserve Western security.

Whether De Gaulle will leave his 72,000 men across the Rhine, however, still was not clear.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk praised the members of the council for facing up to unpleasant facts.

In a prepared statement after the meeting, Rusk said, "We have taken those hard decisions. And we have demonstrated that NATO remains an institution of vitality."

Buddhists Use Passive Type Of Resistance

SAIGON (AP) — Leaders of the politically active segment of Vietnamese Buddhism have turned to Gandhi-style passive resistance in their efforts to unseat Premier Nguyen Cao Ky's military government. They had obviously lost in a campaign of violence and Thursday even yielded a bit on the non-violent front.

At the northern Buddhist center at Hue, family altars that blocked the streets were ordered moved aside by a Buddhist monk Thursday morning to allow a South Vietnamese military convoy to pass. However ,the altars then were replaced in the center of the road.

Hundreds of altars had been placed in the streets Monday in protest against the Saigon government and certain American policies in Viet Nam.

The militant Buddhist monk, Thich Tri Quang, went on a hunger strike in Hue Wednesday. He declared that he would limit himself to water and juices until the government resigns.

Saigon's Buddhist Institute, under chairmanship of the moderate Thich Tam Chau, announced a policy of noncooperation with the government. At the same time it ruled out threats of further fire suicides, which stand at nine, and new street disorders.

Americans battled North Vietnamese regulars in the central highlands in the chief military action of the day as the Buddhist hierarchy shifted tactics in the play to wrest the Saigon reins from the ruling generals.

PARATROOPERS OF the U.S. 101st Airborne Division reported they had slain 292 men of an enemy battalion on a Red supply trail 260 miles north of Saigon and were slashing ahead, "killing them faster than we can count them," a U.S. spokesman said. Casualties among the two or more helicopter-borne American battalions were reported light.

The Buddhist Institute announced formation of a "Committee for the Protection of Buddhism." The institute appealed for the support of "all Buddhists and all friendly religions."

Hospitals Need Area; Storage Lots Sought

By DAVID POLLEN
Staff Writer

Student parking in the lot north of Quadrangle and Hillcrest dormitories will be banned in the fall, the University Parking and Security Committee decided Wednesday night.

The lot will be turned over to faculty, staff and hospital visitors to provide needed parking facilities until the ramp now under construction just west of the hospital complex is completed, according to Eugene Spaziani, associate professor of zoology, and chairman of the parking committee.

The committee is seeking areas of Univesrity property that could be made into additional storage lots to provide parking for dormitory residents who find themselves displaced when they return to campus in the fall.

THE OLD CITY land fill area south of the city is one of the areas under consideration, Spaziani said. The committee is studying the possibility of bus service to the land fill area and back, he added.

Under the new parking system, dorm residents, except freshmen, are eligible for parking stickers that will permit them to park in other lots on campus designated for students.

When the hospital parking ramp is completed, the Hilcrest and Quadrangle lot will be converted back to student parking, Spaziani said, but the temporary ban will be in effect for at least a year.

SPAZIANI SAID that he favored adding parking meters to the areas between Quadrangle and Hillcrest and between Quadrangle and Reinow Hall, to provide parking for students who would be loading and unloading and for visitors and Cafeteria patrons.

The areas now contain some meters, reserved housing parking, reserved staff parking, and restricted parking.

In the fall there will be three kinds of lots, faculty-staff lots, student lots, and storage lots. What are now reserved lots will become faculty-staff lots, and the restricted lots will become student lots. A portion of each student lot will be set aside to accommodate faculty and staff who are now using restricted stickers.

THE FACULTY- staff lots will be numbered, and each applicant will be assigned to a specific lot.

If the number of additional hospital parking spaces needed has been over-estimated, a limited area in the Hillcrest-Quadrangle lot will be turned back into student parking, Spaziani said. The new parking regulations and $40 fee may cut down the number of cars parked on campus sufficiently to make a total ban of student parking near the dorms unnecessary, he said.

Test Pilot Joe Walker Dies In Mid-Air Plane Collision

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — A giant XB70A research bomber and an F104 chase plane flown by famed X15 pilot Joseph A. Walker collided over the desert Wednesday, killing Walker and the bomber's co-pilot.

The XB70A's pilot, Al White, ejected in a seat capsule and was hospitalized with a broken right arm and a severe back injury.

The body of Maj. Carl Cross, White's co-pilot, was found in the smoking wreckage of the 185-foot-long bomber, one of two built at a cost of $1.2 billion.

WALKER, WHO had been training to fly the XB70A, was in the wreckage of the chase plane, one of several sent along to observe performance of the bomber during a research flight.

The Air Force said Walker's plane apparently hit the two tall vertical stabilizers on the triangular tail-wing of the XB70A, at an altitude of 25,000 feet. Both planes crashed and burned near Barstow, Calif., about 45 miles east of the base.

Walker, 45, held the world record of 4,104 m.p.h. and 354,200 feet, set in 1962 and 1966 in a rocket-powered X15.

WHITE, 48, CHIEF test pilot for North American Aviation, Inc., maker of the XB70A, had flown every major flight of the two controversial research bombers, pushing them to 2,000 m.p.h. and 70,000 feet — records for craft of that size.

It was the first flight in the 500,000-pound bomber for Cross, 40, transferred here from Viet Nam in March 1964.

An Air Force spokesman said details of how the crash occurred would not be released until after an official board makes an investigation.

Walker, a husky, graying man with a boyish grin, was chief research pilot at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's flight test center here. He had made more than 100 flights in experimental craft without accident.

Hurricane Threatens Florida After Sparing Coastal City

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Hurricane Alma, with vicious 110-mile winds near her center, raced toward the populous Florida west coast Wednesday night after brushing the southern Keys with howling winds and driving rains.

After battering Cuba for hours, the huge storm turned northward and the eye passed 60 miles off Key West, saving the country's most southern city from serious damage.

Then Alma picked up forward speed to more than 20 m.p.h. and bore directly down on Tampa and St. Petersburg, where 15 million people live clustered around Tampa Bay.

AS THE FORWARD speed increased, the Weather Bureau raised hurricane warnings up to Appalachicola, in the crook of the Florida Panhandle.

Residents of low-lying coastlines and islands from Naples north were ordered to evacuate, and they began steaming to higher ground at late afternoon.

Gales reached hurricane intensity of 74 miles an hour during gusts at Key West, and pounding surf flooded streets and some homes on the eastern end of the island city.

SOME ROOFS were blown off. Trees were uprooted. Two airplanes were damaged and a house trailer overturned. But Key West was spared Alma's worst punch.

"We lucked out on this one," said Larry Mayne, chief of the Weather Bureau in Key West. "The eye was never very well defined. The storm moved so fast that it didn't build up high tides."

At Naples, first mainland community in Alma's path, 2,000 persons were told to leave their homes and move into shelters.

AT FORT MYERS Beach and Sanibel Island about 4,000 persons were ordered out. During the late afternoon, their cars were a steady stream, with headlights boring dimly through the slashing rain and fringe gusts.

A quick-hitting tornado spun off the fringe of the big storm, which covers 200,000 square miles, and touched down in southwest Miami. It tossed an 18-foot boat 10 feet in the air, uprooted some trees and smashed a bedroom before disappearing.

Expecting huge Alma's winds to spread almost completely across Florida, forecasters issued hurricane warnings for the Tampa Bay region and Lake Okeechobee and ordered a hurricane watch all the way up the east coast to St. Marks near Tallahassee.

3 Reported Dead In Kansas Twister

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — A tornado cut a path about a half-mile wide through Topeka Wednesday night slicing the downtown area. There was an unconfirmed report that three persons had been killed, and that at least 50 others injured.

A tornado also struck at Manhattan, Kan., 60 miles west of Topeka.

Mayor Charles Wright, who returned to Topeka from a meeting seven miles away, said there also was an unconfirmed report that a large apartment house had been leveled in southwest Topeka.

Stupid protests

RECENTLY A MARINE private in Viet Nam received a can of dog food from a critic of the war. Attached to the can was a note that read, "Eat well, animal." Individual protesters have also harassed wives of soldiers fighting in Viet Nam, mainly with telephone calls and letters. Groups of protesters have picketed troop bases full of soldiers headed for Viet Nam, and those soldiers have had to grit their teeth while numerous taunts were thrown directly at them.

Such imbecilic actions are misdirected. The soldier is not forming our policy in Viet Nam. Whether he wants to or not, he must go where he is told and do what he is told without question. Soldiers do not enjoy the same rights as the more fortunate citizenry.

Critics' views run contrary to the views of soldiers who for the most part go along with American war aims. It is understandable that soldiers follow the Administration's line. From the moment he enters military duty, he is doused with a torrent of propaganda and literature of why "those Commies have to be stopped over there or else we'll be fighting them in our own back yards."

The soldier may or may not be justified in accusing all Viet Nam critics that they are abandoning the men in uniform. But they are completely in the clear when they become outraged over idiotic displays of protesters on the lunatic fringe.

If anyone is ever tempted to harass soldiers in Viet Nam, they should imagine themselves in uniform. Then imagine what it would be like to tell a commanding officer that he is all wet. — Nic Goeres

Times are a changin'

THE NORTH ATLANTIC TREATY Organization has all but stifled the possibility of talks with East European countries because they think the talks would be too hasty.

Their viewpoint makes us wonder whether they are at all keeping up with the times.

Mr. Rusk and other NATO ministers are still thinking the way they were twenty years ago: that the Iron Curtain was something to be licked by putting up a thicker curtain of our own. Things have changed. Interests between East and West are no longer that different that peaceful co-existence won't work, and given half a chance, we might find that our differences can be made even fewer. Having friends is more likely to insure "security" than going armed among enemies.

If, after 20 years of Cold War, talking to East Europe is hasty, we had better not count on living to see the Cold War end. — Dave Pollen

Some urbans question renewal

BY MIKE TONER
Staff Writer

Lillian B. Lawler is a whispy, grey-haired, retired classics professor just a shade over five feet tall. Seven years ago, after a successful teaching career at the City University of New York and several trips around the world, she came to live in Iowa City because she liked its "peaceful atmosphere and friendly people." Her present home is a solid two-story frame house at 14 West Court St. The house, planned by Miss Lawler's mother for the time when her daughter would retire, was built in 1922. It has been kept spotlessly clean, and the original furniture is arranged as it was 40 years ago.

Frank Vogel is a big, ruddy-faced, cigar-smoking native of the Midwest who makes his living from land in the Iowa City area. He's no tiller of the soil, however. Vogel is a teller of the soil. He owns that land, and that's where the money is. Others do the farming. He moved to Iowa City 15 years ago from Chicago, but before that he had obtained an engineering degree from the University of Iowa. His properties include farms throughout Johnson county, half a block of prime Iowa City property south of Burlington Street and west of Gilbert Street, and property in the central business district not listed in his name.

E. Dale Erickson is jovial and heavy-set. He is the manager of Ewers' Shoe Store in downtown Iowa City. He has been active in community affairs since he moved to Iowa City 20 years ago. Twice in the last four years he has been unsuccessful in a campaign for state representative from Johnson County. His wife is the daughter of Roy Ewers, the owner of two thriving small businesses in the heart of Iowa City, the shoe store and Ewers' Clothing Store.

Mutual Feelings

They make an unusual trio: Professor Lawler, owner Vogel and politician Erickson. In numerous ways they're distinct from one another. Yet they have many things in common. They all think Iowa City is a nice place to live in; they all have a college education; and they all have a degree of distrust for things that hint of big government.

They all strongly oppose the current plans of the Iowa City government for extensive urban renewal.

For Lillian Lawler, urban renewal means the destruction of her comfortable, convenient home near the Iowa campus and a longer walk to the classroom.

For Frank Vogel, urban renewal means the razing of some of his present property and a higher tax burden after reconstruction has taken place.

For Dale Erickson, urban renewal means a costly relocation of his business for a period of six months to two years and the loss of much of his walk-in business for that period.

For the Urban Renewal Administration of the United States Housing and Home Finance Agency (HHFA), urban renewal means rehabilitation or reconstruction of an area that "contains deficiencies to a degree and extent that public action is necessary to eliminate and prevent the development or spread of deterioration and blight."

HHFA'S Definition

The HHFA's definition is often quoted both by those who favor the present Iowa City plan and by those who oppose it.

For the Iowa City government, urban renewal means the reconstruction and rehabilitation of two areas totaling 44 blocks. The first of the two plans, on which study was begun in November, 1964, would involve the renewal of 24 blocks of the downtown business district. The consideration of the second plan, involving primarily residential area, is still rudimentary.

Erickson, like other shopkeepers in Iowa City, has expressed concern that the city has labeled his building "deficient."

Erickson said in a recent interview, "When I step into the basement of my store and look at those three-foot concrete walls, I find it awfully hard to believe reports of the city surveys that this place is about to come tumbling down."

Few merchants in the city insist that their places of business are perfect. The cost of eliminating the imperfections, however, has led most to attempt to conceal, rather than eliminate, them.

Private Efforts

In the last several years, most city businessmen have made only occasional remodelings of their property inside and out and have left the original buildings standing. There are 106 business establishments in the four blocks that form the core of the Iowa City business district. In those four blocks bordered by Iowa Avenue and Clinton, College and Linn streets, 47 businesses have been remodeled in the last 10 years. Most of the buildings, however, were constructed between 1880 and 1915.

The situation is similar in residential sections of the urban renewal area. Miss Lawler lives on the periphery of the first urban renewal area proposed by the Iowa City council. Her home, like the stores downtown, is old but well cared for. From the outside the house gives the appearance of having had meticulous care, with its clean front porch and window flower boxes.

Miss Lawler has repeatedly questioned the council's generalized labeling of houses in the area as "substandard." She is fond of quoting one person, a city inspector, who said the foundation of her house could easily support three floors.

Miss Lawler lives in the southern portion of the area considered in the first urban renewal plan. That area merges in the south with the area of the proposed second urban renewal plan. Residents of the second area have already expressed their objections to the massive clearance of the "blighted" buildings in which they live. Their objections have been voiced chiefly at the informational sessions held for them by the city.

Even those who concede that their businesses or homes are deficient enough to warrant rebuilding, question the part of the HHFA's definition of urban renewal that suggests deficiency "to a degree and extent that public action is necessary."

Realtors' Report

These persons gain some support from a 1964 report by the National Association of Real Estate Boards, "Iowa City: Profile in Progress."

In recommending urban renewal, the report states, "The downtown area — at least the core, four square block heart of the business district — lends itself to private renewal efforts . . . ."

Frank Vogel claimed to speak for the 100 members of the Downtown Business and Professional Men's Association (DBPMA) when he said recently, "These businessmen are going to get the most for their money if it's their money that is being spent. But if it comes in the form of a government handout, we're going to have waste and inefficiency of unconscionable proportions."

The DBPMA is the only Iowa City organization actively opposed to urban renewal in Iowa City.

The resentment toward federal involvement in what some consider a local matter is widespread.

The DBPMA's Eight Point Program adopted in September, 1965, makes this point in Article I: "That whatever specific plan shall be finally adopted for urban renewal, such plan shall place maximum importance upon voluntary participation by those persons directly affected and shall allow for the use of private as opposed to government financing where economically feasible . . . ."

The city's decision to rely entirely on outside help in the design and execution of urban renewal has also provoked criticism.

Article VII of the DBPMA's program states: "We the members of the DBPMA believe that there is available in this locality ample talent, knowledge and accumulated experience within the scope of architectural design and concept, to improve our community. We therefore recommend the formation of an architectural concept and advisory committee, composed of representatives of the architectural firms of the Iowa City trade area. We support a policy whereby the Iowa City City Council shall first avail itself of the services of such committee for urban renewal guidance, technical data, concepts and recommendations of an architectural nature."

Personal Tragedy

Miss Lawler put it this way in a recent interview: "Aside from the personal tragedy of the loss of my home, it seems a shame to me that some bureaucrat in the East, who doesn't even know the situation here, is planning my life for me."

She has carried her argument to city meetings. She has written letters to local and area papers expressing her objections to urban renewal. She has personally visited all the city officials involved in the project. The effect:

"I've been free to object," she said, "but they don't listen."

Under the proposed plan for the first renewal area, namely, the downtown business district and nearby residential areas, the federal government would provide about 75 per cent of the estimated $12 million cost of the razing.

The plan that Iowa City would submit to the HHFA for approval is unusual among proposed urban renewal projects. Nearly all projects in other cities of similar size involve the reconstruction of substandard dwelling units. The Iowa City plan, by contrast, involves the entire business district, in addition to adjacent residential areas.

There are, it is true, numerous apartments on the second and third floors of downtown businesses, but they total only 200 units, only 20 per cent of the total number of dwelling units built in 1965 alone.

People can live nearly anywhere. Under typical urban renewal plans, residents of the "blighted" areas are simply moved to another location during the time that the former slums are being cleared and rebuilt.

Relocation Problem

Businesses are different. A business cannot thrive in just any location. A business, particularly a small one, depends on day-to-day customers who make small purchases, but trade in volume, so necessary to such a business, is dependent on easy access to the store.

The prospect of relocation is a major objection of those opposed to the present plan. Vogel said in a recent interview that the city had provided no reasonable place for the businesses to move to during the razing and reconstruction phases of the program.

Erickson pointed out, "A business like ours depends a good deal on customers who are familiar with our location, and on student business. We depend on walk-in customers and if we moved away from this block, we'd have a rough time keeping our operation out of the red."

Even the Citizens' Advisory Committee (CAC), created to serve as an intermediary between the City Council and the people of Iowa City, recommended in its 1964 "Report on the Central Business District" that any plan of Central Business District improvement "must place the welfare of existing business operators and land owners at top priority."

The CAC report continued: "An immediate plan for the retention of businesses presently located in the Central Business District should have priority over all other planning in connection with Central Business District improvement. Failure to institute such a plan in the immediate future will undoubtedly create serious downtown business and property losses similar to those occurring in other communities which have failed to act in time."

The city, for its part, has promised careful study of the relocation requirements of each businessman. In March, the relocation study began when teams of surveyors questioned each merchant and resident. The study had been scheduled for completion by July, 1965, nine months before it even began.

Even businessmen who might support the project are dragging their feet until they receive more specific proposals for relocation.

Another problem that appears to disturb the small businessman is the possibility that he will be permanently dislocated from the position he now occupies.

Renewal Procedure

Under the procedure for urban renewal, the members of the city council, acting as the urban renewal program's Local Planning Agency (LPA), would acquire the property from owners at a court-set price.

The LPA would retain possession of the land throughout the razing and reconstruction phases. The LPA would, upon completion of the renewal, resell the property to bidders. Federal regulations on urban renewal do not specify that the renewed property must be resold to the highest bidder, but regulations do insist on the realization of a "fair market price" for the property.

Vogel says, "We can't get assurance from the urban renewal people that they will resell to the original owners; if this were the case, we wouldn't have much to object to. But the city will sell the property to the developer who the city thinks will do the most for the city."

The problem is further complicated by the fact that most managers of small shops lease the buildings they occupy. Neither the city nor the federal government could require that the landlord or the new developer, rent the reconstructed facilities to his former tenant.

The City Council has repeatedly sounded the line, "We will not proceed with urban renewal unless we have made every effort to give the small businessman the opportunity to continue to be located and continue to be in business downtown."

"Every effort" is not enough, however, for some small businessmen who have their capital tied to a single establishment that depends largely upon its location for its success. Until the shopkeeper can be convinced that his relocation in the same position is guaranteed, it is likely that he will withhold his support for urban renewal.

City's Approach

The approach that the city proposes to use toward the entire program has troubled numerous people. The city has made no provision for a gradual implementation of renewal. Under current city plans, blocks at a time would be cleared and only a few buildings left standing. The projected time for the entire plan is five years, making it necessary to destroy and rebuild about four business blocks a year.

City Planner Earl E. Stewart has said on several occasions that as many as 80 per cent of the buildings in the area of the first plan might need rebuilding.

Vogel calls such a plan "unmanageable."

He is not alone in that analysis. In its 1964 report, the National Association of Real Estate Boards recommended that the renewal, even in residential areas, be "divided into four or five small project areas — about one block — and execution undertaken in one at a time."

The procedure that the city is using has not been the only aspect of the urban renewal subject that has incurred stout opposition. Frequent verbal attacks from numerous sources have questioned even the need for urban renewal.

One goal of the renewal program is the improvement of retail sales. Many merchants, however, have found business already so good that they see little reason to invest time, trouble and money in attempting to improve it.

Richard Lindsay, the manager of Hawkeye Book Store, says, "Why should I invest in a new building? I already have more customers than I can handle."

Since the University of Iowa expects to bring about 2,000 more potential buyers to the community each year, and since normal growth is also expected, some businessmen have little need to attract more customers.

Traffic Problem

Traffic congestion and parking squeeze are other problems that urban renewal would be expected to solve. Vogel has said that localized city condemnation procedures could easily clear the land necessary for parking facilities.

Vogel questions city motives in razing the half block bordered by College, Dubuque and Linn streets for construction of a parking ramp, but then building only a single level parking lot.

The hottest development of the entire urban renewal conrtoversy, however, came over the question of who favored it and who opposed it. It has been an important question because City Manager Carsten Leikvold said at an early meeting on urban renewal that the city would not proceed with the program unless it had the support of 70 per cent of the people in the area involved. The same assurance was given by Richard Burger, mayor at the time, and by Earl Stewart, urban renewal consultant.

Because the city was committed to having the support of 70 per cent of the people involved, "proof" that such support did not exist became logically an important goal of the DBPMA.

In November, 1965, the DBPMA, under Vogel's direction, conducted a survey of businessmen's attitudes toward urban renewal. According to the statistics published by the group, 86 per cent of the tenants and 81 per cent of the owners were opposed to the Barton-Aschman and Associates renewal plan proposed to the City Council.

Figures don't lie, but they may mislead unless a person knows what is being figured, and city officials figured that Vogel's statistics were misleading.

They immediately attacked his use of questions in the survey such as "Are you willing to double or in some cases triple your present rent for the same space, which is estimated could happen through urban renewal?" and "Do you feel that your building is unsafe or structurally unsound to the point where it cannot be repaired?"

City's Contention

The city maintains that its teams conducting the relocation survey found that those who were interviewed were enthusiastic about the prospects of urban renewal. Vogel discounts this contention.

Like the weekend's collection of dirt, the answer to the question of who really supports urban renewal will come out in the wash. The wash, in this case, is today's agitation pro and con. Who has performed the cleanest job will be apparent when urban renewal goes on the line for a bond issue referendum about a year from now. Those results will not depend on any survey and they will be visible to all residents of the city.

Charges and personal barbs by both sides are called anti-progress, even though they would all like to have tree-lined malls and modern stores spread across the business district. Those who favor urban renewal are called impractical, even though they work hard to make the project financially feasible.

Those who oppose urban renewal are sometimes vocal and sometimes silent. For each person who stands up at a city meeting to voice his objections, there are others who either do not have the courage or do not have the desire to speak out.

Those who oppose urban renewal have varying motives. It might be as simple a reason as a longer walk to the classroom or as complex as figuring additional property tax.

Lillian Lawler, Frank Vogel and Dale Erickson are not willing to predict the outcome of the urban renewal controversy. They are deeply committed to a stand on the entire renewal project. If events make that commitment futile, they stand to lose much. Each undoubtedly hopes for the best for himself. It is possible that their hopes will be realized.

If their hopes are realized, however, one thing is certain: others will be displeased, and their hopes dashed to the floor of the Iowa City Civic Center.

Urban renewal is like the weather. It is unpredictable and unable to please everyone it affects. Unlike the weather, however, urban renewal is being opposed by people who are not just talking about it — they're doing something, too.

'Critics' spoil Cinema 16 film

To the Editor:

Deciding that on such a lovely evening it would be just the thing to attend the Cinema 16 film, my husband and I made our way to the Illinois Room. It soon became apparent that this was no ordinary movie showing, but rather that the "club" had gathered for its weekly meeting. Even before the film began, we were subjected to a lengthy, very unfunny introduction by an apparent group leader.

Apparently fearing that some of the members of the audience might miss the more subtle shortcomings of a film of the 1930's, the more sensitive souls in attendance provided all of the necessary critical gestures, consisting primarily of overexerted guffaws at points where they felt appropriate. Laboring under the delusion that we, like the others, had paid our money to see the show, we endured their lousy behavior and managed to enjoy a vintage piece in spite of it.

It is to be hoped that the imposition of a bunch of critics' sensitive readings of a film on the rest of the audience will, in the future, be discouraged.

I was also pleased to note that "The movie won the Academy Award for Best Musical Composition (Lullaby of Broadway)" (DI, 5/28). Guess that sequence must have been cut.

Highlanders Will Perform At Convention

Thirty-nine members of the Scottish Highlanders, all-girl bagpipe band at the University, will appear at the Rotary International Convention, Denver, Colo., next week, under the sponsorship of Rotary chapters in Iowa and Sterling, Ill., and the Public Service Company of Colorado.

The coeds, selected from some 80 band members on the basis of auditions, will play at the Tuesday Rotary luncheon before Secretary of State Dean Rusk addresses the audience, and at several Rotary functions Wednesday — a style show for Rotary wives, a reception, and a concert at Elitch Gardens, where the Governor's Ball will be held.

The Highlanders will arrive in Denver Monday and will return to Iowa Thursday. While in Denver, they will stay at Loretto Heights College.

Assistant director, John Stewart has planned the routines for the performances.

GOP Charges Demos Slowing Congress' Work

WASHINGTON (AP) — A suggestion that the congressional pace is being slowed so that House Democrats will not have to go home and answer questions about the Viet Nam war came Wednesday night from a House Republican.

Rep. Peter H. B. Frelinghuysen of New Jersey said in his weekly newsletter that, "Reports persist that the delay results from a deliberate decision on the part of the Democratic leadership, including presumably the President himself. By apearing to be kept busy in Washington, they delay their campaigns as long as possible."

Other key House Republicans agreed with Frelinghuysen, but House Democratic Leader Carl Albert of Oklahoma called the statement "completely erroneous."

"It's just a wild dream of somebody," Albert told a reporter. "We program legislation as fast ts it comes out of committee and we're constantly prodding the committees to get on with their work."

3-Day Institute Slated On Urban Transportation

A three-day institute aimed at providing help for those involved in urban transportation plans and programs will be held at the University June 14-16.

The Institute on Urban Transportation Planning will be a combination classroom-workshop program on matters such as traffic planning data, traffic models, computer use for transportation planning, follow-up to origin and destination surveys and traffic assignment.

Some 30 city and consultant planners, federal and state highway department engineers, city engineers and professionals involved in teaching or administering planning programs are expected to attend.

NFL, AFL Merger Planned For 1970

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Football League and American Football League announced plans Wednesday for a merger into a giant circuit of 26 teams in 25 cities under a single commissioner.

The commissioner will be Pete Rozelle of the NFL who, according to the joint announcement, will administer all inter-league business under a structure similar to major league baseball.

The actual merger will not take place until 1970 after existing contracts expire.

UNTIL THEN, the two leagues will continue to operate separately — 15 in the NFL and nine in the AFL — with Al Davis remaining as AFL commissioner for that period. They will not be permitted to engage in inter-league trading of players.

Two new franchises are to be added, one in the AFL, no later than 1968, with two more coming when practical.

The champions of the two leagues will meet in a title game in January, 1967.

A COMMON DRAFT will be instituted next January.

The joint announcement said no franchises would be transferred from present locations and all existing franchises would be retained.

Under the plan, the AFL clubs must pay the NFL a total of $18 million principal and interest of a 20-year period.

The abrupt formal announcement brought to an end a bitter money war that had raged between the established NFL, with roots going back to the 1920's, and the AFL since the younger circuit went into business in 1960.

BONUSES reached as high as $450,000 for outstanding college athletes and more recently there was a threat of raiding between the two leagues.

This was triggered when Pete Gogolak, an outstanding place-kicker, played out his option with the Buffalo Bills of the AFL and signed with the New York Giants of the NFL.

George Halas, owner and coach of the Chicago Bears, was critical of the Giants' action and played a role in peace conferences held principally with three AFL owner — Ralph Wilson of the Buffalo Bills, Lamar Hunt of the Kansas City Chiefs and Billy Sullivan of the Boston Patriots.

THE NFL MADE the proposal to the AFL last April through Tex Scharmm, president of the NFL Dallas Cowboys, who approached Lamar Hunt, president of the Kansas City Chiefs and co-founder of the AFL.

Talks continued through May with reports relayed to the various owners of both leagues. Finally a negotiating committee was formed including Wilson, Hunt and Sullivan.

During the four-year period, before the merger can be completed, the two leagues will continue to operate independently and will follow through on existing contract and pension commitments and TV contracts.

Player trades between the two leagues will be forbidden.

The Justice Department said it would take a close look at the merger to see if it violates anti-trust laws.

Baseball Roundup

Indians 2, Yankees 1

CLEVELAND (AP) — Sam McDowell, making his first appearance in two weeks, cut short a ninth inning New York threat Wednesday night as Cleveland defeated the Yankees 2-1.

McDowell, who had been sidelined with a sore arm, relieved starter Gary Bell after Mickey Mantle had opened the ninth with a single. The fireballing southpaw retired the next three batters on fly balls.

Braves 7, Mets 6

NEW YORK (AP) — Hank Aaron drove in six runs with a double and two homers, including a grand slam Wednesday night leading the Atlanta Braves to a 7-6 victory over the New York Mets.

Aaron opened the scoring in the first inning with his 19th homer.

The slugging right fielder then made it 5-0 by smacking his 20th home run in the third after Felix Millan and Eddie Mathews singled and Woody Woodard walked.

Phillies 10, Reds 6

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies slammed 14 hits, including home runs by Tony Gonzalez, Rich Allen and Clay Dalrymple, and defeated Cincinnati 10-6 Wednesday night.

Gonzalez' homer with two on highlighted a four-run first inning, and the Phillies wrapped it up with five more in the fourth.

Cubs 8, Dodgers 1

CHICAGO (AP) — Rookie catcher Randy Hundley hit his first major league grand-slam home run in the fourth inning to hang a sixth defeat on Los Angeles Dodger ace Don Drysdale and power the Chicago Cubs to an 8-1 victory Wednesday.

Drysdale, now 4-6, boosted his strikeout career total to 2,003, fanning seven but hit three batters and was victimized by a five-run fourth.

Orioles 6, Senators 5

BALTIMORE (AP) — Pinch hitter Camilo Carreon's double scored Luis Aparicio in the 14th inning Wednesday night and gave Baltimore a 6-5 victory over Washington in the first game of a twi-night doubleheader.

Cards 11, Pirates 5

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Julian Javier homered, tripled and singled and Curt Flood collected three singles and a double in pacing St. Louis to an 11-5 victory over Pittsburgh Wednesday night. The setback ended the Pirates' six-game winning streak.

Javier drove in three runs while Flood and Tito Francona each had two RBI.

Athletics 5, Twins 4

ST. PAUL-MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Pitcher Fred Talbot hit a two-run double in a four-run Kansas City rally in the sixth inning, lifting the Athletics to a 5-4 victory over Minnesota Wednesday night.

Talbot, who yielded runs in the second and fourth innings, delivered the blow which finished Jim Mudcat Grant. His drive went over Jimmie Hall's head in right field to produce the final two runs in the rally.

Kansas City scored its first two runs in the inning on a single by Ken Harrelson and a sacrifice fly by Phil Roof.

Minnesota led 2-0 after Don Mincher doubled and scored in both the second and fourth innings. He scored the first time on Harmon Killebrew's single and the second time on Earl Battey's single.

Reagan Easy Primary Victor, To Contest Governor Brown

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Republican Ronald Reagan, cast in his first political role, embarked Wednesday on a quest for GOP unity and a share of the Democratic vote for governor. Gov. Edmund G. Brown, a Democrat, said that the Republican novice would be a formidable challenger in November.

Brown had to battle past an unexpectedly potent primary bid by Los Angeles Mayor Samuel W. Yorty to win a third-term nomination Tuesday.

REAGAN WAS nominated with ease, trouncing former San Francisco Mayor George Christopher, who said the defeat ended his political career.

With 25,963 of California's 30,586 precincts reported, Reagan had 1,214,836, Christopher 607,596.

Out of 27,174 precincts, Brown had 1,150,682, Yorty 847,183.

Yorty polled nearly 43 per cent of the major candidate share in the vote for governor. Reagan's allies pointed to that as evidence the governor can be beaten.

BROWN, AT A Los Angeles news conference, acknowledged the Yorty showing "rather fooled us. In the last 10 days, we thought we had better save our money for November."

But the governor said he was anxious for the fight ahead, and forecast victory.

Brown said he hoped Yorty would campaign for him.

Winner by a 2-1 margain, Reagan greeted his victory with a call for unity in a state where the GOP has been split by past primary battles.

BROWN TOLD HIS supporters: "I want you to know that you have to work ten times harder than you have ever worked before."

The conservative-minded Reagan, whom Brown called a "far right" heir to Barry Goldwater, built a massive Republican margin in the south, and it was there that Yorty ran strongest.

Brown said his coming contest would be tougher than those he won over former Vice President Richard M. Nixon and former Sen. William F. Knowland to capture his first two terms.

In Washington, national leaders of both parties declared their forces would unite to win the November battle for power in the nation's most populous state.

REPUBLICAN National Chairman Ray C. Bliss said Reagan's majority "can now be blended into a united Republican drive for complete victory in California in November."

Democratic National Chairman John M. Bailey called the primary a resounding victory for Brown and an endorsement of President Johnson's policies and programs.

He said the Democrats would unite for a victory more decisive than that two years ago.

Housing Sought

The RILEEH Housing Committee is searching for six more homes for Rust College students coming to the University this summer.

The committee has found 29 homes for the 35 students thus far. The students will participate in a six-week program, from June 19 to August 6, to improve their education and introduce them into the life of a Northern community.

People who want to take in a Rust student should call the Wesley Foundation at 338-1179 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. during the week or Mrs. Roger Munn at 338-7203 after 5 p.m. and on the weekends.

Members of the Housing Committee are Mrs. Munn, Mrs. Charles Carlston, Robert VanHorne and Mrs. Helen Black.

Four students who participated in the RILEEH program at the University last summer have been invited to stay in the same homes in which they stayed last summer.

Memo Recalled After Complaints From Senators

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service's public information director told a Senate subcommittee Wednesday that a memo about which the Senators complained was withdrawn as soon as he learned about it.

Senate investigators say the memo referred to efforts to "brainwash the citizenry" in a crackdown on moonshining.

"The memo does not reflect the position of the Internal Revenue Service," Joseph S. Rosapepe, ISR public information director, told the administrative procedures subcommittee.

He added it was issued by an overly zealous employe not experienced in information work.

Despite the prodding of Sen. Edward V. Long, D-Mo., the subcommittee chairman, Rosapepe refused to identify the employe.

Russell Wants 'Crimes Trial'

LONDON (AP) — Earl Bertrand Russell, the 94-year-old philosopher, is campaigning for a "war crimes tribunal" to try President Johnson and other American leaders for their Viet Nam policies, aides reported Wednesday.

They added he has taped four broadcasts to be beamed to American soldiers in Viet Nam, urging them to cease fighting and come forward to give evidence.

Ralph Schoenmann, Russell's American secretary, said the philosopher had written to world figures in law and literature inviting them to join his panel of "judges."

U.S. Paratroopers Inflict Heavy Toll In Short Battle

SAIGON (AP) — Paratroopers of the U.S. 101st Screaming Eagles Airborne Division decimated a North Vietnamese battalion Wednesday in one of the bloodiest short battles of the war. They reported 292 enemy dead in the Kontum Province highlands.

"We're killing them faster than we can count them," an officer radioed to miltary headquarters in Saigon.

The battle site is a rugged jungled area, about 260 miles north of Saigon, where the frontiers of Laos, Cambodia and South Viet Nam meet. It is along a supply route leading into South Viet Nam from the Ho Chi Minh trail. An evident aim of the American sweep-named Operation Hawthorne — is to curtail infiltration of North Vietnamese.

Far from that major action, Viet Cong mortar men and recoilless rifle crews shelled the U.S. advisers' compound at My Tho, in the Mekong River delta 40 miles southwest of Saigon, before dawn.

The spokesman said some of the Americans, surprised as they jumped for their weapons, were killed or wounded. No figures were released.

U.S. and Vietnamese pilots joined in a two-hour attack Tuesday on a Viet Cong unit spotted near a canal 35 miles from Saigon. Air spotters estimated 46 of the enemy were killed. In all, American airmen flew 392 combat sorties over South Viet Nam in the 24-hour period ended at dawn. Vietnamese pilots flew 281.

Navy and Air Force squadrons mounted 70 missions against North Viet Nam supply lines and coastal junks and barges. A spokesman said one vessel was hit 40 miles south of Haiphong, the major North Vietnamese port.

Ground gunners shot down an Air Force F105 Thunderchief fighter bomber north of Dong Hoi, 40 miles above the border. The pilot parachuted into the sea and was rescued. The plane was the 257th lost in the 16-month campaign north of the 17th Parallel.

U.S. military spokesmen gave this account of the highlands battle:

The firepower and lightning mobility of the helicopter-borne Americans evidently took the North Vietnamese regulars by surprise.

What started Tuesday as a Communist attack on a seemingly isolated American artillery battery swayed bloodily back and forth for a few hours and then became a Communist rout.

The spokesman described American casualties as light. But with at least two and possibly more battalions involved, the cost in blood could not be insignificant.

30 Drawings By Lasansky To Be Shown

"The Nazi Drawings," a set of 30 drawings that give concepts of Nazi brutality by Mauricio Lasansky, professor of art, will be presented in a one-man exhibition at the Philadelphia Museum of Art early next year.

The product of work during the last five years by Lasansky, the drawings will be shown as a set for the first time Jan. 16 to Feb. 19 in Philadelphia. Several of the works have been presented in shows at the University, where Lasansky has been a member of the art faculty since 1945.

From Philadelphia, "The Nazi Drawings" will go to the Whitney Museum, New York City, where they will be shown from the last part of March through April. The initial tour of the exhibition will close at the University.

46 VA Staffers Attend Seminar

Forty-six Veterans Administration hospital staff members are participating in a series of three Executive Development Seminars at the University.

The seminar, designed to improve management technique, opened with its first session Tuesday and will follow with similar sessions June 21 and June 28.

Management by objectives and goals was the theme of Tuesday's session and motivating for effective performance will be the theme for the session on the 21st. The final session will deal with the development of subordinate managers through management by objectives and goals.

The seminars are sponsored by Center for Labor and Management, with Don R. Sheriff, director, and Jude P. West, associate director, conducting the three sessions.
