Buddhists-Led Riots Rock Saigon For 3rd Day In Row

500 Police Patrol Chicago Riot Area

CHICAGO (AP) — More than 500 policemen Tuesday night patrolled a tense 16-block Puerto Rican neighborhood where violence erupted for two nights following the shooting of a Puerto Rican youth.

A policeman was hit with a rock and injured at dusk when 150 persons massed in a park were being dispersed. Groups were not allowed to form.

The extra security was ordered by Police Supt. O. W. Wilson, who shook up his department in an effort to halt the rioting in which eight persons were shot and wounded, scores injured and more than 80 arrested.

A DOZEN policemen stood on street corners in the area, which is 15 minutes from the downtown area. Patrolmen stood in pairs 30 feet apart along sidewalks.

Police helicopters buzzed overhead. On the perimeter of the strife-torn area, 120 reinforcements stood ready to move in.

All taverns were closed on police orders. Many businesses boarded their windows.

Clergymen milled through the streets, pleading for a night of peace.

Before dusk, police cammanders moved their patrolmen through close-order drills for a double reason — to keep them alert and to break up small groups on the streets.

Capt. James Holzman, named by Wilson as acting deputy chief of patrol to supervise the area, directed his men. Wilson also ordered integration of two-man squads.

The situation was tense. An Associated Press photographer made his way to the roof of a building to take pictures. Within minutes a police helicopter dropped to investigate, radioed to a control point and five policemen were immediately on the roof.

A task force lieutenant and his sergeants spent the afternoon studying maps of the trouble zone and planning strategy.

Mayor Richard J. Daley met privately with Spanish-speaking community leaders and called for obedience to law and preservation of order.

The Chicago Daily News, in a front-page editorial written in Spanish, called for an end to the rioting and for better communications between the police and the residents.

As darkness enshrouded the West Division Street area, residents leaned against ouildings and taunted policemen.

Capt. Holzman, attired in a full dress uniform, barked orders.

Lack Of Communication Blamed For Chicago Riots

CHICAGO (AP) — Lack of communication between authorities and a community of Latin Americans who speak little or no English was blamed Tuesday for two successive nights of rioting on Chicago's Northwest Side.

"Police brutality" was the term most often expressed as the root of the violence along West Division Street where some 40,000 Puerto Ricans live.

But wiser heads among the highly mobile Puerto Ricans blame the language barrier and lack of understanding by police assigned to the area for the smoldering enmity that erupted in terror Sunday and Monday nights.

THE SCENE of the rioting is a changing neighborhood that once was largely Polish and Bohemian but now is mainly populated by Puerto Ricans. It is a mile-square area surrounded by 14 ethnic groups including central and eastern Europeans, Mexicans, Negroes and Southern whites.

Division Street is a setting for stories by author Nelson Algren, who lives nearby. Puerto Ricans began moving into the neighborhood after World War II. Most of them have jobs and authorities say unemployment has not been a serious problem.

CLOUDIO FLORES, vice president of the Association of Puerto Rican Organizations and editor of a Spanish language newspaper in the area, criticized police for their treatment of Puerto Ricans.

"They are not being treated as citizens by the police," Flores said. "We want the respect of the police department as any other Chicago citizen demands and normally receives."

The Rev. Donald Headly, executive director of the Cardinal's Committee for Spanish Speaking People, a Roman Catholic welfare organization, attributed the trouble to "a lack of communication" between the area's residents and police.

Spokesmen for the Puerto Rican community said Spanish-speaking policemen could help improve relations between residents and authorities.

O. W. Wilson, superintendent of police, said efforts are being made to recruit more policemen from the Latin-American community and that 40 officers are learning to speak Spanish.

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Buddhist-led demonstrators spilled into the streets of Saigon Wednesday for the third straight day. In the northern city of Hue, hundreds of persons began an all-day fast for Buddhists killed last month fighting government troops.

The Saigon demonstrators were scattered almost immediately by a barrage of tear gas from riot police and tough Vietnamese rangers.

Robed Buddhist monks were seen in all three groups, each numbering about 100 persons.

One group gathered about a mile from the capital's downtown business section and the other two formed in Cholon, the Chinese quarter.

RANGERS and police blocked the Buddhist Institute, spawning ground of previous demonstrations and where a mob of 3,000 Tuesday burned three jeeps and battled police.

The Buddhist fast in Hue came 24 hours after the chief of the Buddhist militants, Thich Tri Quang, was reported in a weakened and serious condition on the seventh day of his antigovernment, anti-American hunger strike. A clandestine Buddhist radio said Quang's heartbeat has become irregular.

Monks, nuns, and young men and women sat down in front of their altars along Hue's main street and chanted prayers.

They blocked two bridges for a time but later allowed traffic to pass.

Buddhists at Quang Tri City in northernmost Quang Tri Province, about 30 miles northwest of Hue, were reported to have joined the one-day fast.

AMID EFFORTS of a Buddhist minority to revitalize their drive against Premier Nguyen Cao Ky's reigme and the United States for supporting it, air and ground forces pressed the war against the Communists:

Brig. Gen. Willard Pearson, commander of the 1st Brigade of the 101st Airborne Division, said North Viet Nam's 24th Regiment had been destroyed as a fighting force in the Kontum plateau battle and "I believe this battle has set the Viet Cong timetable back several months."

With estimates of the enemy dead ranging to more than 1,000, Pearson said he believed the kill would favor the allies by as much as 14 to 1.

- A strike by two U.S. Navy F4C Phantom jets against two propeller-driven planes spotted in predawn darkness off North Viet Nam's coast 70 miles southwest of the part of Haiphong was a highlight of the air campaign. One vanished from radar screens with the explosion of a radar-guided Sparrow missile and a spokesman said it was probably shot down. The other fled inland.
- Ground action elsewhere was generally light and scattered.
- A BROADCAST dispatch from Hanoi declared North Viet Nam's armed forces shot down five U.S. planes Monday and sank a U.S.-South Vietnamese commando boat in the Tonkin Gulf off Thanh Hoa, 80 miles south of Hanoi. The official newspaper Nhan Dan said the Viet Cong have begun their monsoon offensive and inflicted heavy casualties on American and allied troops. There was no official comment on any of these statements in Saigon.

Ky's security forces cracked down against the revived rioting in Saigon after a monk-led mob of 3,000 burned the jeep of two U.S. Military Policemen and two other vehicles. Demonstrators made off with two 45-caliber submachine guns the MPs left behind in flight.

Troops and police drove the rioters back and laid virtual seige to the institute, choking off dozens of incipient demonstrations. The arrest of the youths was in line with a warning last week that student demonstrators henceforth would be subject to conscription for front line duty.

Some were clubbed, kicked and beaten.

Rights March In Mississippi Converts Few

GRENADA, Miss., (AP) — Like performers playing to an empty house, the Mississippi marchers sometimes go three or four miles without meeting anyone, Negro or white. The reaction from the few spectators often borders on indifference, except in the few larger towns on the route.

"We can't convert the trees and make them get out and vote," sighed Floyd McKissick, a march leader. "If we are going to accomplish what we want, we're going to do more than march through desolate country."

A large rally after their arrival Tuesday in Grenada resulted in lines of Negroes stretching from the registrar's office on the second floor of the county courthouse, down the stairs and across the first floor.

Dr. Martin Luther King, who left the Marchers Sunday, came to Grenada and went immediately into a huddle with other leaders. They plotted a new march route off U.S. 51 — the route established by James Meredith before he was wounded — that will take them into cotton country to the southwest where they hope to encounter more Negro field hands.

The marathon walk from Memphis, Tenn., to Jackson, Miss., is a drive to get more Negroes to register.

At Grenada the march group doubled to more than 500, going through the Negro section. The speakers stood on the base of a Confederate statue in the city-owned park as several hundred whites looked on at the fringes.

"Mississippi Negroes have themselves decried the whole march as a farce," said Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss. in Washington. He callled the march "one of the most scandalous and flagrant publicity stunts ever perpetrated."

Most Favorites Score Easy Wins In Ill., S.C. Primaries

(AP) — Sen. Donald S. Russell of South Carolina became one of the earliest casualties of the 1966 congressional elections Tuesday when he lost a race for the Democratic Senate nomination to former Gov. Ernest F. Hollings.

In the day's other primary election, in Illinois, veteran Democratic Rep. Wiliam Dawson, 80-year-old leader among Chicago's South Side Negroes, won renomination for a 13th term.

ANOTHER CHICAGO Democratic organization man, Rep. Barratt O'Hara, 84, was the apparent victor in his bid for renomination.

O'Hara, a supporter of the Johnson administration, led Abner Mikva, 40, a state representative, for the nomination from the 2nd district.

FEW STATEWIDE candidacies were in question in Illinois.

Charles H. Percy, Chicago industrialist, had token opposition in a contest for the Republican nomination for the Senate. Sen. Paul H. Douglas had no Democratic primary opposition.

Republicans watched the Chicago Democratic primary closely for any signs of weakening by Daley's organization which might increase GOP prospects in the state.

Returns from 364 of the 423 precincts gave O'Hara 28,779 votes to 25,735 for Mikva.

Dawson defeated two other Negroes in the race for the party nomination from the 1st District.

Returns from 324 of 446 precincts gave Dawson 29,529 votes to 17,130 for Fred Hubbard, 36, a social worker, and 2,563 for Ronald L. Williams.

ONE ISSUE IN the election was the fact Russell resigned as governor in the middle of his second term to take an interim appointment to the Senate after Johnston died in April 1965.

Hollings will be opposed in November by State Sen. Marshall Parker, 44, the Republican nominee.

Rusk Urges Soviets To Use Geneva Talks For Viet Peace

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — Disarmament discussions should go forward, Secretary of State Dean Rusk said Tuesday, urging Soviet leaders to use the Geneva conference to launch Viet Nam peace negotiations.

The secretary injected the reference to the 17-nation Geneva disarmament conference into a speech to the 57th convention of Rotary International.

He made the inclusion after Alexei A. Roschin, chief Soviet delegate, declared at Geneva there can be no agreement to stop spread of nuclear weapons as long as the United States continues its policies in Viet Nam and West Germany.

Rusk mentioned the subject at a news conference a few minutes after arriving in Denver, then referred to the Soviet statement in his talk.

"I understand," Rusk said in his speech, "that the Soviet representative in Geneva just today said that troops must be pulled out of Viet Nam in order to clear the way for further disarmament discussion.

"I would urge that the disarmament discussions must go on and would urge the Soviet leaders to do their part as a co-chairman of the Geneva machinery to invoke that machinery to bring the matter from the battlefield to the conference table."

The remark drew applause from the more than 7,200 persons who jammed Denver's City Auditorium.

Urging negotiations to resolve disputes, Rusk also interpolated into his speech a statement saying, "It is too late in history to settle things by war. The place to start organizing things for peace is where an aggression first starts."

Sales Marks Of New Cars Lag In June

DETROIT (AP) —New car sales in early June ran behind the 1965 pace with only General Motors topping its sales mark of a year ago.

Preliminary sales reports from the four U.S. auto makers Tuesday listed sales of 239,214 cars in the June 1-10 period. This trailed both the 251,477 cars sold in the comparable period last year and the 256,489 sold in the final 10 days of May.

It marked the fourth straight 10-day period in which industry sales trailed those of a year ago.

On a calendar year basis to date, however, sales continued to run well ahead of the 1965 pace.

General Motors had the strongest sales report as its sales of 135,965 cars was a new high for the early June period. The old GM mark of 134,157 cars was set last year.

GM vice president H. E. Crawford said, "We are encouraged by the present trend of sales. While the figures for the current 10 days represent completion of sales campaigns at Buick and Oldsmobile, we are gratified by the steady improvement in relation to last year's experience since the low point in the first period of May."

Plan To Relet School Bids

All bids on the proposed west-side high school will be relet but several major items in the school's construction will be eliminated to cut the cost down to the available $3.1 million, it was decided at the Iowa City Board of Education meeting Tuesday night.

Board members said they expected to call for another bond issue early in the fall to raise the added $500,000 needed for completion of the school as it was originally proposed.

Items eliminated from the plans were the vocal and instrumental music suite, a balcony on the east side of the gymnasium, varsity locker rooms, air conditioning in the lecture hall and administrative offices, a folding door to the cafeteria and the original grade of wood flooring for the gymnasium and lecture room.

Estimated cost saved was slightly more than $500,000.

The decision to eliminate the items was made necessary by the bids returned in the original letting. They amounted to more than $500,000 over the intended cost of the school when the bond issue to fund it was passed nearly six months ago.

Debate was long and heated. Delaying the project was rejected because the rate of increase in construction costs is higher than the rate of increase in the bond base.

New Programs Offer Hope—

Ph.D. 'In Progress' Plight

By DAVE HOYT
Staff Writer

"Ph.D.'s in progress' form an enormous shadow behind the mass of Ph.D.'s annually awarded; a shadow which casts a chill over too large a province of higher education."

Thus wrote Jaques Barzun of the plight of the not-quite Ph.D., who has dwelt until now in an academic limbo, badly paid and poorly regarded by his doctoral-bearing colleagues.

"But there are signs that the picture will brighten.

Yale University and the University of Michigan have both recently taken steps to give formal recognition to the Ph.D. candidate — the graduate student who has successfully completed all course work and the comprehensive examination which cover it, but who has not yet completed his dissertation and its attendant oral examinations.

YALE HAS actually gone so far as to award the candidate a degree known as the Master of Philosophy, while Michigan, less formally, calls its diploma a Certificate of Candidacy.

Both schools recognize that there may be students who wish to teach, but who are either unwilling or unable financially to complete a dissertation that may take from one to three years of their time. This formal recognition of scholarly attainment may result in better pay for those faculty members who teach while they work on their dissertation, as well as lifting from their shoulders the onus of incompleteness.

There has been no formal discussion of giving recognition to the Ph.D. candidate at Iowa, because, according to Alvin Scaff, Assistant Dean of the Graduate College, the Graduate Council has been busy this year with revision of the Graduate Manual.

IN APRIL of this year, Dean Scaff attended a meeting of the Committee on Institutional Cooperation, a council composed of the deans of the graduate colleges of Big 10 universities and the University of Chicago. There was unanimous approval of a proposal that the schools represented give serious consideration to formal recognition of Ph.D. candidacy.

When asked whether he thought the proposal would be favorably recieved, Dean Scaff replied, "Where you have the deans' recommendation, followed by action at the University of Michigan, I would say that the future for this kind of degree is very bright."

Ph.D. hunters at the University were not without some reservations about the proposed degree. One drama graduate student commented, "I think it will be fine if the universities will hire them (those who hold an intermediate degree) and if they are given a light enough load to permit them to finish their dissertation."

EDWARD P. Bassett, instructor of journalism and a graduate student in mass communications, saw such a degree as the answer for the older professional person who would like to return to a university to teach, but who would shy away from the additional time required to complete a dissertation for the Ph.D.

Whether or not the Ph.D. candidate will gain a recognized place in the academic sun will remain unsettled until other universities in addition to Yale and Michigan decide to award some sort of intermediate degree. When it issued its decision to award a Certificate of Candidacy, Michigan warned that such practice could be of continuing utility only if other institutions of good standing awarded a similar credential.

Good decision

THE DECISION OF THE U. S. Supreme Court that the Fifth Amendment's privilege against self-incrimination goes into effect as soon as a person is within police custody is a benefit both to the accused and to the police.

Under the ruling, the prosecution cannot use any admissions or confessions made by the suspect while in custody unless it first proves that the suspect is told that he may remain silent, that anything he says may be held against him and that he has a right to have a lawyer present during any interrogations. Court-appointed lawyers must be provided if the suspect cannot afford to pay for one. Spontaneous admissions of guilt can be offered as evidence, as long as they do not come after interrogation without counsel.

There may be drawbacks, however. Justice John M. Harlan regarded the decision as a dangerous experiment since the crime rate is rapidly growing. Harlan also believes that the evils of brutal police questioning are exaggerated.

Physical brutality does not make up the majority of such instances. Psychological methods of obtaining confessions can be just as effective without the tell-tale effects of bruises or cuts. Endless interrogation of the suspect without counsel behind closed doors, when the suspect is most prone to lose his equanimity can be sufficient to extract confessions whether they be true or false.

That there are instances of confessions obtained by such methods, and that some of those confessions are later proved false, should be sufficient basis for the Supreme Court's ruling.

Critics of the decision say that limitations of this sort will severely handicap officials in obtaining convictions, since the majority are obtained through confessions.

But the method of obtaining convictions must be somewhat inadequate when there is such a heavy reliance on confessions. If police are forced to use other methods, then crime detection techniques and devices may be used more extensively and with greater effectiveness. — Nic Goeres

"It's Our New, Powerful, Whisper-Quiet Model"

Going with LBJ is high-priced

By ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON — The White House has strongly denied it, but it has been rumored that if you contribute $10,000 to the Democratic party for the upcoming Congressional elections, you will be assured of a gilt-edged invitation to a formal White House party attended by the President and Mrs. Johnson.

For $10,000, a contributor is made a member of the "Elite President's Club" as opposed to the ordinary "President's Club" which caters to the run-of-the-mill $1,000 contributors. It is believed that there are at least 100 members of the Elite President's Club already signed up, with many more holding the checkbooks in the wings.

I'm for anything that puts funds into the Democratic party coffers, and I've been giving great thought as to how more money could be raised.

BUCHWALD

Using the guaranteed invitation to the White House as starting point, I have made up a rate card for different things a loyal Democratic party giver would be entitled to if he were willing to put up the contributions.

For example, if a person was willing to give $15,000, he would not only be invited to the White House for dinner, but his wife would be guaranteed a dance with Press Secretary Bill Moyers.

FOR $20,000 the contributor would get to sit at the same table as Vice-President Hubert Humphrey, and for $25,000 the Vice-President would agree not to talk.

For $30,000 the person would not only have dinner at the White House, but he would be permitted to attend a Cabinet meeting.

If you coughed up $35,000, you could ask a question at a televised Presidential press conference.

Anyone who gave $40,000 could go to a movie with Lynda Bird and George Hamilton. For $45,000 you would be guaranteed a seat in the church at Luci's wedding.

A $50,000 contributor would be given his choice of a weekend at Camp David with the Johnsons or a week at the LBJ ranch. For $55,000 he wouldn't have to ride a horse.

The $60,000 fat cat would be allowed to sign a Congressional bill at a White House Rose Garden ceremony, and for $75,000 he could be present when the President was chewing out Sen. Fulbright.

There will be very few people contributing $100,000 or more, but some provision must be made for them.

For $100,000 you could get to swear in a United States Supreme Court Justice.

FOR $150,000 you would be permitted to alert all SAC bombers, and for $200,000 you could call out the National Guard and reserves.

If anyone wanted to give $250,000 he would be guaranteed that Mrs. Johnson would plant a rose garden in his back yard.

For $275,000, you would have the option of settling a steel strike or holding a conference in Washington with either Madame Ghandi or King Feisal.

For $300,000 you can run for Congress yourself.

Unfortunately, the Republicians, being out of office, have nothing to compete with the Democrats when it comes to raising money. All they could offer a $10,000 contributor would be either a chance to attend a Richard Nixon press conference or to take a ride through Death Valley with Ronald Reagan.

Government spending increases inflation

WASHINGTON — If you judge the Government by what it is doing, not what it is saying, about inflation, you may be sadly disillusioned.

For while haranguing the housewife, the farmer, the union leader, and the businessman to hold the line on prices, spending, wages, and profits, the Government is actively following policies that promote inflation.

Gardner Ackley, the President's chief economic adviser, has recognized the cause of this inflation: Too much demand in the economy. "The only remedy is to reduce demand: by scaling down public expenditures or by restraining private expenditures," he said in a recent speech to the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Yet instead of the remedy, Government policies are providing for more spending.

The Federal Reserve Board has made the country's pockets overflow with a rapidly increasing supply of money and credit, which is being spent. The results: Business investment in new plants is booming (to make tomorrow's products better and to create tomorrow's job); consumers are flocking to the store counters on a giant buying spree.

And public spending also is soaring. Despite the war in Viet Nam, the Administration is pouring billions more dollars into Great Society programs such as education, poverty, and housing.

As a consequence of these policies, demand for goods and services across the nation is outrunning the supply, and prices are rising. Joblessness is at a low, and many areas have labor shortages.

Reuther address is concluded

The long-term strategy of the Communists is based on the belief that a free society is composed of competing, conflicting and irreconcilable economic pressure groups who are incapable of rising above their pressure group relationship and of finding a sense of common national purpose in the absence of war. The tragic lesson of history records that we have always been equal to a total effort when faced with the negative challenge of war when driven by common fears and common hatreds. I am confident that we can prove that our free society is equal to a comparable total effort in meeting the infinitely complex challenges of peace because we share common hopes, common aspirations and a common faith.

President Johnson has called upon America to join in the building of a Great Society where men are more concerned about the quality of their goals than the quantity of their goods. The measurement of the worth and the quality of any society is not in its material wealth or its productive power nor the level of its technology but rather the sense of national purpose with which a society translates material wealth into human values and reflects technological progress into human progress and the expanding opportunities for human fulfillment.

To achieve the goals of the Great Society, we need to get our value system in sharper focus. We need to work out a list of national priorities. We need to put first things first and commit ourselves and our resources to the practical fulfillment of these national priorities .

America's agenda of unfinished business is both long and urgent. We need to act boldly at the federal, state and local levels to overcome both the quantitative and the qualitative deficits in the field of education.

With our Gross National Product to exceed $725 billion in 1966, it is economically indefensible and morally wrong to tolerate poverty in the midst of plenty. We must act with realism, dedication and determination to remove the root causes of human poverty in our free society so that every person may have the opportunity of meaningful participation, a sense of belonging and an equitable share in our growing abundance.

We must act with courage and compassion to complete the civil rights revolution for there can be no half-way house on the road to freedom. Slowly we are freeing ourselves of the delusion that we can defend freedom in Berlin and Saigon and continue to deny freedom in Birmingham and Selma.

The hour is much later than we think and the denial of rights and continued frustration of hopes will become increasingly explosive in the days ahead unless we bridge the gap between promise and performance.

There is great need and a compelling urgency for people of good will of all races, all creeds and all political persuasions to join together and through rational and responsible action find workable answers in the light of reason. If we fail, the vacuums of our failure will be filled by the apostles of fear and hatred and they will search for answers in the dark of night and reason will yield to riots and the spirit of brotherhood will be suffocated by bitterness and bloodshed and we shall tear asunder the fabric of our free society.

Praises Bowen

There are other matters of priority and urgency on America's agenda. We need to wipe out the slums and social cesspools and rebuild our cities and create a healthy, attractive, total living environment worthy of free men. We need to end the polluton of our air and water, to beautify our cities and our countrysides, to conserve and develop our natural resources. We need to provide a socially useful and rewarding job in peacetime for every adult able and willing to work. We need to re-establish the sovereignty of man over machine and make work more meaningful as well as more productive. We need to provide opportunities for the creative and constructive use of the increasing measure of leisure that the revolution in science and technology will provide. The American people should be grateful for the outstanding contribution that President Bowen made as Chairman of the Commission on Automation and Technological Progress. Under his leadership, many meaningful and significant recommendations were developed on how our free society can best harness the new tools of science and technology and relate the abundance of automation to the needs of the whole community.

Free labor and free management can and must play a decisive role in this effort to translate technical progress into human progress. Labor and management both have separate responsibilities but together they share a joint responsibility to the whole community and this joint responsibility, of necessity, transcends their separate responsibilities. Together they must develop new forms of economic and social cooperation in a creative partnership that will make it possible to utilize the new tools of economic abundance to advance the welfare and the well-being of the whole community.

One final thought. In this world of revolutionary change and challenge, it is imperative that we revitalize the free market place of ideas. We must test each new idea and new concept in the fierce fires of free and fearless debate in the market place of ideas. To meet new problems and to realize new opportunities will require new ideas, new concept, new innovations and new social invention. We cannot solve tomorrow's problems with the obsolete tools of yesterday. Abraham Lincoln, in his profound wisdom, stated:

"The dogmas of the quiet past are not adequate for the stormy present. Our cause is new. We must think anew; we must act anew."

John Kennedy underscored the sharp distinction between opinion and thought when he said:

"We must reject the comfort of opinion and accept the discomfort of thought."

We are still paying a tragic price for the immoral political phenomenon of McCarthyism which seriously eroded the intellectual and political climate in America and did great damage to the free market place of ideas. We need the objectivity to judge each new idea by its substance and not its source. In a society fed on a diet of pre-digested homogenized mass culture of carefully cultivated Madison Avenue cliches, we must be eternally vigilant against the sterile, stagnant and deadly forces of conformity.

Must Look Ahead

All forms of totalitarianism achieve unity through conformity. The genius of a free society is its capability of achieving unity in the splendor of diversity. The little men of the lunatic fringe, the self-appointed super patriots, have not understood this democratic principle of unity in diversity. Filled with fear and frustraton, they are desperately committed to the repeal of the 20th century and the recapture of the past. They have not understood the wise words of Goethe, who wrote:

"There is no past we can bring back by longing for it. There is only an eternally new now that builds and creates itself out of the elements of the past as the past withdraws."

The challenge before us is not to recapture the past but to stay alive and to build the future, to meet the problems of the 20th century and to realize its bright promise. Each of us must help find the new answers to meet the new challenges. Each of us must dare to think anew and to be prepared to act anew. The test of our courage and our convictions — the test of our personal commitment, is not where do we stand in the hour of convenience and comfort but rather where do we stand in the hour of controversy and challenge and do we believe deeply enough to act true to our inner faith.

I have unlimited faith in the capability of free men and our free institutions. I am confident that free men are equal to history's call to greatness and that men of good-will everywhere, acting together can build a rational and responsible world community; can harness the rising star of science and technology to man's peaceful purposes; can translate the 20th century technological revolution into the 20th century revolution of human fulfillment.

To each of you in the graduating class of 1966, I extend my heartiest congratulations on your academic achievements. I wish you well — good luck and God-speed in the years ahead.

Despite Jail, Hoffa Plans To Hold Power

WASHINGTON (AP) — Teamsters Union President James R. Hoffa, pailing for a Supreme Court appeal of his eight-year jury tampering sentence, is laying plans to keep his job and weld even greater power into his huge union.

Hoffa disclosed in an interview that he has every intention of resuming the presidency of the 1.7-million member union after he returns from prison — if he does. He also outlined plans for hammering out national labor contracts covering another 700,000 of his members.

Some 400,000 already are covered by a master national contract.

HOFFA DECLINED direct comment on his legal problems, which include a five-year mail fraud sentence, but seemed his usual bouncy, confident self.

HOFFA

He outlined to a reporter his plans to try to nail down his job security as president of the world's largest union at the Teamsters' July 4 convention in Miami Beach, Fla.

Hoffa will propose to the convention a change in the union's constitution to create a new post of general vice president or executive vice president who would automatically succeed Hoffa if he became temporarily "unavailable."

HOFFA, WHO is expected to be re-elected to a new five-year term without opposition at the convention, was asked if he would automatically resume the presidency if he again became "available" before his presidential term expired in 1971.

"Yes," he nodded.

There would be no special convention or election, Hoffa said.

Labor lawyers feel Hoffa has a good chance of winning at least the appeal from his mail fraud conviction, which stemmed from loans made from the Teamsters' multimillion-dollar pension fund.

The only cloud over Hoffa's convention plans is the threat of Teamsters' Vice President Harold Gibbons to oppose Hoffa's choice of vice president Frank Fitzsimmons for the new post of general vice president.

If Gibbons "has been talking with the same people I have been talking with, including his own counsel, he won't run for general vice president, recognizing he won't have the strength," Hoffa said.

Hoffa said he will offer another constitutional amendment "limiting an individual to a choice of one office," meaning that Gibbons — or any other such opponent — who runs against Fitzsimmons would have to give up his regular vice presidency.

$17-Billion Bill For U.S. Defense Passed By House

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House passed and sent to the Senate Tuesday a $17.8-billion bill that authorized the Defense Department to buy ships, planes and guns in 1967.

The amount is $931 million more than requested by the administration.

The vote on passage was 356 to 2. Voting against the bill were Reps. George E. Brown, (D-Calif.), and Thomas B. Curtis, (R-Mo.).

The added money includes $258.3 million for two nuclear powered naval frigates that were not asked, as well as extra millions for work on an anti-missile missile system and a new manned bomber.

The bill also carries authorization for a 3.2 per cent pay increase for uniformed military personnel.

"AWAKENING of The Earth" is the title of this bronze sculpture by Raul Valdivieso, which is among 38 works of art from Latin American countries being shown in the Main Gallery of the University Art Building.

Arts Festival Starts Today

Today — the first day of the summer session — is also the beginning of the 28th Annual Fine Arts Festival. Two are traveling art exhibitions, which will open Thursday at the Art Building Main Gallery, and one other show there — a collection of student thesis paintings, sculpture and ceramics.

One of the traveling exhibitions, "Colored Sculpture," includes 22 works selected by New York artist Sidney Geist and organized by the American Federation of Arts. It will be on exhibition until July 5.

The increasing use of color in sculpture and the enthusiasm with which color is being used spurred the organization of "Colored Sculpture." The criterion for selection of works for the show was that color seemed a crucial element in each, according to Geist.

Paintings, sculpture, drawings and prints are represented in "New Names in Latin American Art," circulated by the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service. To be shown until July 31, this show presents a comprehensive panorama of the paths taken by the youngest artists of the mature generation in Latin America, including works by six artists ranging in age from 25 to 38.

Gallery hours for "Colored Sculpture" and "New Names in Latin American Art" will be from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Group To Study Early Iowa Forts

A University professor and seven students will spend the summer re-tracing part of the life of the early American Army in Iowa.

An archeological expedition directed by Marshall McKusik, associate professor of sociology and anthropology, will work at three different sites: Fort Atkinson, near Decorah; Fort Madison, where old Fort Madison was uncovered last summer, and the first Fort Des Moines at Montrose. The group left today and will return in early September.

Fort Atkinson was established in 1840 to help prevent the spread of Indian wars that had begun in the 1820's. Now a state park with a museum and rebuilt stockade, it was one of the largest army forts in Iowa. The archeologists will work near the site of the fort's blacksmith and gun shop.

Until mid-June of last year, the exact location of Fort Madison had been unknown and the last pages of its history almost blank. When a company started excavating its parking lot in order to put in an underground water storage tank, it uncovered some 14 tons of crude limestone rock and charred logs, later identified as the ruin of the fort blockhouse.

SAILING CLUB — Iowa Sailing Club will hold its first summer meeting at 7 tonight in the Union Indiana Room. Sailing plans and the instruction program will be discussed.

English Universities Have Strict Driving Restrictions

By JON VAN
Staff Writer

University of Iowa students who think that recent restrictions on student driving are stiff should attend an English university.

"I don't think your limitations on student parking are at all strict," Stanley Meyrick, a noted English architect said Tuesday. "In England we don't allow any undergraduates to have cars at all. If they live a long way from campus, we expect them to take the bus."

Meyrick is chief architect to the University Grants Committee in London. In this office, he is one of the persons chiefly responsible for determining the building needs of England's universities and for granting government money for building projects. Meyrick is in Iowa City to attend a meeting of the American Association of University Architects.

GRADUATE STUDENTS and faculty members are allowed to drive in England, and this is causing a parking problem, Meyrick said, but so far very few universities have started charging for parking spaces. Efforts to charge for parking have met heavy resistance.

The British government spends its money only for educational purposes and for some residences — not for parking space, according to Meyrick, so there is a definite problem, but so far no decision has been made.

Meyrick observed another difference between England and Iowa in the quality of the Memorial Union.

"IN ENGLAND people would think Iowa's Union too lavish, but here you don't give a damn about it. You just take the attitude, 'why shouldn't the kids be comfortable?' "

The architect also found Carrie Stanley Hall, a women's dormitory, somewhat lavish. He said that the difference between it and an English dormitory was that in England all rooms are built of lower quality for single occupancy. Here the quality is high, but from two to four girls must share one room.

In his over-all impression of America, Meyrick said, "it is a wonderfully welcoming country." He told of the "warm and friendly hospitality" he received from University Architect George Horner and his wife upon his arrival in Iowa City, and said this is typical of Americans.

College Names Principal Dean

KEOKUK (AP) — C. W. Callison, 45, principal of the public high school at Winterset, was named Tuesday as dean of the Keokuk Community College.

Callison succeeds James McKinstry, who has been appointed dean of the Marshalltown Junior College. The new dean here will take office July 1.

Callison is a graduate of Kirksville State, Mo., and a postgraduate of Drake University.

Senate Candidate Gives Views On 'Big' Government

The only way bigger government will come about is through public demand, senatorial candidate E. B. Smith told Kiwanis Club members at a noon luncheon Tuesday at Hotel Jefferson.

Smith, a Democrat from Ames, is opposing Sen. Jack Miller (R-Iowa) for a Senate seat in this fall's elections.

"To the degree that the powers in our private business structure recognize they are responsible for the function of the national economy, there will be no more government regulations," Smith said.

"If you want to blame someone for the New Deal, then blame the business and the Depression," said Smith.

Smith said America was fortunate because the Depression produced Hitler in Germany, Mussolini in Italy, and a military dictatorship in Japan, whereas in America it produced economic reform.

OLD SHEP RETURNS HOME —

TWIN HOOKS, Ark. — Old Shep, world's champion coon hound, returned home today "very disappointed" after not being allowed to register for summer courses Tuesday at the University of Iowa.

Irving Fenster, Old Shep's trainer, said that Old Shep had been turned away by University officials because he had lacked prerequisites for the courses that he had wanted to enroll in.

"It was a sad sight, seeing Shep cry because he couldn't fulfill his life's wish — to get a college education," Fenster said.

Old Shep had participated in the first annual coon and Snipe Hunt in Iowa City May 13, and had remained there for several weeks on a vaction.

Jim Ryun Enters AAU Meet

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim Ryun, the sensational 19-year-old runner from the University of Kansas, has entered the National Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) track championships and is a virtual certainty to compete in the meet, The Associated Press learned Tuesday.

The entry of the freshman star, who recently broke the world half-mile record and the American mile record, was received along with those of eight other members of the Jayhawk Track Club of Kansas, meet director Ray Lumpp announced Monday.

Ryun competed in the U.S. Track and Field Federation (USTFF) meet at Terre Haute, Ind., last Friday and Saturday in the face of threats by the Amateur Athlete Union that athletes who participated in that meet would be banned from the Nationals here.

THE AAU maintained that the USTFF meet was an open meet in that non-collegians also competed and this required its sanction. The USTFF, an arm of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, refused to apply for AAU sanction.

Ryun and other athletes who competed in the USTFF meet will be declared eligible for the AAU meet by Theodore Kheel, an informed source told The Associated Press.

Kheel, head of a five-man board named by Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey to arbitrate the AAU-NCAA feud, will make the ruling today at a two-day meeting of the board here.

THE MEDIATOR indicated as much earlier in the day when he said:

"Our predominant concern is with the athletes. We will do everything in our power to make sure there is no impediment to full participation by the athletes."

Ryun bettered the world record for the 880 with a time of 1:44.9 last weekend and the week before ran the mile in 3:53.7, only a tenth of a second slower than the world record held by France's Michel Jazy.

IVAN, REAY SIGN CONTRACT

MONTREAL (AP) General Manager Tommy Ivan and Coach Bill Reay have signed long-term contracts with the Chicago Black Hawks, the National Hockey League club announced Tuesday.

Sports Briefs

A NATIONAL FOOTBALL LEAGUE spokesman said Tuesday there was no chance of an exhibition game between a team in the NFL and the American Football League preceding the 1966 season. The spokesman said any such game could not be played because of existing game and television contracts and the prevailing thought that the first meeting between the two leagues should be at the championship level. The Washington Redskins of the NFL and the Boston Patriots of the AFL were reported to be dickering for an exhibition game in Canton, Ohio, Aug. 13 or 14.

A UNIONIZATION DRIVE AMONG professional football players, in the wake of merger of the game's two major pro leagues, has been ordered by James R. Hoffa, teamsters' union president, the Chicago Daily News reported Tuesday. Hoffa was quoted as saying "the players will be like slaves" with agreement of the National Football League and American Football League to merge into one circuit by 1970. Hoffa, in Chicago for a quarterly meeting of the Central States Drivers Council, said unionization of the players is an "absolute necessity for their economic protection."

THE DES MOINES WARRIORS professional football team has added former Iowa back, Gary Simpson, to its list of players under contract. Simpson played halfback and fullback under former Iowa coach Jerry Burns in the 1964 and 1965 season. However, he suffered a thigh injury at the start of the 1965 season and saw limited action.

THE WEDGE AND NOT THE DRIVER will win the 66th U.S. Open Golf Championship, predicts Arnold Palmer, who contradicts himself by conceding an edge to the biggest hitter of them all, Jack Nicklaus. "Jack hits a high, towering ball," Palmer said Tuesday as the full field of 151 checked in for the tournament starting Thursday. "It takes a soft lob shot to hold these small greens. Nobody hits that shot better than Nicklaus." Nicklaus was a 4½-1 favorite of Las Vegas bookmakers Tuesday to win the tournament. Arnold Palmer ran second at 5-1. Doug Sanders and Tony Lema were tied for third at 6-1 and Gene Littler was 12-1.

LEE MacPHAIL, ASSISTANT TO MAJOR league baseball commissioner, said Tuesday professional baseball is sympathetic with the problems of college coaches but that a four-year rule against signing college players could lead to signing players right out of high school. MacPhail said, "Paramount to professional baseball is insuring the source of talent. Congress is giving baseball hell for not expanding the major leagues fast enough and there is need right now for more good players in the majors."

INDIAN TENNIS STARS WERE THE giant-killers Tuesday in a round of upsets in the London Lawn Tennis Championships, where the world's stars are tuning up for Wimbledon. Premjit Lall eliminated Australia's Fred Stolle, the No. 3 seed for Wimbledon, 6-4, 6-4. Jaidip Mukerjea ousted Cliff Richey of Dallas, Tex., one of the leading American contenders for Wimbledon honors, 7-5, 6-3.

Tax Benefits Await Some After Summer

Summertime tax benefits await both teachers who study and parents of students who work, says Commerce Clearing House (CCH).

Summer school expenses of teachers, if incurred to maintain or improve skills of teaching, or to meet specific requirements of an employer, may be deducted for federal income tax purposes.

Further, such expenses include tuition, books, supplies, laboratory fees, and travel both at home and abroad, CCH reported recently.

FOR EXAMPLE, expenses incurred by a teacher for education were deductible even though such expenses were voluntarily incurred and the courses taken carried academic credit or resulted in salary increases and promotions. Also, a teacher's education leading to a Ph.D. degree was undertaken primarily to improve her skill in the field of behavioral sciences and the expenses were deductible.

On the other hand, where a masters degree was obtained to qualify as a school administrator rather than to improve teaching skills, the expenses of the undertaking were not deductible, according to CCH.

Meanwhile, parents of students who work during summer vacation may still claim the youngsters as dependents, so long as they provide more than one-half of the child's support. How much the student earns does not take away the right to the exemption.

AND, IF SUMMERTIME earnings are less than $600, taxes withheld from the student will be refunded.

If a child 19 or over gets more than half his support from the parent and has $600 or more of gross income, he may be claimed as a dependent only if he is a student.

For at least five months, the student must be either in full-time study at an educational institution, or pursuing a full-time course of institutional on-farm training under the supervision of an accredited educational, state or local agent.

However, while full-time attendance may include some attendance at night in connection with a full-time course of study — which is allowable under the Internal Revenue Service ruling — the Commissioner has held that school attendance "exclusively" at night does not qualify as full-time attendance.

Music Workshops Set For Summer

Three workshops for music teachers are scheduled at The University this month. Sessions on teaching music in the elementary school and on instrumental music education will open Monday, and a workshop on teaching general music in the junior and senior high school will begin June 27.

The workshop on instrumental music education will run for two weeks, while the others are one-week workshops.

MAE WEST RAISED yet another shade in her career when she recorded her first rock 'n roll album, entitled "Way Out West." She was accompanied by the Little Chyldren, a group comprising four 15-year-old boys.

Look Out, Fellas — Mae West Is Back At 70 Rockin' Again

Mae West isn't finished yet, fellas . . . she's back, with Sexophonic sound and rock 'n roll.

Tower Records have just released an album featuring Mae and a rock 'n roll instrumental group, the Little Chyldren, which is made up of four 15-year-old boys.

Mae, who is reportedly pushing 70, is older than the combined ages of her accompanists.

The record represents Mae's first rock 'n roll recording of the "rock era" but the glamorous sex queen of six decades has been rockin' 'em in their seats long before the term rock 'n roll was invented.

IN THE ALBUM entitled "Way Out West", Mae sings "Day Triper", "Treat Him Right", If You Gotta Go", "You Turn Me On", "Boom, Boom", "Shakin' All Over", "Mae Day", "When a Man Loves a Women", and "Lover, Please Don't Fight".

"Don't Fight" was written especially for Mae by Dennis Terry and David Allen of Somebody's Chyldren. The songs were arranged by Allen, Jim Horn and producer David Mallet.

Mae's first recording session was marked by a power failure in the recording studio, just as she was singing, "I'm a Teaser". Engineers were not able to pinpoint the trouble, but suggested that Mae's personal voltage had overloaded the circuit.

THREE DAYS after her final recording session, the press reported that her scheduled appearance on a television show had been canceled because advance pressings of her recordings had been judged "too suggestive". But she sings virtually the same lyrics used by other artists for the records.

The incidents were nothing new to Mae's stormy career. She was fined $500 and jailed for eight days in 1927 for writing and starring in a Broadway play entitled "Sex".

She was banned from the NBC Radio Network for 12 years following her performance in an Adam and Eve skit which co-starred Don Ameche as Adam and Charlie McCarthy as the snake.

CHIEF CAUSE of the ruckus was Mae's sultry intonation of such lines as, to Ameche, "Would you, honey, like to try this apple sometime?" and, to McCarthy, "As for you, why don't you come up and see me sometime? And I'll let you play in my woodpile."

MAE'S CAREER has taken her through vaudeville, burlesque, stock, Broadway musicals and revues, plays which she wrote and starred in, motion pictures and television.

Her first film was "Night After Night" in 1932. In the film she strolled up to a hat check girl, who exclaimed, "Goodness, what beautiful diamonds!"

Mae drawled, "Goodness had nothin' to do with it, dearie."

That was the beginning of a legend.

6 Students Reap Cash For Photos

A number of news photography students in the School of Journalism have found that their work during the spring semester brought them financial reward as well as knowledge of how to use a camera effectively.

Delmar Yoder, A3, Washington, received a $25 Henry Louis, Inc. Award for his work in News Photo I. Phil Fleming, G, Bettendorf, received a $10 Milwaukee Press Photo Award for his work in News Photo I.

MIKE SCOTT, A4, Cedar Rapids, was the recipient of the $25 Henry Louis Inc. Award for News Photo II students. He received the award for his picture story on Mount Mercy College in Cedar Rapids.

The Milwaukee Press Club Photo Award of $15 for best use of color photography went to News Photo II student Craig Kohl, A3, Iowa City.

All students in News Photo I were required as a class assignment to submit pictures to the Hansen Advertising Company in Moline, Ill. The advertising company purchased pictures submitted by Sue Ann Hoover, A2, Davenport, and Tenney Nelson, A2, Keokuk. The students each received $15.
