Manila Summit Conference Takes Peace Offensive Role

Allied Chiefs Of State Confer In Closed Door Discussion

MANILA (AP) — The seven-nation Manila summit on Viet Nam assumed the look of a high-powered peace offensive Tuesday as the chiefs of state began their second and final working day.

President Johnson told them Monday he was sure allied determination and unity would produce negotiations for an end to Red aggression. Other Pacific leaders laid heavy stress on what they described as a progressive weakening of the Communist side.

30 Rioters Arrested

An atmosphere of warm Filipine friendliness for President Johnson and his fellow conferees was jolted two hours after deliberations ended. A brief but wild and noisy anti-Viet Nam demonstration by about 2,000 students across the street from Johnson's hotel was broken up by police charging in with rifle butts and firing half a dozen shots in the air. More than 30 were arrested.

What was made public from the first closed-door discussions at Malacanang Palace of the chiefs of state and government had a look of orchestration: heavy emphasis on the theme of peace and equally heavy stress on the idea that the desire for peace could not be interpreted as weakness of willingness to surrender to Communist demands.

Although the U.S. commander in Viet Nam, Gen. William C. Westmoreland, told the summit conference there would be need for more troops there, he drew a picture of steadily declining Communist effectiveness. He said the troops would be needed for a program of pacification and reconstruction — what President Johnson calls "the other war" in Viet Nam.

Casualty Ratio Down

Westmoreland said the casualty ratio was becoming more favorable to the allies, that the enemy more frequently was leaving his dead and wounded on the field instead of carting them away; that enemy surrenders were increasing, and that the refugee flow from Viet Cong area was growing. This, he said, increases steadily the flow of information available to the allies.

Johnson expressed regret that one side in the Viet Nam war was not present at the meeting, adding that it was a cruel fact that more than one side is needed to make a peace conference.

But, pointedly, South Vietnamese Premier Nguyen Cao Ky told the conferees: "We must always remember that no effort to achieve peace can be successful if it is not made in consultation with the people and government of the Republic of Viet Nam."

This implied a warning that the Saigon regime would resist an effort to approach the Communist side without its agreement to the terms.

San Francisco Poet Reads To Capacity Audience Here

By TOM FENSCH
Staff Writer

Lawrence Ferlinghetti conducted a tour of the coney island of his mind in Macbride Auditorium Monday night.

Ferlinghetti, a San Francisco poet, read his poetry to a capacity audience. The reading was sponsored by Students for a Democratic Society and the Radical Arts Project.

He devoted the first 20 minutes of the reading to politically-oriented poems, on the general theme of U.S. involvement in Viet Nam. Ferlinghetti's swirling poetry criticized America's involvement in Southeast Asia and asked, in effect, "where will it all end?"

FERLINGHETTI

"Goodnight asinine armistice parades — which no one under 40 digs. God knows veterans love wars. We shall not go gently into your goodnight . . . goodby death . . . hello sun," he read.

"There are two beings inside every poet," he said, pausing. "The love and ecstasy-seeking being and the political lout running alongside. We have to hit him once in a while and lay him out for a while," he said, as he put down his politically- oriented poems.

Ferlinghetti then focused the reading on his love poems, beginning with the poems in "Pictures from a Gone World," his first book, published in 1955.

He then read from "A Coney Island of the Mind," a collection published in 1958 and now in its fourteenth printing.

"It was a face which darkness could kill — in an instant — a face as easily hurt — by laughter or light," he read. He was interrupted occasionally by applause for well-turned phrases. There was sustained applause after every second or third poem.

Ferlinghetti does not punctuate his poetry. He leaves separation and phrasing to his reader. Because of this, some students read with him to compare the poet's phrasing to their own.

Ferlinghetti's poetry swirls before the mind's eye like a surrealistic parade passing in review. His poems resemble those of Allen Ginsburg, another apostle of the avant garde, and also e. e. cummings, who wrote free-form, unpunctuated verse.

Ferlinghetti is aware of the sounds around him; his poems echo the sounds of the street and the pace of life. His poetry is meant to be read aloud.

He read last from an un-published volume of poetry, "After the Cries of the Birds," begun last July. One poem, "Plain Down," was begun on a flight between Cincinnati and Chicago and finished on a Sunday evening flight between Chicago and Iowa City.

Project Dropped; Garfield Resigns

John C. Garfield has resigned as assistant director of State Services for Crippled Children (SSCC).

Garfield's resignation followed a decision by the SSCC director, Dr. John C. MacQueen, to drop a comprehensive health program for children in four southern Iowa counties. The resignation will become effective Jan. 1.

Garfield said he believed the SSCC had performed well in its traditional pattern of offering diagnostic services for youngsters.

The program was to be a $454,000 experimental project that would include screening, diagnosis, prevention, treatment and correction of physical and mental defects.

Arraignment Set In Stabbing Case

Arraignment was continued until Wednesday for George Davis, 24, the University of Illinois student charged with stabbing two persons last Friday morning.

Davis appeared in Iowa City Police Court Saturday on two charges of intent to commit murder. Bond was set at $10,000.

The charges stemmed from an incident involving an attack on two persons in an apartment at 130½ Clinton St.

The victims, Gerald M. Stevenson, 43, of 130 Clinton St., and Miss Kathe Davis, 23, of Chicago were reported in good condition Monday at University Hospital.

Johnson County Attorney Robert Jansen discredited a report that there was a legal connection between Davis and Miss Davis. He said the fact that their last names were the same was only coincidence.

Group Fights To Save City Government Form

By JIM MARTZ
Staff Writer

The head of an organization supporting Iowa City's council-manager form of government said recently he did not think voters would pass a petition to change the system.

Pat Foster, president of the Council-Manager Association, said the Association would actively oppose a change.

The petition, presented to the Iowa City Council last Tuesday night, asked that city government be changed from the present council-manager form to the mayor-alderman form.

Foster said one member of the association claimed that as many as half of the persons who signed the petition would still vote in favor of retaining the council-manager form.

Foster declined to identify the member.

"Many persons signed the petition as a round-about way of getting a vote of confidence for council-manager government," Foster said. "Many signed just to bring the issue to air."

Joe Zajicek, an Iowa City salvage dealer, presented the petition, which by his count included 1,460 signatures of qualified city voters, twice the number needed.

Iowa law requires action on the petition by the council within 30 days.

Mayor William C. Hubbard said an election would be set within 30 days, and that it appeared likely the election could be held Dec. 13.

Zajicek said he presented the petition "because the city council has not been responsive to the wishes of the people of Iowa City."

He said that although he agreed with the opponents of urban renewal here, his complaints about the city government were broader.

Foster said the question of changing the form of government had come at a time when many persons were unhappy with such issues as urban renewal, one-way streets, and even the cat ordinance.

"Since many disagree with urban renewal and other matters, they dislike the council and therefore the system of government," Foster said.

"I don't believe you can blame the system itself," he added. "You may disagree with individuals who run it, however."

Foster described the Council-Manager Association as "non-partisan."

"We don't get involved in politics or in specific issues," he said.

"We believe the council-manager form is the best and most efficient form of government for Iowa City. We feel that hiring a professionally-trained person for city-manager is desirable. This is too big a business for amateurs to be monkeying around."

Membership in the association is open to anyone, Foster said.

He said the association was organized before the council-manager form of government was adopted here in 1951.

"We have been inactive the last couple of years. There have been no pressing issues concerning the form of government until now," Foster said.

Foster said the association has been identified as a lobby group, but added the group "doesn't lobby for anything except council-manager form of government."

Foster said that although he didn't think the petition would pass, he did consider those supporting the petition as a threat."

Foster also said the association might gain support from an organization, soon to be formed, which would also favor the present form of government.

The formation of the new group will be announced sometime this week," he said. "I can't tell you the name of the group or its members at this time."

The call for a vote on the form of municipal government may hamper Iowa City's efforts to hire a new city manager. City manager Carsten D. Leikvold resigned effective Feb. 1.

The mayor, under the mayor-alderman system, would be elected by the voters. Under the present government, the mayor is selected by the five councilmen from among their ranks.

Rehabilitation Programs To Spend $400,000 On Research Projects

By GAIL DRAUDEN
Staff Writer

Within the next five years the faculty of the rehabilitation counseling program in the College of Education will be spending more than $400,000 on four research projects.

Vocational rehabilitation is the job of getting handicapped people back to useful occupations. Three of the research projects are studies of the vocational rehabilitation counselor. The fourth project deals with employment problems of college graduates afflicted with cerebral palsy.

The first project is a study of "The Roles and Functions of Rehabilitation Counselors, and Their Implications for Counselor Preparation."

The Vocational Rehabilitation Administration (VRA) in the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, granted $150,000 over three years for the project. Last year the project was funded through the American Rehabilitation Counseling Association, but this year and next year the money will be funded directly through the University.

Help Plan Programs

The purpose of the project is to find out what a vocational rehabilitation counselor does. This will help in training programs to prepare people for the job.

Last year the researchers devised an inventory test to determine the various tasks counselors do and their attitudes toward these tasks.

This year the seven-hour inventory tests will be given to a total sample of 400 counselors, comprised of 20 to 30 people in each of 18 cities across the nation. This data will be analyzed using the University Computer Center.

Next year the researchers will write up the findings. Project director and principal investigator for the study is John E. Muthard, professor of education.

The second project studies ways to keep people who are in rehabilitation agencies up to date in their profession.

5-Year Funding

Money for the project comes from a VRA long-term funding plan, extending over five years. The amount granted for the project was about $50,000 this year. The amount funded each year will increase until it reaches $60,000 in 1970.

Researchers will devise methods for continuing counselor education, and for evaluating the effectiveness of the methods, but they do not plan to supply educational materials for rehabilitation counselors on a continuing basis. Dr. Leonard A. Miller, associate professor of education, is director of evaluation for this project.

The third project is the development of an abbreviated rating form of from 15 to 20 items which will enable supervisors to evaluate their counselors.

Scale of 84 Items

The researchers developed a rating scale of 84 items which was applied to counselors in 62 district offices of vocational rehabilitation agencies in 18 states.

The relationship of counselor ratings to 15 other criteria is now being studied. The criteria fall into three classes: objective performance of the counselor, general evaluation by the supervisor, and the client's satisfaction with the counselor.

The results of the rating scale and the second group of tests will be compared to determine which of the 84 items on the scale are most useful.

This study is under the joint direction of Miller and Muthard.

The last study involves college graduates who have cerebral palsy. Six years ago the researchers tested and interviewed about 150 eastern and midwestern cerebral palsy college students concerning the problems they faced.

Studied Employment Difficulties

Follow up questionaires were sent out to determine the difficulties these graduates had in getting employment.

The researchers found that a high proportion of cerebral palsy victims who went to college were successful in getting jobs, and that this figure was well above those who did not go. This contradicted earlier studies, but Muthard said that it was difficult to analyze the significance of this finding.

This project is financed by a $9,800 grant from VRA. Muthard, the Project Director, hopes to publish the results of the first study, "Problems Faced by Cerebral Palsy College Students," this year. The follow-up study, "Employment of the Cerebral Palsy College Student," should be out by next year.

Women Voters Urge Retention Of Manager Plan

The Board of Directors of the Iowa City League of Women Voters voted unanimously Monday to take strong action to support the present council-manager form of government.

Support of the council-manager government has been a part of the League's "continuing responsibilities" on local government, according to Mrs. Harold Shipton, president.

The League studied this type of governmental organization in 1962 and 1963 and decided it was the best system for governing Iowa City, she said.

The League board gave current status to the support of council-manager government in order to prepare for the Dec. 13 election which will determine the form of government in Iowa City .

Petitions calling for the election were submitted to the city council last week. State law requires that an election must be called within 60 days of the submission of such petitions.

The League invited the public to attend a workshop from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. on Nov. 10 at the Recreation Center. The purpose of the meeting is to review facts, including pertinent state laws regarding the council-manager form of government.

OBSERVATIONS
AND COMMENT

Be careful

Joe Zajicek was considered a crackpot by many when he said he was going to circulate a petition for changing Iowa City's form of municipal government. Crackpot or not, Zajicek is using a citizen's most powerful weapon, the referendum, in an effort to change the council-manager form of government in Iowa City to the mayor-alderman form. For those who take Zajicek lightly, here are a few warnings.

If ever there is an opportune time for kicking out council-manager government, it is now. A few opportunists can make the city government look pretty bad when they bring up urban renewal, the firing of City Engineer William Morse and the resigning of City Manager Carsten Leikvold.

The impetus for Zajicek's movement was the controversy surrounding the council's dismissal of Morse late last summer. Leikvold was so opposed to the council's decision that he resigned from his post as city manager. It was shortly after this that Zajicek said he was going to circulate his petition.

If Morse's firing started the ball rolling, urban renewal is keeping up the momentum. The renewal issue is generating more opposition to the City Council and in the months ahead opponents of urban renewal will speak out more loudly against it.

Zajicek asserts that the new form of government is needed because the existing form is not representative of the people. But it is quite apparent too, that if a vote of no confidence prevails in the referendum, urban renewal may go out the window with the council-manager form of government. It appears more than coincidental that the referendum is now forced to a vote at about the same time the City Council is expected to act on urban renewal. A victory by Zajicek could mean defeat for urban renewal.

Zajicek's petition appears quite successful. He got 1,460 signatures, over twice the required number of 700. The petition is significant also because there were 4,995 votes cast in the last council election, just over three times as many votes as signatures on Zajicek's petition. If voter turnout is similar in the upcoming referendum, another 1,000 or so votes against the present form of government would be enough to bring in mayor-alderman government. It is likely that there would be a larger vote, but it is also predictable that many more opponents than appeared on the petition would turn out to vote against council-manager government.

Some well-intentioned people might also be drawn into the fallacy of arguments for mayor-alderman government. Instead of attacking those responsible for poor decisions, Zajicek and his following are out to break down the structure. Virtually every expert on government agrees that the worst form of government can be successful if there are good people running it. The best existing form of government can likewise be ruined by inept personnel.

According to experts in municipal government, the council-manager form is superior to any other for a city this size. It is the fastest growing form of city government in the United States, and mostly, it is replacing the mayor-alderman form of government. So if people are dissatisfied with the way things are going now, it makes little sense to attack the form of government.

The outstanding argument for council-manager government is that it separates policy making and administration. The elected council members form policy and hire trained administrators to carry out the policy. Experts believe it is best to separate policy and administration. They also feel that persons who can both form and execute policy at the same time are rare birds.

These are the birds that will be needed if the council-alderman form of government wins here. Iowa City has had its rare birds, but they were not known for effective policy making and execution.

City voters had better not feel smug about defeating mayor-alderman government in the referendum. There is too much to lose, especially if overconfidence is responsible for killing council-manager government here.

Mao's teachings improving cars

By ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON — It has been reported that the teachings of Mao Tse-tung inspired the production of an improved version of the new Communist Chinese car "Red Flag." Hsinhua, the Chinese Communist Press Agency, said that the designers had to start from scratch with neither blueprints nor prototypes, and although the Changchun motor factory had been short of many things, Mao's teachings were used as a guiding principle for all actions. Because of Mao, the news agency said, the Chinese people have a car far superior to any in the West.

BUCHWALD

There is no reason to doubt the word of an official Chinese Communist news agency, and it is quite possible that Mao Tse-tung's works were used in the building of the "Red Flag."

A friend of mine who works at the factory in Changchun wrote me what actually happened.

When the decision was made to build an automobile called the "Red Flag," the Chinese engineers started studying Mao's works. In his famous treatise "How to Make a Great Leap Forward Without a Four Wheel Drive," Mao wrote: "A single spark can start a prairie fire." The engineers concluded that Mao meant a car shouldn't have spark plugs.

Further on they found: "Counter-revolution must be exterminated and the seats of power must be turned over to the people."

"What do you think he meant by that?" an engineer asked.

"He probably meant we should put seats in the car."

"No, on the contrary, I think he was talking about the engine. The power for the cars should be under the seats."

"I beg to differ. Mao meant we must eliminate the engine and use the power of the people to move the automobile."

That's a great idea. We could have someone up front pulling the car."

"Wouldn't that make it a rickshaw?" a younger engineer asked.

"I knew I had seen the idea somewhere," the other engineer said.

"Read further. There must be some more clues."

One of the engineers read, "The revolution depends on the support of the masses and the vigilance of the people to break the revisionists and capitalistic lackeys who are waiting to commit insidious crimes against the state."

"There's not too much about cars in that one," one of them said.

"Didn't he say something about brakes?"

"That's it. He wants us to put brakes on the car."

"He's certainly a sly one, isn't he?" one of the engineers said.

"Here's something we can use. 'The tools of imperialism must be used against the neo-colonialists.'"

"I guess we can use Western tools to build the car."

"That helps," an engineer said. "Now if we could only find something on the exterior."

"Here it is, 'Body building is as important to a Communist state as the building of the mind.'"

"Our leader thought of everything. The car needs a body."

"That about wraps it up, gentlemen. Why don't we start building the car and if we get stuck we can always refer to Mao's works. What's that blue paper you're studying, Lin Pao?"

"It's the blueprints of the Edsel. I thought we might use them as a guide."

"But Mao does not want us to use blueprints."

"That's where you're wrong. He says right here, 'China must capitalize on America's mistakes.' "

'He left a note saying he thinks very highly of you'

Blame misplaced

To The Editor:

I must take vigorous exception to the contention in James Rogers' article of Oct. 19 that the blame for whites' misunderstanding of the Black Revolution lies with the white news media. In this respect the white press is simply representative of the white population as a whole. In this country there are very few people who have withstood or overcome the psychological conditioning to a racist ideology which is at the very basis of the American way of life. This ideology is founded on a stereotype which has two contradictory aspects: one is the passive, sexually impotent Uncle Tom, who is a "good nigger" insofar as he stays in his place; one is the violent, sexually powerful Black Buck, who is a "bad nigger." This has nothing to do with the reality, which is that Negroes are human beings, and cannot be defined in terms of their relation to whites.

The most "embarrassingly sincere" question you can ask me is, "What do you want?" Obviously, anyone who would ask such an irrational question must think that there are only two alternatives: either you are "good," and want to stay in your place, or you are "bad," and want white women. But the fact is that I am human, and want you to recognize my humanity — not give it to me, which you can't do, but recognize the fact that blackness and humanness are not exclusive categories. I am neither a "good nigger" nor "just" a human being, i.e., a white Negro. I am a black human being.

But you do not understand. You think that any black man who forgets his place and claims to be human, like Carmichael, is being "violent." The reason you misunderstand is that you accept the stereotype, and the responsibility for its acceptance and perpetuation lies squarely with you. If you make it impossible for me to assert my humanity without being "violent," the fault is yours. Don't blame the press or the system; they are your press and your system.

Black skin isn't only incentive

To the Editor:

Carried to its logical extreme, Mr. Rogers' thesis on Black Power is an emotional appeal to Negroes to assert themselves in "key decision-making posts" in proportion to their numbers for the primary reason that they are black. Of course every Negro should be proud of himself as an individual and a human being, be in a position that no one should deny to protect himself and his family and never hesitate to assert himself in positions of responsibility and authority for the benefit of himself or his fellow black citizens.

But I believe Mr. Rogers is making a mistake in failing to arrive at specific reasons which should be the motivating factors behind Negroes striving for positions of responsibility. In other words, shouldn't something other than a black skin serve as the criteria for whether or not a person is "responsive to our needs?" Should not an individual, be he white or black, have a reasonable capacity for an adequate analysis of existing problems? Shouldn't he understand that it will be a rare day when the various races retire to separate pastures and that in the meantime some resemblance of an ability to work in harmony together should not be de-emphasized?

I am suggesting that Mr. Rogers only with the utmost care should dispense of the sincerity of many individuals, black and white, to assist the Negro in surmounting three centuries of deprivation and exploitation. I don't believe I am exaggerating when I say that I believe he will need all the help he can get.

Salesmen were rude

To the Editor:

I wish to register a complaint on the "techniques" of the Homecoming badge salesmen. During the past week, I think I have come in contact with more rude and obnoxious people than during my entire stay at the University — all selling homecoming badges.

I think only two of all the solicitors showed even common courtesy. At one instance, I was followed down the street and badgered by three fraternity boys (I hesitate to say men) who decided, that regardless of what I had said, I surely did have 50 cents for a homecoming badge and they even thought searching my purse might be a good idea. In the other instance, the rudest of all, a rather undersized male student approached me, and after I had have 50 cents for a Homecoming badge and a few very rude remarks. Besides being insulted, and a little hurt, I was highly incensed. After this the president of the University (no offense to President Bowen) could not have begged me to buy one of those badges.

If these are the kind of people that are going to sell the badges, and these are the techniques they are going to use, is it fair to accuse me, and the many others who feel as I do, of a lack of school spirit?

Dallas still carries blame

To the Editor:

Aquatropolis was a clever and lively tour of American cities. Obviously much effort had gone into planning and rehearsal, and outside a few first-night slip ups the show provided interesting entertainment. There was, however, one glaring indiscretion: the choice of Dallas as one of the all-American cities was shocking. It's been less than three years since we formed that special, painful association with this city, and memories are fresh.

Yes, Dallas is an all-American city — it involved and implicated all of America in one of the most heinous atavisms of the 20th century.

Matchboxes should stay

To The Editor:

In regard to the matchbox buildings on the campus, I suggest the University keep them in use as long as possible. Let the students deface and tear up these matchbox buildings instead of the new ones and the multimillion dollar ones under construction.

The floors in the new English Building will be ruined from cigarette burns by the end of this semester. I wonder if the Board of Regents and the University authorities know these conditions exist.

Waiters aid credit racket

To the Editor:

Congratulations to Lory Rice for his letter of Oct. 22, lamenting the paucity of faculty signatures for Charles Day.

In their adhesion to the lesser of two evils, is there any line beyond which liberals will not venture? Doesn't the liberal conscience ever rise up and say, "No, I will not do this!"

No, I am afraid not. If Himmler were running against Hitler the liberals would find justification for voting for one or the other (God knows which one).

The Senate contest between Miller and Smith is a contest between the CIA and napalm, but the liberals will find one of them a lesser evil.

How about making our votes really count and voting for Charles Day, Peace Independent candidate for United States Senator. In that way we wouldn't be throwing our votes away.

Writer defends Viet article

To The Editor:

I refer to Phillip Damon's letter of Oct. 20.

First, in defense of a previous article, I would point out that the fact that 30,000 Viet Cong have defected in the last ten months is adequate testimony to the point that the Ky regime has followed through on several of its promises to provide defectors (and loyal South Vietnamese citizens) with improved social reform. After all, one of the key inducements to Viet Cong to defect is the promise of equitable treatment and the right to vote in subsequent elections. The government, although somewhat reluctantly, has followed through on this promise.

Second, when you are comparing Viet Cong defectors to deserters of the South Vietnamese army you are guilty of incorrectly defining the latter term. A deserter is not one who leaves one side and goes to the other, as is the case with Viet Cong defectors. When one defects he has switched his loyalties. Not so in the case of deserters.

Third, no, it wasn't necessary that I convince AID that I was sold on the legitimacy and advisability of our policies in Viet Nam. Quite the contrary. I made it very clear to AID officials in Washington that I had, and I might add, still do have, some serious reservations about our role, both economic and military, in Asia, particularly in Viet Nam.

As to my "Staff Writer" status, I am a student in the School of Journalism, and by definition I am a Staff Writer for The Daily Iowan.

You did hit the nail on the head on one count, and I am happy to admit it. I am shooting for a career in the foreign service and eventually in politics.

That's a bit misleading. What's meant is that you can now ride to the campus for only a dime if you are a University student or employee.

Riding the bus is not only one of the best bargains of the day — at just 10 cents a ride — but when you arrive you never, never worry about parking.

Who says you can't go to college on a dime?

And the same low price will take you home again, too.

THE COLLEGE FOOTBALL SWINDLE

To most students football is just a game. But to the players it's a grueling, unfair, full-time way of life. Says one, "You end up after four years with a bum knee, talking like a clod, fit for nothing." Now a Florida State professor in "Speaks Out" charges that football makes coaches liars and the rest of us hypocrites. Read about his plan to pay the players. And about the sly ways coaches force injured players to give up their scholarships. Don't miss this story and another on F. Lee Bailey, Boston's sensational lawyer with a mind for murder. 9 Cadets Get Scholarships In AFROTC

Nine Air Force ROTC cadets have been granted full scholarships under the AFROTC scholarship program, Col. Brooks W. Booker, Jr., professor of aerospace studies said Friday.

Those receiving scholarships are: Randall D. Carlson, A3, Omaha, Neb.; Lynn A. Carroll, A3, Wheatland; John E. Casper, A3, Winterset; Larry J. Duncan, A3, Columbus Junction; Richard D. Louvar, A3, Cedar Rapids; Timothy J. Lowenberg, A3, Donnellson; Kenneth C. Miller, E3, Iowa City; Stephen M. Morain, A3, Jefferson; and Douglas W. Ragland, A3, Des Moines.

The financial assistance grants pay the cost of tuition, laboratory fees and books, Booker said, as well as granting each cadet a $50 monthly allowance during his final two years at the University.

The scholarships are awarded to selected Air Force ROTC cadets who are entering their third year of the four-year AFROTC program, Booker said. To qualify, applicants must have high academic standing, pass a rigid Air Force mental exam, be fully qualified physically, and possess high personal and moral attributes.

The nine new grants increased to 17 the number of Air Force ROTC cadets on scholarships at the University. Just over 20 per cent of all eligible advanced course Air Force ROTC Cadets on campus are now on scholarships under the program, Booker said.

18 Foreign Writers Represent Home Nations In Workshop

A novelist from Japan, a poet from Afghanistan and a playwright from Ethiopia are among 18 writers from foreign countries who are enrolled in the Writer's Workshop.

An Indian poet who is translating modern Bengali poetry and a Chinese poet who is on leave from the Chinese Nationalist Navy are also here.

Yumiko Kurabashi became famous in Japan by publishing her first novel, "Parti," during her junior year at Meji University in Tokyo. The book won a prize from the university president, the Japanese Women's Novelist Club Prize, and the Miss Toshiko Tamura Prize. It was nominated for the Japanese equivalent of the Pulitzer Prize.

Saduddin Shpoon has made four trips sponsored by the government of Afghanistan to live with the nomads in the wilderness and write down the poems they sing in the Pashto language. The poems which are lyrical and secular are composed in two-line verses similar to Japanese haikus.

Daniachew Worku, a lecturer in Ethiopian literature at University College in Addis Ababa, hopes to get his M.F.A. next year. He is translating his play, "As Seen by the Dead Man" which was staged successfully in Ethiopia. He is trying to translate Amharic dialogue into English dialogue.

Syoti Datta, a staff member of the Calcutta Statesman, an English language newspaper, is translating several poems by Benoy Mazundar from Bengali into English. Mazundar is a young Indian poet whose life has been reminiscent of Rimbaud's. Datta said he regrets that lack of interest in Bengali poetry on the part of those whose native language is English has compelled him to undertake this project. However, he said a translator's task is to translate literature from a foreign language into his own.

Wang Chin-Lin, a young man who wrote his first poem at the age of 20, came to the workshop from Taiwan after obtaining permission from the minister of national defense, who is Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's son. Though Wang's rank is navy captain, his assignment is teaching drama at the Political Staff College in Taipei.

U Of I $5 Million Given

A total of $5,367,453 in gifts, grants, and contracts was received by the University during the month of September, it was reported today.

Of this total, $5,090,640 came from federal sources and $276,813 from non-federal donors.

The NASA funds are financing further space research by the University's Physics Department, headed by James Van Allen. Most of the funds will be used for experimental apparatus on future satellites — OGO-E, IMP-D, E, F, and G.

Of the National Science Foundation grants, $620,000 will be used as partial payment on purchase of an IBM 360/67, an advanced computer, for the University Computer Center.

Hawks Preparing For Indiana

By JIM MARTZ
Sports Editor

Iowa wingback Dick Thiele will definitely miss Saturday's game against Indiana, Coach Ray Nagel said Monday.

Thiele, a 171-pound senior, suffered a knee injury in Saturday's 24-15 Homecoming loss to Northwestern. He has been alternating with sophomore Barry Crees.

THIELE

Nagel said 182-pound sophomore Paul Baker, of Fox River Grove, Ill., will be the No. 2 wingback.

Tight end and punter Larry McDowell will also miss the Indiana game, Nagel said. McDowell suffered a knee injury two weeks ago in the Minnesota game.

Monday the Hawkeyes held a 1½-hour workout, and Coach Nagel said: "This is an amazing ball club. Never before have I seen a team improve as much and still lose."

Looking toward Saturday's game Nagel said: "This again is a game in which we feel we have a chance to win. Of course, I have felt that way in several past games — such as Wisconsin, Minnesota and Northwestern — so I guess I am just the eternal optimist."

Indiana is a team on the upbeat, Nagel pointed out, although their 1966 record shows losses to Miami (Ohio), 20-10; Texas, 35-0; Illinois, 24-10; and last Friday night in the rain to Miami (Fla.), 14-7.

But the Hoosiers beat Northwestern at Evanston, 26-14, and tied Minnesota, 7-7.

"I think Indiana, like Iowa, is showing steady improvement," Nagel said. "It is well-coached and has some good personnel. But if we keep our momentum of the fourth quarter of the Northwestern game (15 points), perhaps Oct. 29 might be our Saturday."

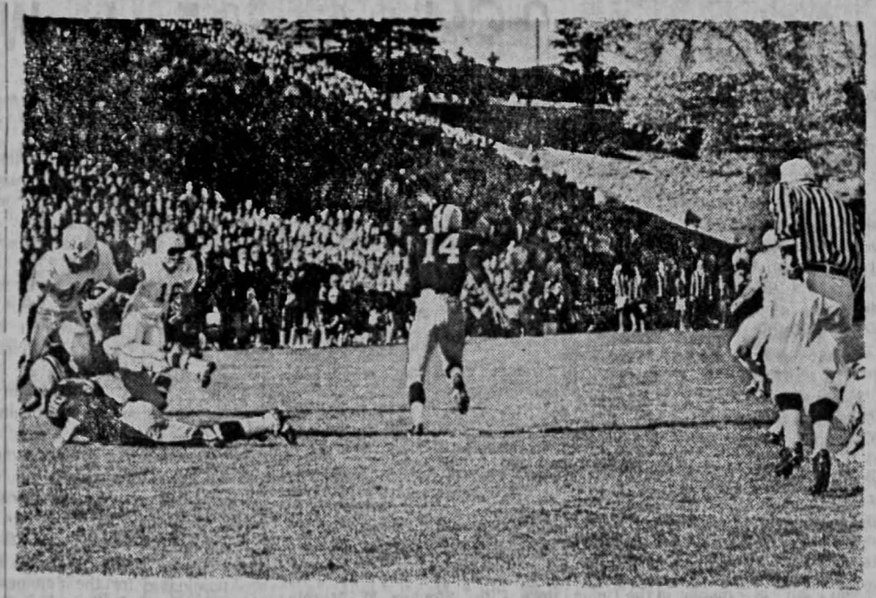
Coach Nagel said he was encouraged by the week-by-week improvement of Podolak. Podolak had 234 yards in total offense against Northwestern — 106 rushing and 128 passing.

He has moved into the lead among Iowa rushers, having gained 307 yards in 86 carries for a 3.5 average.

Other individual leaders are Tony Williams, pass-receiving, 12 for 181 yards; Podolak, scoring, 20 points; Dick Gibbs, pass interceptions, four for 52 yards; Williams, kickoff returns, eight for 22.1 average; and Dave Moreland, tackles, 49 solo and 28 assists.

BIG 8 BACK

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Nebraska's veteran quarterback Bob Churchich, who passed for all but 20 yards of his team's 236 yards and 68-yard last period touchdown drives at Colorado — the last one beating the clock by 53 seconds — was a unanimous choice for Big Eight Back of the Week.



A HOLE! ! ! — Sophomore quarterback Ed Podolak had plenty of running room on this play in the fourth quarter Saturday. He took advantage of the opportunity to scramble 87 yards for a touchdown. The run was not enough, however, as Northwestern handed the Hawks their 16th straight Big 10 setback, 24-15. — Photo by Paul Beaver

Harriers Crush Wildcats For 2nd Big 10 Win, 18-42

Iowa's cross country team put itself into contention for the Big 10 cross country title Saturday by beating defending Big 10 champion Northwestern 18-42 on South Finkbine golf course.

Paced by junior Larry Wieczorek, Iowa captured five of the first six places in the meet. Northwestern's Pat Edmonson, finished third to prevent an Iowa sweep.

Wieczorek's time of 19:48.4 was nearly 30 seconds better than that of teammate Curt LaBond who finished second. Northwestern's John Duffield, who finished second in the Big 10 meet a year ago, finished seventh.

"I expected us to win," said coach Francis Cretzmeyer, "but I didn't expect us to win so easily."

Iowa, which is now 2-0 for the season, faces Indiana here at 10:30 a.m. Saturday.

Results

Weiczorek (I), 19:48.4; LaBond (I), 20:28; Edmunson (N), 20:46; Szabo (I), 20:52; Griffith (I), 20:57; Kitt (I), 20:59; Duffield (N), 21:03; MacDonald (I); 21:42; Davis (N), 21:55; Brubacher (I), 22:12.

Spotlight On Sports

By RON BLISS
Asst. Sports Editor

As Tait Cummins, WMT's seasoned sportscaster, was leaving the Iowa pressbox Saturday, a Chicago writer said to him, "Well Tait, better luck next week." Ol' Tait didn't even look around to see who was consoling him. Instead he just lightly chuckled to himself and then protested, "Who's unhappy? We scored didn't we?!"

Tait couldn't have said it better. Iowa lost to Northwestern 24-15 Saturday, but the faces of Iowa fans as they left the stadium Saturday told a much different story. If you didn't know better, you would think it was Iowa who won the game.

PODOLAK

Why so happy? Does it need an explanation? "We scored didn't we?" Yes the fact the Hawks scored for the first time in four weeks was in itself a moral victory and what was even greater was how they scored. Those who saw Ed Podolak's thrilling 87-yard run from scrimmage may not forget it for quite some time. An Iowa player hasn't scored from that far away since 1960. That year All-American halfback Larry Ferguson hustled 91 yards for a touchdown against Ohio State.

Run Wasn't All

Podolak also provided plenty of action earlier in the fourth quarter when the Hawks broke their long scoring drought. After Steve Wilson had recovered a Northwestern fumble on the Iowa 44, Podolak went to work to almost single-handedly guide the team 56 yards in 11 plays for its first touchdown in 21 quarters of play. During that series of plays, he carried the ball five times for 28 yards and completed three of four passes for another 25 yards.

The touchdown came on a perfect seven yard toss to Al Bream who had cut in front of the Wildcats' Phil Clark in the corner of the end zone.

Then, on the extra point try, Podolak kept the ball on a rollout and went in standing up to make it 17-8. His spectacular run and Bob Anderson's conversion later brought the Hawks to within two points at 17-15, but an on-side kickoff backfired and Northwestern was able to score the final touchdown eight plays later with only 3:05 remaining in the game.

Loss Nothing New

For the Hawks, the loss was really nothing new. It was the 16th straight Big 10 defeat an Iowa team has suffered. The last win was a 21-20 victory over Indiana Oct. 21, 1964.

Even with the 16 straight losses though, the Hawks have yet to break the Big 10 consecutive loss record. That record is 17, set by Northwestern from 1913-1915. If the Hawks fail to beat Indiana next Saturday, however, the team will be almost certain to go beyond that mark with (Ugh!) Michigan State and Ohio State providing the competition in the weeks to follow.

* * *

Ed Podolak's outstanding play Saturday moved him into second place in the Big 10 in total offense. Podolak connected on 11 of 24 passes for 128 yards and added another 106 yards rushing for a total of 234 yards for the day. He now has 613 yards total offense in four Big 10 games to rank second behind (guess who) Jimmy Raye of Big 10 champion Michigan State.

* * *

Brothers of two former Hawkeye athletes helped Northwestern beat Iowa Saturday. Cas Banaszek, who caught a seven-yard pass for Northwestern's first touchdown, is the brother of Ken Banaszek, who played basketball and baseball for Iowa from 1962-1964 and Tom Ziolkowski, who started at right tackle offensively for the Wildcats, is the brother of Bob Ziolkowski, who played offensive tackle for Iowa during 1963 and 1964 seasons. Bob broke his ankle in fall practice last year and had to sit out the season. He was given another year of eligibility this fall, but was forced to quit football after about three weeks of practice because of a bad ankle.

* * *

If you think it's easy to make the predictions we do each Saturday, guess again. I thought I was going to get lynched Saturday morning after a couple of my friends saw I picked Northwestern to beat Iowa 9-0. When I woke up my roommate called me a "bum," my brother walked in a few minutes later and called me a "fink," and then just as I was leaving my room, I was labeled a "pessimist" by the first guy I saw walking down the hall. It probably was kind of a nasty thing to do, considering it was Homecoming and all, but then again, Northwestern was favored to win.

By the way guys, just how bad did Northwestern beat Iowa?

2 Injured Cyclone Ends To Be Ready Saturday

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Iowa State learned Monday that two of its starting ends should be recovered enough from injuries to travel to Oklahoma State next Saturday.

Doctors said George Maurer, senior tight end who suffered a broken left arm in practice Oct. 11, will be able to play. So will defensive end Don Graves, who missed the 10-10 tie with Missouri Saturday because of a sore knee.

Evashevski Gives Reasons For Big 10 Football Decline

CHICAGO (AP) — "Anybody would have to have his head in the sand to think the Big 10 still is superior in football," Forest Evashevski, Iowa athletic director, said Monday.

EVASHEVSKI

The raising of the academic level five years ago and the abolishing of red shirting were cited by Evashevski as some reasons for any noticeable Big 10 decline.

The Big 10's record against outside football opponents this fall is 11-16, worst in history.

Pays Price

"You pay a price for leadership," Evashevski told the Chicago's American Quarterback Club, stressing that he was giving only his personal views.

"I thought the more strict academic requirement was a move to get the faculty behind athletics. The Big 10 conference has been upgraded by it and there never has been better rapport between faculty and athletics."

Evashevski said the Big 10 now is setting the standards and predicted the rest of the country eventually will come up to them.

Red-Shirting Is Wrong

"Red shirting — backlogging of players — cannot be justified educationally or morally," he added.

Evashevski said, when Iowa, for instance, has to refuse entrance to three or four thousand, how could it justify keeping a boy in school five years for football?

"When we have to sacrifice principles, I no longer want to be athletic director. And if we have to sacrifice standards to compete with other schools, I no longer am interested."

Iowa has lost 16 straight Big 10 football games, and Evashevski said:

"I don't want to stay at Iowa if we don't win. But we've got a good freshman team and in two years we will be back in the top echelon of the Big 10."

Net Team Named

NEW YORK (AP) — Dennis Ralston, Art Ashe, Cliff Richey and Charles Pasarell were named Monday to represent the United States against Brazil in the Davis Cup Interzone semifinals Nov. 5-7 at Porto Alegre, Brazil.

2 More Arrested As FBI Continues Grid Fix Probe

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Sports bribery charges were placed against two more men Monday as the FBI continued its year-long probe into alleged attempts to fix Louisiana State University football games.

Joseph Lee Nolan, 26, and Samuel Freddie Comeaux, 25, both of Baton Rouge, were arrested on charges of trying to influence by bribery the outcome of six LSU games this season.

Court records showed that Nolan is a younger brother of Eugene Nolan, convicted in Houston, Tex., recently on an interstate gambling count. Eugene Nolan also faces a similar charge in Los Angeles.

Last week a Baton Rouge barber, Samuel Joseph Graziano, was arrested and charged with trying to bribe three backs on the LSU teams.

Nolan posted $10,000 bond before acting U.S. Commissioner C. H. Banta. A preliminary hearing will be held Friday.

Comeaux was arrested a few hours later after he called the U.S. marshal's office and said he didn't want to be picked up by FBI agents.

Notre Dame Keeps Lead In AP Grid Poll Ratings

By BEN OLAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

Arkansas of the Southwest Conference and Wyoming, the Western Athletic Conference leader, gained rankings while powerful Notre Dame maintained a commanding lead in The Associated Press' major-college football poll Monday.

Oklahoma and Purdue, beaten by Notre Dame and Michigan State respectively, last Saturday dropped out of the Top 10 as Arkansas moved into ninth place and Wyoming took over 10th.

Notre Dame drew 32 first-place votes and 397 points in the latest balloting by a national panel of 41 sportswriters and broadcasters.

Michigan State, the early season pace-setter, held the No. 2 position with 364 points, including 50 for five first-place votes. Points were awarded on a basis of 10 for a first-place vote, 9 for second, etc.

The unbeaten Irish walloped Oklahoma 38-0 for victory No. 5, while Michigan State, undefeated in six games, trounced Purdue 41-20.

UCLA remained in third place followed by Alabama, Southern California, Georgia Tech, Florida and Nebraska.

Florida and Nebraska switched positions. The Gators advanced to seventh after defeating Louisiana State 28-7, while Nebraska, which had a tough time in edging Colorado 21-19, slipped to eighth.

UCLA beat California 28-15, Alabama walloped Vanderbilt 42-6, Southern California blanked Clemson 30-0 and Georgia Tech beat Tulane 35-17.

Arkansas overwhelmed Wichita State 41-0 for its fifth victory against one setback. Wyoming, 6-0, beat Utah State 35-10.

Notre Dame plays Navy at Philadelphia and Michigan State is at Northwestern this weekend. Other games involving teams in the first ten match UCLA and the Air Force, Alabama and Mississippi State, Southern California and Miami, Fla., Georgia Tech and Duke, Florida and Auburn, Nebraska and Missouri, Arkansas and Texas A&M, and Wyoming and Colorado State.

The Top 10, with first place votes in parentheses and total points on a 10-9-etc. basis:

1.	Notre Dame (32)	397
2.	Michigan State (5)	364
3.	UCLA (2)	310
4.	Alabama (1)	272
5.	Sou. California (1)	247
6.	Georgia Tech	186
7.	Florida	172
8.	Nebraska	151
9.	Arkansas	50
10.	Wyoming	31

Ortiz-Ramos Bout Reset For Jan. 29

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The World Boxing Council (WBC) declared Carlos Ortiz' world lightweight title vacant Monday night, and Ortiz tentatively agreed to meet Sugar Ramos in another fight for the title January 29.

Bill Daly, manager of Ortiz, said he was willing to fight Ramos for the title on that date. The agreement was reached during a news conference at a sports' park in Mexico City, after Ramon Velazquez, executive secretary of the WBC, declared the title vacant.

Velazquez said he was acting on a direction of Luis Spota, president of the WBC.

This was the latest development in the wake of the controversial decision Saturday night by Velazquez in awarding the title to Ramos when Ortiz refused to return to the ring. The fight had been stopped in the fifth round by the referee who declared Ortiz the winner and still champion.

Surrealism on Film
Three Man Ray films and one by Bunuel-Dali
Return to Reason, A short film put together for a Dada exhibition in Paris. Rayographs are shown. It is somewhat sensational as it was said to have caused a fight in the theatre where it was shown.
Emake Bakia, "A Satire on movies, purely optical, made to appeal only to the eyes." The film is an example of Surrealism as Ray saw it.
Etoile de Mer, (Star of the Sea) Kiki plays the lead role in the short based on a Surrealistic poem by Robert Desnos.
Un Chien Andalau (An Andalusian Dog) Louis Bunuel and Salvador Dali teamed up to put together the most widely talked about Surrealistic film. It is based on a series of gags that defy rational explanation.

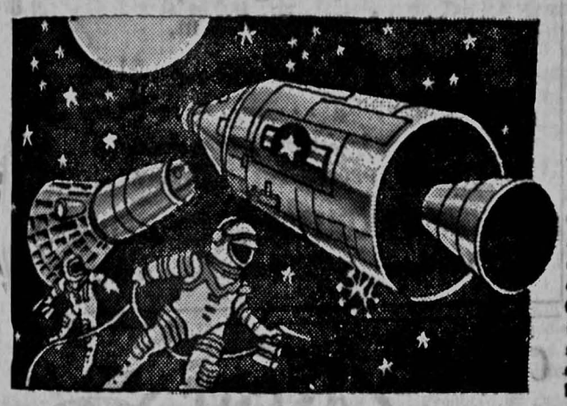
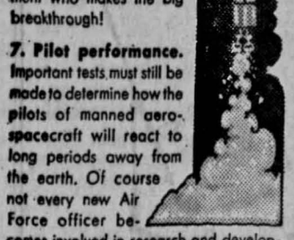
Here are 7 knotty problems facing the Air Force: can you help us solve one?



6. Space propulsion. As our space flights cover greater and greater distances, propulsion—more than anything else—will become the limiting factor. New fuels and new propulsion techniques must be found, if we are to keep on exploring the mysteries of space. And it may well be an Air Force scientist on his first assignment who makes the big breakthrough!

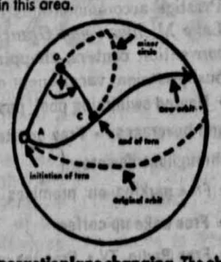
7. Pilot performance. Important tests must still be made to determine how the pilots of manned aerospacecraft will react to long periods away from the earth. Of course not every new Air Force officer becomes involved in research and development right away. But where the most exciting advances are taking place, young Air Force scientists, administrators, pilots, and engineers are on the scene.



4. Space orientation. The orbital problems of a spacecraft, including its ability to maneuver over selected points on the earth, are of vital importance to the military utilization of space. There are plenty of assignments for young Air Force physicists in this area.

Repairs in space. If something goes wrong with a vehicle in orbit, how can it be fixed? Answers must be found, if large-scale space operations are to become a reality. For this and other assignments Air Force scientists and engineers will be called on to answer in the next few years. We need the best brains available.

Lunar landing. The exact composition of the lunar surface, as well as structural and propulsion characteristics of the space vehicle, enter into the problem. Important study remains to be done—and, as an Air Force officer, you could be the one to do it!



5. Synergetic plane changing. The ability of a spacecraft to change altitude can also be crucial to space operations. Where but in the Air Force could Sc.B.'s get the chance to work on such fascinating projects right at the start of their careers?

Life-support biology. The filling of metabolic needs over very extended periods of time in space is one of the most fascinating subjects that Air Force scientists are investigating. The results promise to have vital ramifications for our life on earth, as well as in outer space.

Albrizio's Work Is Featured

Humbert Albrizio's lifelong interest in exploring the artistic potentialities of a wide variety of materials to express his ideas will be apparent in a retrospective exhibition of the University sculptor's works which has opened in the Main Gallery of the Art Building.

One of the largest one-man exhibitions to be presented at the University to date, the show will include 127 sculptures, with 1929 being the earliest year represented, and 27 drawings and 5 wood block prints completed in the last two years.

The works will be shown through Nov. 13, with gallery hours from 10 a.m. to noon and 2 to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Friday, from 10 a.m. to noon Saturday, and from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday. The gallery will be closed Mondays

A member of the U of I art faculty for a quarter of a century, except for two years as head of sculpture at the University of Wisconsin, Professor Albrizio has worked in such exotic woods as ebony, rosewood and lignum vitae (a greenish-brown tropical wood), as well as in many American woods.

The Albrizio exhibition will include sculpture in these media, and also in granite, stone, bronze and welded metal. Professor Albrizio began experimenting with welding about 1950, creating novel effects by using steel and bronze.

Institutions which have loaned works for the show include the Worcester, Mass., Art Museum; the Joslyn Art Museum, Omaha, Neb.; the Des Moines Art Center; State College of Iowa, Cedar Falls; the Walker Art Center, Minneapolis; Grinnell College, Grinnell; the Springfield, Mass., Art Museum; and the Philbrook Art Center, Tulsa, Okla.

The U of I sculptor's primary interest has been in the human figure, though he also has used birds, fish, plants and animals as the motifs for many of his works. In each of these forms, he has been able to capture for the viewer what seems to be the essence of his subject, art critics have said.

Works in the show depicting the human figure range from "Samoan Figure," a rounded sculpture in Brazilian rosewood 32 inches high, to a gaunt, elongated, skeletal form of a man in welded steel and bronze 44 inches in height titled "Somnambulist."

Three "Owls" in the Albrizio exhibition illustrate Professor Albrizio's ability to find the strengths of a variety of media to convey what he has found in his subject.

The professor's works have been shown in major museums across the country. During a solo exhibition of Albrizio sculpture in New York City, an art critic of the New York Times called the Iowa sculptor "one of our artists who demonstrates that essentially traditional sculpture may deal principally with figures and yet have endless variety. He works in a decidedly modern spirit with rhythms subtly abstract and forms massive and powerful."

Viet Nam Student Dislikes Talking About Viet War

By KOH MYUNG SHIK
Staff Writer

War in Viet Nam provides abundant headlines for newspapers every day, but it also gives incessant sorrow and heartbreak to many persons, including Luong Do Xuan, one of two Vietnamese students at the University.

"Whenever I see the war reports with photographs vividly showing the plight of my people, my heart bleeds," he said in a recent interview.

Luong, now an undergraduate in the Department of English and majoring in American Civilization, was born in Hue, a provincial capital of strong Buddhist sentiments in the northernmost region bordering North Viet Nam. He lived there for 24 years witnessing the succession of wars since his infancy.

While he was studying English in the universities in Saigon and Hue, he was awarded a scholarship from Asia Foundation for study in the United States.

"Here in the States, I feel as if I were a specimen," he said. "Many American people are eager to have a talk with me. I fully understand how the American people may feel about their deep involvement in Viet Nam. But I would not rather talk much about the Viet Nam situation because of its complexity.

"Shortly after my arrival in the States, I was interviewed by an American reporter. But next day, I was surprised to see my story misinterpreted in the paper. You know the embarrassment which 'black and white' headlines bring to you. Since then, I advise myself to be cautious when I talk with a reporter."

He was only three years old when World War II was over and the Japanese occupational forces in Indochina surrendered to the Allies. He said he did not remember that period.

He was a teenager when fighting broke out between the Ho Chi Minh forces and French troops which culminated in the fall of Dien Bien Phu and brought about two Viet Nams. He vaguely sensed by reading the dark faces of grownups that trouble was in the making, he said.

What still thrills Luong is the memory of the time when he heard the surprising news that Pres. Ngo Din Diem was finally overthrown in 1963. However, he said, this memory has gradually faded away as the time has gone by.

He was a university student at that time in Hue and he felt as if a new horizon was emerging with promise of a brilliant future, he said.

But he declined to make any further comments on whatever the reason might be for the worsening situation in Viet Nam since then.

Asked about the Buddhist movement in Viet Nam, he said, "We Buddhists never have an eye on power but on the welfare of the people. What we are trying to do is only to keep the government in its right way.

"I don't think there is any real religious discrimination but sometimes, political leaders resort to the maneuvering of opposing religious elements against one another for their politica purposes."

Luong goes to a Christia church here on Sunday to find serene atmosphere in the churc where he can soak himself int undisturbed meditation.

At the end of the interview which was conducted in a dormito ry restaurant, Luong made a fain smile as he rose from the chair and said. "Oh, no more questions Instead, let us pray for the peac of the people in my country. The are suffering a great deal wheth er it is due to their ignorance their indifference or due to the ag gression from the North as man outsiders like to point out. Bu I believe any people has a righ to aspire for a free and decen life in peace."

Officials To Discuss Renewal

An alternative to federally financed urban renewal will be described to public officials and businessmen of northeast Iowa at a meeting at Pine Lodge in Oelwein on Nov.3.

The conference, entitled "How Can Your Community Improve Itself?", is sponsored by the University's Institute of Public Affairs in cooperation with the Oelwein City Council and Chamber of Commerce.

Lane Mashaw, public works specialist at the University Institute of Public Affairs, will discuss municipal planning and point out that cities and towns which do want federal urban renewal funds cannot qualify without a comprehensive plan of development.

Robert Senecal, community development specialist at the institute, will provide a checklist of steps that citizens and governments can take for progress.
